The Mail from Italy passed through the Valais, on the 22nd inst., without obstacle. The conductor of the diligence reported that the Upper Valais ans were in numbers about 5,400 men, well armed and well organized, before the orders of M. de Kuhbermatten, who was actively engaged in effecting a general disarming of the Lower Valais. There is no truth in the report of the burning of villages. The only fires were those of the bivouacs, and of a few detached buildings. In the midst of the sad scenes of the Combat of the Trient, when several Lower Valaisian leaders were killed in crossing the torrent, the following fact is worthy of record. M. Durrey passed without a wound, but his horse was made prisoner. The men who had taken him wanted to shoot him on the spot. A priest, who happened to be present, penetrated into the midst of them, and said, "Unhappy men, what are you about to do? Do you forget that before you appear in Him, time must be allowed him to prepare for death? Let me confess him." He then took the unfortunate prisoner by the arm, and led him without opposition to some bushes which are on the banks of the Rhone, and where they were soon hid from sight. After some time the priest returned alone, and when the men asked what he had done with the prisoner, he replied, that he had escaped.

FRANCE.

The Tahiti affair is again on the tapis; and if persons generally well-informed are to be trusted, owing to dispatches which have been received from Admiral Dupetit-Thouars, the Ministry are resolved to take more decisive measures than existed in by M. Guizot, against the Admiral. It was reported to-day on Change that M. Guizot had protested, in the name of France, against the incorporation of Texas with the United States of the Prince de Joinville as almost forgotten. There is no truth of any misunderstand.ng between the King and M. Guizot arising from this imprudent work; the Minister for Foreign Affairs continues to enjoy the full confidence of his Majesty, and in all probability will accompany him on his visit to Queen Victoria. The accounts of the unpleasant scenes between Louis Philippe and the Prince are greatly exaggerated. It is true that the King is dissatisfied with the conduct of his son, who is too good a politician to let the Opposition brawlers know it; and thereby not only give them a weapon against him, but, by rendering them popular, encourage the war-cry and hatred of the Republic. The Duke de Nemours said, had gone in a pet to Compiegne, and would not return until the Journal des Debats had made the amende honorable for the offens.ve article, supposed to have been written by M. Guizot—now at the theatre on Friday, and Saturday he visited the Exhibition of National Industry.

M. Jacques Lafitte, the celebrated banker, died at nine o'clock on Sunday morning, aged 77. At five o'clock the account given of his health was far from conveying an idea that he was in imminent danger; but a few moments afterwards the gravest symptoms manifested themselves. He then desired to have his grandchildren brought to him, and embraced them affectionately, as he did also his wife, his daughter, and his elder brother, M. Pierre Lafitte, the only one alive of his numerous brothers. Shortly afterwards he became insensible, and, after a rattling of the throat, which did not last ten minutes, he ceased to exist. M. Lafitte was for many years a very popular man, and no man ever displayed more charity, or was more prompt at useful and benevolent sacrifices.

In 1815, when Paris was invaded by the allied troops, the Prussians, who occupied the Hotel de Ville, threatened to destroy it unless a war contribution of £12,000 was immediately paid. The Municipal Council assembled, but there was no money in the public treasury. A subscription was opened by the authorities present, but the amount was much below the sum demanded by Blucher. At this critical moment Lafitte entered the room, and, on being made acquainted with all the circumstances, tore up the subscription list, and wrote a check for the £12,000, which he paid from his own funds. For full twenty years there was not a useful enterprise M. Lafitte did not support with his purse; there was not an officer of the army deserved of his pay, a leader embarassed by the difficulties of the times, a literary man waiting for the fruits of his labour, nor even a political adversary, who failed to receive the needed support. Sprung from the working class, he never deserted the interests of the people, and died without a title. At the time when his fortune was colossal, Mr. Lafitte had his daughter, his only child to marry; she was sought by the richest capitalists and by the greatest names in the circle of court favour, but Mr. Lafitte gave her to the son of Marshal Ney, a poor young man, but considered by the then Opposition as the offspring of an illustrious martyr. Great difference of opinion exists as to the dispute between Louis Philippe and M. Lafitte; there would be, however, certain, he Majesty is greatly indebted to him for his present elevated position. As a politician, M. Lafitte was a visionary—a species of Lafayette—but his intentions were pure and disinterested. He will be buried on Thursday next. Should ad those on whom M. Lafitte has showered his benefits attend, never will a prince's funeral have drawn together a concourse greater in number and formed of persons of a higher rank of life.

M. Charles Lafitte has been returned for the fourth time to the Chamber of Deputies, by the electors of Louviers.

The marriage of Count Pajol, formerly officer to the King, and grandson of the Duke de Reggio, with Mddle. Zoé, the daughter of General Count de Montuyon, Peer of France, was celebrated on Saturday last, in the chapel of the Chamber of Peers.

It is said that the old Philhellenic Committee intends re-establishing itself in Paris and London, in order to promote the aggrandisement of Greece, and that General Colletti will proceed becoming one of the new Greek Ministry, in order to pursue this object.

There are in Paris 114 notaries, and 29 in the suburbs, giving 143 in all the department of the Seine.

The following will be found interesting to seamen:—On the 18th ult. the Météore, on entering the Bay of Ajaccio, by the Passe di Sanguinaires, touched on the point of 9 feet 5 inches, although she draws 9 feet 6 inches. On the 20th the captain had the spot sounded, and found bottom at from 120 to 105 yards from the north east of the island of Elle Parre, at the depth of from 13 to 14 feet, which had been the effect of the wind, of the 18th, to 9 feet 11 inches. Navigators, therefore, should not steer to within 175 or 195 yards of the island of Elle Parre.

On the 3rd inst. the wife of a French soldier at Oran, in Algeria, was delivered of three children, two boys and a girl, who, with the mother, were in perfect health when the account left.

The weather continues cold and wet; and, notwithstanding the great influx of strangers, Paris is very dull. The only thing worth recording in the musical world is the great success obtained at the Odéan, in the piece "L'Antigone," the choruses of which were written by the justly-celebrated Mendelssohn, now in London: the élite of the capital were present. A new mythological ballet, to be called "Calypso," is in rehearsal; the principal character is confided to Mdlle. Adèle Dumilâtre; the music by M. Deldevez.

The packet-boat L'Eurotas, which a few days since sailed from Marseilles for Constantinople, has on board a complete cargo of dancers—in short, a well organised ballet, with 20 figurantes. The corps intend remaining some time in Constantinople, and from thence to go to Odessa, where they are engaged by the Russian Government.

The most brilliant fêtes are preparing at Potsdam in honour of the visit of the Empress of Russia. The marriage of Count Redern's daughter, granddaughter of the celebrated composer of the same name, is confirmed. Miss Benda was formerly an actress of great celebrity, and played with Iffland and Kaslser.

Poor Vieuxtemps, the violinist, has made but a sorry speculation in this Mexican trip. At his last concert, the whole of the orchestra, without giving him timely notice, refused to play, and Vieuxtemps was fined by the police 50 dollars for not keeping his engagement with the public.

Madame Rossi-Caccia has been re-engaged for twelve months at Lisbon.

Verdi's "Hernani" has been brought out with great success at Venice; the principal characters were well supported by Theresa Brambilla, Fraschini, Coletti, and Silva.

PORTUGAL.

PARIS, May 28.—The French Government has received the following telegraphic dispatch:—

BAYONNE, May 27.—We are assured that the Portuguese Ministry has been modified as follows: M. Costa Cabral, Minister of the Interior and President of the Council; Brigadier Cordeiro Tentardo, Minister of War; Baron De Catanna, Minister of Foreign Affairs; M. Lopes Pastero, Minister of Finance; M. Terragusto, Minister of Justice; M. Dugue De Torescos, Minister of Marine.

AMERICA.

ARRIVAL OF THE HIBERNIA.—The Hibernia steamer arrived at Liverpool on Tuesday evening shortly before five o'clock. She brings intelligence of the committee of foreign affairs in the American Senate having reported back the Texian annexation treaty, with a recommendation that it be postponed indefinitely, or laid on the table, or rejected. This is, in point of fact, a virtual abandonment of the whole question. This intelligence was conveyed to New York by the latest mail from Washington. The question of annexation is evidently at a discount, and the parties in this country who have been alarmed such awful doings in the political horizon may take comfort in being grievously disappointed.

Congress is to adjourn on the 17th of next month.

The bill to modify the existing tariff, reported by Mr. M'Kay, was laid on the table of the House of Representatives on the 10th of May, by a vote of 105 to 99; and the motion to reconsider, made with a view to prevent the recurrence of such a motion for a less stable time, was lost, 103 to 99. So the bill is virtually lost, as nothing short of a two-thirds vote can take it up again. This, in all probability, sets the subject at rest for the session. Seventy-seven Whigs, and twenty-eight Democrats, voted against any alteration of the existing tariff.

There is no news of any interest from Canada.

At the Whig convention held at Baltimore, May 1, Hon. Henry Clay was nominated as the candidate of that party who will carry their nomnations. Mr. Van Buren is evidently losing ground. But all is as yet speculation on these matters, which possess no interest for our readers

John C. Spencer has resigned his office as Secretary of the Treasury. His successor has not yet been appointed.

Among the rumours of the day is the important one that Mr. Calhoun is about to retire from the cabinet.

RIOTS, WITH LOSS OF LIFE, IN PHILADELPHIA.

A series of dreadful riots had occurred in Philadelphia, which continued several days, during three of which, the mob held complete possession of the city. Sixteen lives were lost, and twenty persons dangerously wounded, besides many others not ascertained. They commenced with a disturbance at a public meeting of a new party lately sprung into existence in the United States, called "Native Americans;" and they were caused by collision with the Roman Catholic Irish, who inhabited the houses in the vicinity of the place where the meeting was holden.

A New York paper gives the following account of the continuation of the riot, it commenced on Monday, May 6:—

"The native Americans pursued the Irish; and several of the fugitives, finding themselves hotly pressed, darted into houses, and up alleys, in order to escape. Several of the houses in which they were seen to enter, were attacked, and the doors and windows of the frame houses in Cadwallader-street, below Master-street, and one in the same street, above Master-street, were battered in with stones. One Master-street, near Germantown-road, the fronts of two houses were also much battered, and the windows riddled with stones. On Germantown-road, the dwelling house of a widow was forcibly broken into, the windows and shutters shattered, and the furniture broken up. The attack upon her house was made because one of the fugitives had been seen to run up the alley adjoining. The windows in the upper story of the Hibernia Hose-house were also shattered. Another house in Master-street, above Germantown-road, the window was literally strewed with broken bricks and stones. Finally, the Irishmen rallied, and beat off the 'Native Americans,' and there the contest ended for the time.

"On Monday night an armed body of Irishmen patrolled in front of and about St. Michael's Church, and stopped all persons that passed, questioning them as to their business there. One gentleman, who was there at twelve o'clock, was he counted twenty-three ml amed with muskets and flinging sticks.

"On Tuesday morning placards were found posted all over the city, calling a meeting of 'Irish Americans,' to be held at Kensington Hall, Kensington square. About noon, a small party of men and boys, of the hard-working class, passed through the streets, bearing a large American flag and a banner, on which was inscribed 'This is the flag that was trampled by Irish Patriots.'

"At the appointed hour the meeting assembled, and the speakers did their utmost to allay the excitement of those who composed it. It was evident, however, from the fiery character of the discourses, that there was no disposition to listen to pacific suggestions. Bearing the mutilated flag and the banner above mentioned, the multitude proceeded up Fifth-street to Second and Master, where the riot ensued.

"The procession from Independence-square arrived at the Market-house, and was proceeding to organise, when a musket was fired from the house at the intersection of Master-street and Cadwallader-street, on the Hibernia Hose-house, which is next to the corner. There was a man in the procession who had joined it on the way, carrying a musket. Many of the natives at the first shot dispersed, but this man immediately levelled his piece at a window in the direction from which the first discharge was made, and it is said shot down a person. He declared he would stand by the stripes and stars. He fired a second time and was then shot down.

"The conflict commenced about five o'clock, and continued with great fury. At about six o'clock the Native Americans set fire to the house at the corner of Cadwallader and Master-streets, from which it is supposed the gun was fired. The fire spread with great rapidity to the Hibernia Hose-house adjoining, and in a short time the whole row of buildings was in flames.

"The Irishmen still continued firing at intervals from their houses, even after they were set on fire, and as they came forward were driven out of one house by the heat of the flames and the falling rafters, they took refuge in another. They fought with a desperation becoming madmen.

"The Carroll Hose Company was taken from the house in Fourth-street above Master, and dragged upside down through the district; the hose injured, and the carriage made a wreck of. The house of the Hibernia Hose Company was also attacked, and the furniture destroyed, but not burned. The firing during this was continued from the houses, and a number were wounded while standing near and in the Market-house.

"The Hibernia Hose was the first place where the fire was discovered. That building was burned to the earth, and the contiguous houses caught fire and the flames spread with fearful and alarming rapidity. About thirty houses, north of the Hibernia, were destroyed. The conflagration in Kensington was terrific, and above fifty houses were also consumed. The mob held unbroken sway until the evening of Thursday, when they ceased, it would seem, from mere physical fatigue. In one of the churches a most valuable library was entirely destroyed. It would seem, from all accounts, that the military and police, which were called out at the commencement of the disturbances, were singularly inefficient. They seemed to have no force to be entirely disregarded, for no one dared to take the responsibility of ordering the strong measures necessary in such a crisis."

COLONEL STODDART AND CAPTAIN CONOLLY.

Captain Grover has received a letter from Mr. Wolff, dated, Meshed, March 24, 1844. The letter, strangely enough, fell in with Saleh Mohammed, called Akhoondzadeh, whose statement of what he said people had told him of the execution of Colonel Stoddart and Captain Conolly was published in all the papers, and on the faith of which her Majesty's Government erased the name of Lieutenant-Colone. Stoddart from the list of the army, and the East India Company that of Brevet Captain Conolly from their list. The latter officer has, however, it appears from the last accounts from Cabool, been recently promoted to a troop in the 6th Light Cavalry. The Doctor thus writes:—

"Saleh Mohammed told me that the two persons who were put to death, and of whom he gave circumstantial account to Colonel Shiel, many knew been two other persons, and the executioner who told him the story may have belied him. Besides this, I must confess that two things are suspicious to me in the extreme: he first set out from the executioner who told him the story had been the executioner of Stoddart; on another day, when I asked him again which of the two executioners had put Stoddart to death, he replied that he did not know. He moreover makes a claim upon Colonel Shiel for 120 tomaun, which I have learned from different quarters he has received from Major Todd."

Dr. Wolff takes presents to the King of Bokhara, of the value of between 500 and 600 gold tomaun, and he appears to have acquired the good wishes and assistance of all the people with whom he has been brought in contact. He thus relates an extraordinary circumstance:—

"I have written a most respectful letter to the Ameer of Bokhara, which I shall deliver myself. In this letter I remind his Majesty of the hospitable reception he granted to me when at Bokhara, twelve years ago, and of my boldly having defended him in England and throughout Europe, when I heard him accused of being the murderer of guests. I also petition his Majesty most humbly to take back my friends to their native country, or, should they have died on account of some fault committed, to inform me of the nature of their crime, and to permit me to carry their corpses to England, to be buried by their relations. I gave this letter here into the hands of the Sheik al Islam, of Meshed, who read it in the mosque of Gowher-Shah, in the presence of 5000 people there assembled."

The Doctor also says—

"A caravan arrived here some days ago, from Bokhara, and ask whom you please, the invariable answer is, 'they may be alive, for nobody has seen them executed,' and the Gooah Bekee, or Prime Minister, who for five years was supposed to have been put to death, has suddenly come forth alive and well from prison. The chief of the caravan of Bokhara, Mullah Kereem by name, who leaves that city every two months, and has a wife there, told me two days ago, that if any one asserts that he has seen the execution of the two elchies (ambassadors) he is a liar."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

HOUSE OF LORDS—THURSDAY.

Their lordships reassembled for the first time after the Whitsuntide holidays. Messengers from the Commons brought up several bills.

The Committee on the Law of Libel Bill was postponed.

On the motion of Earl DALHOUSIE, the Customs Duties Bill was read a second time, as was also the Bill for the Education of the Poor, and their lordships adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—THURSDAY.

Sir T. Freemantle took the oaths and his seat for Buckingham, and Lord A. Lennox for Chichester. The Right Hon. Secretary at War was loudly cheered as he entered the house

The reports on the Birkenhead Docks Bill, the Delabole and Rock Railway Bill, the Tenbury and Wyre Dock Bill, and on several other bills were brought up and agreed to.

The SWANSEA Harbour Bill was read a third time and passed

The Cwm Celyn and Bailey Iron Companies Bill was read a third time and passed.

The amendments on the Liverpool Docks Bill were read and agreed to.

The Sanitary Branch Bill was read a second time, and passed.

Mr. M. J. O'CONNELL presented a petition from Dublin and its vicinity, signed by 60,000 inhabitants, complaining of the monopoly enjoyed by the Bank of Ireland.

After several notices of motion with regard to the Bank Charter Bill, the Seas of St. Asaph and Bangor, the Royal Academy, and the Universities had been given, Mr. JERVIS brought forward a motion with regard to the claims of Ameer can Loyalists, which, after some discussion, was negatived without a division.

Mr. KELLY moved for leave to bring in a bill to provide an appeal in criminal cases, which after some observations from Sir JAMES GRAHAM was agreed to.

Several motions were postponed.

On the motion of Sir J GRAHAM a special committee was appointed to inquire into the Criminal Prisons.

On the motion for bringing up the report of the committee of supply on the colonial estimate, Mr. ROEBUCK brought under the consideration of the house the state of the Government of Canada, the discussion on which occupied the remainder of the evening. The hon. gentleman concluded without making any motion on the subject, and the house adjourned at a late hour.

HOUSE OF LORDS. FRIDAY.

Their lordships assembled at five o'clock.

On the motion of the Earl of RIPON, the Courts-Martial (East Indies) Bill was read a first time.

Lord LONDON presented petitions from Ireland against the Dissenters' Chapels' Bill.—Lord CAMBELL also presented a petition from Coleraine against it.

The Marquis of NORMANBY called their lordships' attention to the circumstances which had occurred at the last Monaghan assizes. A general impression existed in that part of the country that there had been a want of sincerity in the intentions of the Government in carrying out the directions which were contained in a circular to the Attorney-General Brady, with respect to the custom of challenging jurors.

Their lordships then went into committee on the Factory Bill.—Lord KINNAIRD said, though he was opposed to all legislative interference with labour, either with the produce of labour, or with labour itself, yet, as the principle of this bill had been the law of the land for years, he should not oppose its passing. But there was one clause in the bill which introduced an entirely new principle. The clause would certainly be quite inoperative, and he wished there were to know what had been introduced into the bill at all? When they came to the 32nd clause he should move that it be expunged.—The first clause was then agreed to, as were also clauses 2 to 11 inclusive.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—FRIDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at the usual hour.

Mr. Bouverie took the oaths and his seat for Kilmarnock. The hon. member was introduced by Mr. Elliot, jun., and Mr. Hume.

A number of petitions were presented against the Dissenters' Chapels Bill.

Mr. HUME gave notice that, in committee upon the Bank Charter Bill, he should move a clause for the repeal of the legal tender clause.

On the motion of Sir G. CLERK, it was resolved that the house at its rising adjourn till Monday.

The Courts-Martial Bill (East Indies) was read a third time and passed.

On the motion of Sir G. CLERK, the order of the day for going into Committee of Supply, was read for the purpose of postponing it.

On the motion Catholic Clergy Grants and Conveyances (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

On the motion of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, the Glass and Vinegar Duties Bill was committed to-day.

On the motion for reading the order of the day for going into committee on the Ecclesiastical Courts Bill, Captain PECHELL presented a petition from Brighton against the Bill.—Mr. R. PHILLIPS from the Law Society of Manchester, praying that a clause should be inserted in the bill, consolidating the powers of certain of these courts.—Mr. T. DUNCOMBE rose to move an amendment in the Committee to abolish all Ecclesiastical Courts, and to transfer the jurisdiction of those Courts to civil tribunals. His object was to take away all jurisdiction from the Ecclesiastical Courts, and to put an end to the expensive system that took place there. He could not see why the Courts of Assize were not competent to decide questions that were usually brought before the Ecclesiastical Court. Such tribunals were founded on common sense and common justice, and Lord Hale and Lord Holt had denounced the Ecclesiastical Courts as tribunals against common justice and common sense. (Hear, hear.) The hon. gentleman concluded by moving the motion of which he had given notice.—Mr. HUME seconded the motion.

ST. DAVID'S. The dean and chapter of this place have ordered the pews that are on the south side of the cathedral to be removed, and the whole of it to be thrown open. Hitherto the Welsh service has been performed in it.

The AMETHYST, 50, Captain the Hon. J. Gordon, left her moorings at Devonport, Hamoaze, between eight and nine o'clock on Friday morning, and proceeded into the Sound, in tow of the Confiance tug, followed by the Leander steamvessel.

The Lightning, steam-tender, Master Commander Roberts, arrived at Devonport on Sunday, from Cork, to which place she had conveyed Rear Admiral Sir Hugh Pigot.

The second engineer on board the Cyclops steam-frigate, now stationed at Barbadoes, committed suicide on board that vessel last week, by cutting his throat with a razor.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

WINTER V. DIBDIN.

Mr. Jervis showed cause against a rule nisi obtained by Mr. Hill for discharging the defendant from the custody of the sheriff of Middlesex, on the ground of privilege. The learned counsel contended that the affidavit was insufficient. The defendant stated that he was liable to be called upon to collect rents, to perform the duties of chaplain to her Majesty, and that he had performed such service at the Chapel Royal whenever he was called upon. The defendant, however, did not state how often he was called upon, and his affidavit would not be false although he had never been called upon. It was also incumbent upon the defendant to show that he held his appointment from the Lord Chamberlain, which did not appear. The action was brought on a bill of exchange, upon which the plaintiff recovered judgment and arrested the defendant, and the Court would not interfere summarily, but would leave the defendant to his writ of privilege, if the affidavit left the matter in any respect doubtful. The Court thought the affidavit sufficiently explicit, as it showed that Dr. Dibdin was one of the Queen's servants in ordinary, liable to be called on at any time: and made the rule absolute for his discharge, without calling on his counsel to support it.

POLICE.

THAMES OFFICE.—Mr. C. Pearson, the City solicitor, attended before Mr. Ballantine, on Tuesday, to prosecute an information against Mr. John Alexander, the master of the collier brig Liberty and Property, for remaining in the Pool longer than fifteen days, contrary to the by-laws for the regulation of the port of London, by which he had incurred a penalty of £20 or £10, for each day beyond the time allowed. The defendant, who pleaded not guilty, was represented by Mr. Pearsley, the solicitor.—The City Solicitor said that numerous complaints had been made to the Lord Mayor by seamen navigating the coa. ships, of their long detention in the river, and the consequent distress into which their wives and families were plunged by the voyages between the north and London being extended to a very lengthened period. The Lord Mayor had determined that all infractions of the law should be prosecuted, and had instructed the harbour masters and other officers of the City to bring under his notice every violation of the by-laws for the regulation of the colliers in the Pool.—The case having been proved, Mr Ballantine said the puisarty he hoped the press would give to this case would effect more good than the heaviest penalty he could inflict. Seamen were daily complaining to him of their detention, and applying to him for their wages, which he could not order, because in London only half the voyage was performed. He should inflict a penalty of 40s. only, as it was the first case; but he begged it might be understood that he did not think lightly or feel lightly on the subject, which was a most important one. In future cases he should inflict large penalties.—By this decision the evil so long complained of, detaining sailors in the Pool for an indefinite period, will be put an end to, and a numerous and valuable body of men relieved. Notices have been issued that every master of a collier will be prosecuted for violating the law.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—A young Irishman approached the magistrate's desk, and applied to Mr. Maltby for a summons against the Duke of Leinster. The applicant was generously dressed; he was usually called George Fay, but his real name was George Gwelph, and that he was the son of George IV.—Mr. Maltby suspecting from the applicant's manner that he laboured under deranged intellects, put some questions to him, with the view of finding out his connections.—The applicant said he was living at the Railway Tavern, at the Buringham terminus, in Euston-square; and he further stated he had a relation in Thayer-street, Manchester-square.—Mr. Maltby sent Giblet, one of the police-constables attached to the court, to the Railway Tavern, to make inquires. Mr. Oliver, the landlord, soon afterwards entered the court, and informed Mr. Maltby that the young man had been lodging at his house on and off for about a fortnight. His conduct was eccentric, and his behaviour not that of a sane person.—Mr. Maltby requested that inquiry should be made in Thayer-street, to see if any relation of the prisoner could be found, and in the meantime directed that the applicant should be properly looked after.

On Wednesday, Mr. Wm. Gillman Slack, of No. 10, Union-street, Hill-street, Berkeley-square, attorney-at-law, was placed at the bar on the charge (as entered on the police-sheet) "of attempting to murder Elizabeth Hughes and Catherine Hughes, sisters, and maiden ladies, and Eliza Hughes, the wife of their brother, by suffocating them with brimstone, at No. 16, Duke's-mews, Audley-street, Grosvenor-square." It appeared that the complainants, who are highly respectable, had, a few weeks since, taken apartments for a limited period at No. 16, Duke's-mews, the house being kept by Mrs. Dunmore. For some reason, which did not transpire, they had received notice to quit, but their legal tenancy would not expire until Monday next. Yesterday the defendant made his appearance in the house, and conducted himself in a most indecent manner towards the complainants; they were also greatly annoyed by noises made on the staircase, and about four o'clock in the afternoon their lives were actually endangered by the fumes of lighted charcoal and brimstone issuing from an iron portable stove placed on the landing-place, immediately underneath their apartments. On the first-named complainant attempting to rush into the street, she was assaulted by the defendant. Eventually the police entered the house and found the combustibles still burning, and took the defendant into custody. Mr. Hardwick said the case was one of a very aggravated assault, and he should send it to the sessions. The defendant said, if that was the worthy magistrate's determination, he should reserve his defence. He was then ordered to find bail.

UNION-HALL.—John Lester, carrying on the business of a hairdresser and perfumer, in Bermondsey-street, was brought before Mr. Cottingham, charged with attempting to poison his wife by mixing a quantity of arsenic in her tea. It appeared that the wife had felt unwell, and being unable to get up and prepare breakfast, she requested her husband to send her up a cup of tea, which he did, but owing to the quickness and intelligence of her son, a lad eleven years of age, she was prevented from swallowing the poisoned draught. The tea was examined, and exposed to the fact of the suspicions being aroused by seeing his father dissolve a white powder in the tea cup. The mixture was kept back by the wife and afterwards taken by her to Guy's hospital, where, on being analysed, it was found to contain a quantity of arsenic. The prisoner had been often heard to threaten to "do" for his wife. The prisoner was committed to the county gaol.

GAMING ANALYSED.

The recent attack by the police upon some of the gambling-houses in the West-end, coupled with the late directions from the Home Secretary for the more rigorous of the practice existing time out of mind on the race grounds in the vicinity of London having attracted considerable attention, it may not be uninteresting to inquire into the nature of chance, which seems to be the main reliance of those who enter upon what is generally called fair play gambling.

A good deal of unmerited odium has attached to this phrase; for many persons engaged in what is considered honourable professions and pursuits are quite as much influenced in their undertakings by the spirit of gambling, or in other words, the calculation of the chances, as those who work out their operations by means of cards, dice, &c., &c.

A railway project, a mercantile speculation, a battle on which the fate of nations may hang, has each, more or less of the ingredient which forms the staple stock of the gambler—chance.

The immediate object of the present paper is to show that no chance can by any possibility counteract the advantage which the usual per centage allowed to the banker, sums with an against the player. This, to a certain degree, is the case with the to, and admitted by, all who engage in games of equal hazard; but many, if not all, such persons flatter themselves that by some superior skill, some closer observation of the game, some happy account of a lucky turn, of which they considered themselves the judges, they will be enabled to counteract the constantly recurring and invariable advantage which they know and admit the per centage yields to the banker. It is true, and the annals of the gaming-table can bear continued loss. But his mistake is a sad one; for he shakes a bag which has no "hope" at the bottom

It is an established fact proved by various returns to the French Government, that in le games of chance the return on both sides equalized themselves, and that chance would, even in a short run, leave the players exactly where they began; but the constantly recurring profits of the table to the banker operating like fate against the player, must, in spite of any adroitness, skill, or calculation, on the part of the latter, render him the victim of his own play, unless he withdraw the play the greater is the advantage to the banker, and so well was this fact known to the French Government, that the amount of fee paid in the shape of license was proportioned to the number of the hours for play. most thoroughly equalized. In rouge et noir, where the per centage of the banker is worst, being only two per cent, as any one who is acquainted with calculation on the same must be aware, it is the interest of the table to play with the utmost quickness, and men who deal the cards with rapidity are paid at a high rate by the banker, who, calculating on the quantity of play, the chances being still equal, relies for his profits on the swelling of the per centage.

Fig 1.

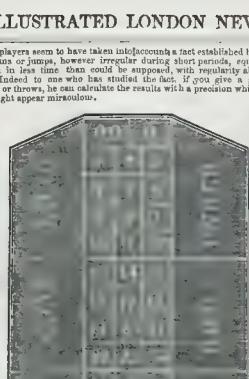
In roulette (fig. 1) the per centage varies from 3 to 6, because of the two zeros one of which is a source of active profits to the banker, whilst he gains passively by the other, combining both, we estimate the profits at a constancy of 4½ per cent., which of course makes fearful and unsuperable odds against the player. To this must be added the trick of the table, which, in paying out to the winner, includes but the stake in the amount returned as won, when entered on the numbers (fig. 2), thus making an additional per centage against the player of 2½

This is the view of the game as played in the metropolis; but the race tables are differently constructed, having only 24 compartments instead of 36, but still retaining the two zeros, both of which operate actively in favour of the banker, and thus create the per centage against the player to more than 12½ which, considering the rapidity with which the game is played, being at the rate of at least 150 turns per hour, must leave the player no possibility of equalizing the game, according to the rule of chances, sufficiently established by innumerable returns.

It may be said, and it is readily admitted, that a man who keeps an expensive establishment should have some allowance made for rent, taxes, servants, and all other expenses attendant thereupon; and the man who plays against the banker will probably suppose that these make a dead weight equal to the odds which he gives in the per centage, and he tries various modes of obviating an admitted advantage on the part of his opponent. Some adopt the losing game with the fees them from the loss by jumps; others again take the winning game, knowing that whatever is lost by jumps is gained again by the runs, a third class systematize their play in another manner, taking an arbitrary number either of blanks or reds as their standard, and, by endeavouring to counteract the fair result of chances, are sure to become losers, even to a greater extent than they would have been, relying on the fair chance, even admitting to the banker all the advantages which the per centages yielded to him

Notwithstanding the numerous calculations which have been made with respect to games of pure chance, though the truth has sometimes glimmered upon them, few players seem to have taken into account a fact established by experience, that runs or jumps, however irregular during short periods, equalize themselves even in less time than could be supposed, with regularity almost mathematical. Indeed to one who has studied the fact, if you give a given number of turns or throws, he can calculate the results with a precision which to some persons might appear miraculous.

Fig 2



We have said enough in this article to awaken attention to the startling fact that in all games of hazard or equal chance, an advantage of even so little as a quarter per mille, must ultimately terminate in favour of the party to whom the odds are given; for the disturbance in the slightest degree of the equalization of chance operates in the same way as would be the disturbance of a straight line, however great or small in the ratio of the extreme divergence

When our gaming friends have ruminated this matter, we shall proceed to show in our second chapter, how the table games by Methods and Progressions.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE DERBY SETTLING.

I will not change my horse for any that Thessalian Tempe's vale e'er yielded.—Henry V.

Since the days when Charles the Cheerful used to sit on the Warren hill, with Nell the Naughty at his side, the turf has seen a tolerable series of vicissitudes, all tending towards the crisis on the threshold of which it now stands. It has, at length found its way into Parliament and the law courts, and, unless the luck is an over average sample, it will very soon be in the other place—"last stage of all." Nemo repente fuit turpissimus, is a Latin axiom, the free translation of which is, it takes some time to make a perfect fool of a rich gentry or so the character has been regularly progressing, and, without flattering ourselves, we may assert we now possess some finished specimens of the species. These exist as well in the Corinthian as the plebian orders; in such fair proportions, indeed, that it has been a drawn battle between them for the last few years. The former had certainly the best of it in the skirmishes (episodes which we won't offend the reader by supposing him ignorant of), while the latter on occasion, by great heavy in affairs which were more regular. Thus stood the belligerents when, some months since, it was whispered that, in the spring, something decisive would be attempted on Epsom Downs.

The popular opinion was that the Plebs would be the assailing party (we distinguish the Patricians as Corinthians and Plebeians, as both belong to the equestrian order), a belief supported by the precautions behind which the others are fortifying themselves. First came whispers about "protests," "declarations," and the like, and then followed open reports, and shortly downright assertions (as stated in considerable favour for the Derby, bight Running Rein—as detailed in our narrative of the recent issue of that ilk. He won, as we have shown, and then came the reckoning and the hours for play. The settling, as it was by (Sacra a non Jucendo). This important part of horse coursing came off on Tuesday last at Tattersall's, when it was announced as the opinion "of the most influential subscribers," that the Derby, in which the names of the Corinthian and Orlando did not occur might be settled without any possible impediment: therefore, where they did, as there existed much let and hindrance, all arrangement stood over. Of course, in such a category the Running Rein stood up for their champion, and the Orlando party was furioso in favour of their hero:—which is in the right?

The ring is a vast mystic cauldron, into which all sorts of subtleties are thrown by the company of turfites, amateurs, professionals, gentle and simple. This, they, who live upon portents, skim twice a week at Tattersall's, and sometimes fare sumptuously when, by accident, it boils over. Some of the most puzzle-taking of these worthies watched, during the winter, the unfiring enemy with which a certain influential clique lost no opportunity of laying against Running Rein for the Derby. They saw his policy pursued up to the afternoon of the first day of Epsom Races, when they noted the same party as resolutely backing him. From these premises, they drew the conclusion that the clique aforesaid rested their hopes on the probability of his not being permitted to start. That chance, however, not only failed them, but the horse actually won. What then remained? To get up a pause among his backers, and go into the market and secure their hedgings. This has been done to a vast amount; and the timid will no doubt continue to surrender their odds while sixpennyworth of them remains We by no means insist that the stakes will be awarded by a court of law in Running Rein's favour, but we hold it very probable. The ex parte evidence produced to the stewards at Epsom, we know to have been very powerful—and those gentlemen were able to strengthen it by presentiment of their own. This horse, since his birth, has passed through the hands of thirteen individuals, all of whom have put in affidavits, or certificates, of his being the animal entered for various engagements, as Running Rein, by the Sadler, out of Mab. When his pedigree was questioned, last October, at Newmarket, on an investigation, the objection was pronounced "not to have a leg to stand on. It has now again been raised, and with an intimation that should it be substantiated this time, the owners of the spurious nomination will be prosecuted for conspiracy. Nevertheless, they are resolute, and sanguine to the extent of backing him to win—and giving money for their bets. A great deal depends, indeed, in the extraordinary inquiry: and great multitudes consult these columns. Therefore it is that we have thus enlarged upon the recent settling for the Derby—counselling each for whom Running Rein may be a winner, to be of good cheer—and until he hear more from us on the matter, "not to change his horse for any that treads but on four pasterns.

TATTERSALL'S. THE SETTLING.

MONDAY.—At a meeting of the most influential subscribers to Tattersall's, interested in the Derby and Oaks settlement, it was unanimously agreed that no possible impediment could exist to the settlement of all accounts on the Derby, in which the names of Running Rein and Orlando do not occur, and that, therefore, the settlement will take place this day, as usual, with the above exceptions." The meeting referred to in the above document, which was posted in the Subscription-room, took place in the early part of the afternoon, and was, as intimated, attended by several of the most influential subscribers. At a late hour the room became crowded, and the great majority of those present either the betting-book of my deceased husband. You will perceive, that in case Running Rein shall receive the stakes, there will be a sum of £694, and in case Orlando shall receive them, of £724. I enclose you, therefore, a draft for the larger sum, and would wish you to apply this sum, together with the receipts from the several losers, to pay, as far as may be the claims of the several winners. It is possible that in a case of this sort, it is not customary to settle the book: should it be so, I am not anxious to establish a precedent. With a deep sense of the trouble I am about to impose on you,

I have the honour to be, sir, yours most respectfully,
Carlton-house-terrace, May 27, 1844. S. F. CROCKFORD.

The following is the opinion of the Stewards of the Jockey Club:—

We are of opinion that every person indebted to the late Mr. Crockford, on his Epsom account, is bound to pay the amount due to the person deputed to settle the same.

(Signed) SEFTON
May 27, 1844. GEORGE BENTINCK.

TUESDAY.—The "settling," if so disjointed an affair be deserving of the name, commenced on Tuesday afternoon in the subscription-room, and, taking all the circumstances into consideration, proved a much quieter proceeding than we had ventured to anticipate. When it will be completed the lawyers alone can tell. The principle upon which it took place has been already stated; those accounts in which neither Running Rein nor Orlando's name occurred were settled in full; but all such as touched either of them, although bets on the Oaks were involved, stand over, except in cases where a winning balance was shown on each of the two horses, in which, we presume, there could not have been objection to pay the smaller amount. Nothing in the shape of a dispute occurred until late in the afternoon, and then only in consequence of two or three parties having attended without the "wherewithal," or who fancied, because they had "off" between Orlando and Running Rein since the race, that bets made previously would necessarily remain in abeyance. To speak of winners and losers in this stage of the settlement would be idle—some monstrances, perhaps, we may be able to satisfy ourselves on the point. We should not omit to state that Mr. Crockford's account was entrusted to Mr. F. Clark, who, although there were some dissentients, made considerable progress with it.

THURSDAY.—The principal topic on Thursday was the settling, and a vast deal more was said than done; in short, some refused to settle at all, and others who had commenced paying on Tuesday, "held hard," and mean to "hold them time." Several even bets were laid between the two horses for the "great event," the "old one," as Running Rein is jocosely termed, having the call 7 to 4 was taken about Alice Hawthorn for the Ascot Cup, and 4 to 1 that she wins that and the Vase. For the Derby, 1845, which we expect to see decided about the same time as the late one, 10,000 to 300 was taken about John Davis.

Mr. Thornhill died on Wednesday night.

GOODWOOD RACES.—IMPORTANT NOTICE!—The following notice has been given by the stewards of Goodwood races:—" Notice is hereby given, that no horse, whether professed age is supposed will be allowed to start without a previous examination of his mouth, by competent persons appointed by the stewards; and if not objected to until after the race, a similar examination will be instituted in the case of restriction to age, examination by the owner, trainer, or other person having charge of such horse, the stakes will be awarded and the race given to the second horse, and the parties implicated in such fraud will be for ever excluded from running horses at the attending Goodwood races. Objections must be made in writing to one of the stewards, or to Mr. Weatherby.—N.B. Parties who were warned off from the race course in 1843, are reminded that if they attend this year they will be prosecuted, unless the notice has been regularly withdrawn by the person who signed it."

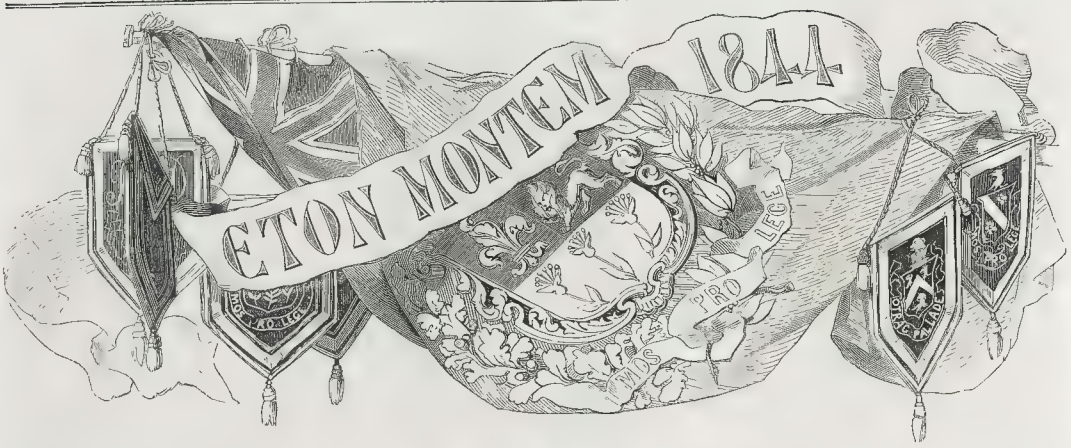
DONCASTER RACES.—A similar notice to the above has been published by the stewards of these races, with the exception of the paragraph alluding to parties warned off in 1843.

THE DERBY AND LEGER LOTTERIES.—It has just transpired, from a source on which the most implicit reliance can be placed, that it is the intention of Government to adopt measures for the immediate suppression of the above speculations. Arrangements are about being made with the magistracy to carry this intention of the Government into effect; for which purpose the police authorities will receive instructions to give ample notice to publicans, that if they for the future permit "lotteries," or "sweepstakes," to be held, they will not only subject themselves to heavy penalties, but, by permitting them to take place on their premises, such an illegal proceeding will endanger the licenses of their respective houses. The great extent to which these lotteries have been carried has induced the Government to come to the above resolution, and the suppression of every species of gambling at all public races will be followed up by strict regulations being issued for the abolition of the numerous Derby, Oaks, Leger lotteries and sweepstakes, which are carried on to almost every town and village of the least importance, from the Lands'-end to John O'Groat's. It is but only within these last few years that the rage for this sort of speculation has become popular; consequently, the Derby lotteries have been supported by all classes of society, from the peer to the peasant.

AQUATICS.

The Earl of Morley has accepted the commodoreship of the Royal Western Yacht Club, at Plymouth, where the annual regatta is fixed to take place on the 16th and 17th of July.

NORTHERN ROWING CLUB, BELFAST.—This Association which is looked to with so much interest, by the admirers of aquatic amusements, and which is, indeed, very popular, gave the first of the season's series of festivities, on Friday last, in honour of the anniversary of her Majesty's birth-day. Shortly after the appointed time, the tiny fleet got under way, which was announced by the boom of a small piece of artillery.—The procession moved down the river, in splendid style, headed by the flag-ship, carrying the Commodore (Mr. Edmund Getty). There were pulled in the following order, by gentlemen wearing the Club uniform, the beautiful gig Zephyr, Arrow (a turn out particularly admired), Harpoon, Gazelle, Petrel, Swan, and Sylph, and the flang gig Superb and Pelican. The competitors in the first match were the Gazelle and Ariel (known as the Carrick gig—manned by pilots—the former successful. We may mention, that



This triennial festival took place on Whit-Tuesday. The threatening state of the elements did not deter thousands of the nobility and gentry from being present on the occasion, and though her most gracious Majesty the Queen did not honour the proceedings of the day with her presence, she sent her accustomed munificent present of £105 towards the "Salt," by the hands of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and expressed through him to the Provost and the College athourities the interest which she felt in the doings of the day. His Royal Highness arrived at the ancient gate of the college, called Western-gate, of which the annexed engraving is a correct view, a few minutes after twelve o'clock, attended by a guard of honour of the Scots Fusilier Guards; by Lord George Lennox, Mr. G. E. Anson, Col. Wylde. and Capt. Seymour. His Royal Highness had arrived at Slough by a special train on the Great Western Railroad shortly before eleven o'clock, whence he proceeded to Windsor in his carriage, and having rested a short time at the Castle, returned again through Windsor and was received, as is here represented, by the Provost of the College, Dr. Hawtrey, the head master of the school, the Fellows of the College, the assistant masters, &c. The band of the First Life Guards striking up "God save the Queen," and the spectators cheering in loud huzzas. His Royal Highness appeared to enjoy the scene, which was one of great animation, and bowed repeatedly to the groups assembled around. He was immediately conducted by the Provost and the authorities specified to the "Election Chamber" of the College, where refreshments were laid out.

The next plate represents the Great Hall of the College, in which those young gentlemen who are on the foundation of the establishment, and are destined to become, after their probation at Eton, scholars and fellows of King's College, Cambridge, according to their seniority and proficiency, and who are termed "Collegers," are accustomed to dine. It will be seen from the plate, that it is a very noble apartment, built on the same plan as the halls of the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, of the date of Henry VI., the founder of Eton College. The proportions of this hall have been much admired, and it is frequently visited by the curious and the antiquaries, the architects of these days, and particularly by foreigners and persons of research from the Continent.

On Tuesday, the day of the Montem, according to the custom which has for so many years been in existence, the "Captain" of the school, that is, the boy on the foundation to whom the collection of the day belongs, gave in this spacious apartment a breakfast to his schoolfellows, that is, to those of a certain rank in the school. About one hundred sat down to the hospitable refection, at which there was no want of substantials nor of delicacies. The joyous appearance of the host and his guests, the elegance and splendour of the dresses, the brilliancy of the uniforms, and the whole appearance of the scene, was full of gratification. Many old Etonians who were visitors, and amongst whom were some of the most distinguished men of the day, regretted that they were no longer young enough to be participators in the festivity which in their youth they had enjoyed, and thought their present rank, position, and honours, but a poor exchange for the freshness of enjoyment and

ENSIGN'S PAGE. PAGE.—PHILIP D'AULNAY PAGE.—TEMP. FRANCIS I.

PAGE.—HUNGARIAN HUSSAR. PAGE.—CRUSADER

SERVITOR.—GERMAN NOBLE. SERVITOR.—SPANISH PEASANT.

ETON MONTEM.

buoyancy of spirits which was exhibited on this occasion by their successors in the places they once filled. Our artist has been very happy in taking the view of this interesting scene, both as to the groups, and as to the architectural drawing.

The scene in the Quadrangle is next depicted. This large court-yard is one of the finest specimens of Collegiate architecture of the time in which it was built that is to be seen in England. It is in some respects not surpassed by anything of its class in England. On the western side is a colonnade, or piazza, over which is a long and spacious room, called the Upper School-room, in which that portion of the scholars who form what are called the sixth and fifth forms (the two upper classes), assemble for the performance of their scholastic exercises. There is also on this side of the Quadrangle two other smaller chambers, one called the Library, in which are shelves for books, but in which no books are now to be seen, and the other the room in which a division of the scholars, called the "Remove," perform their duties during school hours. On the left of the Quadrangle, as the spectator stands with his back towards the piazza, are the Lower School-room, which is on the basement story, and one of the sleeping-rooms for the "Collegers;" and above these is the celebrated apartment known as the "Long Chamber," in which are about sixty oaken bedsteads, bedding, rugs, &c., for the accommodation of the said "Collegers." On the opposite side of the Quadrangle, or right hand of the spectator, is the college Chapel in which the scholars attend Divine service. It is a very elegant structure, and of very ample dimensions. It is built partly on the same plan and after the model of the inimitable chapel of King's College, Cambridge, which it very much resembles, though it has not the richness nor the painted windows which adorn that edifice. On the eastern side of the Quadrangle is situated the Library of the College and other apartments; and in the centre of this part of the building is a remarkably fine gateway, leading into the cloisters and to the entrance of the Dining-hall; and over this gateway is the window of the election chamber, from which his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the distinguished visitors by whom he was surrounded, his suite, the Provost of Eton, and others who had the honour of the entrée, surveyed the animated scene between them, the calling of the muster-roll, or, as it is termed, the "absence" of the scholars, the waving of the flag by the Ensign, the promenading of the numerous people of rank and fashion assembled, the forming of the procession, &c. &c. The military bands all the while, or at least with but short intervals, playing some delightful concerted music, and the whole scene of the re-union of hundreds of old friends, and the congratulations of hundreds of parents, guardians, sons, wards, relatives, and long-remembered, but long-revered acquaintances. It was in this Quadrangle that the most complete view was afforded of the various dresses and costumes. It was here that the scene was enlivened by the presence of so many beautiful females, whose dresses were scarcely less costly and picturesque than those of the chief performers in the great carnival of the day. Perhaps nothing in these days can give any notion of the peculiar spectacle which the Quadrangle presented, because nothing of a similar character exists. A mere written description could scarcely be understood, and we have for that reason availed ourselves of the talents of the very able artist who has taken the view here given, and we trust our readers will appreciate his most creditable and successful labours.

PAGE.—GREEK.

PAGE.—SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

PAGE.—TEMP. HEN. IV., FRANCE. BUNNER.—TEMP. CHAS. I. PAGE.—TEMP. CHAS. II.

The little hill or mound called "Salt-hill," a spot well known to all who travelled on the western road before the introduction of railroads, forms the next point which the pencil of the artist has here portrayed—and, we submit, most faithfully. It is here that the important ceremony of waving the flag is performed by the Ensign. We remember some years ago to have seen the ensign of that day—now one of the judges of the land—perform this by no means easy operation with as much knowledge and skill in what he was about, as now distinguish him in his more arduous duties in Westminster-hall. It was around this little mound of earth, "far-famed Salt-hill," that were assembled on Whit Tuesday thousands of spectators, all joyous, all full of gaiety and animation, from the prince to the peasant, from the duchess to the cottager's daughter, old and young, all come out for a holiday, and all having made up their minds to enjoy one. On the summit of the hill stands the Ensign, Mr. Hutton, waving the flag, which bears the College arms and motto. The hill is clustered with groups of pages, salt-bearers, and scholars, in the habiliments of war. At the base and stretching along the road are rows of carriages and mobs of spectators, and in the most conspicuous and appropriate place the carriage of his Royal Highness Prince Albert and his suite. His Royal Highness, after having viewed this, one of the last things in the whole ceremony, did not return to Windsor, but drove at once to the railroad station at Slough, and left the scene of action at half-past two for London. His Royal Highness is understood to have expressed his unqualified approbation at all he beheld, and at the manner of his reception. He gave a weighty proof of his gratification and sympathy by contributing £30 to the "salt."

It was formerly the custom for the scholars and their friends to proceed, immediately after the waving of the flag, to the spacious inn kept by Mr. Botham, the "Windmill," and there partake of the good things provided by the ladies called the "Dames," by whom the houses in Eton at which the "Oppidans" or scholars not on the foundation of the college, reside, are kept; but this practice was not observed on this occasion. At half-past two o'clock the whole of the scholars and the immense multitude which formed the procession, or beheld it, returned to Eton, where a dinner was provided in the place shown in the next illustration.

THE DINNER AT FELLOWS EYOT.

This Eyot, as is shown in the representation of it, is a sort of peninsula attached to the continent or playing-fields of the College by a convenient isthmus. On it, on this occasion, were placed the enormous tents, and one of them the splendid tent which once belonged to Tippoo Saib; and beneath these was laid the dinner for nearly eight hundred guests. Here were regaled the scholars after their fatigue and exertions; and here reigned for some time merriment and good humour. In the playing-fields were the military bands playing, to the delight of the promenaders, who in great numbers paraded for some time, and seemed almost distressed to quit so gay a scene, and return to the duller realities of every-day existence. All things, however, must have a termination, and here terminated all that is interesting and peculiar in this grand pageant. There was certainly after this

(Continued on page 352.)

THE CAPTAIN'S BREAKFAST, IN THE COLLEGE HALL.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 2.—Trinity Sunday.
MONDAY, 3.—W. Harvey died, 1657.
TUESDAY, 4.—Milne born, 1797.
WEDNESDAY, 5.—Boniface.
THURSDAY, 6. Corpus Christi.
FRIDAY, 7.—Reform Bill passed, 1832.
SATURDAY, 8.—MRS. Siddons died, 1831.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending June 8.

Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
3 25	3 46	4 12	4 33	5 0	5 24	5 48	6 14	6 38	7 4	7 30	7 55

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"I. S." is thanked for the sketch of the suspension-bridge in Canada, which shall be engraved.
"E. H. E.," Cheltenham.—The sketches arrived too late for this season, but shall be engraved next.
"Rose" will doubtless recover the balance. The statute is six years.
"J. P.," Northerwood, Lyndhurst.—The statue of Nelson, in Trafalgar-square, is of granite.
"S. E. T." should consult Lempriere's Classical Dictionary.
"E. H." complains that a few days since he witnessed the interment of four or five poor persons in the parochial burial-ground of St. Luke's, without any service being read over them. We hope some of our readers resident in the parish will interfere.
"E. H." Dudley.—We have forwarded our correspondent's letter to Mr. Mason, at Brighton.
"The Captain of the Oppidans," Eton College, requests us to state that the Regatta will take place on June 4, as usual, when the boats will row up to Surley Hall, and return in the evening to the fireworks.
"A Subscriber from the commencement," Falmouth, can recover.
The name of the artist "Phiz" is Mr. Hablot Browne.
"F. P.," Southampton, should write to the Secretary of the Grand Lodge, London.
"E. H." should subscribe at once.
"W. J.," Watling-st., shall be replied to in our next.
"W. E. B."—A beer-shop landlord is allowed to keep a certain quantity of spirits for his family use.
"P. R."—We know nothing of Captain Warner's invention.
"G. F. W.," Liverpool.—Any News Agent in Liverpool will supply our Journal at 5s. 6d. per quarter, if paid in advance.
"O Neath."—Sir Henry Hardinge last his left arm at Corunna.
"J. W.'s" (Eatan), note arrived too late.
"L. M." Dublin.—Our fourth volume will be completed on June 29. Bellini the celebrated composer, has been dead some years.
"S. M. B. M." and "M. S. D.," will be entitled to the large sheet.
"A Subscriber from May 14" may obtain by interest, what it would be hazardous to attempt by purchase. The course to be pursued depends on the nature of the appointment.
Running Rein. in the last number of our Journal, was drawn by J. F. Herring, Esq.
"J. W.," Saxe-hill. -The Right Hon. W. Pitt died in his 47th year.
"J. B." Atherstone.—See further announcements.
"A. P. H." Great Portland-street.—We shall be glad to see the sketches.
"S. S. S."—The notice of the work in question, with reviews of several other works, are in type.
"K. J. S."—The personages are Prince Albert, the King of the Belgians, and the Belgian Minister.
"C. B." Winchester College.—Next week.
INELIGIBLE.—My Poor Old Hat; Lines on the Spot; Lines to the First Spring Rose.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1844.

THE suspension of the sittings of the Houses for the greater part of the week, leaves but little for remark in the way of home politics. The interval has, however, been well filled by events or discussions either directly political or closely allied to politics. First, there has been the election for South Lancashire, gained by the Conservatives, after a sharp contest; it will go far to neutralise the effect produced by the return of Mr. Pattison for the City of London, on the same principles which are, it appears, rejected in the seat of the manufactures of the country, by a majority of 594. The next event, if it may be so called, is the sensation that has been created by the pamphlet of the Prince de Joinville—now, however, abating; there seems a growing opinion that more has been made of it than it deserved, by the extended notice it has received from the journals of both countries, to which it afforded a welcome theme for comment. We do not think that the chances of a war, or the disposition to engage in one, is in any degree increased by it. It would have fallen into the Limbo of oblivion the moment it appeared, had it been written by any one but a Prince.

It is curious enough that a publication of a different character is at the present moment exciting great interest in this country, among politicians of all shades, and among many who are not politicians at all. The exposition of the principles of the party called by others "Young England," as given by the most gifted of their champions, Mr. Disraeli, has been widely read. Whether it will augment the numbers of the party it defends may be doubtful, but assuredly it will gain for it respect in many points, and admiration in more. The kindlier feeling and more extended sympathies they exhibit for the poor, their recognition of the rights of labour as well as of property, and the disposition to remember that the last has its "duties" also, cannot be too highly commended in these days of legislation for the interests of capital, that takes alarm at the increase of rates, and shuts poverty into prisons as the only way of decreasing them—spending more money to build these Houses of Incarceration than it would have required to have prevented, and at least have relieved it. It is only justice to "Young England," to say that they advocate an attention to the poor beyond the exercise of the cold charity that only steps in at the last extremity. They insist on the necessity of a living for the poor that shall be something more than a mere existence, and they assert that some care should be taken by the State of their health, instruction, and means of recreation. Now a party that advocates improvements in these matters deserves to be strongly supported.

But let it not be imagined that these doctrines are maintained by the "new generation" alone. A very large portion of "Old England" protested against the Poor-law when passed, and exclaim against it still—see its defects as plainly, and denounce it as heartily as any of the members of the new confederation against a policy of expediency without fixed principle, and a Government of non-interference with evils, which, if a Government cannot prevent, it may be said to be useless. We deny, then, that the "Coningsbys" of the day are alone the possessors of the more hearty and humane principles of legislation; the utmost we can allow them in this respect is a better exposition of them than has yet been made; they have embodied a general idea, and very happily given expression to a general opinion, by casting into the characters of a fictitious tale want

Oft was thought, but ne'er so well express'd.

But the theory of the "new generation" is, in many points, terribly deficient. They have looked at the past so exclusively, that we doubt their perfect appreciation of the circumstances of the present; and they seem to think that a revival of the forms of departed times will bring back their essence. But "old times are changed, old manners gone;" the institutions that did well, and worked well, in a population of hundreds and thousands, would be inoperative, or impossible, in one that is counted by millions. Here is the difficulty—more people have to live on the same surface of ground, and the numbers seem every year increasing. If we are more wealthy, we are also more numerous; or, as the Psalmist has it, "If our riches are increased, those are increased that eat them." Hence arises the greater intensity of the struggle for subsistence, forcing not only men, but women and children, into torch-lit mines and noisy factories, for more days in the year, and more hours in the day, than is consistent with the health of body, or the cultivation of the mind. What remedy has "Young England" to propose for this, the giant evil of our times? A revival of the feudalities of the past will not meet the difficulty; and we fear that this, the great deficiency of the new school, has yet to be supplied.

In one of the detected cases of smuggling in the port of London, brought before the authorities this week, we perceive it has been stated by one of the revenue officers that "two-thirds of all the tobacco consumed in London is smuggled." It is the natural tendency of duties extravagantly, or it may be said absurdly high, in proportion to the cost price of the article, to defeat themselves, and to awaken the activity of that correction of the rapacity of the Exchequer—the smuggler. In no countries is smuggling more extensive or more organised than in those where excessive duties are maintained or absolute prohibition enforced. In Spain, for instance, the Contrabandistas have almost a monopoly of the foreign trade of the country, are organised in large bodies, and, whenever, which very rarely happens, they are attacked by the revenue officers, they make no scruple of defending themselves by arms: on the last recorded occasion, they defeated the regular troops with considerable loss. The amount of nominal duties is lost to the revenue, which, by a reasonable levy, might be benefited. Seventy on the part of the Government, even to the shedding of blood, is required to make up for long periods of negligence, and all this misery, cheating, and uncertainty, by which the State is robbed and the people demoralised and robbed at the same time, is kept up for the sake of maintaining an appearance of restriction which defeats itself. This is the effect of the system pushed to an extremity. We are not quite so foolish, we admit, but we make a very near approach to it, especially in the one article of tobacco, which, on some sorts is taxed to the amount of eight hundred and a thousand per cent. on its value. The advantage of evading such a per centage, is enough to create any amount of contraband trade. At the time the Slave Trade was being discussed, it was stated, we believe, by Sir Fowell Buxton, that a gain of eighty per cent. was enough to cover all risks even in a traffic so detestable and exposed to so many chances of detection. What, then, is to be expected in a trade that multiplies this profit, supposing the transaction undetected, by ten? Exactly what we see in operation; the illicit dealer gradually engrossing the whole of the trade, enabled by cheating the revenue, to sell his goods at a price that renders it impossible for the honest dealer to compete with him. The gigantic frauds lately detected in the Custom House have a deeper root than the dishonesty of the officials; if the whole body were swept away entirely and renewed by others, the last would become as bad as the first, if exposed to the temptations of the same absurd system. We laughed at the obstinacy of the Chinese Government in insisting on the enormous duties on opium, although its wholesale introduction was every day permitted by the bribed authorities; and we ourselves, in this great commercial country, are doing nearly the same thing. An article of enormous consumption, on which high duties are placed, almost entirely escapes taxation; two thirds of the trade in it is contraband! This is not the whole of the evil. To meet the competition in the market from the smuggled article, those who do pay the duty are, in many cases, compelled to adulterate so extensively, that the thing purchased and consumed by the public is often a villanous compound of unwholesome drugs and vegetable trash that is little better than so much poison. A Swiss or German peasant would not touch the stuff that is daily consumed by the mechanics of London; yet the former has to pay the expense of a long and tedious land carriage, in addition to the cost of the article, from which we are exempt. We are well aware that no considerations of whether the people had a bad article or a good one, whether they are half poisoned or not, would ever induce the Exchequer to move in the matter, provided it got its revenue; but at present the revenue itself is what suffers: on the lowest of all grounds then, self interest, we are not without hope that the Government may yet attempt some revision of our high scale of duties, which is at present producing fearful abuses and demoralization.

JUNE—the leafy month of June—is with us; but it comes with so unseasonable a temperature that it might almost be mistaken for March. Cold winds, cold rains, more than a sprinkling of hail, and a suspicion of frost, have closed the month of May, and been the ungenial heralds of her successor. There are paragraphs in the journals speaking of hill tops covered with snow—in Dartmoor and elsewhere. Not thus have the old poets painted summer; and Spenser, and Herrick, and the rest of them, have much to answer for; they have given a fictitious character to the season, to which men cling with a romantic credulity truly astonishing. One of them, however, and he the greatest of the band, has described a like blending of things opposed—a mingling of the appearance of summer and the sensations of winter; never have his lines been more applicable than during the last week:—

THE SEASONS ALTER! hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose,
And on old Hyem's chin and icy crown
An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds
Is—as in mockery—set.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

On Saturday morning the Queen and Prince Albert took their accustomed early walk in Claremont PARK. In the afternoon her Majesty and his Royal Highness drove out in an open pony carriage. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice, were taken their usual airings on Saturday in the gardens and park of Claremont.

On Sunday the Queen and Prince Albert, the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Royal Suite, and the Household, attended Divine service at Claremont. The Honourable and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated.

On Monday his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Colonel Wylde, Equerry in Waiting, left Claremont for town, at half-past ten o'clock. His Royal Highness proceeded to the Hanover-square Rooms, where he arrived at twelve o'clock. The private rehearsal during the rehearsal of the Concert of Ancient Music, and afterwards went to Buckingham Palace. The Queen, accompanied by the Princess Royal, and attended by the Viscountess Canning, Lady in Waiting, left Claremont soon after one o'clock in a carriage and four for town. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Alice, accompanied by the Dowager Lady Lyttleton, were in another royal carriage; and Lord Byron, Lord in Waiting, and Colonel Arbuthnot, Equerry in Waiting, followed in another royal carriage and four. The royal party arrived at Buckingham Palace, escorted by a party of Lancers, at twenty minutes before three o'clock. The royal dinner party at Buckingham Palace, in the evening, included the Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry, the Earl and Countess of Dalhousie, Lord and Lady Ashley, Viscount Canning, and Lord and Lady Granville Somerset. The band of the Grenadier Guards attended during dinner, and performed the following pieces:—Overture, "Die Vehmrichter," Berlon; Quadrille, "Chatsworth," Coote; Pot Pourri, "Cheval de Bronze," Auber; Waltzer, "Dulcinia," Labitzky; Galop, "Albert," Creston.

On Tuesday his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended as usual, left Buckingham Palace at twenty minutes before ten o'clock, to attend the triennial festival of the Eton Montem. His Royal Highness and suite went in two carriages and four to the terminus of the Great Western Railway, at Paddington, and travelled by a special train to Slough; from that station the Prince and suite proceeded to Windsor Castle, where the royal party arrived at twenty minutes before eleven o'clock. After remaining an hour at the Castle, his Royal Highness went to Eton College, and subsequently honoured the Provost with a visit, partaking of a déjeuner at his residence. The Prince, on quitting the College, proceeded to Salt-hill, and afterwards returned to Slough, and Town, by a special train, on the Great Western Railway. The royal party arrived at Buckingham Palace shortly before three o'clock. The Queen and Prince Albert, attended by the Viscountess Canning, Lady Caroline Cocks, Miss Frances Devereux, Lord Byron, Colonel Arbuthnot, and Colonel Wylde, honoured the Italian Opera with their presence on Tuesday evening. Her Majesty the Queen Dowager, attended by the Duchess of Sheffield and Earl Howe, also honoured the Italian Opera with her presence. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge were also present.

On Wednesday a grand dinner was given, at Buckingham Palace, to her Majesty the Queen Dowager and the noble Directors of the Concert of Ancient Music. The company consisted of her Majesty the Queen Dowager, their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, his Royal Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, the Duchess of Buccleuch; the Lady in Waiting on the Queen Dowager, the Countess of Sheffield; the Lady in Waiting on the Duchess of Cambridge, Baroness Abdefeldt; the Duke of Wellington, the Earl of Liverpool, the Earl of Jersey, the Earl of Cawdor, the Earl Howe, Lord George Lennox, Hon. William Ashley, Baron Knesebeck, and Captain Francis Seymour. At a quarter past eight o'clock, his Royal Highness Prince Albert (the director for the evening, in the absence of the Earl of Westmoreland) left Buckingham Palace, accompanied by the noble directors, for the Hanover-square Rooms. The royal party left in their carriages. The Queen, accompanied by the Queen Dowager, the Duchess of Cambridge, and the remainder of the royal party, left the Palace soon afterwards, for the Hanover-square Rooms, to honour the performance of the concert with her presence. The august party occupied five of the royal carriages.

Wednesday was the birthday of the Princess Sophia Matilda of Gloucester, who completed her 71st year. The Princess is passing the season in retirement at the Ranger's Lodge, Blackheath.

Miss Burdett Coutts, accompanied by Miss Meredith, has arrived at Aix-la-Chapelle, where she intends to remain until the middle of next month, and then return to Stratton-street.

DEATH OF THE EARL OF ATHLONE.—We have to record the demise of the Earl of Athlone, the intelligence of whose death was received by the Hon. Capt. Frederick and Lady Elizabeth Villiers, on Saturday last. The noble earl died on Tuesday, the 21st inst., at the Hague, where his lordship and family had for a long time resided. The deceased Wm. Constant Frederick de Reede de Ginkle, who was youngest son of the sixth earl, was born 14th August, 1776, and married 7th September, 1814, Wendela Eleanor, eldest daughter of M. Burcel, by whom, we believe, the earl has several children. The late earl succeeded to the family title on the death of his nephew, 2nd March, 1843.

The Marchioness of Bristol, we regret to state, expired on Saturday morning, at Brighton. Her Ladyship was the sister of the present Viscount Templetown, and was married to the Marquis of Bristol in February, 1798.

ARRIVAL OF THE KING OF SAXONY.—VISIT OF HIS MAJESTY TO THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN AT BUCKHURST PARK.

His Majesty the King of Saxony, attended by his Prime Minister, M. de Manteuffel, Count Einsiedel, and a limited number of his suite, left Ostend on Tuesday morning at half past seven o'clock by the Ariel, government steamer, Captain Smithett, and arrived at Dover shortly after one. His Majesty landed under a royal salute from the heights, and was received by Baron de Gersdorff, the Saxon Minister, and the commanding officers of the garrison, by whom he was conducted to the Ship Hotel, where he partook of lunch, and subsequently visited the castle, during the necessary delay occupied in transferring the royal carriages and luggage from the steamer to the railway. His Majesty left Dover by the three o'clock train for the Penshurst station of the South Eastern Railway, en route for Buckhurst Park.

The Earl and Countess of Wilton, Lord Cantalupe, and the Hon. Mortimer West and Lady Mary West, arrived shortly after four o'clock from London, and joined the family party.

His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar also went down from London for the purpose of meeting his Majesty.

The train conveying the King of Saxony and his suite reached Penshurst station about half-past five o'clock, where horses were in readiness to convey his Majesty to Buckhurst, a distance of about eleven miles. Precisely at half-past six one of the Lord Chamberlain's outriders arrived, bearing intelligence that the carrière was close at hand, and immediately after his Majesty's carriage, an open calèche drawn by four horses, and containing the King of Saxony and his Chief Minister, drew up at the grand entrance, where his Majesty was received by his host and hostess, Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar and the other guests assembled accompanying Lord Delawarr to the entrance hall for the purpose of welcoming the august tourist. The succeeding carriages contained the other members of his Majesty's suite, including Baron de Gersdorff, Saxon Minister at the Court of London; the Chamberlain to his Majesty; M. Reichardt, Aide-de-camp to his Majesty; and Dr. Carus, his Majesty's private physician.

His Majesty was instantly ushered to his private apartments shortly after his arrival, and subsequently joined the circle in the grand drawing-room. Dinner was ordered for half-past seven, covers being laid for eighteen guests.

Buckhurst originally belonged to the family of Sackville, and became the property of the Sackvilles by the marriage of Ela, daughter and co-heiress of Ralph de Dene with Jordan de Sackville, from whom the Dukes of Dorset were lineally descended. As to what time the old mansion was built is matter rather of conjecture than certainty. Queen Elizabeth is stated in one of her progresses to have visited Buckhurst. The mansion has been greatly improved, and, indeed, rebuilt by the present noble proprietor. It is in the Elizabethan style, and stands in a very extensive park, which contains some of the finest timber in the country.

On Wednesday his Majesty, accompanied by his noble host and hostess, paid a visit to the Earl and Countess of Amherst, at their magnificent seat Knole Park, distant about nine miles. His Majesty honoured the earl and countess with his company to lunch, after which he visited Penshurst and Redleaf, returning to Buckhurst to dinner.

Lord Cantalupe, although still suffering from the effects of his recent accident, is fast recovering.

HIS MAJESTY'S VISIT TO BRIGHTON, CHICHESTER, AND PORTSMOUTH.

The King of Saxony left Buckhurst Park, at an early hour on Thursday morning en route for Brighton, Chichester, and Portsmouth

His Majesty took leave of the Earl and Countess Delawarr, expressing his acknowledgments for the hospitality with which he had been entertained; and a eight o clock left Watligan for Lewes under a royal salute fired from the lawn in front of his lordship's mansion

The first stage, 18 miles, was performed in about two hours, and having changed horses at Lewes, the royal carrige arrived at Brighton, and drew up at the north entrance of the Pavilion, at a few minutes after twelve. Here his Majesty alighted, and was conducted by Mr. Saunders, the superintendent of the Palace, and Miss Lovett, the housekeeper, through the principal suite of apartments, the Chinese gallery, the music room, the banqueting hall, the rotunda, and the library, were successively visited after which, the King inspected the royal stables and riding schoo , celebrated as the most perfect erections of the kind in England.

His Majesty left the Pavilion by the private entrance opening on to the Steyne and proceeded at once to the chain pier. During the progress of the royal party across the Steyne the King was repeatedly and loudly cheered by the populace who had assembled in considerable numbers to greet his Majesty's arrival. The pier head was gaily decorated with flags, and on the summit of the Albion and Pegu's Royal York Hotels the national flags were erected. His Majesty proceeded along the esplanade to the pier head, attended by his suite, graciously acknowledging the loyal manifestations of the company assembled, and after remaining a short time, returned to Pegu's Royal York Hotel, where a sumptuous déjeuné had been prepared for him in the Regent's Saloon.

Precisely at a quarter before two o'clock his Majesty re-entered the royal carriage, and the carrige proceeded rapidly up the West Cliff, in the direction of Hoove and Shoreham, en route for Worthing, where they arrived at five minutes to three, and changing horses at the Steyne Hotel, proceeded direct to Arundel Castle. Here his Majesty alighted, and having been conducted through the principal apartments of this ancient ducal residence, again entered his carriage, relays of horses having been taken at the Norfolk Arms, in Arundel.

The next stage of ten miles brought the royal party to Chichester, where his Majesty alighted at the Dolphin Hotel, and paid a short visit to the Cathedral while fresh horses were being put to the carriages. From Chichester the royal party proceeded to Havant, another ten mile stage, and changing horses at the Bear Inn left that place for Portsmouth.

His Majesty dined on Thursday evening with Sir Charles Rowley and all the principal officers of the garrison, at the Admiralty House, Portsmouth Dockyard.

HIS MAJESTY'S VISIT TO THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

Friday, the King visited the arsenal, and spent some hours in inspect'ng the various establishments connected with this great naval storehouse. After partaking of lunch with the gallant Port-Admiral, the King, accompanied by his suite, went on board Sir Charles Rowley's yacht The Fanny, and proceeded to the Isle of Wight.

The King landed at Ryde Pier shortly after three o'clock, and entered a carriage which was in waiting to convey him to Shanklere, Appuldercombe, Carisbrook, and other celebrated places in the island, arriving at the Royal Yacht Club House, West Cowes, shortly after seven o'clock. His Majesty dined with his suite at the Club House, and took up his quarters there for the night.

The day he will proceed to Carisbrook Castle, and the western portion of the island, re-embarking in the Fanny at Cowes for Southampton during the afternoon, and coming up to London by the South Western Railway, on a visit to her Majesty at Buckingham Palace at an early hour in the evening.

The King travels under the assumed title of the Count de Hokenstein.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

The Bishop of Truro, Dr. Plunkett, has deprived one of the absentee rectors in that diocese of his benefice, and appointed thereto the working curate. There are law proceedings instituted by the prelate against four absentee beneficed clergymen from the same diocese.

BETHNAL GREEN CHURCHES.—Two new churches have been erected in Bethnal-green, which will be consecrated by the Bishop of London, the one on Tuesday, June 4, the other on Saturday, June 8. The first of these churches is dedicated to St. James, the second to St. Bartholomew.

The Lord Bishop of Durham has licensed the Rev. Charles Alfred Raines, B.A., scholar of St. John's, Cambridge, as minister of the Chapel of St. Peter, Newcastle. The Rev. W. T. Shields, late curate of St. Peter's Chapel, Newcastle, has been appointed by the Hon. and Rev. F. R. Grey, rector, one of the curates of the parish of Morpeth.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

EXECUTION OF WILLIAM CROUCH.—On Monday morning, at eight o'clock William Crouch suffered the extreme penalty of the law, in front of the gaol of Newgate, having been convicted at the last sessions of the Central Criminal Court, of the murder of his wife.

GRAND CALEDONIAN FANCY DRESS BALL.—The Caledonian Fancy Dress Ball, for the benefit of the Scotch Hospital and the Caledonian Asylum, took place on Tuesday evening, at Willis's rooms, King-street. The assembly was under the immediate patronage of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, and about thirty lady-patronesses, comprising the leading nobility of Scotland. The company began to arrive about ten o'clock, and continued to pour in till twelve o'clock, by which hour these splendid rooms were crowded. Upwards of 900 persons were present.

DISSENTERS' CHAPELS BILL.—On Wednesday a numerous meeting of members of the Established Church, Presbyterians, Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, and other orthodox dissenters, took place in Exeter-hall, for the purpose of adopting such measures as might be considered necessary to prevent the enactment of the Dissenters' Chapels Bill recently introduced into Parliament by the Lord Chancellor, and now awaiting the second reading in the House of Commons. The chair was taken by the Hon. Fox Maule. A number of resolutions were adopted, pledging the meeting to carry out the object for which it had assembled.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE CHARITY SCHOOLS.—The meeting of the children of the charity schools of the metropolis was held on Thursday, at St. Paul's Cathedral. A large number of nobility and persons of distinction were present, and appeared to take deep interest in the proceedings. Several thousand children of various ages were ranged round the cathedral on elevated seats, which had been previously prepared for them, and was one of the most amusing and delightful sights such a which could have been presented. Cathedral service was performed, the children taking part in the choruses, which were most effective. The Lord Bishop of St. David's then ascended the pulpit, and delivered a highly impressive and appropriate sermon, in the course of which he dwelt on the advantages of sound scriptural education. A large collection was made at the doors.

COUNTRY NEWS.

HULL.—DREADFUL AND FATAL FIRE.—About six o'clock on Sunday evening a dreadful fire broke out in the house of Mr. Brown, oilman, No. 69, Selby-street. The county and parish engines were speedily on the spot, but there was a scarcity of water for some time, as the nearest plug was No. 68, and 70, the property of Mr. Banks, and Mr. Walker, but it was happily got under about seven o'clock. We regret to say that the wife of Mr. Brown was lost in the fire. Nos. 68 and 69, are entirely, and No. 70, partially gutted. Very little of the furniture, stock, &c. was saved. None of the houses are insured. No conjecture can be formed as to the origin of the fire.

KILMARNOCK.—The election for this burgh terminated on Tuesday evening, when Mr. Bouverie, the Whig candidate, was elected by a majority of 10 over the Tory candidate, and 291 over the Radical; the numbers being—For Mr. Bouverie, 309; Mr. Pinkerton, 279; Mr. Tennant, 20.

LEEDS.—SUDDEN DEATH OF A MAGISTRATE.—On Sunday last, Mr. Jame Musgrave, who was one of the senior aldermen as well as a magistrate of the borough, was found, about seven o'clock in the morning, dead and cold, lying in a lane at Little Woodhouse, not far from his own residence. He was as near dead as possible when he was picked up, having only breathed once, perceptibly after he was discovered. He had left home only ten minutes before he was found on the ground, and to all appearance he had been tolerably well during the day, having been twice to service at the Oxford-place Wesleyan Chapel. A coroner's inquest was held on the body of the deceased on the following day, when, it appearing that he had died from disease of the heart, the jury returned a verdict of "Died by the visitation of God."

NOTTINGHAM.—THE LATE MURDER.—On Tuesday morning last the inquiry into this dreadful case was again resumed at the County-hall, and brought to a close. At a little after ten o'clock Mr. Swann, the coroner, took his seat, and the jury having duly answered to their names, and some additional witnesses having been examined, the coroner read over the evidence at length, commenting with great judgment upon the several points presented in it; and after a charge which lasted nearly four hours, discussed the jury to their deliberations. In twenty minutes the jury returned with a verdict of "Wilful murder against the prisoner, William Savile," a verdict which was received with evident satisfaction by an extremely crowded audience. The coroner, after a very feeling address to the prisoner, committed him to take his trial at the next assizes.

PEMBROKESHIRE.—COLLIERY ACCIDENT. SEVEN LIVES LOST.—At the village of Broadmoor, Pembrokeshire, on Monday, the 13th ult., a catastrophe occurred which resulted fatally. Eight men were ascending the shaft of a pit, in a tub used for that purpose, when the chain suddenly gave way, and they were precipitated to the bottom of the shaft. Five of them were so dreadfully mangled that their deaths must have been instantaneous, and two others died in about an hour after the accident. The eighth man escaped, and, although severely injured, is expected to recover. The tub, it is said, caught in some timber at the side of the shaft and broke the chain. A most distressing scene ensued when the families and relatives were made acquainted with the accident.

IRELAND.

THE IRISH STATE TRIALS.

DUBLIN, Friday, May 24.

DECISION OF THE JUDGES.

The majority of the judges, who delivered their opinions seriatim, were against the motion made last term for a repetition of the trials, and consequently that the traversers were convicted; but Judges Crampton and Perrin concurred in thinking that the verdict was unsatisfactory as regarded Mr. Tierney, the parish priest of Clontibret. Mr. Justice Perrin was also for granting a new trial to Mr. O'Connell, on the ground that an improper issue had been left to the jury in stating that newspaper reports were evidence as to that learned gentleman's acts and speeches. Although in his (Judge Perrin's) opinion there was, beyond that in evidence, abundant proof to implicate Mr. O'Connell in the conspiracy charged, still as he could not say how far the jury had been influenced in their verdict by the matter improperly admitted and sent before them as evidence, he thought, on the principle of civil law that the verdict was vitiated and ought to be set aside. He was for giving a new trial to the Rev. Mr. Tierney, because he conceived that the jury had not been properly directed to consider how far it appeared from the evidence that the rev. gentleman had been cognisant of the previous acts and objects of the Repeal Association, which he joined on the 3d of October.

Mr. Justice Crampton was for granting a new trial to Mr. Tierney, even at the risk of thereby granting a new trial to all, unless the Crown obviate the difficulty by entering a nolle prosequi in the case of the rev. gentleman.

Mr. Justice Burton said the Chief Justice (who did not commence his judgment until near six o'clock), concurred in refusing the motion generally. As the judges are equally divided on opinion respecting the application on behalf of Mr. Tierney, it is understood that no rule can be made by the Court in his case, and that he may with the other traversers be called up for judgment on the verdict, unless the Crown should adopt the course suggested by Mr. Judge Crampton, and enter a nolle prosequi against the rev. gentleman.

MONDAY.

The full court sat on Monday morning at eleven o'clock precisely, immediately after which the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, with other counsel engaged for the Crown, appeared in their places, when the Chief Justice called upon Sir Colman O'Loghlen to proceed with his motion.

The learned counsel on rising to address the Court was informed by the Chief Justice that their lordships had decided on hearing only two counsel for the traversers, and the same number on behalf of the Crown.

Mr. O'Hagan and Mr. Close, as counsel for others of the traversers, vainly claimed their right, on the ground that the finding of the jury was not the same in regard to all.

At half-past four o'clock Mr. Fitzgibbon said that the Court had no discretion to deny to the traversers their absolute right to be heard each by two counsel, however they had arranged they should have only four counsel altogether to address the Court. He contended that the whole of the traversers—every one of them—had a perfect right to be heard by counsel when they were called up for judgment.

The Chief Justice.—We deny that.

The Attorney-General said he asked Sir William Follett, the Attorney-General of England, as to the course that should be pursued if a question of this sort arose, and he said no more than two counsel should be heard.

Mr. Fitzgibbon said that might be so, but he denied that it was law.

At a quarter to five o'clock the Court was adjourned until Tuesday.

TUESDAY.

On Tuesday the Solicitor-General was heard in reply to Sir Colman O'Loghlen, and was followed by Mr. M'Donagh, on the part of all the traversers, who occupied the Court until four o'clock, when, having finished his argument, the Court rose.

WEDNESDAY.

Shortly after 11 o'clock on Wednesday morning, the Lord Chief Justice having called upon the Attorney-General to proceed with his reply to Mr. M'Donagh's argument for arrest of judgment,

The right hon. and learned gentleman proceeded to address the Court. He adverted to nearly all the authorities cited by the traversers' counsel, and concluded his address at half-past one o'clock.

The Chief Justice then proceed to deliver his judgment. He said that that case had been already so ably discussed by the learned counsel who had argued it on both sides, and had been so long under consideration, that he did not feel called upon to occupy a great deal of the public time with anything that he had to say about it, the more especially as the different members of the Court concurred, at least substantially, in the view which they had taken of the case, and as he well understood that each of them would take that opportunity to say something to the bar and to the public as to the grounds upon which their opinion was founded. All of them, however, agreed in the opinion that there was no sufficient ground shown in that case for an arrest of judgment. His lordship took a review of the various charges contained in the indictment, and in reply to the proposition, that none of them as found by the jury, was a legal offence, he designated the various branches of the conspiracy as criminal in a high degree. He dwelt particularly on the charges of attempting to excite disaffection in the army—those relating to the arbitration courts, and the attempts, by multitudinous meeting, to oversawe the legislature of the country.

Judges Burton, Crampton, and Perrin fully concurred in the judgment passed by the learned Chief Justice.

Chief Justice.—Mr. Attorney-General, have you anything else to move in this case

Attorney General.—I have to move, my lord, that the traversers be in attendance to-morrow morning for the purpose of receiving the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Moore.—We have served notice, my lord, of a motion which we shall have to make in this case, previous to the sentence of the Court being passed.

The notice of motion which called upon the Court to suspend the execution of the sentence until the writ of error was decided, was then read by the learned counsel.

The Court assented to Mr. Moore's motion being heard on Thursday morning, and the Court then adjourned shortly after four o'clock.

During the progress of the judgment, Mr. O'Connell's presence elicited a loud cheer, which was repeated in the hall and outside the Four Courts, and manifestly interrupted their lordships.

It was stated that Mr. O'Connell has arranged with the governor of the Penitentiary on the South Circular-road for the use of his apartments during the time of his confinement.

The Dublin Freeman's Journal contains the following address to the people of Ireland:—

"PEACE AND QUIET.

"PEOPLE OF IRELAND—FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN—BELOVED FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN.—The sentence is passed. But there is an appeal from that sentence. The appeal lies to the House of Lords. I solemnly pledge myself to bring an appeal against that sentence, and I assure you there is every prospect that it will be reversed. Peace, then, and quiet. Let there be not one particle of riot, tumult, or violence. That is the crisis in which it will be shown whether the people of Ireland will obey me or not. Any person who violates the law, or is guilty of any violence, insult, or injury to person or property, violates my command, and shows himself an enemy to me and a bitter enemy to Ireland. The people of Ireland—the sober, steady, honest, industrious people of Ireland—have hitherto obeyed my commands and kept quiet. Let every man stay at home. Let the women and children stay at home. Do not crowd the streets, and, in particular, let no man appear in the streets of Dublin. Now, people of Dublin, and people of Ireland generally, I shall know, and the world will know, whether you love and respect me or not. Show your love and regard for me, by your obedience to the law—your peaceable conduct—and the total avoidance of any riot or violence.

"PEACE, ORDER, QUIET, TRANQUILLITY.

"Preserve, the peace, and the Repeal cause will necessarily be triumphant. Peace and quiet I ask for in my cause, and as you love your country, peace and quiet I ask for in the name of Ireland, and as you love your native land. Peace—quiet —order—I call for under the solemn sanction of religion. I conjure you to observe quiet, and I ask it in the adorable name of Christ Jesus. Now, people of Ireland, be my friends by your being quiet and peaceable. The enemies of Ireland would be delighted at your violating the peace, or being guilty of any disorder. Disappoint them—gratify and delight, by peace, order, and quiet.

"Your ever faithful friend,

"Corn-Exchange Rooms, May 30, 1844." "DANIEL O'CONNELL.

REPEAL ASSOCIATION.

—The association held the usual weekly meeting on Monday at the Conciliation-hall. It being generally understood that this would in all probability be the last occasion on which Mr. O'Connell would be present previous to the passing of the sentence, the hall was densely crowded. At one o'clock the honourable gentleman entered, and was received with enthusiastic cheering. When the applause had subsided, he moved that Sir Samuel Bradstreet, Bart., should take the chair. The rent for the week amounted to upwards of £200.

About 150 labourers employed by the Shannon Commissioners between Keelogh and Meelake had a strike for an increase of wages, on Saturday last. On Monday morning the greater part returned to their work and were hooted at by those who still hold out. The labourers are getting but one shilling a day each.

FATAL CAROUSE.—On Monday night a married woman, named Gray, just out of her accouchement, was drinking and carrying on with some friends at the bar of a public house, in Gosvell-street, and had with her the infant, less than two months old. The party became rather excited from their frequent potations, and attention being at length directed to the quantity of drink which the mother was pressing closely to her breast, underneath her shawl, the covering was removed, and the poor infant was found dead, having been suffocated by the want of air and the pressure.

A CHILD BURNT TO DEATH.—An accident of the most frightful nature, owing to the carelessness of the parents, occurred on Tuesday, in Westminster. A woman, named Hill, who vends articles in the streets, left in Smoke-alley, in the parish of St. Clement Danes, a child, three years old, with a fire in the room, and on her return, in a few minutes, discovered the room in flames, and the child, poor boy, burnt in the most frightful manner. It was conveyed to the Westminster Hospital, where it expired in a few minutes.

On Tuesday afternoon the following fatal accident occurred at Botolph Wharf, Lower Thames-street, to a man named Isaac Pope, a lighterman. He was engaged in the upper part of the rigging of a vessel alongside the wharf, when he missed his footing, and fell with fearful violence on the lower deck, causing an extensive fracture of the base of the skull, and a compound fracture of the right leg. He was removed to St. Thomas's Hospital, where he expired shortly after.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES AT ISLINGTON.—On Wednesday morning, at two o'clock, a fire of a very alarming nature broke out in the premises belonging to Mr. Callaway, grocer and tea-dealer, carrying on business at No. 44, Hedge-row, Islington-green. Mr. Asbury, the comedian, was the first to discover the fire, by perceiving smoke issuing out of the skylight over the street-door. An instant alarm was raised, which brought a number of police to the spot, who, after considerable difficulty, succeeded in arousing the whole of the inmates (six in number), but so rapid had been the progress of the fire in the interim, that all escape by the lower portion of the premises was cut off. After some time, the residents were taken out of the back of the building, and thereby escaped a horrible death. The two parish engines were, with all promptitude, on the spot, followed by three others belonging to the Fire Establishment, and the West of England one. The flames were entirely extinguished by half-past two o'clock, however, until the building, together with the contents of the stock-in-trade and furniture was for the most part consumed. Fortunately, Mr. Callaway's house is covered by an insurance in the Sun Fire-office. The origin of the fire could not be learned.—On the previous night, shortly before twelve o'clock, information was received at the stations of the London fire-engine establishment that a fire had broken out upon the premises occupied by Mr. Hamilton, bookseller, 21, High-street, Islington. Engines from the parishes of Whitecross-street, and Jeffery-square, were speedily in attendance. An abundant supply of water was immediately obtained from the mains of the New River Water Company, and by the time the hose was prepared, the inmates had succeeded in partially checking the fury of the flames. The fire originated in a choked flue, and communicated thence to one of the bond timbers. Fortunately, the damage was not considerable, being confined to the joists, and the destruction by water of a few volumes of stock.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—This morning, a few minutes before nine o'clock, a female threw herself from the second recess on the Middlesex side of Waterloo-bridge. An alarm being given, a waterman put off from the shore, and succeeded in getting her out, having been in the water about two minutes only. She was immediately taken to Portugal-street Hospital, where, on examination it was found her left leg was broken. The poor woman appeared to be in a state of destitution.

POSTSCRIPT.

IRISH STATE TRIALS.

SENTENCE UPON THE TRAVERSERS.

EXTRAORDINARY EXPRESS.

SENTENCE

was pronounced upon all the traversers, at four o'clock on Thursday, the motion to suspend the execution of it, pending the writ of error, having been opposed by the Crown, and unanimously refused by the Court

DANIEL O'CONNELL.—To be imprisoned for 12 calendar months, to pay a fine of £2000, and to enter into securities to keep the peace for seven years—himself in £5000, and two sureties of £2500 each.

JOHN O'CONNELL, JOHN GRAY, T. STEELE, R. BARRETT, C. G. DUFFY, and T. M. RAY.—To be imprisoned for nine calendar months; to pay a fine of £50, and to enter into securities to keep the peace for seven years, themselves respectively in £1000, and two sureties of £500 each.

Sentence having been passed—

Mr. O'CONNELL immediately rose, and said that he wished to remind the Court, that he had made a solemn affidavit, declaring that he had never entered into a conspiracy with the other traversers, or committed the crime with which he was charged. He had now only to say it was his painful conviction that justice had not been done. A packed and vociferous cheer from nearly all parts of the court followed this result; and although it was accompanied by the clapping of hands amongst the junior bar, and was two or three times repeated, the Judges did not interfere, although evidently displeased.

Judge BURTON intimated to Mr. O'Connell that he might name any of the city prisons which he pleased (but the buzz was so great, we could not catch the exact words used).

Mr. O'CONNELL and Mr. PIGOT suggested the Penitentiary, in the South Circular-road, which was agreed to by the Court and the Attorney-General.

Mr. O'CONNELL and the other traversers looked perfectly composed, and they were occupied for some minutes shaking hands with their friends.

The crowd outside was immense.

The traversers were given into the custody of the Sheriff for the city of Dublin to be by him conveyed to the Richmond Penitentiary, on the Circular-road, over the entrance of which is inscribed the words "Cease to do evil and learn to do well."

Upon Mr. O'Connell's entrance into court in the morning, he was loudly applauded by the majority of the senior members of the bar; and at the close, when he declared, upon sentence being passed, that "justice had not been done," his declaration was responded to by cheers from the auditory in the gallery.

NEW ZEALAND COMPANY.—On Thursday the annual meeting of the proprietors of this company was held in the office, Broad-street-buildings. After some formal business, however, the proceedings were adjourned, and consequently the usual statements were not made.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—WOOD V. WEATHERBY.—On Thursday Mr. Sergeant Shee applied for an interpleader rule to allow the defendant Mr. Sergeant Shee applied for an interpleader rule to allow the defendant Mr. Sergeant Shee to be recovered in this action into court to abide the event of the litigation. The action was brought by Mr. Wood, the owner of Running Rein, the horse which won the Derby stakes at the last Epsom Races, to recover from the defendants the amount of the stakes of the race, of which they were the holders.—The Court granted the application.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—PEEL V. WEATHERBY AND ANOTHER.—THE DERBY STAKES.—On Thursday Mr. Ogle applied in this case on the part of the defendants, the Clerk of the Course and the Treasurer of Epsom Races, for a rule under the Interpleader Act, to oblige the plaintiff and Mr. Wood, the owner of the stakes for the Derby, to interplead and decide their claims, without proceeding further against the defendants, who were mere stakeholders. The affidavit on which the motion was founded stated that Mr. Wood is already well known to the public, that Mr. Wood is the owner of the horse Running Rein, formerly the property of the late Mr. Gratis, and that Colonel Peel, the friend of both and the plaintiff, Colonel Peel, the owner of the horse Orlando, both of which horses were entered for the last Derby,—and that the owners of both horses have since claimed the stakes. The defendants, having no personal interest in the matter, were anxious to be relieved from responsibility, and were willing to abide by the decision in the Common Pleas, whilst Colonel Peel, who asserted the claim of Orlando, sued them in this court.—Baron Alderson: You are desirous, I suppose, of paying the stakes into court?—Mr. Ogle: Yes, my lord; we only want to be relieved from responsibility.—The Court granted the motion as prayed.

POLICE.—BOW-STREET.—THE ROBBERY AT BUCKINGHAM-PALACE.—Yesterday (Friday), Ellen Lindsay and Elizabeth Lindsay, two sisters, employed in the palace in respectable situations, with their brother, Jas. Lindsay, a retired and pensioned surgeon in the navy, were brought up for final examination, the two former charged with stealing, and the latter with receiving, a quantity of linen, counterpanes, blankets, &c. &c., marked with the royal arms, and the property of her Majesty, the property found being of the value of forty pounds. The prisoners were brought up in the common prison van, and appeared in great distress of mind, one sister having to be supported by the officer in attendance. The case was heard before Mr. Hall, chief mag strate, in his private house, and Mr. Heyward from the office of Mr. Maule, solicitor to the treasurer, attended for the prosecution, and Mr. Humphreys on behalf of the prisoners. The Earl of Delaware, the Lord Chamberlain, and Sir William Martin, his private secretary, also present to watch the proceedings. The additional evidence produced was in the shape of a down pillow, which had been sent in a hand box by the female prisoners from the palace to their brother's lodgings, in 26, Upper Eaton-street, Pimlico. The female who took it, named Sabrina Steward, resided at 4, Wilton-road, Lower Belgrave-street, Pimlico, proved that, being at the Pal ce, the female prisoners employed her to take the handbox to their brother's, where the pillow was found on delivery to the male prisoner, was proved by the landady of the house. The pillow was identified as one which had been in use at the Palace. It was also discovered that the male prisoner had removed two feet of lace. It was also discovered that the male prisoner had removed two feet of lace. It was also discovered that the male prisoner had removed two feet of l a good deal of feasting, and no lack of hospitality at the residences of the Provost, the Head Master, &c., and at the houses of the neighbouring nobility and gentry; but here the Montem ends, and now for three years must Salt-hill and its neighbourhood return to oblivion and silence.

ETON MONTEM.

THE COSTUMES.

In order to illustrate more fully the splendid appearance of this very curious spectacle, for so it may with great truth be called, we have selected, from many of the Costumes worn on the occasion, twelve of those which struck us as most recherché and most worthy of being noticed.

For elegance of design nothing could surpass the beauty, costliness, and very pleasing appearance of the costume in which the first figure is represented in the engraving. It was worn by seven young gentlemen, who acted as the pages of Mr. Hutton, the Ensign, viz.: Mr. Holland, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Law, Mr. Wood, Mr. Hunt, Mr. Hely Hutchinson, and Sir J. Marjoribanks. The surcoat is of silver tissue, with a crimson collar; the sleeves of the under tunic, which appear, of crimson; the leggings of light blue; the cloak is of purple velvet, bound with gold braid; the cap of blue velvet, with a white plume. This costume was one of the most appropriate to the occasion.

In the next figure is represented the dress worn by Mr. Morgan, minor, page to the Honourable Mr. Hanbury, major. The tunic is of puce-coloured velvet, over which is worn a gold chain or collar, suspended from the neck. At the bottom of the tunic is an embroidered band, on which are the arms of the Bateman family, richly emblazoned in colours. The leggings are of puce-coloured cloth, and fit tightly to the limbs, the feet and ancles are covered with blue leather buskins having the spurs of a knight. This is the costume worn by Philip D'Aubnay, or more properly D'Aunoy; he was called le Galois, and was lord of Grand Moulin, Villeron, and other lordships.

ARRIVAL OF THE ROYAL CARRIAGE AT WESTON'S GATE.

He fought bravely at the battle of Poictiers, and was greatly distinguished in the wars of the fourteenth century. The costume is remarkably correct and well executed.

In the third figure is to be seen the vera effigies of the young gentleman of the age and country of Francis the First. The tunic is of rich crimson satin, studded with crosses of gold; the sleeves are of white satin puffed, and laced with gold; the hose are slate-coloured and tight to the leg; the boots of buff leather, with scarlet leather, cut like the battlement of a wall, and called technically "turreted." The cap is made of purple and crimson velvet, and ornamented with feathers.

This splendid costume was worn on Tuesday last by Mr. Pendergast and Mr. Baring, and by four other young gentlemen, pages to Mr. M'Niven, major. It was greatly admired.

The figure in the foreign military uniform represents one of the eight pages who attended upon Mr. Vansittart, the "Colonel" of the procession, a member of the noble family of which Lord Bexley, so well known in the history of the present age, is the head. The pages of this young gentleman were habited as Hungarian Hussars, and wore uniforms of blue cloth braided in gold, with pelisses of scarlet cloth trimmed with gold lace; scarlet Morocco Hessian boots with gold binding and tassels, and military caps of fur. This costume was remarkable for its splendour.

The fifth figure is a perfect representation of one of the most elegant and best chosen costumes in the whole of this extraordinary procession: it represents a page dressed in the garb worn by the Crusaders in the time of the lion-hearted King Richard I., when without their armour. The vest is of blue velvet, on which is embroidered, in gold, a lion rampant. The cloak is white, having the red cross on the shoulder; the leggings are of light blue, and the shoes of the same colour. On the head is a velvet hat and feather, such as was

THE GRAND PROCESSION IN THE QUADRANGLE.

NEWSPAPER

ETON MONTEM.

THE CEREMONY AT SALT-HILL.

worn at that early period. At the Montem, the pages of Mr. Stephens, who held the commission of Lieutenant of the host for the day, five in number, viz.:—

Mr. Lygon, major; Lord Ribblesdale; the Hon. Mr. Eliot, minor; the Marquis of Bath; and Mr. Christie, were clothed in this costly costume, and obtained deserved approbation. The Lieutenant himself had on the uniform of an officer of the Foot Guards; and to his side was suspended the sword presented by the City of London to Sir John Hutchinson, the hilt of which is of solid gold, enamelled with the armorial bearings of Hely Hutchinson on one side, and on the other with a representation of Fame presenting Britannia with laurels.

The next figure shows the dress in which Mr. Batchelor was habited. This gentleman was one of the servitors. The dress is that of a German nobleman of the thirteenth century; around the throat is seen a part of the hauberk, or mail, worn beneath a murray-coloured surcoat of velvet, trimmed with gold and ermine border; the sleeves are of purple velvet, the leggings of crimson cloth, and the boots of buff leather. In his hand he held a two-handed sword, the formidable weapon of the chivalry of the period to which the costume belongs.

Mr. Russell Day, one of the servitors, is represented in the next figure; he wore the dress of a Spanish peasant: it was very rich and elegant.

The page (Mr. Parkes, minor) of Mr. M'Niven, major, wore the Greek dress represented in the next figure. The whole, except the vest, which was green satin, was made of crimson velvet, braided; the profusion of gold braid rendering this costume very superb: it was exceedingly correct in the design.

THE CAPTAIN'S DINNER ON THE FELLOWS' EYOT.

In the ninth figure is represented the elegant and graceful dress of a gentleman of the Court of Queen Elizabeth, such as Sir Walter Raleigh is generally understood to have appeared in. It was worn on this joyous day by Mr. Lygon, minor, page to the Hon. Mr. Neville, major. The vest is of blue velvet, braided with gold; the short cloak of crimson velvet, the trunk hose is skirted with sky-blue satin, trimmed with gold; the lower part of the thighs and the legs covered with silk hose, with rosetted shoes; the cap of blue velvet, with an ostrich feather in front. A costume of peculiar elegance, and admirably chosen.

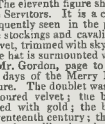
The costume of the tenth figure represents the dresses in which Mr. Cust and Mr. Duffield, the pages of the Hon. Mr. Herbert, minor, were clothed. They were the costumes of the sixteenth century, worn at the Court of Henri Quatre, and were composed, the vest of blue velvet with hanging sleeves, the inner sleeves white satin braided, the trunk hose slashed with crimson, and laced with gold, the leggings white silk, with rosettes in the shoes, the velvet cap and feather, and the starched ruffs. These dresses were very accurately got up.

The eleventh figure shows the dress worn by Mr. Bendyshe, one of the Saviours. It is a costume of the time of Charles I., such as is frequently seen in the portraits of Vandyck, with the exception of the stockings and cavalier boots of leather. The whole is of black velvet, trimmed with sky blue and gold; the sleeves open and puffed. The hat is surmounted with an ostrich feather.

Mr. Gordon, page to Mr. Hunt, maximus, wore the costume of the days of the Merry Monarch, Charles II., represented in the last figure. The doublet was of blue, lined with gold; the cloak, maroon-coloured velvet; the breeches of the same colour and material, laced with gold; the boots such as worn by the cavaliers of the seventeenth century; the hat, black velvet, with an ostrich feather. This dress, like the others, was strictly correct.

From the illustration which these twelve specimens afford, those who were not present may form some idea of the gay and gallant spectacle. Great credit is due to those by whom these costumes were designed, and by those who prepared them. We never remember to have witnessed more taste, united with great research, and admirable judgment.

Annexed is engraved "the Montem Button," worn upon the scarlet uniforms; it bears the Eton arms, surmounted by the Royal crown, and the motto, "Mos pro Lege" (Custom for Law), with the date of the foundation of Eton College, 1440. For this and various other details of the Montem dresses, our best acknowledgments are due to Messrs. Davies and Son, of Hanover-street, Hanover-square, to whom was intrusted the production of the principal costumes worn upon this memorable occasion.



THE MONTEM BUTTON.

The emblematical head-piece at page 348 represents the superb Montem flag, of rich crimson silk, bearing the College arms and motto, within a wreath of oak and laurel. Upon each side are grouped specimens of the salt-bags, of velvet or satin, richly embroidered in gold and silver, and profusely trimmed with the same costly materials.

The boots and shoes, which were occasionally elaborately characteristic, were principally made by Mr. Wigginton, of Eton.

"When Montem crowns the Eton Boy, Long-famed Triennial Fête."

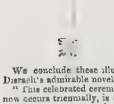
The celebration of this time-honoured festival on Tuesday last has resuscitated the various antiquarian speculations as to the origin of the singular custom. The opinion of Brand, Lyons, and Warton, seems to remain unshaken—that the Montem is but a corruption of the Popish ceremony of the Boy Bishop, which mockery of episcopal dignity was put down by a proclamation of Henry VIII., revived by Queen Mary; and, in all probability, again put down on the accession of Elizabeth. This or similar ceremonials, it should be observed, were common in collegiate and other large schools; and, as their suppression involved the loss of a holiday, invention was doubtless, racked to find out some means of retaining, under one shape, the festivities that had been forbidden under another: by substituting, for a religious, a military appearance, the Romans happily hit upon a method of eluding every possibility of giving offence. Warton is very positive in his opinion: having described the ceremony of the Boy-Bishop ("Hist. Eng. Poetry"), he adds: "I take this opportunity of intimating that the custom at Eton of going ad montem originated from the ancient and popular practice of these theatrical processions in collegiate bodies."

The change, however, was probably made before Queen Elizabeth's visit to Eton College, when she desired to see an account of the ancient ceremonies observed there from its foundation. In the list was an ominous procession of the scholars, who there "gathered money from the public for a dinner, and other purposes. This was originally held on St. Nicholas's Day, December 6; then, the first Tuesday in Hilary Term, which began January 23; but, it was altered to Whit Tuesday in 1759; in the oldest printed account, 1778) the festival was biennial, whence it was changed to every third year.

The Lilliputian Sea being thus dissolved, and the puny Bishop "deposed," the ceremony was extended into an evening affair, the title of Captain, the chieftain of the same sprightly band conducted his followers to a scene of action in the open air, where no consecrated walls were in danger of falling around, and where the gay striplings could, at least, exhibit their wonted pleasantries with more propriety of character. The exacting of money from the spectators and passengers for the use of the Principal, remained exactly the same as in the days of Popery; but there is no evidence to prove that the monks of Eton College sold consecrated salt for holy water, as has been repeatedly asserted in connexion with this custom. Mr. Brand has, on the other hand, showed that the practice of giv*ng* a little salt in return for the money collected may be reasonably referred to the emblematical use of salt as the emblem of wisdom or learning, which he proves to have been so used, in a "Dequestion," dated Strasburg, A.D. 1665. He adds—"How obvious it is, then, to make the same application of the use of salt in the present ceremony at Eton! May we not, therefore, without any forced construction, understand the Salt-bearers, when demanding of the several spectators or passengers their respective contributions, they laconically cry 'Salt! salt!' as addressing them to the following purport:—'Ladies and gentlemen, your subsidy money for the Captain of the Eton scholars!' By this salt, which we give as an earnest, we pledge ourselves to become proficients in the learning we are sent hither to acquire, the well-known emblem of which we now present you with in return.'" When the distribution of salt was discontinued we know not; but it was practised at the Montem of 1794; and it is said to have been formerly one of the pleasantries of the Salt-bearers to fill any boorish-looking countryman's mouth with it, if, after he had given them a trifle, he asked for anything in return.

The Montem, or Mount, a small hill, on the southern side of the Bath road, at about a mile from Eton, was the central place where, anciently, the salt was distributed, and hence its name of Salt-hill.

The introduction of tickets was, probably, substituted for the salt: the motto on them have varied in different years: the words were, in 1775, "ad Montem;" in 1781 and 1793, "Mos pro lege est;" in 1790, 1795, 1808, and 1812, "Pro More et Monte;" in 1799 and 1805, "Mos pro Lege;" in 1841, "Mos pro Lege." This year, 1844, as follows:—



PRO MORE ET MONTE.

1844.

Vivat Regina.

We conclude these illustrative notes with the following passage from Mr. Darnell's admirable novel of "Coningsby," just published:—

"This celebrated ceremony, of which the origin is lost in obscurity, and which now seems triennially, in the manner in which Eton College holds some of its domains; the waving of a flag by one of the scholars on a mount near the village of Salt-hill, and to which, without doubt, it gives the name; since on this day every visitor to Eton, and every traveller in the vicinity, from the monarch to the peasant, are stopped on the road by youthful brigands in picturesque costumes, and summoned to contribute 'salt,' in the shape of coin of the realm, to the purse destined for the Captain of Eton, the senior scholar on the Foundation, who is about to retire to King's College, Cambridge.

"On this day, the Captain of Eton appears in a dress as martial as his title: indeed, such sanctified forms may reconcile us to uniform, though not, perhaps, according to the exact rules of the Horse Guards, an officer of the army. One as a marshal, another an ensign. There is a lieutenant, too, and the remainder are sergeants. Each of these who are entrusted with these ephemeral commissions has one or more attendants—the number of these varying according to his rank. The Servitors are selected, according to the wishes of the several members of the sixth form, out of the ranks of the lower boys, that is, those boys who are beyond the fifth form; and all these attendants are arrayed in a variety of fancy dresses. The senior Oppidan and the senior Colleger next to the Captains of those two divisions of the school, figure also in fancy costume, and are called 'Salt-bearers.' It is their business, together with the twelve sailor Collegers of the 'Upper Club, who are called 'Runners,' and whose costume is also determined by the taste of the wearers, to levy the contributions. And all the Oppidans of the fifth form class as 'Corpora's,' and are severally followed by one or more lower boys, who are denominated 'Polemen,' but who appear in their ordinary dress."

THE MAGAZINES FOR JUNE.

THE ILLUMINATED MAGAZINE is a very spirited number throughout. The editor continues his "Chronicles of Clovernook," with a tale of caustic humour, showing how Cuttleish, the author, cheated the Devil, who was as enough to pay fifty guineas for a work in advance; the position of "the poor devil of an author" is cleverly illustrated in this powerfully-written page of "thorough out-speaking." The next prose article—"Bowie and other Knives," is a very amusing illustration of Brother Jonathan's extensive use of this very social instrument—the Bowie knife which figures even on the floor of Congress. "A Parting Glimpse of St. Giles's" is by a new hand in this class of periodical: the writer is clever in detail, but scarcely at home in light literature. We have not room to name the other papers, but must quote one of them, as masterly exposition of a growing social abuse.

THE TWO WINDOWS, BY THE EDITOR.

The Union Workhouse of the ancient parish of Herne—how calm and pastoral is that little nook of Kent!—has two outward windows. The fabric, built by the inspiration of the New Poor-law, was a blind, eyeless piece of brick-work a goal for the iniquity and perverseness of poverty; a Newgate for the felony of want. The chiefs and elders of Parliament had said, "Let us make abiding places for the poor; let us make them gaols, lepers as they are, from the clean; let us shut them up from the sight of the green earth; let them not behold the work of the season in the budding trees, in their leafy branches, in their rod and golden robes of autumn, in the gaunt sorrows of solemn winter. Let the grass grow spring and the field flower blossom; but let not the poor, the unclean of the land, look upon the work of God." After this resolve the Union was built; with inner windows looking upon wide walls turned black upon the outward world. No crevice, no loophole permitted captive poverty a look, a glimpse of the fresh face of nature, his soul, like his body, was bricked up according to the statute; he had by the insolence of deliberate opinion offended the majesty of the world, and he the Union Workhouse turned its sullen, unbroken wall of brick upon the fields was doomed by his judges to a divorce from the commonest sights of earth. Hence, and trees, and the pauper was made to look only upon paup-ism. The freshness and luxuriance of nature—her prodigal loveliness was not for his eyes; he was poor, and seven to behold the parsimonious of the morning earth was an enjoyment beyond the sale—a thing not for sale—a luxury which those who paid for his food, could not properly vouchsafe him!

At length—for when they themselves know it not, men's hearts will work, a sense of right will sometimes assail them upon their sleep—an instinct of goodness will like silver water from the rock, gush forth,—at length it was resolved by the guardians of the poor—guardians of the poor! what a holiness of purpose should in form those well-worn syllables—that the dull, hard, squalid workhouse should have light; that its brick wall a shield be pierced with two windows; that the fields and trees should gladden pauper eyes, appealing to old recollections, childhood thoughts, daily, pastoral feelings. It was determined that the pauper prisoner should, through the iron bars of penury, have comforting glimpses of God's goodness without; that he should, though all unconsciously, make offerings upon the green altar of the earth; that his heart should commune in its own unknowing way with those sweet influences which, coming from God, discourse in some manner to all men.

And so it was determined that the Union Workhouse should have two outward windows. The guardians of the poor appeared with the labourers. "Here, said the guardians, "break through the wall: here, pierce one window—here, another." Then, turning to the paupers, some few care-stricken folk, they said with smug complacency, "We are going to give you some light." And this, reader, is not a goose-quill fiction; it is a thing of truth.

"We are going to give you some light. We cannot help it, if this Liberal goodness—this gentle philanthropy, drive back thought to the first gift of light; if it call up, as with an iron tongue, the memory of the only birth of light, wordbegotten for all men. And the nature of man, solemnised by such remembrance—kindled and uplifted, rises beyond expression, by the sublime inheritance—is it not a hard task to consider with composure even the compunction of a guardian of the poor, who pierces with two windows the prison-house of the pauper to let God's light in? May not the small authority of man be sometimes as a blasphemy ourlesque of Almighty Beneficence?

Let us, for a time forget all of state philosophy—forgetful of the plausibilities of social prosperity that set the poor apart from the rich and well-to-do, as creatures somewhat different in the necessities of life, although on certain occasions, as if were for form's sake, for Christian ceremony, allowed to be made from the clay of the same Eden as their masters—let us behold the earth in its freshness, and man its owner in the vigour of his days, and the poor man, the pauper, the labourer and the receiver of its glories;—and then consider him as the task-master of his fellow, as the grudging chief that metes out light and air to his helpless brother; and for this sole end—that he may gather money from the public for a dinner, and other purposes. This was originally held on St. Nicholas's Day, December 6; then, the first Tuesday in Hilary Term, which began January 23; but, it was altered to Whit Tuesday in 1759; in the oldest printed account, 1778) the festival was biennial, whence it was changed to every third year.

A miserable sight—a heinous testimony of the thanklessness of prosperous man—is the rural union, with its blank dead wall of brick, a cold, blind thing the work of human selfishness, and which, in the midst of the most beautiful thousand evidences of eternal bounty. How beautiful is the beauty of God around it! There is not a sapling waving its green tresses of June that does not make the heart rejoice; there is not a field there that does not, in the fulness of wealth inexhaustible, of pleasures deep as the sea and pure as the joys of Paradise. And our return for it, our offering to the wretchedness of our fellow creatures, is yonder prison-house, that would shut out from the pleasant haunts of nature, lest the pauper captives within should behold what God has done for that worse, in which, according to the world's justice, they have nothing. Hence is the pauper treated, by those favoured with the light and the sun—pauper-ism in his eyesight; as though, a prisoner in the Union, he would commit larceny on the meads and trees, and all the rural objects that from babyhood have been familiar to him; doing such a wrong to the property and rights of the free fields who, by the blessing of skill and good luck, have "land and beeves.

What a sad and fantastic tyranny, a more wilful assertion of the arrogance of wealth—this needless blindness of the poor man's brother in a spot of poverty barring his eyes of every comfort-ng object, compelling him to look only upon that which as every look speaks to his soul of his miserable dependence upon his richer fellow; which denies to him the innocent, unbought glimpse of out-door nature, as though the scene was a land of promise from which his beggary had made him alien. Is human want so wicked that it should be unblessed with even a glance at the pleasant things of creation? Has the pauper, because pauper, no further claim upon the earth, save for his final bed—the grave? The rustic unions, with their forlorn blank walls, cry yes!

If God punish man for crime, as man punishes man for poverty, woe to the sons of Adam!

Among the Miscellanies is a stringent paper on the rejected play of "Richelieu in Love;" and is followed by a review of the Life of Beau Brummell, with very piquant extracts.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

Of all the revolutions which have taken place in the "legitimate drama," the migratory move of Tragedy and Comedy quitting their town-houses and taking lodgings in the suburbs is the most extraordinary. What! Shakspeare at Sadler's Wells? Never was there such a thing heard of—never such a thing imagined; and we incline to think that the genius of Old Joe still haunts the place, and that Hamlet's "inky cloak," or "suit of sables," would be turned into Harlequin's chequered dress by even a peep into the locality. But no—the legitimate drama having been choked up for the time down, has gone out, we hope for the benefit of its health, a little way towards the country, where, under some very good treatment of its "mind diseased," it appeared, under the care and skilful management of Mrs. Warner and Mr. Phelps, on Monday night last, to be considerably restored to its former vigour. The performance of Lady Macbeth by Mrs. Warner is well known and esteemed for its excellence, and Mr. Phelps was, in the part of Macbeth, more than respectable at the times go. We, however, do not think it a part which quite suits his powers. Other novelties were produced, operatical and farcical, which were heartily received by a crowded and enthusiastic audience. We join in the spectators' own hopes for the success of the undertaking.

MUSIC.

ANCIENT CONCERTS.

The eighth concert of the season took place on Wednesday night, under the direction of Prince Albert, for the Earl of Westmorelan The following was the programme:—

PART I.

The National Anthem, "God save the Queen"
*Motetto, "Lord, on thee depends our lot"	Himmel.
*Aria, Madame Grisdori, "Quan n posses"	Haydn.
*Selections from a Mass in B flat (No. 10)	Mozart
*Hymn, double choir and chorus (1844)	Arnedell.
Air, Herr Staudigl, "Allerch tigs Sume höre"	Winter.
Chorus, "Be sent a thick darkness" (Israel in Egypt)	Handel.
Aria, Signor Mario, "A Te, fra tanti affani"	Mozart.
*Selection from the Ode to Joy	Beethoven.

PART II.

*Overture (Das unterbrochene Opferfest)	Winter.
*Aria, Signor Labianche, "Ah me gaudasti"	Cherubini.
*Chorus, "Che Sinpor" (Iffigina in Aulide)	Gluck.
*Quartette, Grar Nume	Righini.
Aria, Madame Castellan, "Lascia ch'io pianga"	Handel.
*Glee, Messrs Hawkins, Ashton, Hornsastle, Peck, Machin, and Staudigl, "The cloud-capt towers"	R. J. S. Stevens
*Finale to Don Giovanni, as originally composed, with the following cast:—Donna Anna, Elvira, and Zerlina, by Caradori, Castellan, and Mrs. A. Shaw; Giovanni, Ottavio, Leporello, Masetto, and Il Commendatore, by Mario, Corelli, Machiche, Machin, and Staudigl	Mozart.

Those pieces marked * were performed for the first time at these concerts on this occasion.

These concerts are becoming more ancient than ever; for the taste which directs them, falls back upon the good old times, when, "Music, heavenly maid was young." There is something ridiculous, however, in the inquiry if a composer be dead before his work should be played, and also in the substitution of a dead fool for a living genius. To commemorate the mighty spirits who have lived amongst us is one good thing, but to "rake up the ashes of the noble dead" is another, anything but consonant with feeling or taste. However, on the present occasion, we have no cause to complain, for there was nothing brought forward but what had got leave to live for ever. Himmel's motetto is a learned composition. The hymn, for Arcadelt, was very delightfully sung, by Madame Caradori Allen. Staudigl, as usual, was mighty in Winter's song, from "The Interrupted Sacrifice," and Handel's wonderful chorus, "He sent a thick darkness," was performed with great judgment and precision. The finale to Don Giovanni, as originally composed, has been driven from the stage to the concert room, where it cannot, by any possibility, meet with its true deserts; but, in the absence of acting and scenic effect, it was splendidly sung by the respective vocalists, at this concert, and was received with much applause.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert were in the royal box, and the following distinguished personages also honoured the performance by their presence:—The Queen Dowager, the Duchess of Cambridge, the Duchess of Buccleuch, Lady Sheffield, Lady C. Coxe, the Hon. Miss Devereux; the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, the Duke of Wellington, Earls Howe, Cawdor, Jersey, Liverpool, &c. &c. The national anthem was sung on her Majesty's entrance, the company standing up. Both her Majesty and the Queen Dowager looked extremely well. The Duchess of Gloucester was in the director's box. Nothing could be more brilliant than the appearance of the room.

These concerts, to the ear of the thoughtful musician, are like old cathedrals to the eye of the studious architect. The habits—the practices of by-gone days are exhibited, and modern genius furnished with a model to work and improve upon. Were it not for these Ancient Concerts we should have but few novel inventions. The creative power of the mind is fed by the memory or recollection of what has been created and Bacon was never more right than when he asserted that "Genius was imitative."

PHILHARMONIC CONCERTS.

The fifth concert of what may be called this redintegrated Society, took place on Monday last at the Hanover-square Rooms. We subjoin the programme:—

PART I.

Sinfonia in B flat (No. 4)	Beethoven.
Duet, "Stung by Horror," Miss Rainforth and Herr Staudigi (Pascal Bruno)	J. L. Hatton.
Concerto, violin, Herr Joachim	Beethoven.
Overture (Faust)	Spohr.
Duetto "Pazzarello, O qual ardir," Mr. Machin and Herr Staudigi (Faust)	Spohr.
Quintetto e Coro, "Ah! godan lor felicitate," the principal parts by Miss Rainforth, Miss A. Williams, Messrs. Manvers, Machin, and Herr Staudigl	Spohr.

PART II.

Overture (A Midsummer Night's Dream)	Mendelssohn.
Scherzo (A Midsummer Night's Dream)	Mendelssohn.
Two-part Song, with Chorus, "Ye Spotted Snakes," Miss Rainforth and Miss A. Williams (A Midsummer Night's Dream)	Mendelssohn.
Notturno, March, and Finale (A Midsummer Night's Dream)	Mendelssohn.
Song, with Chorus, "Joy, 'tis a Glorious Thought," Herr Staudigl, "(Fidelio)	Beethoven.
Hunting Chorus (The Seasons)	Haydn.

Leader, Mr. F. Loder; Conductor, Dr. Mendelssohn.

This scheme departed from the custom of giving two symphonies in the course of the evening; but perhaps, after all, there was enough of the finest instrumentalism that ever an enraptured auditory listened to. We generally have too much, and the circumstance of "plays out" the concert has on rare occasions been quite welcome. Beethoven's mighty sinfonia was splendidly performed; perhaps, better than it ever has been at these concerts, or any others, heretofore. The adagio was most exquisite. Our countryman, Hatton's duet from his opera "Pascal Bruno," sung by Miss Rainforth and Herr Staudigl, was capitally executed and well received. But now come we to the "dictu mirabile monstrum," in the shape of a little boy of thirteen, who perhaps is the first violin player, not only of his age, but of any age. We have had our share of boy prodigies, in the form of grown persons, as performers on that splendid instrument; but without severally enumerating them, or their merits, we can safely say that we never heard any one, or any, or all of them together. His tone is of the purest cantabile character—his execution is most marvellous, and at the same time unembarrassed—his style is chaste, but deeply impassioned at moments, and his deportment is that of a thinking child of a conscious genius! He performed Beethoven's solitary violin concerto, which we have heard all the great performers of the last twenty years attempt, and invariably fail in. On Monday last its performance was an eloquent vindication of the master-spirit who imagined it, and we might fearlessly add, that in the cadences, composed by the youth himself, there was as much genius exhibited as in the subject which gave birth to them. Joachim plays from memory, which is more agreeable to the eye of the audience than to see anything read from a music stand: it seems more like extemporaneous performance, and admits a greater degree of enthusiasm on the part of the instrumentalist. We never heard or witnessed such unequivocal delight as was expressed by both band and auditory.

The selection from "Faust" was too dramatic to produce its full effect in a concert room. The second part consisted chiefly of the conductor's Shakspearian music, which is highly imaginative and beautiful. We cannot, however, but associate ourselves from the pleasant recollection of Stevens's beautiful glee of "Ye Spotted Snakes," although Mendelssohn's two part song to the same words is a composition of a very high order. The first chaus. We think of the march is the rest of the audience, but "trahit sua quemque voluptas." Altogether it was a delightful concert; but we should like to see the programme of the next a little more varied.

M. THALBERG'S CONCERT.

This great pianist's concert took place at the Hanover-square Rooms on Tuesday morning last, and proved a treat indeed. The following were the pieces which he performed, and which, contrary to some oppositionists, who on a former occasion tried their "weak spirit 'gainst true valour," were received with one accord of enthusiasm by all who had any music in their souls: Fantasia on themes from "Semiramide;" andante from "Lucia;" a study in A minor (which was encored); fantasia on subjects from "Masaniello;" and a duet, composed by Benedict and De Beriot, with Sivori. These were all executed with wonderful ease and precision: the power which Thalberg possesses of preserving his theme audible through a plurality of accompanying sounds is "passing strange." This, perhaps, is his most prominent peculiarity. The performance of M. Vivier on the horn was rather infelicitous; but we rather incline to think that on some future occasion, when unattended by some untoward circumstances that occurred on his début, he will vindicate the fame which has preceded him. The vocalists were Madame Thillon, Madame Castellan, Madame F. Lablache, Signor F. Lablache, and Herr Staudigl, who seems to have taken a particular fancy to our countryman Hatton's music. He was encored in the song of "Revenge," from "Pascal Bruno." The indispersable John Parry was present, and a young scion of the great Lablache had a welcome reception on his début. Benedict conducted the concert, which, taken altogether, was a delicious treat.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The ever fresh and sparkling "Puritani" will be given on Thursday for the last time. The striking peculiarity which marks the loveliest of Bellini's works is the powerful dramatisation with which the several artistes are identified with the characters. In another year we may bid adieu to the "Puritan." The management has added an intermezzo, in which the charming Persiani will sing; and then we are to have the joyous and bounding Cerito, who will appear in an entirely new Attaconese pas de caractère. There is also to be "La Vivandière," with its quaint and bewildering Redowa, and the best points of "Ondine," with its fairy-like pas de l'ombre and its picturesque fête de la Madonne, and the grand "Tarentelle."

THE WHITSUNTIDE HOLIDAYS.

There was a general turn out of the working population of the metropolis on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, some on their way to the railroad, others hastening to the wharfs to embark, and many taking advantage of other conveyances for the purpose of reaching the suburban inns at Greenwich, Stepney, and Wandsworth. In spite of the Lord Mayor's proclamation, the Woolwich and Greenwich steamers were occasionally most tremendously overcrowded, particularly after sunset; for although the City police were stationed on the wharfs and piers in the vicinity of London-bridge, and also at Blackfriars, his lordship's jurisdiction did not extend beyond these places, and, consequently there was no one to prevent the vessels being overloaded at the Adelphi, Hungerford, and Westminster, and also at Greenwich. There were in the steamers regarded in the traffic, viz., eleven of the Waterman's steamers, thirteen of the Old Company's, the Robert Hawkes, William Dunston, and Laurel, employed for the holidays by the Watermen's Company, the Fire and the Coquette, which kept up a communication with the Blackwall railway, and a Gravesend boat called the Prince of Wales. The Waterman's steamers, and the vessels engaged by them, made sixty trips between the Adelphi-pier and Greenwich, and carried down 15,000 persons, and brought back as many. The Greenwich railway also came in for a large share of business, and the trains were running every quarter of an hour with as many as Sunday-like a number could find room for. Thirty thousand souls were conveyed up and down this line during the day. The greatest hilarity and good humour prevailed among the vast assemblage at Greenwich, and we did not hear of any unnatural accident.

Stepney fair has been spread, and the display of booths, shows, and exhibitions of every description was more numerous, and immeasurably superior to those of Greenwich.

Wandsworth Fair was on a smaller scale than the others, but held in a very pleasant and retired spot. The monster booth belonging to old Gipsy Stevens, 400 feet in length, exceeding in dimensions the one belonging to his son at Stepney, was the principal attraction here, and a visit to it was well worth a journey to the fair, which was easily reached by the steam-boats from the Adelphi-pier.

The Brighton, Dover, Eastern Counties, and South-western Railway Companies made a very successful experiment in conveying passengers to the principal towns on their lines at half fares. Every carriage they could put in requisition was filled with passengers. One train from Dover brought up 800 passengers on Monday where another of the same frame, four engines, and the majority of the passengers had gone down on Sunday, and, after remaining the night at Dover were brought back without extra charge. Another train going down, was made up in a quarter of an hour, and there were four engines drawing that along. The influx of visitors to Brighton, Southampton, Colchester, Hertford, and other places on the various lines, was also very great.

In consequence of the competition in the Gravesend trade, and the low fare by railway and steam-boat, the concourse of Londoners who besieged the town was beyond all former precedent.

The National Gallery.—To this institution no less than 16,350 persons of various grades of society, were visitors on Monday, and although very many were attired in humble garbs, either their love of the arts, or attachment to good order, induced them and all to behave with the utmost decorum. Not the slightest disturbance, and the only inconvenience produced was the immense influx of umbrellas and parasols, occasioned by the showery weather, giving additional trouble to the ball keepers.

St Paul's Cathedral.—The large charge for admission to this national edifice, erected with the public money, and which the said public doubtless consider should be free, made it but very thinly attended, while the coldness and storminess of the weather, rendered an ascent by no means desirable.

Neither on the Monument, nor the Duke of York's Column, were many visitors during the day, which may also be attributed to the weather.

The Tower.—The reduction in the price of admission to view the armoury, and the crown and other jewels kept within the Tower of London, caused a great influx of visitors to that interesting depository.

The Thames Tunnel.—As at Easter, the stalls in this undertaking were decorated with flags and evergreens, with music at either end of the Tunnel playing favourite airs during the day. The number of persons passing through was very great Polytechnic Institution.—The Gallery of Practical Science was thronged by the holiday crowds, who travelled during the various exhibitions from one to the microscope, the physalscope (by means of which the human face is magnified several times its usual size), the diving bell and diver, with experiments too numerous to mention. In the evening Mr. Horn delivered one of his pleasing lectures on music.

The Chinese Exhibition.—This exhibition of articles from the Celestial Empire attracted a great concourse of persons to its Feast of Lanterns, and during the day the rooms were well attended.

The General Steam Navigation Company's steam-ship Monarch, Captain W. W. Morris, arrived in the river on Tuesday afternoon, with a large party of ladies and gentlemen from Hamburg, Magdeburg, Berlin, St. Petersburgh, Copenhagen, &c., who have come over to this country, for a visit, until the 6th of June, when they will return in the same ship to Hamburg. The Monarch, a vessel of 1,840 tons burthen, presented a very gay appearance as she came up the river, having the flags of all nations hoisted. The passage was performed in forty-four hours.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Royal Naval School.—On Tuesday the annual general meeting of the Corporation of the Royal Naval School took place at Willis's Rooms, Kingstreet, St. James's, for the purpose of receiving the report of the Council for the past year, and to appoint the President, Vice-Presidents, and Directors, for the year ensuing. The meeting was numerously attended, and among those present were Admiral Sir C. Ogle, Bart. (the President); Lord J. O'Brien, Sir T. Briggs, Sir J. Ommaney, Sir T. Troubridge, Sir J. Coghill, Sir R. Dobson, Admirs. Sarpson, Hon. Captain Bruce, Aldermen Lucas, Captains Parker, Hall, and Forbes, Baines, &c. Sir C. Ogle, the President, was in the chair, and, in opening the business, observed that since last year their prospects were much improved, the school generally was in a most prosperous state, while a debt had been erected, but which far exceeded their means, yet, with a view to meet this, he had the pleasure to say that the committee of the patriotic fund had acceded to very advantageous terms, by which the Corporation would be brought into connection with the influential gentlemen of the City of London. Mr. Hope, the Secretary, then read the report, from which it appeared that the donations and subscriptions to the general building and other funds, including interest on stock, previous balances, &c., amounted to nearly £20,000, from which nearly £12,000 had been expended on the building. £572 invested in stock, and, after defraying necessary expenses, there remained at the banker's £913 19s. 9d., in addition to funded stock of £7673 19s. 7d. The report, after some discussion, was received and adopted, and the proposition approved that the Patriotic Fund would advance £8000 on being permitted to nominate to the Council ten pupils, the sons of naval officers. The President and Vice-Presidents, going out by rotation, were re-elected, as were the Directors, save two resigned, after which Monday were awarded to the gallant claimants, and the meeting broke up.

Mr. Bell has been appointed assistant clerk and draughtsman, in the Director of Works' department, for service at the new steam establishment about to be formed at Sheer-ness, from Deptford.

5th Hussars.—On Tuesday morning a detachment of this regiment, consisting of lieutenants Baker and Macartney, and Cornet Miller, and 40 rank and file, marched from the cavalry depôt at Maidstone for Gravesend, and embarked there on board the Duke of Cornwall, for Madras.

The cavalry depot at Maidstone is so crowded that a great many men are compelled to be billeted in the town. The depot of the 3rd and 5th Dragoons number as many as 200 each.

53rd Foot.—On Tuesday a detachment of about 70 men of this regiment, under orders for Madras, marched from Chatham barracks, and embarked at Gravesend on board the Duke of Cornwall.

In the amended regulations respecting clothing and accoutrements for corps of infantry recently promulgated, there appears a clause which will prevent the creation of confirmed on those commanding officers of regiments who have the immediate superintendence and control of the clothing for their respective corps. By the amended regulations the colonel was subject to the whim or caprice of inland carriage in forwarding the clothing and the usual accoutrements furnished by him to the head-quarters of his corps, or to a detachment of them on a foreign station; this frequently gave rise to considerable dissatisfaction. Now, with a view it appears to remove grounds of complaint on that point, a modified clause is introduced in the new regulations in these words:—"Colonels are bound to see that the regimental clothing be delivered at the head-quarters of the corps, and to each detachment thereof, at their own risk and cost; excepting when a corps on foreign service shall re stationed more than 20 miles from the port of landing, in which case the conveyance from the port to head-quarters of the corps, shall be defrayed at the public expense; or, in the event of a division or detachment of a corps on a foreign station being at a greater distance than twenty miles from the head-quarters, and no route provided the clothing cannot be shipped direct from London to the station of such detachment, the conveyance of the clothing from the head-quarters of the corps to the detachment shall be defrayed by the public, but the colonels are to insure the safe arrival of the clothing at its destination. The same rule as that above directed in regard to clothing, will be applicable to all regimental accoutrements, appointments, and equipments furnished by the colonel under the provisions of the present regulations." We find also that there is a new rule laid down "for the remuneration of colonels for the expense of clothing supernumerary men, whenever such men, after that such men have been commissioned, raised, or borne on the strength of their respective regiments by proper authority, that is to say, "For the highest number of effectives, above the establishment, which may be maintained on the 1st day of April and 1st day of June, the full annual off-reckonings for each man, £2 2s. For any further excess between the 1st July and 30th September two-thirds of the off-reckonings, £1 8s. 8d. for any further excess, and equipments furnished by the colonel under one-half, £1 1s.; and for any further excess between 1st January, and 31st March, one-sixth, 7s. 8d, subject to the deduction of off-reckonings for any arrears or drummer borne on the establishment, but not effective for any part of the same year."

Suicide at Blackfriars-bridge.—Thursday morning an unfortunate woman flung herself into the river from the battlements of Blackfriars-bridge between nine and ten o'clock. She sank to rise no more, although every assistance to rescue her was promptly afforded.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

Accidents, Robberies, &c., at the Eton Montem.—Lamentable accident to one of the Etonians: In consequence of the accidents which have occurred at previous Montems, from the careless use which has been made of the sword of state worn by several of the boys, it had been contemplated by the authorities to interdict their being worn altogether, or to compel those who furnish them to provide them with wooden ones. The latter course has been adopted, and on Tuesday last, the painful and lamentable accident to which we are about to refer, would have fortunately been avoided. On the morning of the Montem, between nine and ten o'clock, the boys, previous to the establishment of the Rev. W. L. Eliott, one of the assistant masters, amused themselves by fencing with their dress swords, when by an unlucky movement one of them, named Fox, a fine lad about seventeen years of age, received the point of the sword of his fellow pupil in his right eye. Mr. Chapman, surgeon, of Windsor, was immediately in attendance, who, from the dangerous nature of the wound, lost no time in proceeding by the railway to London with the sufferer, in company with Mr. Tyrrell, the eminent surgeon, on the case. We regret to state that the sight was found to be totally and irrecoverably destroyed, the sword having completely divided the eye. The unfortunate boy, we are glad to say, is still enjoying the greatest health, and it is confidently hoped that the sight of the other eye, which is much affected, will, through the skilful care and attention of his medical adviser, Mr. G. Chapman, be preserved to him. The unfortunate affair has caused Mr. Eliott, who, in conjunction with his two sons, Messrs. Hamilton and Charles Brabam, gave a concert at Windsor theatre on the evening of the Montem, was robbed, by the well-noh fraternity who visited the two towns in considerable numbers) of his carpet-bag, containing clothes, music, and other property of the value of between £10 and £12, just as he was leaving Windsor, by the omnibus, for the Slough-station, en route to London by the last up-train on Tuesday night. The carpet-bag was brought, by the porter, out of the Swan Inn (where Mr. Braham was staying), and placed on the pavement at the door, ready to be put on the roof of the omnibus. The porter's attention was called off by one of the gang, and the next instant the carpet-bag was gone. It was found, however, at an early hour on Wednesday morning by some bargemen floating down the Thames between Windsor and Datchet, but stripped of the whole of its contents, with the exception of the music and the veteran vocalist's night shirt and night cap.—Robbery of the Person er's brother: The Rev. Mr. Peel, the brother of Sir Robert Peel, was hustled by the lawless mob at the playing fields, at Eaton College, just after the return of the procession from Salt-hill, and robbed of a considerable sum of money in gold and silver coin. The rev. gentleman in the pocket was very adroitly cut through with a sharp instrument, and the whole of its contents abstracted.

Suppored Murder at Wimbledon.—On Wednesday morning the village of Wimbledon was thrown into a state of excitement and consternation on the discovery of (what is generally supposed to be) a murder. A woman, named Charlotte Hall, the wife of a plasterer, was found dead in bed in her house in Church-street, Wimbledon, and from the circumstances attending the death there is too much reason to fear that she met her death unnaturally, recourse having been had to strangulation. The husband of the deceased has absconded. On the previous night he and his wife had a violent quarrel, quarrelling between the parties, but this having occurred frequently, she took no notice of the circumstance, although she heard a cry of murder from the deceased. Doctor Bright, who was examined this morning before the coroner at Wimbledon, stated that he was unable to say, without making a post-mortem examination of the body, whether death had been caused by apoplexy or strangulation. The case awaits the result of the coroner's inquest.

Shocking Suicide.—On Wednesday morning, about half-past seven, as Mr. Temple, landlord of the Doly Gardeners, Cornwall-road, Lambeth, was passing through his skittle-ground, he was astounded at seeing a man hanging by the head's one of the beams. He immedi.ate.y called for assistance, and having succeeded in cutting the unfortunate man down, sent for a surgeon, who promptly attended, and pronounced life to be quite extinct. The deceased, it appears, had been lodging at the house for two or three days, and is unknown in the neighbourhood. He was five feet inches high, very stout, and apparently between 45 and 50 years of age. He was dressed in corduroy small clothes, light striped waistcoat, blue-ribbed cotton stockings, and new low shoes, and white fustian shooting-jacket. The body lies in the vault of St. John's Church, to be identified. When he applied for the lodgings he said he was a farmer's bailiff, from Essex.

Fatal Accident.—About one o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, a handcart, into which a boy and a man were loading some timber, was being by Foile, was drawn over Blackfriars-bridge by some boys, who ran shouting with it. On reaching the crown of the bridge, they were enabled to increase their speed down the declivity, towards the Surrey side, when, unhappily, a boy, who held a rope in front, stumbled and fell, and the wheel of the truck passing over his head, he was killed on the spot.

THE MARKETS.

Corn-Exchange.—Friday.—A limited supply of English wheat has come to hand since Monday, hence the stands to-day were poorly filled with samples. For most descriptions the demand was dull, at Monday's rates. Foreign wheat—the arrivals from abroad has an improved inquiry, at full currencies. In bonded parcels we heard of no transactions. Foreign barley, which was in small supply, found ready buyers, at full prices. In English qualities but little doing. Malting 20s to 28s; grinding barley, 21s to 27s; distilling ditto 23s to 28s; malting ditto, 29s to 34s. Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 60s to 62s. Brown ditto, 56s to 58s; Kingston and Ware, 62s to 65s; Chevalier, 64s; Scotch and Irish malt-ing ditto, 52s to 55s. Foreign oats, in limited supply, were steady to-day, at full prices. Fine corn made flour, 40s to 43s, Suffolk, — to 00s, Stockton and Yorkshire, 40s to 43s, per sack. Foreign.—Free wheat, 48s to 50s; Danish, 42s to 44s; Polish, 00s to 00s. In Bonded Barley, 19s to 20s, oats, new, 12s to 13s, ditto feed, 11s to 11s, beans, 18s to 19s; peas 18s to 20s per quarter. Flour, sacred, 34s to 36s. Baltic, 30s to 32s per 196 pounds, canary, 38s to 40s per quarter

The Seed Market.—Red clover and canary seeds have been in request at very full prices. All other seeds have commanded very little attention.

The following are the present rates:—Rapeseed, English, sowing, 50s to 60s; Baltic crushing, 25s to 37. Mediterranean and Odessa, 26s to 28s, hempseed, 28s to 35s per quarter, linseed, new, 28s to 29s per cwt.; from sunseed, 18s to 19s; white ditto, 16s to 17s.; tares, 4s to 4s 6d per bushel, English rapeseed, new, 27s to 27s per last of ten quarters; linseed cakes, English, £5 to £6 10s per 1000, rapeseed cakes, £5 5s to £5 10s per ton, canary, 9s to 00s per quarter

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis range from 5d to 8½d; of household, ditto 4d to 7½d per 4-lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 55s 10d; barley, 30s 7d; oats, 21s 7½, rye, 31s 7d; beans, 35s 11d, peas, 34s 7d

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat 55s 6d, barley, 31s 3d; oats, 20s 6d; rye, 31s 3d; beans 35s 6d, peas, 34s 5d

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 17s; barley, 7s; oats, 6s; rye, 10s 6d, beans, 10s 6d, peas, 10s 6d

Tea.—Owing to public sales, 852 000 packages having been announced for Tuesday next, the demand for most kinds of tea by private con sumers is inactive, yet no prices have been lower for this season than those of Tuesday.

Sugar.—The market has assumed a very steady appearance, and prices are fully supported for the boglaudsome outcomes of new harbadoes have found buyers at prices varying from 60s to 67s for low to fair. Bengal and Mauritius held at full rates. We have no variation to no see in the va ue of refined goods, the standard mixup selling at 77s 6d to 78s, and brown grocery 74s 6d per cwt.

Provisions.—We have still to report a very dull sale for Irish butter, at barely stationary prices. Fine, fine York can be had at 80 to 82s, fine 76 to 78s, good ditto, 72s to 74s, and inferior 70s to 72s. Hanlaid. The imports of foreign butter being large, that article is a mere drug, at further depressed rates the best Friesland being worth only 72s per cwt. Bacon is in good request, at 56s to 60s; Waterfords, 54s to 56s per cwt. Irish and Scotch hams are scarce, and prices are quotable Waterfords. Hams are in request. Irish, at 66s to 68s, Westmoreland, 64s to 70s and York, 70s to 74s per cwt. Lard and all other kinds of provisions are very dull.

Oil.—A fair business has been doing in linseed, though on easier terms—cake 6d to 25s 9d and hempseed, 34s per cwt. Rapeseed, Lynn and Hull, 37s per cwt.

Tallow.—This market is steady as to price, though the demand is limited. Prime new P.Y C., on the spot, is held at 43s 3d to 43s 6d, white, for forward delivery, the quotation is 43s 6d per cwt.

Hops.—From most of the plantations in Kent and Sussex our accounts still continue unfavourable, the bine is generally reported to be subject to the attacks of the fly. Duty is very small, and prices are well supported. Sussex pockets £6 8s to £6 15s. Weald of Kent ditto £6 to £7 7s, East Kent do. £6 10 to £8 10, do bags, £7 to £8 10s. East Kent growths, 4, 4, 4

MADLLE. CERITO AS LA VIVANDIERE.

What is Vivandiere? English reader! it is a French translation of "Suttler," or "Moll Flagon," which before now has been associated with something coarse and ugly, but in the present instance is identified with any of the three Graces, or with all of them, if you like;—for of a verity Cerito is "tria juncta in uno;" she moreover bears another resemblance, which is to Ixion, inasmuch as in her extraordinary movements—

Se sequiturque fugitque—

her motions on the stage being certainly very wonderful, scarcely throwing her shadow before or behind her. She must have been born under the equator. The little ballet of La Vivandiere is the composition of the fair danseuse, and reflects high credit upon the poetical skill evinced by her, as an intellectual artiste, as well as executive danseuse of the first order. Sallust once blamed a woman for dancing too well—what would he have said now-a-days?

MDLLE. CERITO, AS LA VIVANDIERE.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

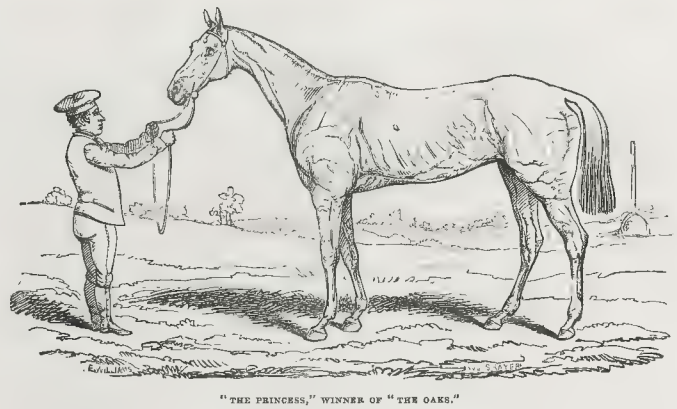
KNOLE PARK—GATEWAY TO THE APARTMENTS.

On Wednesday his Majesty the King of Saxony visited this celebrated mansion and demesne of the Earls and Dukes of Dorset, now the seat of Earl Amherst. The estate lies in the immediate vicinity of the town of Sevenoaks, and the mansion is one of the finest "show houses" in this part of the country. It was for many years the chief seat of the Archbishops of Canterbury, and was visited by Henries VII. and VIII. Cranmer relinquished it to the monarch, and Knole was subsequently granted to the Protector Somerset. John Dudley, Earl of Warwick, was the next possessor. Queen Mary granted it to her kinsman, Cardinal Pole; and Queen Elizabeth conferred it on Robert, Earl of Leicester. Thomas Sackville, Baron Buckhurst, afterwards created Earl of Dorset, who became its proprietor in 1603, was a poet, an ambassador, and a statesman of great fame. He made great alterations and improvements at Knole; and it is said that he constantly employed 200 workmen. His grandson, Richard, the third Earl, who married the celebrated Anne Clifford, wasted his fortune, and sold Knole, with other property. Richard, the fifth Earl of Dorset, repurchased the estate, which remains in the same illustrious family.

GATEWAY, KNOLE PARK.

The mansion of Knole, seated on high ground, in a noble park, is an immense pile of building, said to cover an area of five acres. The buildings surround three square courts, and are divided into numerous small apartments, as was the fashion in former times. By modern alterations, however, some handsome and spacious rooms have been formed. Although there is an apparent unity and symmetry in the whole design, it is evidently the workmanship of different and remote dates. The greatest part is of about 1480: whilst the latest is of the time of James I., by the first Earl of Dorset.

Knole has long been distinguished for its fine collection of pictures, by the most eminent Italian, Venetian, Flemish, and Dutch artists; besides some of the chef d'œuvres of Reynolds and Gainsborough, including a series of portraits of the most eminent English poets. These pictures are hung in the apartments shown to visitors, the entrance to which is shown in our engraving. These apartments are the Great Hall, 73 feet by 27 feet, and 28 feet in height, the Brown Gallery; Lady Betty Germain's room and dressing-room; the spangled bedroom; the billiard-room; the Venetian bed-room; the ball room; the chapel-room; organ-room and chapel; and the drawing room: also, the King's bedchamber, poets' parlour, colonnade, guard-room, library; and the cartoon-room, containing copies from Raffaele's cartoons, by D. Mytens, &c. In this apartment a sumptuous déjeûner was served to the King of Saxony and suite on Wednesday last.



"THE PRINCESS," WINNER OF "THE OAKS."

THE WINNER OF "THE OAKS."

We here present our readers with the promised portrait of "The Princess," the winner of "the Oaks" Stakes, value £3325, at Epsom, on Friday last. She is the property of Colonel Anson; is a bright chesnut filly, with the off hind pastern white, and a small star on the forehead; has rather a long head, thin straight neck, strong shoulders well laid back; is good in the brisket; with large arms, good legs and feet; loins well arched; and remarkably good quarters, well let down, giving them rather a drooping appearance; full muscular gaskins and thighs; and altogether a racing-like looking mare.

NEW MUSIC.

MASS, in B Flat. By H. FARMER. London: Williams and Son, Cheapside; and Novello, Dean-street, Soho.

None but a man imbued with the sentiment of "he who dares nobly, does nobly," would or could have written this music; throughout it there is evidence of considerable learning, elegant taste, and happy union of science with grace. We only wish that in the severer parts of the work he had paid more rigid regard to the figure which constitutes the beauty of fugue? But, altogether, it does great credit to the composer, and shows that we have some one in the land who can yet produce a work which may do honour to his country.

CONCERTINO, for violin, with accompaniment for Pianoforte, by HENRY FARMER. Cocks and Co.

To write or compose music for the violin in these days is a hazardous thing; but Mr. Farmer need not fear to place his Concertino by the side of anything since the days of Jarnowick. It is graceful, full of melody, and the passages, particularly the double stopping, and those on the fourth string lie well on the instrument. Perhaps there is a little too much of the trillo or shake throughout, but it may be one of Mr Farmer's peculiar effects, and, as we have not had the pleasure of hearing him, we will not further complain. The Concertino is an exceedingly clever composition.

OH! WERE I BUT A DROP OF DEW. Duet. The words by RICHARD HOWITT. The music by HENRY FARMER. Cocks and Co.

This duet is well imagined, carefully and elegantly written, and when sung well cannot fail to be extremely effective; it contains throughout several original thoughts most eloquently expressed.

MARY. A Song. The words by C. B. HARRISON. The music by H. FARMER. Cramer, Addison, and Beale.

This is a charming melody, with one solitary fault—a breach of rhythm at the 15th and 16th bars of each verse. The word "Mary," should commence the latter bar, and for the other words there is room enough in the previous one if a little subdivision were made. With this slight exception, the song of "Mary" has pleased us much. Mr. Farmer is evidently a man of genius.

THE SAILOR'S BRIDE; ballad. By the same author and composer. Smith, Liverpool.

The title of this ballad is a misnomer, for it is supposed to be sung by one who refuses to wed a sailor. The D flat in the symphonies should be C sharp, as in the voice part. What could induce the composer to use such false accentuation as occurs at bars nine and thirteen? Of the six words crowded into them, the two last, according to the rhythm of the poetry, should be in the following bars; the same series of notes would answer if a crotchet emphasis or duration were given to the first, third, and fifth quavers.

THE PRIZE COMEDY.

Agendi tempus mihi datum est. TERENT.

"Time, the vindicator of the dead," is the only arbiter of true desert. No committee can ultimately determine the respective merits of a hundred and one competitors, unless their struggles be simply mechanical or physical; in which case little more is necessary on the part of the judges than an attentive observation of what has been gone on: as, for instance, which horse at a race-course first reached the winning-post, or which balloon out of ten went the highest, or which maggot from the nuts at a mess-table crawled the fastest. It is not a matter so easily determinable where intellect is concerned. The ingenium of each judge should be par matriæ or, in fact, the discrimination required for such a task ought to be almost on a level with even the highest matter to be considered. At the same time we think that the gentlemen chosen by Mr. Webster for his "comitia dramatica" were each and every one of them fully equal to his task; but we are jealous of the public not being allowed in the first instance, as it must be ultimately, to be sole judge. It is true, it would be impossible for any manager to submit 101 comedies to the verdict of such a tribunal, but then, on the other hand, the said public cannot feel perfectly satisfied with the dictatorship which selects one out of 97 or 98 comedies (the number received), and deprives it altogether of any acquaintance with the pretensions of the rejected, amongst which there might be one found that would "o'erweigh a whole theatre of others." Another thing to be remarked is, that not one writer of any distinguished grade has entered the lists—so that the prize comedy should not be considered as a fair sample of what the dramatic talent of the day could effect. But most likely they were one and all influenced by the feeling which pervades Horace's lines to Augustus,

Valeat res ludiera, si me
Palma negata macrum, donata reducit opimum.
Sæpe etiam audacem fugat hoc terretque poetam and did not wish to wrest the palm from unworthy competitors. Of the comedy chosen we cannot possibly yet give any opinion: it is the production of a lady in a department of literature which has been ornamented by many female pens. Mrs. Sentlivre, Mrs. Cowley, Mrs. Inchbald, and several other fair writers are sufficient to prove that a good comedy can emanate from a feminine brain, and we trust there will be another proof of it when Mrs. Gore's is produced. Still we cannot help regretting that none of the "favourites have been in the field," although we admire the generosity which withheld them from the contest for the "stakes."
Quod numero plures, &c.:

THE VETERAN PIANIST.—The farewell to public life of Jean Baptiste Cramer will take place on the 27th of June, on the occasion of his brother's, Mr. Francois Cramer's concert. His Royal Highness, Prince Albert, will patronise the entertainment, and we have no doubt that there will be some tears shed "in the true performance." It is a melancholy thing to listen to the last chords of a truly minstrel hand.

HIGHLAND DANCERS AND PIPERS.

HIGHLAND DANCERS AND PIPERS

In addition to the ingenious Picture-Model of Old London, the proprietor of the Surrey Zoological Gardens engaged for the holiday visitors, during the past week, the Highland Pipers and Dancers, who were selected by the Marquis of Breadalbane to perform before her Majesty and Prince Albert, at Taymouth Castle. Their very spirited national dances afforded much gratification to the visitors to the Gardens on Monday last. Our artist has succeeded in sketching the characteristic gracefulness of the dance, as well as their well-appointed costumes.

HISTORY OF WOOD-ENGRAVING.

(Continued from page 326.)

William Harvey, who is still in the prime of life—or at most not beyond "a certain age," somewhere between the summer and autumn of manhood—was born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and served an apprenticeship as a wood-engraver with Thomas Bewick, and was one of his favourite pupils, both on account of his talents and his amiable disposition; and all who know him now, and may have known, or heard of his character in youth, will acknowledge, that in his case the boy was truly "the father of the man." In 1817 Harvey came to London, and in a short time afterwards became a pupil of B. R. Haydon, the historical painter, with a view of improving himself in drawing, and of thus further qualifying himself for the profession of a designer on wood. While studying under Haydon, he drew and engraved his large cut of the "Death of Dentatus," from a painting by his master. This cut, which was published in 1821, though correctly drawn, elaborately engraved, and displaying the greatest skill in the mechanism of the art, is yet not a good specimen of the effective employment of the means of wood-engraving. In the mere cutting of lines it displays all that skill in the use of tools, combined with great patience and unremitting perseverance, can effect in wood-engraving; but though parts of it may appear beautiful when viewed separately, yet when viewed as a whole it does not powerfully arrest the mind as a successful production of art, without regard to the means employed. It has, in short, too much the appearance of being an elaborate effort to emulate a copper-plate; and in attempting this, the engraver has thrown away a great portion of his labour, while he has sacrificed some of the peculiar advantages which wood-engraving possesses over engraving on copper. In 1824, Harvey drew and engraved the beautiful vignettes and tail-pieces in Dr. Henderson's "History of Ancient and Modern Wines." With those cuts he may be considered as having closed his career as an engraver, and to have entered on that of a designer on wood. In the latter capacity, perhaps no artist that ever lived has made so many drawings, or furnished so much employment for wood-engravers. Among the numerous works illustrated by him, it is only necessary to enumerate the following for proofs of his great and various talent and untiring application:—"Northcote's Fables," first and second series; the "Tower Menagerie;" the "Gardens and Menagerie of the Zoological Society;" White's "Selborne;" Lane's "Arabian Nights;" Knight and Co.'s Edition of the "Common Prayer;" and Charles Knight's "Shakspere." The various other works to which Harvey has furnished illustrations are so numerous, that we may be well excused from attempting to give a list—although such a list would be curious, as showing what talent and industry can effect seeing that he himself does not recollect a tithe of them. Chodowiecki in Germany, and Stothard in England, are famed for the number and excellence of the designs which they made for engravers; Harvey, however, has made more drawings, and of a greater variety of subjects, than either; and should he live, and retain his powers, to the age of Stothard, he bids fair to double his artistic progeny. It is unnecessary to enumerate all the wood-engravers who, since the revival of the art by Bewick, have proceeded from the great northern hive in "the coal country," either direct from "Old Tommy's" shop, in St. Nicholas' Church-yard, or, to cut the shop, from the "establishments" of his pupils.

Of the few wood-engravers practising the art in London, towards the latter end of the last century, the only names that have come to our knowledge are those of T. Hodgson and James Lee. The former, as has been previously observed, was probably the engraver of the cuts in Hawkins's "History of Music," and was unquestionably the publisher of the "Hieroglyphick Bible" and the "Emblems of Mortality." Lee engraved the cuts in the "Cheap Repository," a collection of moral tales—similar to those of the modern Tract Societies—published between 1794 and 1798. Lee also engraved in brass, as appears from the following imprint on a sheet of Twelfth Night Characters of his engraving:—"London: Printed for JAMES LEE, Engraver in Wood, Brass, &c. (for the Letter Press), No. 68, Hatton Garden. Entered at Stationers' Hall, and published as the Act directs, Dec. 29, 1796. Price plain 2d. Coloured 4d. Cut up in Packets 6d. coloured." A hundred years hence a set of those impressions may be of value to the City Library, as illustrative of the costume in the eighteenth century, of such characters as "Billingsgate Nan, the Duchess of Puddle Dock, Mother Cole, Alderman Guttle, Tippy Bobby, and Captain Cacafogo, of the Tower Hamlets Militia." We believe our set to be unique. Lee engraved the cuts in a book entitled the "Wreath," from designs by W. M. Craig. He died in 1804; and his apprentice, Henry White, went down to Newcastle, and served out the remainder of his time with Bewick. White subsequently proved himself to be no unworthy pupil of Bewick.

That which may be considered the London school of wood-engraving produced nothing which would bear a comparison with the works of Bewick and his pupils, till the appearance of Robert Branston, who, as a wood-engraver, we believe, was, like Bewick, self-taught. He was born at Lynn, in Norfolk, about 1780, and served an apprenticeship with his father as a general copperplate engraver and heraldic painter; but, coming to London, and not meeting with sufficient encouragement in the business to which he had been brought up, he applied himself to wood-engraving, there being then an increasing demand for the productions of this branch of art. Some of his first cuts were engraved for lottery-bills, in the "getting-up" and printing of which in different colours he displayed great skill. He afterwards applied himself to finer work, and at length became a very excellent wood-engraver. He succeeded best in engraving human figures, but did not excel in landscape, nor in the engraving of animals. Some of the best specimens of his talents as a wood-engraver are to be found in the "History of England," published by Scholey, 1804-1810; Bloomfield's "Wild Flowers;" and "Epitaphs in Verse," by George Marshall, 1811. His master-piece, however, is a large cut of the "Cave of Despair," in "Savage's Hints on Decorative Printing, 1822." This is one of the best large cuts which up to that time had appeared in this country. Mr. Branston died in 1827, leaving two sons, Robert and Frederick, who are both wood-engravers. John Thompson—by the general assent of his profession, the best wood-engraver in England—was a pupil of Robert Branston the elder. Thompson's best cuts are to be found in "Puckle's Club, 1817;" "Butler's Hudibras, 1819:" and "Butler's Remains, 1827;" "Major's Edition of Walton's Angler;" "Northcote's Fables, Second Series;" and in "Charles Knight's Edition of Shakspere." Though the cuts engraved by Thompson, in Van Voorst's edition of the "Vicar of Wakefield," from designs by W. Mulready, R.A., have been highly lauded as excellent specimens of wood-engraving, yet we by no means consider them as his best; and, moreover, without expressing any opinion how far Mr. Mulready may have succeeded in pictorially embodying Goldsmith's characters and sentiment, we feel no hesitation in declaring that in those designs he has not skilfully availed himself of the means of wood-engraving; the full powers of which can never be displayed in the representation of mere outline subjects which appear like copies of meagre etchings. All persons, possessing the least knowledge of wood-engraving, who have seen them, will understand what we mean when we say, that they "want a little more fat." Objects, both real and imaginary may be lean, without being graceful or pleasing.

Among the modern wood-engravers who have contributed by their taste and abilities to promote their art, and to render it more deserving of public favour, the late John Orrin Smith is deserving of a passing notice. He was born at Colchester, and was brought up as an architect. He, however, abandoned that profession for the anticipated pleasures and profits of a managing partner in a Sunday newspaper, which he was either instrumental in establishing, or in which he purchased a share, about 1823. This newspaper proving an unprofitable speculation, he was thrown, as the phrase is, "upon his resources"—the said "resources" generally meaning the sack, which, in consequence of its having been emptied, is insufficient to break the fall of the luckless wight who is "thrown" upon it. Having a large acquaintance amongst publishers, artists, and literary men, he determined to become a wood-engraver; and was, we believe, chiefly indebted to Wm. Harvey for his first lessons in the practice of the art. He subsequently entered into a partnership with Mr. John Jackson; but it was soon dissolved. He then commenced the business of a wood-engraver on his own account, in 1828; and from that year till the time of his decease, he was employed in executing, for various works, some of the best wood-cuts which appeared within that period. He particularly excelled in landscape, and in conveying the idea of space and distance by a skilfully managed gradation of tone, conveying the idea of the relative distance of the different objects as affected by aerial perspective. In this respect Mr. Smith had no superior. He also engraved several of the cuts in the illustrated works published in France, about seven years ago, from designs by T. Johannot, Grandville, and other French artists; and so highly did the publishers esteem his talents that they gave a medallion portrait of him in "Paul and Virginia." To Mr. Smith, in conjunction with his partner, Mr. W. J. Linton, the superintendence of the drawing and the engraving of the cuts for the illustration of this article were entrusted. Mr. Smith, however, having died before they were finished, their completion devolved entirely on Mr. Linton, who, as an engraver, is certainly not inferior to his late partner. We might justly say something more positive in Mr. Linton's favour, but we prefer, without referring to what he has previously done so well, to allow the cuts given in the course of these papers to speak both for him and for themselves. One of the last cuts on which Mr. Smith was employed, was the portrait of Captain Coram, given in No. 105, May 4. He had just begun it a few days before his death, which, though he had been for some time previously in a delicate state of health, yet took place very suddenly and unexpectedly, on the 18th October, 1843, in the forty-fourth year of his age.

When Bewick's wood-engravings first began to attract notice, there were two classes of persons who admired them—those who viewed them as spirited and truth-like representations of natural scenes and objects, and who appreciated the talents of the artist who had thus excited in their minds pleasing sensations and recollections; and those who looked on them merely with regard to the means by which they were executed, and "wondered that such things could be done on wood." A considerable proportion of the professed admirers of wood-engraving, at the present day, are of the latter class; they estimate a wood-cut as if it were a piece of cambric, according to its "fineness;" paying but little attention to the subject, and never asking themselves what meaning, what sentiment, or what pictorial beauty, is conveyed by the "niggling work" with which they are so charmed. It is said that George III. thought so highly of the cuts in Goldsmith's and Parnell's poems, previously noticed, that he could not be persuaded that they were engraved on wood, until the blocks were shown to him by Mr. George Nicol, his bookseller. At a time when the principles of wood-engraving were so little understood, it is not surprising that a king should have no knowledge of its capabilities, or should be incapable of distinguishing between a wood-cut, printed with letter-press, and a copperplate-engraving. There is no royal road to a knowledge of the principles of art, any more than there is to a knowledge of the principles of science.

SPECIMEN OF WOOD-ENGRAVING.—"IMOGENE," AFTER WESTALL.

(To be continued.)

EPITOME OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS.

The buildings designed for a college for the cultivation of "modern languages and literature" have just been completed at Oxford, and a prospectus of the plan and design of the proposed institution has been issued.

On Thursday night the large corn stores of Lane and Co., at Cork, were destroyed by fire. The buildings and stock were insured for £15,000.

On Thursday (last week) Mr. John Galbraith, a contractor on the Drogheda Railway, was killed at Karberry. In attempting to close one of the doors of a first-class carriage, whilst a train was in motion, his foot was in some way caught, and he was dragged out, and almost dashed to pieces.

The Cathedral of Durham has been thrown open to the public, without any payment having previously been the numerous visitors, for seven hours a day during the summer months, and four during the winter, since July, 1841, and scarcely one case of mischief, or other misconduct connected with that indulgence, has come, during the whole time, to the knowledge of the dean and chapter.

It is reported that the British Government have it in contemplation to forward the mails from London by rail to Hull, and from Hull, per steamers to Hamburg.

The national debt of Austria, including everything, amounts now to 1,014,030,000 florins; that is more than six times as much as the total amount of revenue of the empire. The annual amount of the revenue and expenditure is not exactly known, but is it certain that there has long been a deficit which Baron Kubeck has not been able to get rid of.

The last accounts from America represent Macready as playing to crowded but not fashionable audiences at the Park Theatre. At the close of his engagement at that establishment, he purposed returning to England.

Letters from Canada state that Sir C. Metcalfe has been perforated upon for cancer in the face, and the opinion of the operator, Mr. Pollock, was, that the disease was entirely eradicated. His Excellency was doing well. He bore the operation itself, and the subsequent cauterisation, with the greatest fortitude.

The Manchester and Birmingham Railway Company have determined upon building a splendid inn on their line at the Alderley station. The building is to be commenced forthwith, at a cost of nearly £5000.

The Dublin Evening Mail gives an "authorised" contradiction to the very prevalent rumour of Mr. O'Connell's being about to re-enter the bonds of wedlock with the accomplished suiter of a junior fellow of Trinity College, Dublin.

Lord Arthur Lennox, who had vacated his seat by his appointment as one of the Lords of the Treasury, was on Monday re-elected, without opposition, for the borough of Chichester.

The portion of the West London Railway from Kensington Station to its junction with the Great Western Railway near the Harrow-road, was opened for passenger trains on Monday last.

We are informed that Messrs. Grote, Prescott, and Co., the bankers, have put down their names for £100 towards the national fund which the Chartists are about to raise for the purpose of purchasing an estate for Mr. Thomas Duncombe.

One mass of rock has been raised in Mr. King's quarry, Higher Bebington, 40 feet long, 12 feet wide, and 9 feet deep, containing 4320 cubic feet, or 120 tons. It is perfect, and without stain or flaw of any kind, and is now being cut up for use.

The Conservative members of the House of Commons propose to entertain the new Secretary at War, Sir Thomas Freemantle, at dinner, after the recess, as a mark of the high estimation in which his courtesy, frankness, and shining disposition are held by them.

We understand that an offer has been made to have London letters delivered in Newcastle, Sunderland and Shields, in twelve hours and a half from the time of leaving the metropolis, if the sanction of Government is all that is required to ensure the execution of the plan.

A treaty of commerce and navigation has been concluded between the Country and the Duchy of Oldenburgh. It was signed by the Earl of Aberdeen and Mr. Gladstone, and by M. Tarks (charge d'affaires of Oldenburgh), on the 4th of April, and ratified on the 30th of that month.

On the 14th of last month Prince Oscar Frederick, Duke of East Gothland, was confirmed in the Evangelic Lutheran faith by Bishop Butsch, and received the sacrament on Ascension-day, in the presence of the royal family.

On Saturday Sir T. Freemantle, Bart., accompanied by a number of friends, proceeded to the Town-hall, Buckingham, and was returned to serve in Parliament, without opposition.

At the urgent request of his congregation the Rev. W. Sinclair, of St. George's, Leeds, has, for the present, at least, consented not to leave his incumbency for that of the new church now in course of erection at Notting-hill.

The Rev. Thomas Dale, M.A., having fulfilled the duties of Lecturer of the parish of St. Sepulchre, London, for the period of 16 years, took his leave of the congregation at that church on the evening of Sunday last.

A letter from Algesiras announces that a felucca, called the San Rafael, laden with contraband goods, worth 300,000*l.*, has been seized in the neighbourhood of Sanlucar de Barrameda. This vessel, which had been dispatched from Gibraltar, by the firm of Larcia and Co., for Seville, was brought into Algesiras by the Hidalgo war-brigger.

A few days since, Mr. T. Allen, gardener, of Totnes, took from a peach tree, covering 15 feet of wall, in thinning out the fruit in the garden of C. Edwards, Esq., of Gerston, the extraordinary number of 73 dozen peaches, ripening at least as many on the tree.

On the occasion of the opening of the railway between Hanover and Brunswick, about a fortnight since, the King of Hanover gave a grand dinner at his palace, to which no fewer than 700 guests were invited.

A curious duel has just taken place near Mayenne between two women, one armed with a sickle and the other with a shepherd's crook, with which they laid about them most intrepidly. One is said to be grievously wounded.

Prince Henry of the Netherlands is about to take another cruise in the Mediterranean. His Royal Highness is said to have under his command the Ryn and Jason frigates and the sloop Stadtholder, now at Flushing.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert has become Vice-Patron of the Royal Geographical Society, vacant by the death of the Duke of Sussex. His Royal Highness has forwarded to the President of the Society his intention to visit on Wednesday, in Belgrave-square, to inspect the vase and plateau presented to him by the Emperor of Russia.

A curious proposal was made in the course of the last week to some of the principle Life Assurance Companies. It was for an insurance upon the life of the late Mr. Crockford for four days only, from the day on which it was proposed, so as to carry the office over the dreaded Derby day of this year; but had it been accepted the insurers would have suffered no loss, Mr. Crockford having lived six days.

The Polish ball, on Monday, the 10th of this month, promises to be one of the most attract.ve fêtes of the season. Eighty Lady Patronesses, representing the élite of rank and fashion, intend to honour the ball with their presence, attended by numerous friends; so that the assembly will be as brilliant as any that has ever met at Almack's.

The Pope has addressed a letter to the Roman Catholic Archbishops and Bishops, calling their attention to the efforts which are being made by various Bible Societies, and particularly by the Christian Society of New York, to produce religious dissent in Italy.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisements cannot be received after Seven o'clock on Thursday evening.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The Nobility, Subscribers to the Opera, and the Public are respectfully informed that there will be an EXTRA NIGHT, not included in the Subscription, on THURSDAY NEXT, June 6th, when will be performed (for the last time) Rossini's celebrated opera, I PURITANI. Elvira, Madame Grisi; Giorgio, Sig. Lablache; Arturo, Sig. Mario; and Riccardo, Sig. Fornasari. With other Entertainments, in which Madame Persiani will appear. After which will be presented a New Divertissement, composed by Mdlle. Cerito, entitled LA VIVANDIERE. The Music arranged and composed by Sig. Pugni. La Vivandiere, Mdlle. Cerito. Le Postillon M. St. Leon; Katia, Madame Conere, The Mayor of the Village, M. Coulon; A Traveller, M. Versalle. The Gendarmes, Mdlle. Carlotta Grisi, Pas de Quatre, by Mdlle. Cerito, Mdlle. Ferdinand, Mdlle. Louis, and M. St. Leon; supported by eight ladies of the Corps de Ballet. Ballabile Pas de Deux, by Mdlle. Frankel and M. Montesu. And La Redowka Polka, the original dance of Bohemia, by Mdlle. Cerito and M. St. Leon. An entire new Arrangement Danse de Caractere, called La Manola, by Mdlle. Cerito and M St. Leon. To conclude with a selection from the Grand Ballet, ONDINE. Ondine, Mdlle Cerito. Comprising the Procession, the Fete de la Madonna de l'Arco, the Tarentella, and the celebrated Pas de l'Ombre, by Mdlle Cerito.—Applications for Boxes, Stalls, and Tickets to be made at the Box-office, Opera Colonnade.—Doors open at Seven; the Opera will commence at Half past Seven.

MR. JOHN PARRY'S ANNUAL CONCERT will take place on FRIDAY EVENING NEXT, JUNE 7th, at the HANOVER SQUARE ROOMS, Commencing at Eight o'Clock. Madame Anna Thillon, Herr Staudigl, Joachim, Parish Alvars, and other eminent artistes, will assist. Mr. John Parry will sing a new Historical Romance, "Fayre Rosamonde," A.D. 1164; and a new Song, "My Mother's a Frenchette." Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d.; Tickets, 7s.; and Programmes to be had at the Music Shops; Sam's Library, St. James's-street; and Mr. JOHN PARRY, of Twickenham-street, Bedford-square.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS OPEN their 10th Annual Exhibition on MONDAY NEXT, the 22nd inst., at their Gallery, 53, Pall Mall, near the British Institution.—Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d.
JAMES FARRY, Secretary.

GRAND BALL and CONCERT, on WEDNESDAY EVENING NEXT, JUNE 5th, at the CROWN and ANCHOR TAVERN, Strand.—Weippert's celebrated Band is expressly engaged for the occasion. Mr. Moss, Mas ter of the Ceremonies. Vocalists, Miss Eaton, Miss R. Isaacs, from the Princess's Theatre. Mr. Woodin, Mr. Rousbourne, Mr. T. Nicholls. And Mr. W. H. West, and Mr. W. West, will preside at the Grand Pianoforte. Tickets may be had of Mr. Lacy, 77, Cheapside, with every information. Single, 2s. 6d.; and Tickets to admit Two, 4s. each; Refreshments included. Doors open at Seven o'clock.

MESDAMES DORUS GRAS and ANNA THILLON will perform at M. BENEDICT'S ANNUAL GRAND MORNING CONCERT, conjointly with whom all the eminent per sonages of the Italian Opera will also appear. Piano, M. Thalberg, Mdme. Dulcken, and Dr. F. Mendelssohn Bartholdy; Violin, Ernst and Joachim; Violoncello, M. Offenbach. Harp, Mr. P. Alvars. French Horn, Signor Punti. Conductors, Signor Costa and M. Benedict. The Concert will take place on FRIDAY, June 14, in the Great Concert Room of her Majesty's Theatre, under the immediate Patronage of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge. Tickets at all the principal Musicsellers; and of M. Benedict, 2, Manchester square. Early application is respectfully solicited for the few remaining Stalls and Reserved Seats (near the Piano).

LAST WEEK OF MR. HOGG'S LECTURES on the MUSIC of EIGHT different NATIONS, at the ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, without extra charge to the Public. The EIGHTH and LAST SUBJECT, consisting of the MUSIC of CHINA and HINDOSTAN, commences on the 3rd inst., at Eight o'clock in the Evening, and will be continued during the week, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings, at Eight o'clock; and on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturdays, at Three o'clock. With VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL ILLUSTRATIONS. All the other LECTURES and EXHIBITIONS as usual. LONGBOTTOM'S PHYTHOSCOPE and PHASMATROPE. NEW and DISSOLVING VIEWS, ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE &c. &c.

Admission, One Shilling.—Schools, Half-price.

GENERAL TOM THUMB a SHORT TIME LONGER. —Owing to the constantly increasing crowds of Nobility and Gentry whom attend his Exhibition, this man in miniature will remain at CATLIN'S INDIAN GALLERY, EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY, a short time longer, exhibiting every day and evening. JOCK-O-NOT, the celebra ed NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN CHIEF, from the Sauk tribe, having recovered from his recent illness, will appear, dressed in the costume of his tribe, with the sanctified crown of eagle feathers, and will go through the Dance of the Grecian Statues, Napoleon Musing, &c. &c. The General weighs only FIFTEEN POUNDS, and is the least infant that ever walked alone. He wears his Court Dress at Hall past Twelve, and again in the afternoon. The elegant presents from her Majesty and the Queen Dowager, in no wise. Hours of Exhibition—From Eleven to One, Half past Two to Five, and from Seven to Nine o'Clock.—Admission, 1s., without regard to age.

EMPLOYMENT.—Persons having a little time to spare, are apprised that Agents continue to be appointed in London and Country Towns by the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY, for the sale of their celebrated TEAS (Offices, 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard). They are offered a liberal remuneration, and every assistance, from an outset to a pound, with the prices and weight marked on each packet, and but little trouble is occasioned by the sales, which only 11s. per annum, and many during the last nineteen years have realised considerable incomes by the Agency, without 1s. 1d. or loss. Application to be made (if by letter, post-paid) as above.

BERDOE'S SUPERIOR LIGHT WATERPROOF HOOKS for the SPRING and SUMMER.—An extensive Variety of Articles above in NEW and greatly improved materials (in lieu of the unsightly rubbish made by Slopsellers), now ready, guaranteed to exclude any rain whatever, and confidently recommended to those who regard a respectable appearance, with the most disappointment and vexation. FIRST-RATE CLOTHING of every description, upon the lowest terms possible, consistent with true economy
W. BERDOE, TAILOR, WATERPROOFER &c., 69, CORNHILL (north side).

TAYOTYPE HATS.—D'ALEMBERT and MORGAN, Fashionable Hatters, 19, Regent-street, Waterloo-place, continue, in accordance with the spirit of the times, to introduce every article in the Hatting line at a small profit for ready payment. Their first quality Velvet-napped Hats at 16s., and second at 12s., are now in high estimation amongst the Nobility and Gentry; they are light and flexible, and if tried by a Taxyotype cast of the wearer's head, unusually comfortable. Wholesale Country and Shipping Orders executed with liberality and care
D. & D. D'Alembert and Morgan, Hatters to their business from 45, West Strand.

NEW PATENTS.—BROCKEDON'S IMPROVED STOPPERS.—This important Invention, a Substitute for Corks and Bungs, has, by new and Great Improvements, become a pure, unexceptionable, and perfect means of preserving, for any length of time, Wine, Beer, Spirits, &c. They are corks and bungs and easily applied, and in appearance much they now have of fine Cork has removed the prejudice against their former dark colour. Also, BROCKEDON'S PATENT PERFECT SCREW, which is in daily use in perfect condition.—C. MACINTOSH and Co., 19, Walbrook, London, and 22, York-street, Manchester.

SIX POUNDS OF TEA and upwards, sent carriage free to any part of the kingdom at the WHOLESALE PRICE, on receipt of a remittance or post-office order.

Black	2s. 8d., 2s. 10d., 3s. 4d., 3s. 8d., 4s. 0d., 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s.
Green	3s. 4d., 3s. 8d., 4s. 0d., 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s. 0d., 5s. 4d., 6s. 0d., 7s.
Coffee	4s. 0d., 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s. 0d., 5s. 4d., 6s. 0d., 7s. 0d., 8s. 0d., 9s. 0d., 10s. 0d., 12s.

G. T. MANSELL and Co., Wholesale Tea Dealers, 7, Bucklersbury, Cheapside. Agencies will be given to responsable parties.

DINNER SERVICES, TABLE GLASS, &c.—SANDER and CO., 319 and 320, Holborn, (corner of Southampton Buildings, and opposite Gray's Inn-gate) have constantly on hand the largest Stock in London of Table Glass, gilt and plain; Glandelier, Lustre, Argand Burner, Breakfast and Tea Services, Dessert, China, Ironstone, and Earthenware; Ornamental China, Papier Maché and Iron Tea Trays; Chandeliers, Lustres, Argand Burners, Tea Urns, Tea Kettles, Stands and Lamps, Table plate; Alabaster Figures, Vases, &c. Parties favouring this establishment with a visit, will obtain every information respecting the articles they may be importuned to make purchases. Goods delivered to town and at the docks carriage free.

INTERESTING and CLASSICAL EXCURSION.—A Six Weeks' Tour, by Steam, to ATHENS, SMYRNA, and CONSTANTINOPLE, calling at Gibraltar and Malta, and returning by Marseilles and Paris, leaves LIVERPOOL, CADIZ, and GIBRALTAR.—The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's well-known splendid Steam Ships HINDOSTAN, 1800 tons, and 800 horse power, will START from BLACKWALL, on THURSDAY, 20th JUNE, for the above Ports, and will remain in the passage out and home, about six weeks. Very superior accommodation for passengers. For Terms apply at the Company's Offices, 31, St. Mary Axe, London; and 97, High-street, Southampton; also, at 25 Regent-circus.

MONEY.—GRAND DISTRIBUTION of £70,170 sterling, authorised and guaranteed by his Imperial Majesty and the Government of Austria. The next drawing of thirty-five series, containing 490 lots, each of which must obtain one of the 700 Prizes of £25,000, £6000, &c., the lowest £50, will commence at Vienna, on the 1st of June, and be paid in British money. A few Moss tickets, £2 each, fifths 13s.; six Tickets £12; with Prospectus, may be had til the 8th only of Messrs. F. E. Ford and Co., Bankers and Brokers, 4, Frankfort, on the continuing a post-office order to their office, 26, Souverie-street, Fleet-street, London. Government lists of the drawing will be sent to each purchaser.—Office hours from twelve to three

FOR STOPPING DECAYED TEETH.—Price 4s. 6d. Patronised by her Majesty, the Queen Dowager, the Duchess of Kent, the Duchess of Sussex, Mr. THOMAS'S SUCCEDANEUM, for Stopping Decayed Teeth, however large. It is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and will remain firm in the tooth for many years, rendering any more necessary, arresting the further progress of decay. All persons can use Mr. Thomas's Succedaneum immediately with ease, as no directions are enclosed.—Prepared only by Mr. THOMAS, Surgeon Dentist, 64, Berners street, Oxford-street. Price 4s. 6d., and can be sent by post. Mr. THOMAS'S CHEMICAL ROCK or IRORY for the Incorporation system of self-adhesion, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any painful operation whatever. At home from Eleven till Four IMPORTANT to FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A considerable and well-selected Assortment of Furniture Commonplace, by blazing the PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS, 38, Baker street, Portman-square, where may be inspected the most extensive STOCK of IRON FANCY GOODS in the Kingdom, consisting of kitchen cooking utensils, German silver wares, fenders, stoves, shower and vapour baths, ornamental iron work, garden implements, japanned water cans and toilette pails, bent bamboo chairs, tables, desks and cabinets, and every description of ironwork, flower-stands, table cutlery, &c. Every article being marked in plain figures, at the lowest possible price, and a reduction of ten per cent. allowed on the purchase of the guineas, rage resulting from Cash payments, as the Proprietors warrant every article of the best manufacture, at a saving of at least 30 per cent.—THORPE FALLOWS, and CO., 38, Baker-street, Portman-square. A liberal allowance to merchants and shippers.

MIND COMPLAINTS or NERVOUSNESS.—Clergymen, Noblemen, and all who suffer from groundless fear, suspicion, inquietude, &c., confusion, blushing, despondency, indecision, irresolution, head-ache, vertigo, loss of memory, delusion, inaptitude for society, study, or business, thick head, restlessness, wretchedness thoughts of self-injury, &c., can now not on.y be relieved but tranquillised, made happy, and cured. After WILLIS MOSELEY, late of Cambridge University, and enduring these sufferings fourteen years, discovered their causes, and a perfect cure, and for twenty-five years has had no relapse. By the same means he has cured numerous clergymen, gentlemen, noblemen, &c., and of 10,000 applicants known not twenty uncured who have followed his advice. Numerous testimonials can be seen and references given. Most are well in six weeks. Messrs. Moseley's visit to all parts. Apply or write. At home from 11 to 3, Charlotte street, Bloomsbury.

NELSON'S PATENT OPAQUE GELATINE, Half the Price of Isinglass.—CAUTION: From the increasing demand for NELSON'S OPAQUE GELATINE, many spurious articles are imposed on the Public; to guard against which and for a protection to purchasers, it is sold in packets only, bearing the name of thematine, grocers, and oilmen, in town and country, at 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s., each packet into the interior of the tooth and cleaning them in the most effectual manner, extraordinary manner and is famous for the hairs not coming loose, is. An improved Cottage Brush, that c ean s in a third part of the usual time, and incapable of injuring the finest nap. Penetrating Hair Brushes, with the durable unbleached Russian bristle, which does not soften by common heat. Flesh Brushes, of improved graduated and powerful friction. Velvet Brushes, which act in the most surprising and successful manner The genuine Smyrna Sponge, with its preserved valuable properties of absorption, vitality, and durability, by means of direct importations, dispensing with all ante mediate parties' profits, and destructive bleaching, and securing the luxury of a genuine Smyrna Sponge.—Only at METCALFE'S sole establishment, 120 B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.—Caution: Beware of the words, "from Metcalfe's," adopted by some houses.

In a few days will be published, in Two Vols., post 8vo., Illustrated with numerous Portraits, Price 24s., cloth,

OUR ACTRESSES; or, Glances at Stage Favourites, Past and Present By Mrs C. BARON WILSON, author of the "Life of the Duchess of St Albans," "Memoirs of Mdme Lewis," &c. &c.—London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill Dublin: J. CUMMING. Edinburgh: BELL and SIMPKINS

Just Published price 8s. 6d., 8vo., with beautifully coloured and other Plates,

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on a SUCCESSFUL MODE of TREATING DISEASES of the LUNGS, AIR PASSAGES, and HEART By A. B. MADDOCK, M.D., Resident Surgeon of the Dispensary, Judd-street, Brunswick-square. The work is adapted for the perusal of all classes of readers.
SIMPKIN and MARSHALL, Stationers' Hall court.

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST ILLUSTRATED PERIODICAL OF THE DAY—THE BUILDER, a Weekly Journal, consisting of 16 folio pages, with numerous embellishments, Price 3d. This publication is fitted alike for the drawing-room the studio, the office, the workshop, and the cottage. The Numbers may be had separately or in Monthly Parts Vol. I. containing upwards of 300 Illustrations, elegantly bound in cloth, 18s.—2, York-street, Covent-garden, and of all Booksellers.

HOOD'S MAGAZINE, for JUNE, No. VI., price 2s. 6d., will contain contributions by Robert Browning, R. Monckton Milnes, M.P. Gilderoy Sandface, the late John Keats, D. Maclise, Peter Priggins, Mrs. S. C. Hall, Mrs. Sigourney, Miss Lawrence, Frederick Byng Brown, &c., &c. Among the articles of more immediate interest, will be found a few remarks on "Conjugality" by Real England; and a sketch of T. B. C. Smith, the Irish Attorney-General.—London: HENRY KENNAW, 250, Strand, and all Booksellers. To the trade—No. IV. is now reprinted, and may be had at the Publisher's.

THE Afflicted with RHEUMATIC PAINS, Weakness in the Limbs, Joints, &c., should read MR. CARBURN'S PAMPHLET, which will be sent to any part of the kingdom (Gratis), upon a post letter, enclosing two post stamps, being addressed to Mr. Carburn's Dispensary, King's Cross, London. Persons indisposable goods are adduced that for a few shillings, or even a few pence, in some cases, alleviation from pain may be quickly obtained, and in a short period a perfect restoration. Persons about to take the benefit of change as to Sea, &c., for the restoration of their bodily health and strength, should peruse the pamphlet, it being the 3rd edition of 100,000.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.—Now ready, price One Guinea, half-bound, a new illustrated edition, with a Memoir of GEORGE GODWIN Esq., F.S.S., F.S.A., and LEWIS POCOCK, Esq., F.S.A., Honorary Secretaries to the Art Union of London, with a Life of the Author, and a Bibliographical Notice. Embellished with twenty-one designs, in outline, engraved by JOHN THOMAS SMITH, from a series of drawings made expressly for this edition, by Mr. H. C. SELOUS. The text is further illustrated by numerous Woodcuts, engraved by Mr. ARMITAGE, also from designs by Mr. SELOUS.—M. M HOLLOWAY, 25, Bedford street, Covent Garden

AUX FRANCAIS qui desirent APPRENDRE L'ANGLAIS.—Le moyen le plus prompt, le plus facile, et le plus agreable, d'acquerir la connoissance de ce perfectionne cette langue, a pratique de la Langue, et suivre le mouvement literaire, de se tenir au courant de tout ce qui interesse la politique, les beaux arts, le commerce, l'industrie, et l'agriculture, est de s'abonner au Journal Anglais, THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. W. M. AUBERT and Co., Place de la Bourse, Paris, se chargent de recevoir le abonnement et de faire parvenir chaque semaine à tous ceux inscrits dans la France ou le Belgique. Les prix sera de 25 francs par an. Adresser à Londres.—Conditions de l'abonnement.—3 mois, 7*l.* 6*d.*, 6 mois, 13*l.* 8*s.*, un an, 27*l.* 6*d.*

FRASER'S MAGAZINE for JUNE, Price 2s 6d., contains:—1. Oxford Professors of Divinity.—Conclusion and Keble. 2. An Episode of the Wars of Philip V of Spain. Part II. 3. Of the Red Indian. By Morgan Rattler. 4 The Fernandiad. A Ditty of Four Days' Doings among the Mighty. 5. Annual Magnetism and Neurhypnotism. 6. Mrs Dawson on Human Nature. 7. Hunsrück in the Future Galleries. 8 Napoleon and the Poet de Lille. 9. A Dream. 10. The Luck of Barry Lyndon; a Romance of the Last Century. By Fitz-Boodle. 11 The Poet's Life. 11. Vagaries of Lendin Tide—Lord Ellesborough and Lord Ashley. 12. Index.
JAMES FRASER, 215, Regent-street, London.

In one thick volume, Eighth Edition, much enlarged, price 18s.,

MODERN DOMESTIC MEDICINE: a Popular Treatise exhibiting the Symptoms, Causes, and most efficacious Treatment of Diseases; with a collection of approved Prescriptions, Management of Children, Doses of Medicines, &c. Forming a comprehensive Guide for Clergy, Families, and Invalids. By T. J. GRAHAM, M.D., &c. "It is evidently the result of great professional talent, experience, and judgment, the author everywhere appears conscientious and candid. One object is prominent, evident—a sincere desire to benefit his suffering fellow creatures. To recommend a work like this to the present or future readers, is only to manifest a proper regard for their welfare."—Literary Journal, Feb., 1844. "It is admirably calculated for general popularity."—London Weekly Review.—SIMPKIN and Co., Paternoster-row, HATCHARDS, 187, Piccadilly; and TEGG, Cheapside. Sold by all Booksellers.

On the 10th June will be published, price 20s., handsomely bound,

A PICTORIAL HISTORY OF CHINA AND INDIA; with a descriptive account of those countries, and their inhabitants, from the earliest period of authentic record to the present time; in which the work is treated not only of the historical events, but also of the manners, customs, religion, literature, and domestic economy of the Chinese and Hindoo empires. The publication is one of the first order, illustrating whatever is peculiar to the inhabitants regarding their dress, domestic occupations, their arts, their commerce, commercial pursuits, arts, &c. The plates, thirty-two in number, are printed in the new style of tinted lithography, and, with the wood engravings, of which there are 138, are executed by artists of celebrity, from accurate drawings made expressly for the work.—London: THOMAS DEAN and Co., 35, Threadneedle-street, and all Booksellers in the United Kingdom.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style, by Mr WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden square. Private Lessons at all hours to Ladies and Gentlemen. Quadrilles and Waltzes taught in Classes, at Seven o'clock, on Mondays and Fridays. Lessons in the Polka and Valse à Deux Temps every day.—A Ball Soirée may be had, on application, as above. The room may be engaged for private parties

MADDEN'S Registered PATENT KNIFE CLEANER meets with the most extensive and distinguished patronage, and is now established as an article of daily necessity. Its cleanliness, superiority, and efficacy, combined with the advantages of removing all the dirt and noise, the saving of time, and the preservation of the knives, have rendered MADDEN'S KNIFE CLEANER, price 16s., may be seen and tried at the office, 14, George street, Adelphi

REDUCED FARES.—GRAVESEND, calling at Rosherville.—EAGLE and FALCON Steam packets from West-End, Hungerford-market Pier, Blackwall, at 1 past 12; Returning from Town Pier, Gravesend, and Rosherville Pier, at 2 past 4, and 4 past 5, for Blackwall, London bridge, and Hungerford.
Eagle Steam packet Office, Hungerford-Market Strand

MAGICAL EFFECT ON GILDING.—UPTON'S PARISIAN DETERGENT instantly revives the original splendour of Gilding, how dirty and tarnished soever, removes Fly-spots, and renders covering from the Fly unnecessary. As it is perfectly innocuous, and the whole process may be safely managed by the servant, it can be applied without danger of injuring the most delicate tracing. Sold by UPTON and Co., 30, George street, Hanover square, and 66, Basinghall-street, City.—Gold Detergent, 2s. 6d. per bott.; Ormolu Lacquer and Bronze, 1s. 6d. each, and Lamp, 1s. 6d.

DAWSON'S EXOPTABLE SHAVING SOAP, which produces in an instant a mild and durable lather, that does not dry on the face, and by which the process of shaving is performed with the greatest facility and comfort, in half the usual time. At 1s. per cake, by BARCLAY, 95, Farringdon street [illegible] PARRY, 220, Strand; PRATT, 276, High Holborn; and by all Perfumers, Hairdressers, and Medicine Venders.—Particularly ask for DAWSON'S, and observe the signature, "DAWSON," on the envelope. The genuine are not sold at any house in Holborn

FEMALE LOVELINESS is never more enhanced than when the Hair is embellished with the Auburn tint, produced by the use of GRAFFEY'S ZALMA POMPEIANA, which is also its most efficacious renovator and preserver, giving it an unusually rich and beautiful appearance in every respect. Sold, price 3s. 6d., at GRAFFEY'S, 26, Warwick-street, Regent-street, where may be had the only infallible and unobjectionable DYE, also, GRAFFEY'S DEPILATORY, for removing superfluous Hair. Be sure to order GRAFFEY'S

A NONYMOUS LETTER.—£50 REWARD.—If the Person A who, at the decision of another, as a supposed, wrote a Letter which was addressed to Mr. Gosling, at a Gentleman in Albert-square, Commercial-road, on the 14th or 15th of March last, and posted at Mile-end, will come forward and inform the Gentleman to whom the letter was addressed, he or she, shall immediately receive the above reward, and the author, on whose head the letter are informed, that every possible search will be made, and every means resorted to, to discover the author. Should he immediately receive it, if he or she refuse to do so, the author of SYLVESTER SOUND the SOMNAMBULIST, by the Author of "Valentine Vox," "Stanley Thorn," &c. &c., with four humorous Illustrations on Steel, by Cruikshank. Part VIII., price 1s. Contents.—The Meeting—Duel Prevented—Pier Glass Practice—Revisit to Cobbersone Grange—The Ghost, &c. &c. Published by W. M. CLARK, Warwick lane, and sold by all Booksellers.

RIGBY'S MIDWIFERY.—Post 8vo, price 10s. 6d. cloth,
A SYSTEM of MIDWIFERY. By EDWARD RIGBY, M.D. With numerous Illustrations.—"Containing many views comparatively new to the English reader and written with a perfect knowledge, theoretical and practical, of the whole subject."—Times.—WHITTAKER and Co., Ave Maria lane

SONGS for the NURSERY.—Pussy Cat; Lullaby; Hark! the Dogs do bark; The North Wind doth blow; and Rub-a-dub-dub, each 1s. 6d. Jenny Wren, and The Witches' Song, each 1s. The words and music by a Lady. The Illustrated Music Saloon, 192, Strand.

MUSIC AT MIDNIGHT, by A. J. REXFORD, as being now sung by Miss Dolby at the Nobility and Public Concerts.—"A flowing and cheerful melody, and accompaniment light and graceful."—Musical World. "This composition is most graceful."—Manchester Times. "A charming song, with rich and flowing melody."—The Era. Published by CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent street, London; and by Mr CRAIG, 27 Hanover-street Edinburgh; and to be had, by order from all Music-sellers.

NEW WORK.—THE APPRENTICE AND ARTIZAN'S WEEKLY REGISTER, price 1d., containing a series of Essays on the Formation of Character, the Circle of the Sciences, Analyses of the Patents of the Week, articles on Architecture, Building, the Steam Engine, &c., Reports of Scientific Societies, Notices of Contracts, and the whole news of the week in Art and Science. The work is profusely illustrated, and is adapted to the perusal of all classes of society.—Office, 2, TAVISTOCK-STREET, Covent-garden The Monthly Parts, of EDWARDS, MARSHALL, and Co

FOURTH YEAR, just published, fcp. 8vo, price 8s. cloth
DODD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, and TITLED CLASSES of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND. Alphabetically Arranged, and containing, in addition to the usual contents of a Peerage, the Junior Branches of the Nobility, Knights, Bishops, Judges, Privy Councillors, &c. By C. R. DODD, Esq., Author of "The Parliamentary Companion," &c.
WHITTAKER and Co., Ave Maria-lane

Recently published, in two volumes, containing 1392 closely printed pages, and upwards of 500 illustrations, with a consult-index, demy 8vo, price 18s. per volume, cloth lettered,
CRUVEILHIER'S ANATOMY. Translated by Dr. MADDEN and revised by Professor SHARPEY, of University College.—"Having carefully examined it, we do not hesitate to pronounce it a highly creditable performance. It is full of illustrations, and we know of no work on the subject which embodies so much information at so low a price."—The Times.—WHITTAKER and Co. Ave Maria-lane.

EASY GUIDE TO GERMAN.
Just published, in a neat pocket volume, price 6s. 6d. bound,
THE GERMAN SELF-TEACHER; or, a New Mode of Reading, Studying, and Conversing, by means of lists of all the words of similar meaning in the German and English, the great affinity of the two languages, and their similarity of expression on the more common parts of speech. By HENRY MEIDINGER, Author of the "Comparative Dictionary of the German—Teutonic Language &c."
London: WHITTAKER and Co., and DULAU and Co.

FLUGEL'S GERMAN AND ENGLISH DICTIONARIES,
Adapted to the English Student.
FLUGEL'S COMPLETE DICTIONARY of the GERMAN and ENGLISH LANGUAGES, English German, and German English. A new and unique, while most comprehensive, popularly adapting of the English student. By C. A. FEILING, Professor HEIMANN, and J. OXENFORD. In two thick volumes, large 8vo., 36s. 2 FLUGEL ABRIDGED. For younger Students, Travellers, &c. By C. A. FEILING and J. OXENFORD. 12mo., 5s. bound London: WHITTAKER and Co., DULAU and Co., and D. NUTT.

Eighth Edition, enlarged and corrected to the present time, with Map and Engravings, price 2s. 6d., post free 3s. extra,
THE HAND-BOOK TO PARIS, or Traveller's Guide to the French Capital, Boulogne, Calais, Dieppe, Rouen, and Havre; containing everything that will be found an accurate description of all the Routes to Paris, with the modes of travelling with comfort and economy, with advice to Visitors, Public Buildings, Hotels, Exhibitions, Theatres, Restaurateurs, Cafés, and every object of interest and attraction. By an ENGLISH RESIDENT. "Possessing a good deal of information of a fresh and practical kind."—Spectator. "—STRANGE, 21, Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers

Just Published, price 1s. 6d., in cloth,
A GUIDE to the EXHIBITION of the ROYAL ACADEMY, Trafalgar square (Open from Eight to Seven o'Clock), containing the CRITICISMS of the PRESS on 1400 Pictures, Paintings, and Drawings (the whole forming a complete catalogue), also, price 1s., the UNITED SUPREMACY OF ART DURING THE REIGN OF GOVERNMENT, containing the OPINIONS OF THE PRESS on this most arbitrary proceeding of her Majesty's Ministers.—Publishing Office, No. 4, Trafalgar-square, Charing cross, and 21, Paternoster-row.

Recently published, in 3 vols., post 8vo., price 15s. 6d. per vol., cloth,
PRACTICAL MEDICINE, consisting of Treatises by DR. CHAMBERS, G. Budd, W. Gull, Barlow, Addison, Carpenter, Symonds, Gregory, Hope, Joy, Locock, Prichard, Rowland, Schedel, Sharpey Symonds, Taylor, Theo. Thompson, Wm. Thompson, Watson, Williams, and Wilson. Edited by A. HILL HASSALL, M.D. F.R.S., &c. "Offers a work combining a series of original dissertations, by some of our best medical writers. It is a most valuable source of information to the student, and also one of reference to the practitioner."—The Times. "Of the many compilations of the present day in medicine, the whole forms an excellent summary of the present state of medical science."—The Times
WHITTAKER and Co., Ave Maria-lane

COLLIER'S SHAKESPEARE COMPLETE
Now ready, in 8 volumes 8vo., cloth lettered, price £4 16s., with an engraved Portrait of Shakspeare,
THE WORKS OF SHAKESPEARE. The text formed from an entirely new collection of the old editions; with the various Readings, Notes, a Life of the Poet, and a Glossary. By JOHN PAYNE COLLIER, Esq.—"Mr Collier has formed his text from an entirely new collation of the old quarto, for which facilities hitherto out of any commentator's reach, were supplied by the liberality of the late Duke of Devonshire."—Athenæum. "Mr Collier has done his work in a most conscientious manner."—Spectator. "The book is beautifully printed." "A work on which great pains and labour of various kinds have been bestowed."—Examiner. "Editions of Shakespeare can afford to be with us."—The Examiner.
WHITTAKER and Co., Ave Maria-lane, London

Just published, price 1s.,
HOW TO DANCE THE POLKA, and all the QUADRILLES, GERMAN WALTZES, HIGHLAND REELS, &c., after the manner of COULON." "Rewarded to any part of the country, post-free, on receiving a remittance of 1s 4d.—London: HUGH CUNNINGHAM, 193, Strand.

Just published price 1s.,
THE MYSTERIES OF LONDON. By FATHER NORTH. "* To warded to any pa t of the country, post-free, on receiving a remittance of 1s. 6d.
London: HUGH CUNNINGHAM, 193, Strand.
CARTOUCHE, THE CELEBRATED FRENCH ROBBER.
Now ready, at all Circulating Libraries, in three vols.,
CARTOUCHE, THE PRINCE OF ROBBERS. By R. B. PEAKE.—"MR. PEAKE'S is an extraordinary and a clever book."—Spectator.
Lond n. HUGH CUNNINGHAM, 193, Strand.

This day is published,
THE COLOSSAL NUMBER OF THE MEDICAL TIMES, being the largest size of a Stamped Periodical allowed by law, and the whole devoted to CHEMISTRY, PHARMACY, MAT. RIA MEDICA, and THERAPEUTICS.
1. A Treatise upon Diabetes Therapeutic Address delivered for 1844
2. An Original Paper by J. S. Muspratt, M.D., of the Laboratory of Lodeg
3. An Elaborate Paper by Professor Playfair, on the Fluorescence of Sloop
4. A Large Price List, containing the lowest wholesale market prices of drugs.
Extracts and Condensations of all the valuable matter that has recently appeared in all the Pharmaceutical and Chemical Journals, forming A MASS MORE THAN SUFFICIENT TO FORM AN OCTAVO VOLUME.
It is the intention of the Editor of the Medical Times to publish a "Pharmaceutical Number" monthly.—PRICE 6d.—STAMPED 6d.
J. A. CARTMAN, 49, Essex-street, Strand.

THE AUTHOR'S EDITIONS.
OLLENDORFF'S METHOD of LEARNING to READ, WRITE, and SPEAK a LANGUAGE in SIX MONTHS
ADAPTED to the FRENCH. Written expressly for the English Student. By H. G. OLLENDORFF. 8vo., price 10s., cloth.
ADAPTED to the GERMAN. Written expressly for the English Student. By H. G. OLLENDORFF. In Two Parts, price 10s. each, cloth. The parts sold separately.
N.B. These FRENCH and GERMAN SYSTEMS, prepared by the Author. Price 7s. each, cloth, lettered.
"* It is necessary for those who desire to avail themselves of the present method to notice that these are the only English editions sanctioned by Mr. Ollendorff, and he deems any other totally inadequate for the purposes of a thorough instruction, and he considers that of the method so strongly recommended by Captain Basil Hall and other eminent writers. They stand & he ordered with the publisher's name; and, to prevent error, every copy of the author's edition is signed by himself.
London: WHITTAKER and Co., and DULAU and Co., and to be had of any bookseller.

THE ILLUMINATED MAGAZINE for JUNE, Edited by DOUGLAS JERROLD, is printed with a beautiful new type, and the contents are more than usually interesting; and illustrated with a variety of engravings by the best artists, and a Steel Etching by Leech.

CONTENTS
THE CHRONICLES OF CLOVERNOOK, by the EDITOR —
Stories at the Grate. Cut lefish carrives his interview with the Great Friend, showing how the Author defied the Devil.
Bowie Knives; with many Cuts of the same Sharp Flowers
Cleanliness next to Godliness. A Story for An Irish Rubber at Whist. House.
A Defence of Poetry, by Agnostus.
The Lost Husband, or the Hole in the Stock ing.
The Broken-Hearted Club; by PIERS SHAFTON. The Man who spoke the Truth.
Parisian Sketches—No. V.—The National Guard.
Punishment of Death.
The Statue of South Walsham
A Fair Day in Bethnay
(The Two Winstons. A Story for Paupers by the Editor.
A Parting Glance at St. Giles's. By John Saunders.
Poetry —
New Books.—Life of Beau Brummell; Roche Jeu in Love, China Illustrated, &c. &c.
Published Monthly, price 1s. 6d. The second Volume, elegantly bound, is now ready price 8s. Office, 3, Crane court, London; FRASER, Edinburgh; MACHEN, Dublin; and sold by all booksellers.

FIRE! FIRE!! FIRE!!!
LOSS OF LIFE and DESTRUCTION of PROPERTY — More lives have been sacrificed, and more property destroyed, from the use of those disgraceful and explosive matches called "CONGREVES" than from any other cause. The only Safe, Instantaneous Light, is the original LUCIFER MATCH, invented and manufactured only by JONES and CO. This Match may be stamped upon without danger, whereas the mere dropping of a box of Congreves is sufficient to ignite the whole. CAUTION!—Families unless purchasing from the original Factory should be careful to order none but JONES'S LUCIFERS. LIGHT HOUSE 91, STRAND; the INVENTORS and only Manufacturers of the PATENT PROMETHEAN.
 Family and Country Orders will receive immediate attention

FOR SALE, the Stock of a CIRCULATING LIBRARY, consisting of upwards of 1500 Volumes, in good condition, with Cases and Show Board complete.—Apply to Mr. LITCHFIELD, News Agent, Cannon-street-road Commercial road East

COMPANIONS to LADIES and GOVERNESSES.—The Nobility and Private Families are respectfully informed that a Book, containing the names and qualifications of the above, may be referred to daily without charge, at RUDGE, Bookseller and Stationer, 221, Regent-street, corner of Maddox street. Governesses may receive prospectuses upon application.

BOARD and RESIDENCE.—Persons of respectability visiting Town can find the comforts of home near Charing-cross, on moderate terms. "This would suit a gentleman of steady hab ts for a permanency, as the family circle is cheerful and select. For address, apply at the Reading Soap Manufactory, 138, Strand; it is by letter post-paid, directed to to A B. Undeniable reference required

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price at once sets aside all rivalry either of the Swiss manufactories or any other house.—Read JONES'S Series of Watchwork, free for a 2d. stamp.

NOTICE to INVENTORS.—Office for Patents of inventions and Registrations of Designs, 14, Lincoln's Inn-fields.—The printed Instructions, gratis and every information upon the subject of Protection for Inventions, either by Letters Patent or the Designs Acts, may be had by applying personally, or by letter, pre-paid, to Mr ALEX. PRINCE, at the Office, 14, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

BAKER'S PHEASANTRY, KING'S-ROAD, CHELSEA, —Live Game, of every description; Gold, Silver, White, Pied, and Common Pheasants. Eggs of the above procured. A great variety of Rare and Ornamental Poultry, Pigeons, and domesticated. Useful and Ornamental Poultry. And at Messrs. BAKER'S, 8, Half Moon Passage, Gracechurch-str et.

INCOME WITHOUT RISK.—The LONDON GENUINE TEA COMPANY, established November 1, 1818, at 23, Lodgate hill, are now doing up their list of Agents: and persons desirous of such an appointment, by which many have derived considerable incomes, without risk, during the last "years, are requested to apply to the Company, at their Warehouses, 7, Laurence Pountney-hill, London.

SIX lbs. of good BLACK TEA for 17s.; Six lbs. of YOUNG HYSON for 18s.; and Six lbs. of CEYLON COFFEE for 6s. The public should never lose sight of these important features, viz. the Lowness and thoroughness of quality, and good report, the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY can supply excellent Teas at a fraction over the importation price, and they are determined to do it.—Offices, No. 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate-street.

THE NEW DISCOVERY FOR THE NERVES, by DR. GRANDISON, patronised by above 100 of the Nobility This invaluable Medicine has performed the most extraordinary cures, and counteracts the bane of nervous vigour upon thousands. Its combination is a discovery, and its efficacy proves how important a one Sold by all Medicine Vendors. Ask for Dr. Grandison's Charity Pills.
"A wonderful yet safe Medicine." Professor Mollo's

CHASTON'S PATENT INDIA RUBBER ELASTIC CORN PLASTERS are generally admitted to be the most unique and best to eradicate either Hard or Soft CORNS. From their elastic quality, they can be worn with perfect ease, however tight the boot may be, as the foot. Invented and sold by Mr. CHASTON, Chymist, Watton, Norfolk. N.B.—On receipt of thirteen postage stamps (free), a box will be forwarded (also free) to any part of the Kingdom

NECESSARY PRECAUTION.—CONSUMERS of BRANDY are respectfully informed that J. T. BETTS, Jun., and Co. will not be responsible for any bottled Brandy that is not protected against fraudulent substitution by the Patent Metallic Capsules, embossed with the words "BETTS'S PATENT." Sold by the Patent Metallic Capsule Proprietors, Wine and Spirit Merchants in town and country at 8s. 6d. per bottle, the bottle included

CHOICE FLOWERS and PLANTS in POTS.—HUMPHREYS'S HOUSEHOLD COMPOUND—A few grains of this Condensed Fertilizing Powder, economically dissolved in the water used with Plants, produces a vigorous growth and splendid Flowers, highly effective with Geraniums, Fuchsia, Pelargoniums, Cactus, &c. Price 1s. 8d. a bottle. Sold by the leading Chemists and Perfumers in Town and Country.

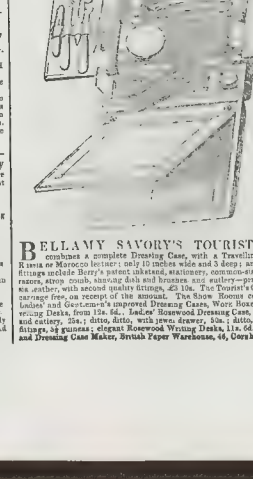
PATENT BRANDY.—Important Distinction.—The pure and wholesome Spirit, of which are sole proprietors, is BRETT'S IMPROVED BRITISH COGNAC, warranted NOT PATENT; whereas, if it be, in fact, such an article as "Patent Brandy," it is certainly not improved! An imperial gallon or upwards, at the first gallon, will be forwarded (carriage free) to any part of England or Scotland. Note the address, HENRY BRETT and Co., Old Furnival's-inn, Holborn-bars

CITY of LONDON FASHIONABLE TAILORING ESTABLISHMENT, 62, King William-street, London bridge.—Messrs. BURGESS and LUCAS, Tailors (late to Albert), respectfully invite gentlemen and families to view one of the largest and best-assorted Stocks in London of superfine cloths, cassimeres, and waistcoating of the newest and most elegant patterns, for summer wear, &c., for the present season. The style of cut and make of every garment are guaranteed equal to the first and most expensive houses in the West End, and for Cash payments, a saving of 20 per cent. will be effected, and will be found to the wearer much cheaper than the inferior garments made up by puffing slopsellers and interested recommenders. Gentlemen's own materials made up by skilful workmen, which description of goods are entirely excluded from this Establishment. An assortment of light Summer Over Coats kept ready made.—62, King William-street, City. Established 18.8

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE.—Under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen, H. R. H. Prince Albert, the Royal Family, and Nobility.—A fragrant White Powder prepared from Oriental Herbs of inestimable virtue for strengthening, preserving, and Rendering the Teeth Beautifully White, and rendering the gums healthy. It eradicates the tartar, and by the removal of that extraneous substance, lends a delightful purity and freshness to the gums. It removes from the surface of the teeth the spots of indipient decay, polishes and preserves the enamel, substituting for discolour and the aspect of impurity, the most pure and pearl-like whiteness; while, from its salubrious and cleansing properties, it imparts a healthy action to the gums. Price 2s. 9d. per box, duty included.
CAUTION.—To protect the public from fraud, the Hon. Commissioners of her Majesty's Stamps have authorised the Proprietors' Signature to be engraved on the Government Stamp, thus: A. ROWLAND & SON, 20, Hatton Garden, which is affixed on each Box Stamp, thus: A. ROWLAND & SON, 20, Hatton Garden, which is affixed on each Box
 All others are Fraudulent Counterfeits!!!

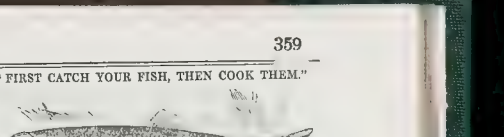
THE HAIR.—Of the numerous compounds constantly announced for promoting the growth or reproduction of the Hair, few survive, even in name, beyond a very limited period; whilst ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, with a reputation unparalleled as a proof, has the increase in public estimation. The singular virtues of this essential invention for restoring, Preserving, and Beautifying the Human Hair, are too well known and appreciated to need comment. The very locks of the high and distinguished patronage it enjoys, its general use in all countries, together with numerous testimonials constantly received in its favour, are sufficient guarantees of its unequalled excellence and take over all attempts of a similar nature. Being universally preferred, its consequent great demand excites the cupidity of unprincipled shopkeepers, who vend the most pernicious trash as the "GENUINE" Macassar Oil, whereas, the genuine article is ONLY to be had of the Proprietors, Messrs. A. ROWLAND and SON, and the amalgamation of its costly scarce materials, solely imported by them) renders abortive any attempt to discover its component parts—thus proving the impossibility of all other articles bearing the title of "Macassar Oil" to be genuine. The genuine article has the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL engraved in two lines on the Wrapper; and on the back of the Wrapper nearly 1600 times, containing 20,000 letters. Price, 3s. 6d., 7s.; Family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s. per bottle.— All others are FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS!

THE TOURIST'S COMPANION.



BELLAMY SAVORY'S TOURISTS COMPANION combines a complete Dressing Case, with a Travelling Writing Desk. It is in Russia or Morocco leather; only 10 inches wide and 3 deep; and with Bramah's lock. The fittings include Berry's patent inkstand, stationery, common-sized letter paper, ivory-handle razors, strop comb, shaving dish and brushes and cutlery—price £5; or a imitation Russia leather, with second quality fittings, £3 10s. The Tourist's Companion will be forwarded carriage free, on receipt of the amount. The Show Rooms contain the largest variety of Ladies' and Gentlemen's improved Dressing Cases, Work Boxes, Writing Desks, &c. Travelling Desks, from 12s. 6d.; Ladies' Rosewood Dressing Case, fitted complete with brushes and cutlery, 25s.; ditto, ditto, with jewel drawer, 30s.; ditto, ditto, full size, with silver fittings, 3½ guineas; elegant Rosewood Writing Desks, 11s. 6d.—BELLAMY SAVORY, Stationer and Dressing Case Maker, British Paper Warehouse, 66, Cornhill, London.

"FIRST CATCH YOUR FISH, THEN COOK THEM."



THE SPORTSMAN'S DISPATCH is expressly invented for ANGLERS. With this portable apparatus a Chop, Steak, or Fish may be cooked to five minutes, at a cost of less than One Penny. It contains, in addition, a Kettle for Boiling Water; and the whole may be conveniently CARRIED in the POCKET It will be sent to any address on receipt of a Post-office Order for 10s., payable to JONES and Co., Light House, 291, Strand, where a great variety of Portable Cooking Apparatus may be seen, adapted for FAMILIES LIVING IN APARTMENTS BACHELORS, GENTLEMEN GOING ABROAD, EMIGRANTS, &c. &c.
N.B. Patentees of the PROMETHEAN, the only instantaneous light used by the Railways for its certainty and that will keep in any climate.
CAUTION.—Families purchasing Instantaneous Lights should be careful to observe that the name of "S. JONES, Light House, 291, Strand," is affixed, without which a dangerous and explosive article is likely to be substituted.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, request the attention of purchasers to their stock of London-made PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which are manufactured by themselves in their own house. In silver cases, with the detached escapement and jewelled, the prices are Four and a Half Guineas, Six, and Eight Guineas each; or, in Gold cases, 10, 12, 14, and 16 Guineas each. The very large stock offered for selection includes every description, enabling a customer to select that which is more particularly adapted to his own use

WORTHY OF NOTICE.—2s. for a Card Plate Engraved to any Pattern, and in the best manner; handsome Bloomings-cases, 1s. each; ditto, with lock, 1s. 6d.; best Sealing-wax, ten sticks, 1s., Note paper, from 2d per quire; Letter, from 3d.; Post-Office Paper, from 1s. 2d., packet of five quires; Magnum Bonum Pens, 6d. per dozen, with holder; 100 Cards printed from Plate, 2s., Fancy Wafers, 2d. per box, Watto Wafers, 2d., packet of 100, every other article charged lower than any house in the trade—
Observe the prices—at ARNOLD'S, 91, Fleet-street. Goods sent any distance.—Please

HOBY'S IMPERIAL BLACKING.—
GEORGE HOBY begs to call attention to his CELEBRATED BLACKING, which gives a lasting polish, superior to all other, causing boots and shoes to be much more durable and soft, and alleviating the pain arising from corns and tender feet, combining ease and beauty in the use, with comfort and economy. Sold wholesale and retail, in bottles, at 1s., 2s., 4s., 8s., and 16s., in boxes at 6d., at 48, St. James's-street, Piccadilly

BLACK-BORDERED ENVELOPES 1s. per Hundred; black-bordered note paper, five quires for 2s.; the best satin 4 ensures, in per hundred, all sizes; superior satin note paper, 5vo. size 3s. 3d per ream; good Bath note ditto, 5s., per ream; thin Bath note 4ea quires for 1s.; French sunk wafers, 2d. per box; good wax wafers, 2d.; packet of 100; ink, in bottles, 1d.; pens, 6d. per dozen; Watto Wafers, 2d., packet of 100, every other article charged lower than any house in the trade—
Observe the prices—at ARNOLD'S, 91, Fleet-street. Goods sent any distance.—Please

HOBY'S IMPERIAL BLACKING.—
GEORGE HOBY begs to call attention to his CELEBRATED BLACKING, which gives a lasting polish, superior to all other, causing boots and shoes to be much more durable and soft, and alleviating the pain arising from corns and tender feet, combining ease and beauty in the use, with comfort and economy. Sold wholesale and retail, in bottles, at 1s., 2s., 4s., 8s., and 16s., in boxes at 6d., at 48, St. James's-street, Piccadilly

BLACK-BORDERED ENVELOPES 1s. per Hundred; black-bordered note paper, five quires for 2s.; the best satin 4 ensures, in per hundred, all sizes; superior satin note paper, 5vo. size 3s. 3d per ream; good Bath note ditto, 5s., per ream; thin Bath note 4ea quires for 1s.; French sunk wafers, 2d. per box; good wax wafers, 2d.; packet of 100; ink, in bottles, 1d.; pens, 6d. per dozen; Watto Wafers, 2d., packet of 100, every other article charged lower than any house in the trade—
Observe the prices—at ARNOLD'S, 91, Fleet-street. Goods sent any distance.—Please

PENTONVILLE HOUSE.—DIX and BRISTOWE beg respectfully to call the attention of the Ladies of Islington, Pentonville, and its vicinity, to their extensive and fashionable collection of summer dresses, silks, shawls, &c., by which for cheapness and variety will be found on inspection equal to any house in London, which for cheapness and variety will be found on inspection equal to any house in London, which for cheapness and variety will be found on inspection equal to any house in London. A large assortment of muslin dresses, newest styles and of fast colours, from 6s. 9d.; balzarine dresses, newest patterns, from 7s. 6d. each; ditto and cashmeres at remarkably low prices; striped and plain silks from 20s. per yard; cameleon damasks, from 2s. 4½d.; black gros from 1s. 6d.; cashmere shawls for any cost, from 10s. 6d. each; a great variety of barage and other shawls, from 4s. 6d.; parasols of every description and price.
2, High street, Islington, next door to the Angel Inn

TO all LARGE CONSUMERS of TEA.—STRUGNELL and COMPANY, 221, Oxford-street, are respectfully acknowledging the patronage bestowed on them by the Nobility and Public generally since opening the above premises, solicit the attention of families to their mode of business, and its advantages. They are dealers in TEA and COFFEE only, and restrict themselves to a ready money trade, thus maintaining a position as buyers in the first markets. Hence are enabled to sell these articles of the purest quality at the lowest prices, under the usual prices, whilst their selection of quality will be found to surpass most houses in the trade, their Congous, of sterling quality, are 2s. 4d and 2s. 8d.; the highest Congou, 4s 4d and 4s. 8d Superior Pekoes, 3s. 8d. Delivered daily within three miles, and carriage paid on country orders of 12 lbs. and upwards.—STRUGNELL and Company 221, Oxford street, corner of Portman-street, London

FIDDLE and PRINCE ALBERT'S PATTERN PLATE. —A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, No. 14, Cornhill, London, Opposite the Bank of England.—The best wrought SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, Fiddle-pattern, 12s. per ounce; the Prince Albert's Pattern, 14s. per ounce. The article may be had, lighter or heavier, at the same price per ounce:—

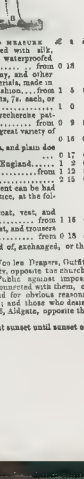
The Fiddle.	£ s. d.	Prince Albert's.	£ s. d.
12 Table Spoons	30 0 7 2	12 Table Spoons	40 0 7 6 ....
12 Dessert ditto	20 0 7 2	12 Dessert ditto	26 0 7 6 ....
12 Table Forks	20 0 7 2	12 Table Forks	26 0 7 6 ....
12 Dessert ditto	20 0 7 2	12 Dessert ditto	26 0 7 6 ....
6 Gravy Spoons	10 0 3 11	6 Gravy Spoons	12 0 4 6 ....
1 Soup Ladle	3 11	1 Soup Ladle	4 10 ....
1 Sauce ditto	3 11	1 Sauce ditto	4 10 ....
1 Fish Slice (not strong)	3 11	1 Fish Slice (not strong)	4 10 ....
1 Fish Slice	3 10	1 Fish Slice	4 10 ....
12 Tea Spoons	3 6 7 8	12 Tea Spoons	4 5 0 ....
1 Pair Sugar Tongs	0 18	1 Pair Sugar Tongs	1 2 ....

Observe and Sons recommend the Prince Albert's Pattern; it is very novel, and of unexampled beauty.

CROMER, NORFOLK.—The most quiet, healthy, and delightful Watering Place, the surprise and admiration of all the families of distinction, and close Lords and Gentlemen who have visited it from its peculiar position and locality to the sea, and also from the beautiful and picturesque country which surrounds it which is the very verge for strengthening purposes. The Hotel is now open, the HOTEL DE PARIS, formerly, the marine residence of the late Right Hon. Lord Suffield, which fronts the sea, and is only a very short distance from it, commanding at one view a vast expanse of the German Ocean, and the lofty Cliffs of Cromer, with its Town and Lighthouse, and beautiful Beach. This property has been purchased by Mr. Edward Soppings of Swaffham, who has spent many thousands pounds in improvements, under the superintendence of an eminent Builder, and it is now in truth one of the most delightful re sorts for the invalid, the valetudinarian, or the healthful visitor. The Hotel is conducted by Mrs. Garthen (a daughter of the late respected Mr. Tucker), and those visitors who may honour it with their patronage, may rely upon every attention being paid to merit their future support. Commercial Gentlemen will also find upon trial that their peculiar convenience has not been disregarded; they will have a private room devoted to their use, and every attention paid to their comfortable repose and personal comfort. The marine establishment will be conducted on liberal principles. The Posting and Livery Stables by James Gray, a respectable resident. Hot and cold Baths, careful Guides and Attendants for open Sea Bathing and Sailing Excursions.

SELF MEASUREMENT. Country residents will duly estimate the convenience of the following plan, by which they may secure a perfect fit. Orders executed with dispatch and exactness.

DIRECTIONS FOR COAT.



From 1 to 2 and on to 3 for full length; from 4 to 5 for elbow point, and to 6 for sleeve length; round the arm at 7, and wrist at 8, round the breast at 9, under the coat, and waist at 2, under the coat.

VESTS.

From 1 over the shoulder to vest length in front, with Breast and Waist measure as instanced in coat measurement.

TROUSERS

Full length from top at the hip to H; from A to B for length between the legs; round the waist, and round the bottom at B, as desired, giving 2 inches will ensure a correct fit.

READY-MADE.	£ s. d.	MADE TO MEASURE.	£ s. d.
Tweed Taglionas	from 0 3 6	Tweed coats, trimmed with silk, made in the newest shapes, and in the first style of fashion	from 1 5 0
Ditto, superior quality, with silk collars, cuffs, and facings	0 16 0	Cashmere, the Saxony, and other light summer materials, made in the shapes, handsomely trimmed....	1 0 0
Cashmere coats in a variety of shapes, handsomely trimmed....	1 0 0	A superior stock of Holland and jean blouses	from 0 3 6
Spleudid summer vests	from 0 3 6	Spleudid summer vests	from 0 9 8
An endless variety of cashmere and Persian vests, of all sizes, at	to 0 8 6	Summer trousers, in great variety of materials	0 16 0
Washing satin vests, warranted	0 6 0	Single milled Victoria, and plain doe trousers	0 17 6
Cloth trousers.....	from 0 9 0	Best quality West of England.....	1 2 0
Single milled does.....	from 0 11 6	Dress coats	from 1 15 0
Dress ditto	from 1 0 0	Best manufactured.....	2 15 0
Frock ditto	1 4 0	Mourning to any extent can be had at the most moderate charges, at the following prices —
		Men's suits, dress coat, vest, and trousers	from 1 16 0
		Boy's ditto, jacket, vest, and trousers	from 0 15 0

IMPORTANT.—Any article purchased, or ordered, if not approved of, exchanged, or the money returned.
Observe. E. MOSES and SON, Tailors, Wholesale and Retail Woollen Drapers, Outfitters and General Warehousemen, 154 Minories, and 86, Aldgate, City, opposite the church.
CAUTION.—E. Moses and Son are obliged to guard the Public against imposition, having earned that the untradesman-like falsehood of being connected with them, or of the same concern, has been resorted to in many instances, and for obvious reasons. They have no connexion whatever with any other Establishment; and those who desire genuine Cheap Clothing, should call or send to 154, Minories, or 86, Aldgate, opposite the church, to prevent disappointment, &c.
N.B. No Business transacted at this Establishment from Friday at sunset until sunset on Saturday, when Business is resumed until twelve o'clock.

YACHT ACCIDENT ON DERWENT WATER.

MELANCHOLY YACHT ACCIDENT ON DERWENT WATER.

Our sketch represents a melancholy event which occurred on the afternoon of last Sunday, on Derwent Water, by which Mr. Dixon and two young men, natives of Keswick, were drowned. The boat was over-masted and carried too much sail for her length of keel. Her owner, Mr. Dixon, had been frequently warned by his friends of the danger he incurred, and their predictions have been but too soon verified. Although the day was fine, there was a strong wind on the lake; and, whilst the boat was going under a press of sail, she buried her bows, and being only partially decked, instantly filled, and went down. Unfortunately, there was no boat on the lake within sight. The accident was, however, seen by Mr. Peters, of Barrow, who immediately put off with his servants, and succeeded in rescuing a Mr. Airy, who was on board at the time of the accident, and who had kept himself afloat by means of a life-preserver. It is supposed that Mr. Dixon would have been saved, had his dog not clung to his shoulders; as, notwithstanding this impediment, he kept above water for twenty minutes, and sank, at last, when assistance was within a few yards of him. The two young men were never seen after the boat went down. One of them, as well as Mr. Dixon, has left a wife and young family to mourn his loss.

SOUTH LANCASHIRE ELECTION.

The nomination of the candidates for this division took place at Newton-in-the-Willows, on Friday morning, on a temporary hustings, as shown in our accompanying sketch, erected in front of the church, and facing the Horse and Jockey Inn. There were present about 4000 persons. The partisans of the rival candidates assembled in great numbers, and paraded the town, carrying flags, banners, &c. Not the slightest disturbance took place. The High Sheriff having opened the proceedings, Robert Gardner, Esq., of Manchester, came forward and proposed W. Brown, Esq., on the Free-trade interest, as a candidate. Joseph C. Ewart, Esq., of Liverpool, seconded the nomination. Colonel Tempest then proposed Mr. Entwistle, on the Conservative interest, which was seconded by Sir Thomas Brancker, of Liverpool. The candidates having severally addressed the electors, the High Sheriff put the question, and called for a show of hands, when he declared it to be in favour of Mr. Entwistle. A poll was then demanded, and the court was adjourned till Monday, at ten o'clock. The meeting then dispersed.

The polling commenced at the undermentioned places on Monday morning, and finally closed on Tuesday evening. The following are the numbers given by both parties, Mr. Entwistle's committee claiming a majority of 490, and Mr. Brown's conceding 573:—

FINAL CLOSE OF THE POLL.

	Entwistle.	Brown.
Newton	912	504
Ashton-under-Line	926	446
Bolton	792	457
Bury	489	522
Manchester	1574	1857
Oldham	256	392
Rochdale	567	634
Liverpool	1259	1444
Ormskirk	631	426
Wigan	496	262
	7524	6934

STATEMENT BY MR. BROWN'S COMMITTEE.

For Mr. Brown	6974
For Mr. Entwistle	7547
Majority for Mr. Entwistle	573

FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

DESCRIPTION OF THE FIGURES.

Figure the First.—A Hair Coiffure, ornamented with a wreath of green leaves, having three roses at each end. A Ball Dress of Tarlatane (a transparent muslin), trimmed with flutings of the same material.

Figure the Second.—A Straw Hat, trimmed with tulle. A Promenade Dress of Cameleon Silk (a shot silk of three colours), trimmed with black lace.

Right-hand Bust—A Satin Hat, trimmed with lace and ribbons.

Left-hand Bust—A Coiffure, composed of a lace scarf.

The last reception at the Tuileries produced a great variety of elegant toilettes. The dresses were mostly either of white tulle, tarlatane, organdy, or India muslin. Double skirts are still in favour. The most simple toilettes were, as usual at this season of the year, most admired. Dresses of barège or muslin have almost always deep volans, with wide scolloped borders. Low corsages, intended to be worn with canezous, have three plaits on each side, fastened to a small band at the shoulders. Tight, low, pointed corsages, for full toilette, are accompanied by a berthe of Vandyke lace, and short sleeves: these berthes are always in vogue, as they give a graceful breadth to the shoulders.

Foreigners are now flocking to Paris, with the object of seeing the exposition of novel works of industry and art. This periodical exhibition attracts all the fashion and elegance of Paris; it is there we have seen the greatest variety of novel promenade costumes.

The most esteemed hats for negligé are composed of taffeta and entre-deux (insertions) of open straw, also those with silk crowns and straw fronts.

Hats are now both graceful and convenient, the brims being in excellent proportion, neither ridiculously large nor ridiculously small. Pink crape hats are ornamented with a row of lace, placed flat on the brim; another row is also placed flat round the crown, and turned gracefully round two small roses on the left; the inside of the brims is ornamented with ribbons.

Cameleon (changeable) silk is still the most fashionable material for promenade dresses.

Morning dresses have high corsages, with the skirts either open in front, or otherwise.

The corsages have small lappels, which fall back on the chest, allowing the chemisette to be seen. Dresses are mostly trimmed with ruches of the same material, or with ribbons; chequered gros-de-Naples and foulard are frequently adopted for promenade dresses.

SOUTH LANCASHIRE ELECTION.—THE HUSTINGS AT NEWTON-IN-THE-WILLOWS

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 110, Vol. IV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1844. [Sixpence.

THE ROYAL GUESTS.

SSUREDLY the reign of Victoria will be known as the reign of royal visits; it seems to have established the era of regal and imperial sociality; the kings and potentates of the earth no longer keep themselves apart in a kind of eastern seclusion, but mix with each other with a degree of freedom that is creditable to themselves, and if there is sincerity in the reciprocity of compliments, the results may prove advantageous to the people. The intercourse between the crowned heads of the continent has long been more frequent and more free than between them and the monarchs of England. We divided off from the fraternity of kings at the close of the dynasty of the Stuarts. Charles I. visited Spain and France, when a prince, but not as sovereign. His son saw more of the courts of Europe than he could have wished—as an exile. James II. died the guest of the King of France, whose principles of government he imitated too closely for the love of his people, and too unsuccessfully for the safety of his crown. With the accession of the line of Hanover, our communication with the courts of Europe, through our sovereigns, grew more restricted; the Electors of Hanover do not seem to have sought other than diplomatic connections with the greater powers, and soon after their accession came wars which effectually prevented any amicable connections at all. But with the commencement of the French revolution, the severance became total and complete. A quarter of a century of war, during which we by turns fought for all and against all, estranged England from the continent altogether. France had no King; the Directory and the Convention being corporate bodies, could not be on visiting terms, and the Emperor hated England and the English, and above all detested George III., Mr. Pitt, and the Prince Regent; he threatened one visit, indeed, on which he was to have been accompanied by an army—a suite it would have been inconvenient to accommodate—but was induced to think better of it, and paid the stupendous compliment to Spain and Russia instead, with disastrous consequences to all parties. As long as he was moving about the world, too, the potentates of the earth had enough to do to keep their seats on the thrones that were shaken beneath them, and in many cases altogether overthrown.

But the fall of Napoleon emancipated princes as well as people; and the first phenomenon of the peace was the visit of the Allied Sovereigns to England. Then came the Emperor Alexander of Russia—the first Autocrat who had trod the soil of Britain since that wonderful man who built up the gigantic power, of which Alexander was, and Nicholas is, the possessor. With him came the King of Prussia; even as at present the King of Saxony is the joint guest of our Queen, along with "the Imperial Master of the fur-clad Russ." The period was a brilliant one, but the crisis of a kind that cannot, we hope, again occur in European History.

In the period that followed, England relapsed into its old insular unsociality; we again became the toto divisos orbe Britannos; and it was not till our present gracious Queen broke through the cold formalities of regal etiquette, and paid a neighbourly visit to Louis Philippe, at Eu, that the monarchs of the two countries seemed to have caught anything of that cordial spirit which, thanks to the long peace and greater communication, has long prevailed between the people, notwithstanding the belligerent articles in the French press and our own.

But, owing to the good example set by her Majesty, we hope a new era is opening for us; that the tendency of civilisation to amalmagate all people together, has reached those who have too often used their power and position for fomenting popular and national hatreds. This is, unhappily, easy to be done, and if monarchs will more cordially agree, there may be a hope that nations will less frequently quarrel. Personal intercourse may also save some misunderstandings that are likely to arise when affairs are managed by deputy. No business is so well done as that we do ourselves.

All this applies generally to the better feeling that the powers of Europe seem inclined to cultivate with each other. As for the particular occasion which has called forth our remarks, there is much to interest us in that also. The Emperor of Russia stands alone among monarchs; he is absolute power personified; the empires of Persia and Turkey having gone to decay, he affords us the only instance of a despotism, checked by no institutions whatever; he is undisputed lord of the lives and properties of millions, and his richest noble is no more his own master than that noble's meanest serf. Past history has not known such a power as that of Russia, since the days of the greatest of the Roman Emperors; we do not mean for wealth, or extent, or numbers, but for the complete concentration of all human authority in one person, who is to the millions beneath him a sort of fate or destiny. The possessor of that absolute power is now in the midst of a representative system, in which the monarch has the most limited authority, and the people the most uncontrolled power of self-government of any other nation of the earth, with one exception. The Emperor, we believe, thinks the representative system the worst in the world; yet he will see great freedom, accompanied with the most perfect order, and both joined to wealth and activity, of which Russia certainly gives no example. He is also in the midst of the metropolis that has given an asylum to the fugitives from the nation he has blotted from the map of Europe—Poland; and it would be useless to disguise what is the fact, that among the bulk of the English people the political conduct of the Emperor of Russia is thoroughly detested. This has caused some anxiety as to the manner in which he would be received in public; he arrives at the moment the grand annual fête is given for the benefit of the Polish refugees, and the lady patronesses have refused, on that account, to postpone it—for lady patronesses are full as despotic as emperors. Wherever he has appeared he has been quietly and decorously received; but at Ascot the feeling was somewhat stimulated by his magnificent gift to the Racing Fund, and there it approached cordiality. There was more anxiety as to another point—whether the Poles themselves would make any demonstration of feeling on the occasion. But the letter addressed to Lord Dudley Stuart by the Marquis of Northampton, points out the proper course, and the one we are convinced they will adopt: "The exalted personage who has just reached our shores, is as much the guest of this country as they are, and that we are not only bound to be hospitable to him ourselves, but also to take care that he receives no incivility from others while residing in the dominions of our Sovereign. We are bound to resent any affront to him as if it was committed against ourselves. The Poles would show a very ill sense of any obligation that they may owe to Great Britain were they in any way to treat with contumely one who is now trusting himself to British courtesy and British honour. Moreover, they should remember that any improper conduct on their part would deeply injure them in the opinion of their friends in England and elsewhere, and might prove, at some future time, most prejudicial to their country."

HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY, THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA DRAWN BY BAUGNIET.

It is from no disrespect to the King of Saxony that the Emperor of Russia will occupy the greater share of public attention; he is the greatest actor on the stage, and draws all eyes; but though the Emperor may be noticed the more, the King shall not be welcomed the less. We repeat our conviction that a less restrained intercourse between those in whose hands Providence has placed so much of the destinies of nations, must tend to the preservation of peace; and we are therefore glad that the Emperor is among us. His personal appearance has been much spoken of, and we therefore give his portrait, adding to it one of the best of the many descriptions of him—not the less interesting that the touches are from a lady's pen—that of the lively authoress of "Letters from the Baltic." She saw him at a Masquerade:

The Heritier, the Grand Duke Michael, the Duke de Leuchtenberg, were all seen passing in turn—each led about by a whispering mask—"Mais oh est donc l'Empereur?" "Il n'y est pas encore," was the answer; but scarce was this uttered when a towering shape moved, the crowd fell back, and enframed in a vacant space stood a figure to which there is no second in Russia, if in the world itself—a figure of the grandest beauty, expression, dimension, and carriage, uniting all the majesties and graces of the Heathen gods—the little god of love alone perhaps excepted—on its ample and symmetrical proportions. Had this nobility of person belonged to a common Mosquit instead of to the Autocrat of all the Russias, the admiration could not have been less, nor scarcely the feeling of moral awe. It was not the monarch who was so magnificent a man, but the man who was so truly imperial. The person of the Emperor is that of a colossal man, in the full prime of life and health, forty-two years of age, about six feet two inches high, and well filled out, without any approach to corpulency—the head magnificently carried, a splendid breadth of shoulder and chest, great length and symmetry of limb, with finely-formed hands and feet. His face is strictly Grecian—forehead and nose in one grand line; the eyes finely inlaid, large, open, and blue, with a calmness, a coldness, a freezing dignity, which can equally quell an insurrection, daunt an assassin, or paralyse a petitioner; the mouth regular, teeth fine, chin prominent, with dark moustache and small whisker; but not a sympathy on his face! His mouth sometimes smiled, his eyes never. There was that in his look which no monarch's subject could meet. His eye seeks every one's gaze, but none can confront his.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

From our own Correspondent.

PARIS, June 4.

SPAIN.

The two Queens and suite reached Barcelona on the 1st., and were well received. The report of a projected marriage between Isabella and Count Trapani was again renewed. Louis Philippe appeared to be the great promoter of this union, in the hope of afterwards uniting the Duke d' Aumale to the sister of the Queen. Prince Metternich decidedly objects to either of the marriages, and in all probability neither of them will take place. I am enabled to contradict the report of the intended abdication of Don Carlos; this news is periodically circulated by a band of political intriguers, in the hope of bringing about a marriage between Isabella and the Count de Montemolin, eldest son of Don Carlos. The Government has decided on not disposing of the Tobacco Monopoly. The Royal Tobacco Manufactory at Alcant has been entirely destroyed by fire, when the flames were first discovered, there were 2,500 females at work in the manufactory, but fortunately they all succeeded in making their escape uninjured. The Basque provinces, according to accounts received from Bayonne, were in a very agitated state; several guerilla bands had been organised, and unless the Fueros were granted, it was generally feared the whole district north of the Ebro would rise against the Government.

ITALY.

The Government of Naples has taken severe measures for destroying, effectually, that contraband trade which does so much injury to the national industry. Many persons, among whom are fourteen ecclesiastics, have been condemned to pay heavy penalties, for having defrauded the Customs. They have been deprived of the privilege of having a bonding warehouse at the Custom House. The Nocera railroad was also discovered, from which it appears that at Pompeii, The Count de Lebzeltern has quitted the Court of Naples. Prince Schwartzenburg has presented his letters of credence as Ambassador from the Court of Austria.

GERMANY.

On the 26th of May, after divine service, the King of Prussia received the important intelligence that the Emperor of Russia was coming. His Majesty arrived some time after wards, accompanied by Prince Albert, and proceeded at once to Sans Souci. The King went to meet the august traveller, and the two monarchs embraced each other in the middle of the road. The Emperor set out the next day for the Hague. He had made the journey from St. Petersburgh to Berlin (by Konnigsburg) in four days and ten hours. The Emperor will return to the Continent on the 10th, and will proceed on his way home by the Rhine, as far as Mentz, in a steamer engaged for the purpose at Rotterdam. On his return from England Nicholas intends visiting Vienna; on the 15th of July he will join the Empress at Sans Souci.

The Berlin Gazette contains a letter from St. Petersburg, stating that an order has been issued from the Minister of War, directing the police to prevent children from being dressed in military uniform, according to the whim of their parents, and to see that the inhabitants in general were properly dressed according to their stations and occupations in life. A decree had also been issued regulating marriages between Protestants and those of the Russia-Greek religion, which in future was to be cultivated according to the laws which, since 1812, had governed the Lutheran Evangelical Church; they are to be celebrated in the Greek Church and may receive the blessing in virtue of a special clause in favour of the Lutheran portion of the Empire; but the children can only be baptised and educated in the religion of the state. Noble ladies who marry commoners are not to be permitted to purchase lands with serfs upon it, or to purchase serfs without land.

A private letter from Posen says that the library of Count Titus Dzialynski, at Kornik, near Posen, possesses the autograph manuscript of a novel which Napoleon had commenced, under the title of "Clisson et Eugenie;" and adds that the authenticity of it has been proved by a committee, composed of M. Charles de Montholon, Baron Fain, and Baron Mounier.

FRANCE.

The sudden visit of the Emperor of Russia to England engrosses all the attention of not only our political quidnuncs, but the press in general. The Courrier Français believes that the Emperor's visit to other nations is not without object, and that he has visited England merely pour passer. The National puts itself into a great passion. "The Emperor Nicholas," says the Republican organ, "has played the Count of the Tuileries to a nicety. While Louis Philippe was gorging himself to pay a visit to Queen Victoria, behold! all of a sudden, the news is received that the Czar has arrived in Holland. From the Hague to London the rapid monarch has only made a stop, and at the present moment he, no doubt, is gathering the first flowers of that hospitality which M. Guizot was reserving for his own Sovereign." The Siècle says that the Czar can only have gone to England to obtain personally a solution of certain political questions, which it suits the English Cabinet to leave in a species of incertitude. The Constitutionnel says that the state of European Turkey—the condition of the Christians in the provinces bordering on the principalities under the protection of the Emperor—the movements of Russian troops to the south of the empire—and the need of coming to a direct understanding with the English Ministry on the part to be taken by Russia in the solution of the grave questions which may arise—are quite enough to impute a serious motive to the journey of Nicholas, however inoffensive it may be to our rulers. In every saloon, in every café, the visit of the Emperor is the general subject of conversation; the Prince de Joinville—Tahiti—everything is forgotten—and the Russian fever will last until some fresh event, be it ever so trifling, shall attract the attention of the frivolous population of the French capital.

The state of Algeria is causing great uneasiness to our Ministry. It is now ascertained officially that the Emperor of Morocco has joined Abd-el-Kader, and that the terrific war of the Holy War!! has been raised. Abd-el-Kader, now well provided with arms, ammunition, and men, is chiefly employed in organising a formidable army, and ere long will take the offensive against General Bugeaud. It will then be seen that most of the tribes who have shown allegiance to France, will return to the Emir. By some it is said that this open act of hostility by the Emperor of Morocco is owing to his belief that France is aiding the Spanish Government in its quarrel with the Emperor; by others, that the French, having encroached on his territory, refused to retire. I am firmly of opinion that neither one nor other of these reports is founded on truth; but that, from the very commencement of the invasion of Algiers, the Emperor of Morocco has been the mortal enemy of France, and has long been preparing for the present attack. What the result will be I know not; but I am inclined to think that even should France ultimately be victorious, it will require much money, thousands of men, and many years before the whole of Algeria becomes a French colony.

It is not true, as was generally reported, that his Majesty was robbed of his watch, on visiting, on Monday last, the National Exhibition.

The Princess Clementine of Orleans, and Prince Augustus of Saxe Coburg, intend passing a month at the Court of Leopold of Belgium before they proceed to Germany.

M. de Lesseps, the celebrated ex-French Barcelonan Consul, has been appointed Consul-General of France at Alexandria, replacing M. de Lavalette.

Several distinguished artists are employed at the Louvre in drawing designs for some large pieces of tapestry, which Louis Philippe has ordered for commemorating the foundation of the Museum of Versailles

On the 2nd, an interesting ceremony was performed in the church of Notre Dame des Victoires. A young Abyssinian slave, aged 17 years, purchased by a French merchant and brought to Paris, having been converted from the idolatry in which she had been educated, was received into the bosom of the Church, and received the Holy Sacrament.

The following anecdote of the late Mr. Jacques Laffite is worthy of record. Some time since a non-commissioned official who had been induced to enter a gaming-house, where he lost 5400 francs belonging to his company, was about to commit suicide, when a friend advised him to appeal to the benevolence of M. Laffite for a loan. The two soldiers went to M. Laffite, who, when he had heard the account, and convinced himself of the deep contrition of the man, asked him what security he could offer. The man said he had nothing in the world to offer as security, and no other means of paying the amount than the pension attached to the Cross of the Legion of Honour which he wore. M. Laffite consented. A few months afterwards, when the pension was paid, the debtor called on his benefactor with 300 francs. M. Laffite said he was glad to find he had had to do with an honest man, but that the amount was too small to enter on the book, and that he must take it back and bring the rest next 500 francs. A year afterwards, the soldier, who had now been promoted to the rank of a sub-lieutenant, called with the 500 francs. "This is as it ought to be," observed M. Laffite, "you are an honest man—keep your money." Then shaking him by the hand, he added, "Let what you have suffered about this affair, be a lesson to you for the rest of your life."

On Friday last three Englishmen were arrested at Rouen, detected in coining and offering one-franc pieces. They made a desperate resistance before they could be secured.

At the Versailles races on the 2d (the post day), the plate of 2000 francs given by the Minister of Commerce for horses and mares of three years old and upwards, whose pedigree is traced in the French stud-book, was cleverly won by Grosvenor, the property of Baron A. de Rothschild. The Versailles Plate of 1200 francs, for thoroughbred horses and mares, was won by the Duke de Nemours, Logomachie. The Orleans Plate of 1600 francs, given by the Count de Paris for beaten horses which have never won a plate, sweepstake, or handicap, was won by M. Gouin's Emilie. The handicap of 1600 francs given by the Jockey Club, for thoroughbred horses and mares of three-years old and upwards, foaled in France, was, after a hard struggle, won by Prospero, the property of Baron A. de Rothschild.

Owing to the great influx of strangers and the uncomfortable weather, our theatres are each night overflowing. During the month of May the receipts of the different places of amusement were unusually great. The Grand Opéra made 140,000 francs by seventeen representations, and the Variétés 81,174 francs. "Gulistan" is in rehearsal, and will shortly be brought out. Taglioni continues the idol of the day. The following are the ballets in which she will appear:—"La Sylphide," "Le Dieu et la Bayadère," and "La Fille du Danube." Rossini is expected in Paris at the latter end of August. The health of Liszt is completely re-established. Mdlle. Brambilla and M. Prudent intend giving concerts at Tours, Angoulême, and Nantes.

Mdlle. Fanny Goldberg, one of the best prima donnas of Italy, has been married to Signor Charini, and retires from the stage. This makes the third German cantatrice who has formed a rich marriage—Madame Sontag Countess Rosse, Madame Ungher-Sabatier, and Madame Goldberg-Charini.

The season of Wesbaden has opened most splendidly; already have been played "Fra Diavolo," "The Barber of Seville," and other popular operas, and that to full houses.

Mdlle. Lagrange has made a most successful début at Leghorn. It is said that this gifted cantatrice possesses the most powerful voice that has ever been heard in Italy.

WEST INDIES.

The Teviot, Royal Mail Company's steam-ship, Captain William Allan, arrived at Southampton on Wednesday morning, at half-past four, from the West Indies, bringing all the mails, which were despatched by the seven o'clock train. The Teviot reports that Kingston still in a very unsettled state at Hayti.

In Mexico, the castle of St. Juan de Almaia being strongly fortified with all possible dispatch; otherwise, matters are generally very quiet. Santa Anna has returned to allow all those ships that had left England previously to the passing of his new Tariff, to discharge their cargoes under the old duties.

At the Havannah, the authorities have expelled the whole of the free blacks. A large party of them took shelter on board the Teviot, and were brought on by Captain Allan to Nassau. Others have proceeded to Jamaica and Mexico. Many executions are daily taking place at Matanzas and Havannah of those who concerned in the late insurrection.

There is a great want of rain in the islands of Cuba, Bermuda, and the Bahamas. The latter are suffering dreadfully from a very long-continued drought, and the prisoners, Messrs. Hinde, Hume, Mr. Barry, Mr. Liddell, Mr. Dunsmuir, Lord Howick, Mr. Alderman Humphery, Mr. Hutt, and Mr. Wallace took part, the house divided—

For the motion	..	..	..	..	..	74
Against it	..	..	..	..	..	110
Majority	..	..	..	..	..	— 36

Mr. LYALL moved for the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the state and condition of the commercial marine of this country, and to take into consideration and report on the best mode of encouraging and extending the employment of British shipping. Mr. HUTT reluctantly assented to the motion, on the distinct understanding that it should not, in the slightest degree, be taken as implying any intention on the part of the Government to disturb our reciprocity treaties with other states, which they were agreed to.

Mr. HUME drew attention to the case of Alfred Moore, a hawker, who was summarily convicted and committed at Shrewsbury, in September last, and which involved, as he considered, a great principle. The person—Mr. DISRAELI and that the hawker turned out to be a begging letter petitioner, and was found with forged signatures in his possession, and had been convicted after patient investigation. The sentence was a severe one, and the allegations not to be matched even in the greenest days of Mr. Hume's simplicity, when he called Mr. Canning the greatest alligator of the house.—Mr. HUME was surprised at the bold assertion that he had never brought a case before the house without apprising the individuals concerned; he had done so in the present case, and had not been satisfied with the explanations of the Mayor of Shrewsbury.—Sir JAMES GRAHAM had never seen the case, and was satisfied that in convicting the hawker as a rogue and a vagabond, for obtaining money under false pretences, the magistrates of Shrewsbury had acted rightly.—After some further discussion the matter dropped.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER stated, in reply to observations from Mr. P. M. Stewart, that he should propose to take the next discussion on the sugar duties on the first convenient occasion after the bank Bill to be postponed to the Thursday following that day.—The report was then brought up—the resolutions contained therein agreed to, and leave given to bring in a bill founded on them.

The orders of the day were then disposed of, and the house adjourned at a quarter before one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—WEDNESDAY

The House of Lords as usual did not sit.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

After the presentation of a great number of petitions with regard to the Dissenters' Chapels Bill,

Lord WORSLEY moved the committal, pro forma, of the Commons' Inclosure Bill, for the purpose of making a verbal amendment in it, in accordance with the views of the Government, who had at last turned their attention to the subject.—Colonel SIBTHORP, although he intended to take the sense of the House on 46 clauses of the bill, nevertheless would not oppose the committal pro formâ, in the hope that some of these clauses would be either amended or struck out.—After a short discussion the House went into committee, pro forma, on the Bill, and the amendments were introduced. It was ordered to be recommitted on the 19th instant.

The County Coroners Bill passed through committee.

The House adjourned at seven o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

Their Lordships assembled at a quarter before four o'clock.

The House of Commons having been summoned to the bar of their Lordships' House, the Royal Assent was given by Commission, in the usual form, to the undermentioned Bills:—The Customs Duties Bill, the Stamp Duties Bill, the Edinburgh Boroughs Bill, the West Indian Colonies Bill, the Lancaster and Carlisle Railway Bill, the North Union Railway Bill, the Carlisle and Maryport Railway Bill, the Eastern Counties Railway Bill, the Salford Improvement Bill, the Leeds Gas Bill, the Globe Insurance Company Bill, and two Inclosure Bills. The Commissioners were the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and the Earl of Dalhousie.

The Commons having withdrawn, their Lordships adjourned during pleasure.

Their Lordships resumed at five o'clock.

The Assaults (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee.

The Earl of Mansfield presented a petition against Sir Thomas Wilson's Estate Bill.—The Earl of Egmont moved the second reading of this Bill, and in doing so he denied that it was intended to apply the powers of this Bill, should it be passed, for the purpose of inclosing Hampstead-heath.—Lord DENMAN felt it his duty to oppose this Bill, for he was at a loss to know what grievance there was of which Sir Thomas Wilson could complain, and therefore there was no necessity for this Bill. (Hear, hear.) The will under which Sir Thomas Wilson held his property, provided that Hampstead-heath should not be leased for more than twenty-one years. He had been said that this Bill was not for the purpose of inclosing Hampstead-heath. It was true that it was not intended to cut up the heath into small portions, as was the case of an inclosed common; but it was meant to give by the Bill power to certain parties to build over 400 acres of land, which now made the heath a healthy and happy place, and the resort of thousands on every bhath-day in the summer-time; and this, he thought, ought to be more gratifying to the proprietor than any trifling increase in the value of that property. The holders of copyhold property near to the heath were greatly annoyed at the prospect of having 400 acres of the heath built upon. It had been

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

Their lordships met at five o'clock.

After the presentation of a number of petitions, Lord KINNAIRD wished to ask the noble duke on the cross bench (the Duke of Richmond) whether, now that he had got the appointment which he had so long sought, and considering a late appointment which had been made in the Government, he intended to make any motion on the subject of the duties on wool? He wished also to move for a return of the imports of salmon since the alteration in the duty. He moved for the return to show that the reduction which had taken place in the produce of the noble duke's salmon-fisheries in Scotland was not owing to the importation which had taken place under the new tariff.—The Duke of RICHMOND expressed his great surprise at the course which the noble lord had taken. He rose to put a question, and, in doing so, he indulged in insinuations against him (the Duke of Richmond). If the noble lord had any complaint against him, let him make it like a man. It was contrary to the practice of that house, and contrary to the practice of society in which gentlemen were supposed to move, to make such unfounded insinuations as the noble lord had done. What did the noble lord mean by alluding to a recent appointment, if he did not allude to the appointment of one of his (the Duke of Richmond's) brothers to the office of a Lord of the Treasury? Did the noble lord mean to say because that appointment had been made, he (the Duke of Richmond) was thereby "gagged?" (Hear, hear.) He had known nothing of the appointment of his brother until after it had taken place. His brother certainly came to him and informed him that the appointment had been offered to him, and wished to have his advice upon it. His answer was, "I think you had better remain in the command of your regiment; but you are the best judge. I would not take office under the government, because I cannot agree with all their measures." His brother, however, accepted the office. He (the Duke of Richmond) would remind their lordships that he had given the noble lord any explanation he required on the subject with his colleagues. He would say nothing now about the coal duties, as he intended to speak upon the subject on the third reading of the Coal Duties Bill.—Lord KINNAIRD disclaimed any intention of insinuating that the noble duke would be "gagged" by the appointment of his brother.—After a few words from the Duke of RICHMOND, the subject dropped.

Lord WHARNCLIFFE moved the third reading of the Factories Bill, which, after some discussion, was read a third time and passed.

On the motion of Lord DENMAN, the Judges' report on "Sir T. Wilson's Estate Bill" (Hampstead-heath inclosure) was ordered to be printed.

The Earl of STRADBROKE moved the third reading of the Night-poaching Prevention Bill, with amendments.—The Earl of RADNOR opposed the motion. —After some further discussion, the amendments and the bill were agreed to.

Lord DALHOUSIE having moved the third reading of the Customs Duties Bill, the Duke of RICHMOND objected to the abolition of the duty on wool, but, as the second reading had not been opposed, he would not press his opposition in what might seem to be a factious opposition.—Lord WHARNCLIFFE and he was convinced that the abolition of the duty on foreign wool would tend materially to promote the interests of the wool-growers in this country.—The bill was eventually read a third time and passed; and their lordships adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at a few minutes to four.

Mr. Entwisle was introduced by Mr. Backburn and Mr. W. Patten, and took the oaths and his seat for South Lancashire.

After the presentation of a great number of petitions against the Dissenters' Chapels Bill, Mr. T. DUNCOMBE gave notice that on the first day on which the order of the day for going into Committee of Ways and Means, or Committee of Supply, should be read, he should move for an address to her Majesty, praying that the further execution of the sentence passed on Mr. O'Connell and others be suspended till the writ of error should be decided.

Sir R. PEEL said that the Bank Charter Bill would be brought on on Monday next.

The house went into Committee of Ways and Means to consider the sugar duties. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER submitted the two following resolutions to the Committee:—

1. That, towards raising the supply granted to her Majesty, the several duties now payable on sugar be further continued for a time to be limited, save and except that from and after the 30th day of November next there shall be charged on brown, Muscovado, or clayed sugar, certified to be the growth of China, Java, or Manilla, or of any other foreign country, the sum of 5*l.* which her Majesty in Council shall have declared to be allowable, as not being the produce of slave labour, the hundred weight, 5*l.* 14*s.*, together with an additional duty of 5*l.* per centum on the afore-mentioned rate.

2. That, from and after the 30th day of November next, her Majesty be authorised, by order in council, to give effect to the provisions of any treaty now in force, which binds her Majesty to admit sugar, the produce of a foreign country, at the same duties as are imposed on sugar the produce of the most favoured nation.

Lord J. RUSSELL moved, as an amendment, "the reduction to 26*s.* of the duty on all sugar from foreign countries." Mr. LABOUCHERE supported Lord J. Russell's amendment. Mr. P. M. STEWART contended that the Government was about to throw our colonists into a competition for which they had neither strength nor means. The West Indies were called an integra. part of the British Empire, yet, by this proposition, the produce was to be debarred from general use in this country. Mr. Hume, Mr. Baring, and Sir J. Hamner, subsequently addressed the committee, after which it divided—

For the resolutions	..	..	..	..	..	197
For the amendment	..	..	..	..	..	138
Majority	..	..	..	..	..	—59

The resolutions were agreed to.

Mr. MILES postponed his motion, for the reduction to 20*s.* per cwt. on our colonial sugar, until the house should be in committee upon the bill to be founded on these resolutions.

On the motion of Sir J. GRAHAM the committee on union workhouses in Ireland was nominated.

Mr. S. O'BRIEN obtained leave to bring in a bill for appointing chaplains to lunatic asylums, county infirmaries, and fever hospitals, in Ireland.

In reply to Lord J. Russell, Sir H. PARNELL stated that he did not think the landlord and tenant commission of Ireland could make any report to Parliament this session.

The house adjourned at Twelve o'Clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The Stamp Duties (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Lord CHANCELLOR stated that the cause of delay in proceeding with the Bill, which he had introduced early in the session, to Facilitate the Transfer of Freehold Property, was, that he had forwarded copies of it to the most eminent conveyancers for their opinions, all of whom had not as yet given them—probably because no fees had been sent along with the bills.—Lord CAMPBELL said that the opinion of a lawyer without a fee, was worth nothing.

Their lordships then adjourned to Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. -TUESDAY.

A new writ was ordered for Kinnaird-let in the room of the Hon. Arthur Cole, who has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds.

In reply to a question put by Mr. T. DUNCOMBE, Sir J. GRAHAM stated that, having received information from the Governor of Guernsey, that considerable excitement, arising from local differences, existed in that island, the Government had sent over a temporary reinforcement of troops. But these differences were now under judicial investigation, and the Government placed the most implicit reliance on the loyalty of the people of Guernsey.

On the motion of Mr. T. DUNCOMBE, a copy of the judgment and commitment in the case of O'Connell and others was ordered.

Lord J. RUSSELL postponed for a fortnight his motion for a copy of despatches from the Earl of Aberdeen to the Earl of Westmoreland, with respect to commercial interests between this country and Prussia, with any answer to such despatch from the Court of Prussia. The noble lord did so on the statement made by Mr. Gladstone that, subsequent to the despatch dated the 19th of March, received from Baron Bulow, communications had been received which were conceived in a different spirit, and which tended to different results; and that the correspondence was still going on.

Lord HARRY VANE moved that the house should resolve itself into a committee to take into consideration so much of the act of 5th and 6th Victoria, c. 47, as relates to the export duty on coal, with the view of its immediate repeal. The noble lord urged that this duty involved no great question of revenue; that it was to all intents and purposes a new impediment to the employment of labour and capital than the old duty, and that it inflicted severe loss to mining labour, and exercised most injurious influences on the shipping interest.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER was convinced that the report made in coal, instead of having diminished since the alteration of the duties, had in fact increased. As to the alleged depression of the coal shipping interest, the right hon. gentleman answered that by the fact that the tonnage had increased more than one, and the allegations not to be matched even in the greenest days of Mr. Hume's simplicity, when he called Mr. Canning the greatest alligator of the house.—Mr. HUME was surprised at the bold assertion that he had never brought a case before the house without apprising the individuals concerned; he had done so in the present case, and had not been satisfied with the explanations of the Mayor of Shrewsbury.—Sir JAMES GRAHAM had never seen the case, and was satisfied that in convicting the hawker as a rogue and a vagabond, for obtaining money under false pretences, the magistrates of Shrewsbury had acted rightly.—After some further discussion the matter dropped.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER stated, in reply to observations from Mr. P. M. Stewart, that he should propose to take the next discussion on the sugar duties on the first convenient occasion after the bank Bill to be postponed to the Thursday following that day.—The report was then brought up—the resolutions contained therein agreed to, and leave given to bring in a bill founded on them.

The orders of the day were then disposed of, and the house adjourned at a quarter before one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—WEDNESDAY

The House of Lords as usual did not sit.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

After the presentation of a great number of petitions with regard to the Dissenters' Chapels Bill,

Lord WORSLEY moved the committal, pro forma, of the Commons' Inclosure Bill, for the purpose of making a verbal amendment in it, in accordance with the views of the Government, who had at last turned their attention to the subject.—Colonel SIBTHORP, although he intended to take the sense of the House on 46 clauses of the bill, nevertheless would not oppose the committal pro formâ, in the hope that some of these clauses would be either amended or struck out.—After a short discussion the House went into committee, pro forma, on the Bill, and the amendments were introduced. It was ordered to be recommitted on the 19th instant.

The County Coroners Bill passed through committee.

The House adjourned at seven o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

Their Lordships assembled at a quarter before four o'clock.

The House of Commons having been summoned to the bar of their Lordships' House, the Royal Assent was given by Commission, in the usual form, to the undermentioned Bills:—The Customs Duties Bill, the Stamp Duties Bill, the Edinburgh Boroughs Bill, the West Indian Colonies Bill, the Lancaster and Carlisle Railway Bill, the North Union Railway Bill, the Carlisle and Maryport Railway Bill, the Eastern Counties Railway Bill, the Salford Improvement Bill, the Leeds Gas Bill, the Globe Insurance Company Bill, and two Inclosure Bills. The Commissioners were the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and the Earl of Dalhousie.

The Commons having withdrawn, their Lordships adjourned during pleasure.

Their Lordships resumed at five o'clock.

The Assaults (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee.

The Earl of Mansfield presented a petition against Sir Thomas Wilson's Estate Bill.—The Earl of Egmont moved the second reading of this Bill, and in doing so he denied that it was intended to apply the powers of this Bill, should it be passed, for the purpose of inclosing Hampstead-heath.—Lord DENMAN felt it his duty to oppose this Bill, for he was at a loss to know what grievance there was of which Sir Thomas Wilson could complain, and therefore there was no necessity for this Bill. (Hear, hear.) The will under which Sir Thomas Wilson held his property, provided that Hampstead-heath should not be leased for more than twenty-one years. He had been said that this Bill was not for the purpose of inclosing Hampstead-heath. It was true that it was not intended to cut up the heath into small portions, as was the case of an inclosed common; but it was meant to give by the Bill power to certain parties to build over 400 acres of land, which now made the heath a healthy and happy place, and the resort of thousands on every bhath-day in the summer-time; and this, he thought, ought to be more gratifying to the proprietor than any trifling increase in the value of that property. The holders of copyhold property near to the heath were greatly annoyed at the prospect of having 400 acres of the heath built upon. It had been said that the will of the late Sir Thomas M. Wilson was a very strange will, but he (Lord Denman) thought it was a very humane will, for he believed that Sir Thomas Wilson as much devised the enjoyment of Hampstead-heath to the public as he did any of his property to his son. Under these circumstances he should move that the bill be read a second time that day six months.—The Earl of COLCHESTER supported the bill.—Lord CAMPBELL thought the bill ought to be rejected. The Earl of WICKLOW said that within the last ten years thirty bills similar to this one had passed, and he would ask what objection there could be to this bill going before a Committee of their Lordships' House? He should support the second reading.—The Earl of MANSFIELD argued that if this bill were unsound in principle, there was no necessity for going into a Committee, and therefore he should oppose it in the present stage.—Lord COTTENHAM said this bill if passed would not interfere with Hampstead-heath at all.—(HEAR.) The bill contained nothing which in an ordinary case would prevent its passing, and therefore, if they refused to pass this bill, they would forfeit their character for doing equal justice to all.—The Earl of EGMONT replied. Their Lordships then divided

Contents	.. ..	20
Non-Contents	.. ..	31
Majority against the second reading	..	11

The bill is consequently lost.

The Lord CHANCELLOR then read a letter from Lord Ellenborough, stating that he had received the vote of thanks to the army in India, passed by the House of Lords, and expressing the gratification which such a testimonial of their services afforded the entire army. Their lordships then adjourned

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at the usual hour.

The Epsom and Croydon Railway Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Taff Vale Railway Bill was read a third time and passed.

An immense number of petitions were presented for and against the Dunsterr Chapels Bill, the second reading of which was afterwards moved by Sir W. FOLLETT, in a speech of two hours' duration.—Sir R. INGLIS opposed the bill, and moved that it be read that day six months. After a long discussion the house divided, when there appeared—

For the Bill	.. ..	307
Against it	.. ..	117
Majority	.. .. ..	190

The other orders of the day were then disposed of and the house adjourned.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

Their lordships assembled at five o'clock.

At twenty minutes past five o'clock, his Majesty the King of SAXONY entered the house, and took his seat opposite to the Bench of Bishops, and near to the Woolsack, a chair having been previously placed for his Majesty's accommodation. The house was at this time exceedingly crowded, both by peers and strangers. Several ladies were in the house. His Majesty the King of Saxony appeared to pay particular attention to the proceedings in the house, but we did not observe him converse with any one during the exception of exchanging a few words with the Marquis of Londonderry. Shortly after his Majesty entered the house,

The LORD CHANCELLOR said he wished to know if the noble lord near him (Lord Montesgle), who had a notice on the paper with respect to the corn-laws, would have any objection to postpone it to a future day, as it would be inconvenient to the Government, on this evening, to have it brought on.—Lord MONTEAGLE expressed his surprise at the request which had been made to him. He was perfectly ready either to bring on the motion or to postpone it. But either night for that might not be in a position to wish for its postponement, and much as the motion had already been repeatedly postponed; and those noble lords might complain that he had not acted with firmness and resolution, if he consented to postpone his motion. He thought there was that which the house ought to consult before private convenience, and that was the public interest.—The Duke of WELLINGTON was understood to say that, if he had had the opportunity, he would have informed the noble lord that it was the wish of her Majesty's Government that this motion should be postponed.—Lord MONTEAGLE said, that he would postpone the motion, provided it were understood that it should be brought forward on Monday next.—The Marquis of LANSDOWNE was understood to say that he hoped there would be no objection to the motion being brought on on Monday.—Lord BROUGHAM said he had come down to the house to attend to the motion of his noble friend, and he hoped that the postponement of that motion would not be made a precedent.—Lord CAMPBELL thought that all inconvenience might be saved by their lordships returning to the old system of meeting at eight o'clock in the morning.—(Hear, and a laugh.)—The Duke of WELLINGTON would have no objection to come to the house at eight o'clock in the morning if he thought that noble and learned lords—(A laugh.)—who had other business to attend to, and who were younger than he was, would find it very inconvenient to come down to the house at o'clock. (Hear, hear, and a laugh). He had no objection on Monday, or any other day, for the noble lord's motion. (Hear, hear).—Lord MONTEAGLE said that it would perhaps be as well to postpone his motion to THURSDAY next.

The Gold and Silver Wares Bill was read a third time and passed.

The house then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at four o'clock, and informed the house that he had received a letter from the Governor-General of India, acknowledging the thanks of the house, which were given on the 20th February last to the army in India.

The Ashton, Staley Bridge, and Liverpool Railway Bill; the Sheffield, Ashton-under-Lyne, and Manchester Railway Bill; the Edinburgh, Leith, and Granton Railway Bill, were severally read a third time and passed.

The house then went into committee on the Scotch Parishes Bill. During the proceedings, his Majesty the King of SAXONY entered the house. His Majesty occupied a seat of skilful hands could be made to resemble those of the original. The committee will very soon have an opportunity of seeing the specimens of the carving that have been delivered for exhibition in St. James'-street, and they will then be better able to judge.

A few more questions having been put with a view of proving the possibility of completing the internal fittings within a given time, by the employment of an increased number of hands upon the work, the committee proceeded to inquire whether the witness had any drawings ready to produce of the doors, or sections of the interior of the house he replied that he thought it was not necessary to bring any, as there was a model before their lordships. He would be able to shew the committee the sections of the interior when the drawings were completed, which he expected would be in about three weeks from that time; but if the committee was thinking of any alteration in the design of the house, it would be better to defer going on with the drawings.

"Are the committee to take the plan exactly what is intended" was the final question put, to which Mr. Barry replied, "As far as it goes they are. After Easter I shall be in a condition to lay before the committee, I hope, the whole of the drawings of the fittings of the house, but I cannot undertake to be responsible that they will be ready by that time. All I can say is, that no effort shall be wanting on my part in expediting them, and I am in great hopes that by the month of February they will be all ready; but they will take a considerable time to do."

We have now gone through the whole of the first day's proceedings in as succinct a style as was compatible with the varied details and interest of the subject. We, if space and circumstances permit, we may resume the consideration of the same, until we are enabled to place the entire in as brief but as intelligible a manner as possible, before our readers.

IRELAND.

MR. O CONNELL IN PRISON

On Saturday and Sunday a considerable number of the leading citizens of Dublin paid their respects to Mr. O'Connell, who enjoys most excellent health and spirits. From an early hour in the morning all the avenues leading to the prison were thronged. Many hundreds of persons, who could not get admittance, were congregated outside the prison, for the purpose of learning the state of Mr. O'Connell's health from those who were fortunate enough to gain an interview with the prisoners. Mr. Purdon, the Governor of the Richmond Bridewell, has returned and resumed his duties. Mr. Cooper, the Deputy-Governor, had been in the service of Sir Robert Peel, and was appointed by the right honourable baronet. A very numerous meeting of the Custom house Ward took place on Sunday in the Northumberland Building, at which Alderman M'Kenna presided. An address of condolence to Mr. O'Connell was agreed to, and resolutions were passed pledging the meeting to the active collection of the Repeal rent.

The prison is built of granite, and is castellated, raised on high ground at the southern side of the city, is, as regards the apartments available to the use of the patriots, airy and commodious; and they will have the peculiar advantage of exploding their walks through two handsome and extensive gardens, embraced by its walls

The Court of Queen's Bench has left it to the discretion of the Governor of the prison to allow the prisoners such indulgence in their exclusion which he may think fit. Mr Cooper, the Deputy-Governor, has let them his own apartments at two guineas a week, and removed his family from the prison; and has afforded them every possible facility and favour. They have a garden to walk in, and a comfortable apartment for meals, and as to visitors, they are permitted to see them at all hours. Under these circumstances the captives are really very little to be pitied, and if they should only forget that they "cannot get out," they might contrive to pass the time both profitably and agreeably

There was a meeting of the Board of Superintendence of City Prisons held on Saturday, when a long and lengthy discussion ensued respecting the treatment to be observed towards Mr. O'Connell and the other traversers, prisoners in the Richmond Penitentiary. An adjournment eventually took place till Monday, when the course of treatment intended to be pursued towards Mr. O'Connell and in the event of its being his intention to publish any letter or documents, bearing his signature, in the usual channels of information, it was the determination of the Board to see that the usual prison regulations be strictly enforced, that not the least exception should be made in his favour, and that if it was found necessary to do so, he should be deprived of the use of pen, ink, and paper.

The following vivid sketch of the state of affairs on Sunday, is from the Freeman's Journal:—

"We have no language in which to describe the scene of yesterday. Successive bodies of pilgrims wended their way to the cells of the captives. An unbroken line of carriages, cars, and vehicles of every description bore to the now celebrated prison of the Repealers thousands after thousands of their fellow citizens, anxious to sympathise with them—to congratulate them—to console them by this tribute of respectful regard, and to confirm them by the assurance that in their martyrdom there was hope, and for Ireland. Harold's-cross was the scene of a 'monster meeting.' It had many of the best characteristics of those assemblages, and, by a peculiar act of the wisdom of our rulers, those atrocities and illegalities which have marked the rule of England in this country for successive centuries, and which were referred to at the monster meetings as events of history, were repeated yesterday before our eyes. They tell us we must not repeat the story of Mullaghmast. We need not—we have the repeal prison.

"A more respectable assemblage of citizens we have never seen than that which collected on the South Circular-road yesterday of all ranks. Intelligent and patriotic, they presented to the mind of the Irishman the true basis on which to ground his conviction of the national regeneration. The perseverance they exhibited—the patience with which they waited—was characteristic of the people who saw their leader to his prison in solemn silence, and whose feelings found vent in a deep prayer for his safety, and deeper indignation against his persecutors. Only a few gentlemen were admitted at a time within the precincts of the prison and into the presence of the Liberator As each small body left, another was admitted, equally limited in numbers, and thus the succession was kept up. But the patience of the pilgrims was proof even against delay; and though each was eager to enter, yet no man who could claim that honour withdrew until he had paid his respects to the greatest man that ever served his country. The crowd of aristocratic visitors anxious for admittance at the prison gate was greater than any we have ever seen blocking the doors of any place of public interest on occasions of the highest-wrought expectation. We saw gentlemen of the highest responsibility content to take their places on the exterior of the crowd, and wait while numerous batches were admitted, until gradually they themselves approached the gate and obtained the coveted entrance."

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

On Monday another motion was made in Court by Mr. Whiteside on behalf o. the traversers in the State Trials, that the traversers should be at liberty to inspect the endorsement on the back of the indictment, and for a list of the witnesses names.

The Attorney-General and Solicitor-General opposed the motion, and a long and angry discussion ensued

Mr. Justice Burton—I cannot for the life of me, see why the application is refused. I have never known Counsel to be refused an inspection of the indictment after trial. I have myself, when Counsel, been permitted to inspect the record in open court. I recollect the cases of the King v. Cavendish, where I was directed by the Court to do so; I have never known of Counsel to be refused that permission.

The Solicitor-General said that the Crown had consented to all that was necessary to bring a writ of error coram nobis. The Attorney for the traversers had asked for a list of the witnesses, with a view to see if they had been properly sworn, and the Crown had consented to give a certificate of those who were sworn, and how, but the traversers wanted besides a copy of the endorsements on the indictment, and to that he submitted they had no right whatever.

Mr. Justice Burton.—The application seems to me not to sustain a writ of error, but to seek for grounds to found it on; but yet I cannot see what injury it could do to allow an inspection of the record in Court

The Solicitor-General said it was something in the nature of a bill of discovery that was prayed for; such an application was without precedent, and the prisoners had no right to have it granted.

Attorney-General.—I have no objection that the indictment be sent for, and let the Judges look at it, and anything they think proper to have granted, I will at once accede to.

Mr. Justice Perrin.—Calling upon the Judges to point out the grounds upon which error might be assigned would form a new precedent.

Chief Justice.—Granting the motion would be another new precedent.

The master indictment was then sent for and, after the Judges inspecting it, the Chief Justice and the application should be refused.

Mr. Justice Burton thought that the indictment ought to be handed to the traversers' counsel in open court.

Mr. Justice Crampton agreed with the Chief Justice.

Mr. Justice Perrin agreed with Judge Burton.

The Attorney-General then rose and, as two members of the Court were of opinion that the indictment ought to be submitted to the prisoners' counsel, he would not object to it.

Mr. Justice Crampton.—Calling upon the Judges to point out the grounds upon which error might be assigned would form a new precedent.

Chief Justice.—Granting the motion would be another new precedent.

The master indictment was then sent for and, after the Judges inspecting it, the Chief Justice and the application should be refused.

Mr. Justice Burton thought that the indictment ought to be handed to the traversers' counsel in open court.

Mr. Justice Crampton agreed with the Chief Justice.

Mr. Justice Perrin agreed with Judge Burton.

The Attorney-General then rose and, as two members of the Court were of opinion that the indictment ought to be submitted to the prisoners' counsel, he would not object to it.

Mr. Whiteside

CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.—NOS. XLIV.—XLV.

NEW CHURCHES AT BETHNAL GREEN.

The Letter lately addressed by the Lord Bishop of London to the clergy of his diocese, states that so evident was the want of churches in the Metropolis, that, a few years since, a fund, separate from "the Metropolis Churches Fund," was formed for the erection and endowment of ten additional churches, with parsonage-houses and schools, in the single parish of Bethnal-green, containing more than 70,000 inhabitants.

CHURCH OF ST. JAMES THE LESS, BETHNAL GREEN.

Two churches have just been completed by means of this fund. One, situated in Bethnal-green Road, opposite Hague-street, and dedicated to St. James the Less, is a neat structure of red brick, with stone finishings, from the designs of Mr. Blore. It is in the early English style, with lancet-headed windows, and a neat campanile. It will accommodate 2,500 persons, a large number of the seats being free and unappropriated. Sunday and infant schools, and a parsonage-house in corresponding style, are attached. This church was consecrated on Tuesday morning, by the Lord Bishop of London, in the presence of several of the parochial clergy, and a very numerous congregation.

The second church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew the Less, is situated in Lamb's-fields, at a short distance from the Mile-end station of the Eastern Counties' Railway. Like St. James's Church, it is in the early English style, with lancet-headed windows; the material, light brick with stone dressings. It is from the design of Mr. Railton, and is a less picturesque composition than Mr. Blore's edifice. It should, however, be stated, that the campanile remains to be built. On the verge of the church-yard are Sunday and Infant Schools. This church (St Bartholomew's), will be consecrated by the Lord Bishop of London this day (Saturday), and three sermons will be preached therein on the following day. As the church is unfinished, we believe, on account of the want of funds, we trust that the contributions on Saturday and Sunday will go far towards the completion of the good work.

CHURCH OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW THE LESS, BETHNAL GREEN.

There are still remaining to be erected in Bethnal-green four churches, five parsonage-houses, and six schools, the cost of which is estimated at £30,000: and to complete which, independently of a balance in hand of £7288 15s. 4d., grants from the Metropolis Churches Fund, the Church Commissioners, and subscriptions promised, a sum of £10,000 will be required.

KINGSTON ON RAILWAY.—This fast improving locality, which was brought into existence by the South Western Railway, is about to acquire increased notoriety by becoming the subject of a Chancery suit. We understand that a bill of immense magnitude, embracing no less than 800 folios, has been filed against the present occupiers (twenty in number), and that Sir Thomas Wilde and several other eminent gentlemen of the bar have been retained. It appears that the original proprietors having entered too extensively into the speculation, consented to assign the property to trustees—who were Mr. John Parkinson, of the firm of Ferrer and Co., Lincoln's-inn-fields; Mr. Clarke, of the firm of Clarke, Fyamore, and Flodgate; and Mr. W. Wadbrook, of Kingston. This arrangement met with the concurrence of the claimants upon the property, amounting to about £60,000—the principal of whom were Messrs. Coutts and Co. The whole property was at that time purchased, by an eminent surveyor of the city, for £10,000; and the object of the trust-deed was to facilitate the completion of that purchase. The proprietor was upon the continent, and the arrangement of the matter was left in the hands of his solicitors. The Chancery bill charges these solicitors, and one of the trustees, with concerting together to forcibly obtain a conveyance of the property to Messrs. Coutts and Co., avoiding altogether the trust-deed; and, further, that in order to carry that scheme into effect, the proprietor was arrested, and held in his own solicitor's office whilst the deed of conveyance was engrossed, and, under pain of being sent to prison, was made to sign it. The consideration for this act is stated to have been only a small annuity-bond, which, upon being submitted to a respectable attorney, was declared to be worthless, owing to some omission.

HIS MAJESTY THE KING OF SAXONY.

THE KING OF SAXONY.

The present regal house of Saxony is descended from the Albertine line. In 1806, after the battle of Jena, the Elector Frederick-Augustus was created by Napoleon King of Saxony; but, after the success of the Allies, was deprived by the Congress of Vienna, 1815, of the larger and more fertile portion of his kingdom, which was transferred to the King of Prussia.

Frederick-Augustus, the present King, succeeded his uncle Anthony, June 6, 1836. His Majesty was born May 1797; and married, first, the Archduchess Caroline of Austria, who died in 1832; second, Maria, sister of the King of Bavaria. The King's father, Maximilian, born in 1759, abandoned in his favour the succession to the throne, in 1830.

His Majesty's high scientific attainments are well known in every philosophical circle; and we have been much gratified to find them thus judiciously recognised in the Athenæum of Saturday last:—

We see with great pleasure that the King of Saxony has arrived in England. In these days even a crown wants the gilding of a little charlatanism; and this amiable and accomplished sovereign has so little of it, that we are afraid our countrymen may hardly know how large a claim he has on their respect and admiration. Love of science for its own sake, unaccompanied by the least display; beneficence going to the extent of his limited resources, yet wholly without ostentation; piety without parade, and without bigotry; the simplest habits and manners; a pure and upright life; these are qualities which are not much in the world's eye, especially when accompanied by modesty. Yet we much mistake the tastes of Englishmen if, were these qualities but once known as the attributes of their royal guest, they did not think him, the sovereign of a comparatively small and weak state, more worthy of their attention and their homage than the autocrat of an almost boundless empire. Complimenting kings is no part of our vocation; but a journal which registers the movements of men of science, can hardly omit to notice the arrival among us of so distinguished a botanist and geologist as the King of Saxony. That he is still more distinguished as a virtuous, humane, and enlightened man and ruler, does not, we hope, remove him out of our competence.

ASHBURNHAM HOUSE.

Annexed is a representation of the busy scene presented at Ashburnham House, the mansion of the Russian Embassy, in Dover-street, on the temporary sojourn of his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, previous to his Majesty's removal to Buckingham Palace. The royal movements will be found narrated elsewhere in the present journal. The mansion is fronted by a spacious court-yard, with gates for entrance and egress, and an embellished screen of some architectural pretensions.

ASHBURNHAM HOUSE (THE RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR'S DOVER-STREET.

GRAND REVIEW AT WINDSOR.

A grand review in Windsor Great Park having been appointed for Wednesday morning, great numbers of her Majesty's sight-loving subjects were seen at an early hour wending their way towards the Paddington station, whence they were speedily transmitted by the Great Western to Slough, en route for the scene of action. Fortunate, indeed, was the cockney who at an early hour found a solitary cab upon the stand; for, by the scarcity of vehicles it might have been supposed that they had been long previously engaged for the occasion; while the omnibus cad, no longer suppliant, employed his finger for invitation, but rode on exulting at his crowded vehicle. On reaching Windsor, every one was found to be on the qui vive. It was evident the old town had given itself a holiday, and, expecting London on a visit, was prepared to give it a hearty welcome. And right heartily did the Londoners accept it. Every face beamed with joyous expectation, and, as the glance of every eye was bent upon the noble castle, over which the "meteor flag" of Albion proudly waved, in testimony of the royal presence, each felt secured from disappointment. A stream of human beings flowed through the streets, towards and through the Long Walk, in every stage of life, and every variety of costume. On approaching the Great Park, various regiments of the cavalry, preceded by their bands, were encountered advancing to the scene of action, where were already drawn up in line the infantry, flanked by squadrons of Lancers and Artillery. About 5000 troops were on the ground.

THE ILLUSTRIOUS VISITORS, AND STAFF, AT THE GRAND REVIEW, IN WINDSOR GREAT PARK.

A little after eleven o'clock an aide-de-camp arrived on the field and announced the approach of her Majesty and her illustrious visitors, and shortly afterwards a loud shout, which was immediately taken up and re-echoed by the ranks of spectators, gave the surest indication that her Majesty was once more in the presence of her subjects. A few minutes more, and the royal cortège entered the field, her Majesty (in mourning) seated in an open carriage, drawn by four magnificent horses, with outriders, and attended by the Duchess of Cambridge and the Duchess of Buccleuch, Mistress of the Robes. A squadron of the 2nd Life Guards attended her Majesty as a Guard of Honour. On the right hand-side of the royal carriage rode, on a beautiful bay charger, his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, and on the other side his Majesty the King of Saxony and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by a numerous and brilliant staff, consisting of upwards of sixty English and foreign officers of high rank. The procession was closed by a number of noblemen and gentlemen, and a host of members of both branches of the legislature and (of both sexes) of our most distinguished families, many of whose names will be found in the Court Circular.

Her Majesty, upon her arrival, was received with the most tremendous cheering by the assembled thousands, who also greeted the Prince, the Emperor of Russia, and the King of Saxony, in a similarly enthusiastic manner. The Duke of Wellington and the Premier were particularly cheered.

The Queen, with her Imperial and illustrious visitors, upon taking up a position in front of the centre of the line, was received by the troops formed in line, with a royal salute, the bands of the respective regiments playing the National Anthem, and the horse artillery on the right of the line firing a salute of 21 guns. The Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, Prince Albert, the Duke of Wellington, and their staff, then rode up to the troops, and proceeded slowly to inspect them. The spectacle at this moment was extremely interesting. Before us, though, unfortunately, at a considerable distance, was drawn up in line, and stretching upwards of a mile in length, the second battalion of Grenadier Guards, the second battalion of Coldstream Guards, the second battalion of Fusilier Guards, and the 47th Regiment. The line was commanded by General the Viscount Combermere, G.C.B., and the infantry by Lord Saltoun, K.C.B. On the right were stationed a battery of field artillery, under the command of Colonel Cleaveland; the Royal Horse Artillery, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Cobbe; and the 17th Lancers. On the left were four troops of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue), and the 1st Regiment of Life Guards, commanded by Major-General the Hon. Edward Lygon. Presently the royal party, with their staff, were seen advancing slowly along the line, inspecting the men, and receiving and returning the salutes of the general officers. At the same time the bands played "God save the Emperor," and the flags of the different regiments, bearing among others the proud names of Barossa, Corunna, Peninsula, and Waterloo, were lowered in salute. This part of the ceremony over, the illustrious personages returned to her Majesty's carriages, and immediately afterwards the several regiments marched twice past them and around the field at slow march the first time, and quick march afterwards. On the approach of the Grenadier Guards the Duke of Wellington put himself at the head of his regiment, and advanced with it before her Majesty—a spectacle at which an exhibition of truly English enthusiasm broke forth, one more acknowledgment of a people's unforgotten gratitude and admiration — another tribute worthy of the hero and his men. The marches being over, the troops commenced their evolutions. The manœuvres of the several branches of the service were performed in a manner which excited the intensest interest, and elicited the warmest applause from all present. The Artillery brought up their guns, and dispersed imaginary squadrons hid behind the clouds. The Lancers pricked about the ground until they fancied they discovered an opposing force, at which they dashed with a spirit, which, considering their necessary ignorance of the number of their foes, was worthy of the days of ancient chivalry. The Guards gave us no faint idea of the crowning charge at Waterloo, while the Infantry poured at them tremendous volleys, or kept up an incessant fire, which made the welkin ring again. The precision and rapidity of the movements of this great body were truly wonderful. Now they were broken up in divisions, a moment afterwards they formed impenetrable squares, anon, a line as far as the eye could reach, they were seen bearing down upon us, and just as we were thinking of a discreet retreat, "halt" was the word, and lo! the ardent body was arrested as by some electric shock, and stood before us, fixed and immoveable, a living wall.

Her Majesty, with the royal children, left the ground shortly before the firing commenced. The remainder of the royal party remained until the close of the review, when his Imperial Majesty rode up to the general commanding, Viscount Combermere, and expressed himself highly gratified at the high state of discipline of the British army.

Notwithstanding the immense number of persons who were assembled in the park to witness this grand military spectacle, the hundreds of vehicles drawn up around the portions selected for the evolutions of the troops, filled with elegantly-dressed females to enjoy the spirit-stirring scene, and the crowds of persons who had dangerously perched themselves on the branches of nearly every tree in the vicinity, we have not heard of a single accident.

The following particulars connected with the regiments that were reviewed on Wednesday last, may be somewhat interesting to our readers. The regiments that appeared on the occasion were:—The Royal Horse Guards (Blue); the 1st and 2nd Regiments of Life Guards; the 17th Lancers; and the Royal Horse Artillery, which composed the cavalry; and composing the infantry were the Grenadier Guards, Coldstream Guards, Royal Scots Fusilier Guards, and the 47th Regiment of Foot. The first-mentioned the Royal Horse Guards, better known as the Blues—are at present commanded by the Marquis of Anglesey, who is the Colonel—the Lieut.-Col. being W. Richardson, Esq., and the Major E. W. Bouverie, Esq., who was present at the battle of Waterloo, as was the noble and gallant colonel. The other officers now in the regiment who were present on that memorable occasion are, Capt. Smith and J. Liddall, Esq., the veterinary surgeon. The Blues were, for a short time, in the Peninsula, but the only battle of importance in which they took part, was Waterloo. The facings of the regiment are scarlet. The Marquis of Anglesey was appointed to the command on December 20, 1842, he having previously been Colonel of another Cavalry Regiment. Amongst the officers are two sons of the Duke of Richmond, viz., the Earl of March, who is a Lieutenant, and Lord A. Lennox, an Ensign. Lord Combermere is Colonel of the First Life Guards, and Col. Cavendish is the second in command. This regiment figured during the Peninsular War, and at the Battle of Waterloo; but there is only one officer now connected with it who witnessed the memorable scene, viz., the Adjutant, Wm. Anderton, Esq., who was appointed on the 18th of December, 1837. The Quarter-Master, W. Falconer, was also present at Waterloo. The Marquis of Worcester holds a lieutenancy in the regiment. The 2nd Regiment of Life Guards, which was also at Waterloo, is commanded by the Marquis of Londonderry, who was appointed on the 23rd of June, 1843. Sir George Murray, the Master-General of the Ordnance, is the Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Artillery, connected with which, however, there are a great number of other colonels and lieutenant-colonels. The Grenadier Guards, which are commanded by his Grace the Duke of Wellington, have been in five important engagements, including Waterloo and Corunna. Five of the officers were at the first mentioned. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge is Colonel of the Coldstream Guards, who distinguished themselves at Waterloo, four other places on the Continent, and in

"ALICE HAWTHORN," THE WINNER OF THE GOLD VASE, AT ASCOT RACES.—FROM A PAINTING BY HERRING.

Egypt. The Scots Fusilier Guards are commanded by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, who were appointed on the 25th of April, 1842. This regiment witnessed seven important engagements, including Waterloo, at which six of the officers now connected with it were present. The facings are blue. The 47th Regiment (Lancashire), under the command of Sir W. Anson, Bart., served in the Peninsula, Ava, &c. The 17th Lancers, who took a prominent part in the review of Wednesday, are commanded by his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, and Lieutenant-Colonel St. Quintin. This regiment has not as yet had the honour of taking part in any engagement on the Continent or elsewhere.

PORTRAIT OF ALICE HAWTHORN.

The preceding portrait of "Alice Hawthorn," the winner of the Gold Vase at Ascot, on Tuesday last, is copied, by permission, from a beautiful portrait painted by Herring, one of a series of Winners, published by BAILY and CO.

SPLENDID ENGRAVING

FOR THE

SUBSCRIBERS

TO THE

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

COMPANION PRINT TO THE COLOSSEUM VIEW OF "LONDON IN 1842."

The Proprietors of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS have great pleasure in announcing the forward preparation of a most Superb Engraving, as a companion to their celebrated large Print, entitled "London in 1842."

In so doing this engraving, they are convinced that the subject chosen, from its paramount interest and attraction, will meet with universal approbation. It will represent a Magnificent

PANORAMA

OF

THE RIVER THAMES,

Showing at one view "the Royal-towered Thame" in "Forests of Masts," its crowded Docks and Port; its Fleet of Steamers, its

NOBLE BRIDGES, UNEQUALLED IN THE WORLD;

its busy Wharfs and Quays; and the various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate banks, including

GREENWICH, AND ITS SUPERB PALACE HOSPITAL;

and exhibiting the winding of the "Silver Thames" through the mighty mass of buildings that form the metropolis of the Commercial World.

Showing as distinctly as in a Map, yet with beautifully picturesque effect, the several

STREETS OF THE METROPOLIS;

with the many hundred Churches, Palaces, Columns, and Arches, Government Offices, and Public Institutions, Club Houses, Noble Mansions, and Palatial Homes; embellished Street Architecture, Terraces, and Villas, Theatres; Railways; Parks and Public Walks, Factories and Warehouses; and, in short, a perfect Picture of the Vast Extent, Architectural Character, and Most Recent Improvement, of the BANKS OF THIS NOBLE RIVER.

To be Engraved in the

FIRST STYLE OF THE ART,

From a most Elaborate Drawing made expressly for the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS;

And which has occupied the Artists for several months, so that the strictest reliance may be placed on its accuracy.

The entire length of the PRINT will be

UPWARDS OF EIGHT FEET!

but it is impossible to enumerate one-tenth of the objects.

The interest of the subject cannot be surpassed, and the highest talent is employed in its execution

☞ Further announcements of this Magnificent Print will be duly given.

188, STRAND, April 18, 1844

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, 2.—First Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 10.—Hearne died, 1735.
TUESDAY, 11.—St. Barnabas.
WEDNESDAY, 12.—Wat Tyler slain, 1381.
THURSDAY, 13.—Edgeworth died, 1817.
FRIDAY, 14.—C. Maclaurin died, 1750.
SATURDAY, 15.—London Bridge commenced, 1825.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending June 15.

Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
9 33	10 8	10 23	11 5	11 34	0 0	0 5	0 31	0 53	1 14	1 35	1 55

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

AUBER.—"A Flute Player" is informed that we stated the composer's baptismal names on the authority of a French biographical work to which he (Auber) himself is an occasional contributor.

A Correspondent who has written respecting the statue of Nelson in Trafalgar Square, is mistaken in stating it to be of metal; it is of Craigleith stone.

"Alpha" shall be replied to next week.

"A Subscriber."—Rule.—We have not room.

Next week we shall engrave the Launch of the Tudor East Indiaman at Newcastle.

"I. G." Harling, inquires why, in March, 1844, there was no day and night equal, which he has found to be the case on looking through the almanacks for 40 years past

"A Subscriber."—We do not decide foolish wagers.

"A Subscriber," Prescot.—The paper for the next large print will be better than the last.

"W. S. T.," Dublin.—Black's Scottish Tourist is a capital book of its kind. See future announcements of the Print.

"M. P."—We have not room to reply to such questions as those of our correspondent.

"Gamma." See Shakespeare's play of Cymbeline.

"A. Z." should inquire of any respectable dealer in coins.

"I. S.," Stafford, should consult the subscription columns of the Times.

"A Subscriber," Scarborough.—In cases of wilful damage the full amount may be recovered.

"A. R."? Monitem.) Thanks.

"I. D.," Brecon, should refer to any work on greenhouses, or to Loudon's Encyclopædia of Gardening.

Our Wadsbury Correspondent will find the information he requires in forthcoming announcements.

"A Subscriber," Slow-on-the-Wold, is referred to Pilkington's Dictionary of Painters.

"Moleb's" and "Adolescens."—The Hamiltonian system is much approved.

"A. L. L." Tamworth.—The name is very much abused at present, but the first-mentioned style is the correct pronunciation.

"Fleshaunton."—The tales will be continued after the completion of our article on Wood Engraving.

"H. P." Exeter.—Our fair correspondent is thanked, but we have no room at present.

The Rector of St. Luke's has called at our office to contradict an imputation inferred in a notice of ours in the correspondent last week, to the effect that a number of children were interred in the burial-ground of that parish without rites of sepulture. We expect that our correspondent, "E. R.," will either substantiate his statement or make us an apology.

"I. C. B." Short.

"A Constant Subscriber," Newcastle-upon-Tyne, mistakes this journal for an almanack.

"A Well-Wisher," Winchester, should give his name and address, if he wishes to expose the case of cruelty which he so feelingly affects to deplore. We are cautious in the cause of humanity, but we must protect ourselves against imposition.

"A Constant Reader," who inquires concerning music and mathematics, appears to form a very contemptible opinion of the value of our time. We really cannot undertake to answer such nonsensical queries.

"Major Godfrey," —The latter is the correct way.

"N. R." New Bond-street.—The Duke of Buccleuch sits in the House of Lords as Earl of Doncaster.

The Continuation of the HISTORY OF WOOD ENGRAVING is unavoidably deferred, on account of the great press of illustrations this week; but it will be resumed in our next, and concluded within the present month.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1844.

PARLIAMENT and politics have alike been eclipsed this week by Ascot, Windsor, and the Emperor of Russia, who has been to the Races, to a Review, and is to go to the Opera. The first has not yet become a national rage among the Muscovites; the second his Majesty gets up on a much grander scale at home, and, in all probability, thought the affair in Windsor Park no great things, though it was brilliant, spirited, and well managed. There was an immense concourse of people present, and the number of Caleb Quotems anxious for "a place at the Review," enormous. As for the Opera, the notes of Italy are no novelties to the Imperial ears, for the most eminent of the children of song have as little objection to Russian roubles as English sovereigns, and not unfrequently emigrate farther north, contriving to defy colds and coughs even on the banks of the Neva. With all these excitements out of doors, but little attention has been paid to the gentlemen sitting at Westminster, who, however, have not been altogether idle. Monday was occupied by a discussion of the plan the Ministry intends to pursue with respect to the Sugar Duties.

There being more than a commercial principle involved in the manner in which duties on commodities produced by slave-labour are concerned, this question has made some stir at Exeter-hall, where the Anti-Slavery Society has held more than one meeting upon it. There is a divided state of opinion on the subject. To let in slave-grown sugar encourages a detestable system, which, as a nation, we have protested against, paying twenty millions as the purchase-money of the liberty of the negroes of our own colonies. We shall thus foster with one hand the system we have put down with the other. But there are other things in the world besides sugar, which we buy, manufacture, and consume, and which are yet entirely grown by slaves. These we could not exclude, without absolutely ruining the country and starving our people. We must continue to buy cotton, or Manchester perishes. Thus we are at variance with ourselves, and cannot carry out in one case the principles we lay down in another. This has exposed the Government to some sharp attacks from the free-trade party, whose views on this subject have been expressed by Lord John Russell. The Ministry has carried its plan, but not by so great a majority as it can command on other questions.

On Tuesday the Export Duty on Coals was again brought under the attention of the house. The coal-owners are a powerful body, belonging to the landed interest—the best represented of all—few in numbers, and wealthy. They will not submit to a tax that diminishes their trade without a fight for it, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer may depend on it that he has not heard the last of this item of the tariff. It is asserted that the tax has had a good deal to do with bringing about the strike of the colliers in the mining districts, which has thrown the whole trade into difficulties and embarrassments. We fear, however, that had it been a tax that fell on the home consumer, and merely had the effect of raising the price of the article to those who can buy only in one market, we should not have seen so good a fight made for its repeal. The reader will not fail to see that to raise the price to the consumer, who must go to the coal-pit to buy at any rate, and to raise it to the foreigner, who can go elsewhere, are very different things; in one case the custom is kept, though at the higher price; in the other it is lost altogether. Hence the North is in arms against the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

THE Inclosure Bill, after long and lingering delays, has been this week revived, for the purpose of being—shelved. There is no hope of its passing; it will expire of that fatal legislative epidemic—"the advanced period of the session." It seems that the Government, though not absolutely opposed to the bill, wish some very material alterations to be introduced into it. With respect to these alterations, the Board of Woods and Forests must be consulted, and consultations require time—which, with such an arrear of business on its hands, is the very thing the Ministry cannot afford. To stop the progress of a bill at this juncture, is virtually to throw it out for the session, and we therefore conclude that its suspension by Lord Worsley, is conclusive of its fate for the present. The Commons are safe for another year.

We are glad the bill is impeded; there is too much of this inclosing and shutting up and building in, in every direction, from which no advantage ever results that we can see, but to the rich man who can buy, and build, and plant. If land in advantageous spots could be inclosed for public gardens or parks, public property, and open to all, if, when rescued from the waste, they could be turned to one market, we should have no objection. But a poor man rarely acquires under these inclosure acts any beneficial right or holding; and if he does acquire it, cannot keep it. The down becomes fields; the rich man gets them, and is more rich; the poor man loses them, and is made poorer—the two very worst things that can happen for society.

The discussion on the measure elicited some very satisfactory sentiments from different quarters, and the following, from Mr. F. H. Berkeley, is too much in consonance with what we have ourselves advanced on the subject to permit us to pass it without commendation and extract:—

> He complained of this bill because it was arbitrary and inquisitorial. It gave enormous powers to a very doubtful tribunal; it interfered with rights which were never interfered with before. One clause gave a most extraordinary right to the bishop to take the power away from the patron of the living. The fact was, this bill was a mere attempt at a palliation of the evils which had been brought upon this country by the New Poor-law. It purported to have a desire that the poor should be employed, and that common should be inclosed for their benefit. But before the noble lord dealt with the parks of the poor, why did he not deal with the parks of the rich? A calculation had been made, showing that if all the parks and ornamental grounds of the nobility and gentry of this country were thrown into cultivation, a vast number of hands would be employed and an immense quantity of corn would be grown; not that he held or sanctioned such a doctrine as the alienation of property; but if the parks of the rich were not to be touched, let the house beware how they meddled with those things which were equally dear to the poor. The wild flower plucked by the child of the cotter when taking its humble amusement on the common, was as beautiful and dear to the poor as were the gay exotics which adorned the avenues of the rich man's mansion. What! would the house consent to deprive the poor man of even this small luxury? Would they take from him every place where he might at present walk without trespass, and drive him from the uncultivated or open space to the road-side, to be choked with the dust of their carriage wheels? That was the tendency of this bill.

IT is an undoubted fact that a large proportion of our mental troubles arise from the anticipation of unpleasant or adverse circumstances, which in our after experience we never meet with. Mankind is one great skiomachy, constantly engaged in quarrels with shadowy antagonists and bootlessly expending strength and vigilance in the vain encounter.

We sometimes see the millionaire spend his days in the constant dread of dying in the workhouse; and we see the antiquated bachelor, whose calves and hopes have long since dwindled into negative quantities, make grave preparations for conquests over the hearts of Countesses yet unborn. No danger appears too remote for our far-sighted anticipation—no occurrence is too contingent to alarm the fears of the over wary.

Amongst the various instances of uncalled-for, and unnecessary note of preparation, the Prince de Joinville's brochure must, from this time forward, stand pre-eminent as an instance of the paternal cares of Princedom, and a proof of the weary watchings over national interests, which are the heritage of those in high places. The Prince has been of late much meditating upon the very imperfect arrangements which France has made for the subjugation of England; and his patriotic spirit being unable longer to brood in secret over so calamitous a neglect of preparation, he has published a pamphlet, showing all that might be done towards our annihilation by persons of a more warlike tendency than the present denizens of la Belle France. It is rather unpleasant to witness such a display of ferocity of feeling towards us on the part of a Royal Prince, with the French navy at his back; but our fears are crowned by the climax to which he brings his ideas of a future war. He complains that the port of Toulon is not sufficiently prepared for the important position it is destined to assume in the next period of hostility between France and England, and he says that in case a French fleet "hove to" off Toulon with several sail of the British line as prizes, and 15,000 (!!) English sailors as prisoners, the neglect of proper military preparations in Toulon might produce the most serious, nay, calamitous results to the fame of the brave seamen who had captured the English.

We do not happen to have the honour of being acquainted with the functionary whose more immediate office it is to see that the revetments of Toulon are in good order; but if we did, and that he consulted us as to what reply he should make in his own defence for his neglect of that portion of the national interests committed to his care, we should advise him to pledge himself to the Prince de Joinville, and the French nation, that when a French fleet appeared off Toulon with 15,000 English sailors prisoners of war, he would undertake to secure them permanently, and beyond the hope of rescue. If ever a man made a safe promise the Commandant of Toulon would be in that position.

Very strange deductions have often been drawn from palpable facts; but amongst the most eccentric deducers of inference that ever flourished we may rank that French writers on naval and military operations. They say that Marshal Soult conquered Wellington at Toulouse, because Wellington reaped all the advantages, and because the grand army of France was defeated at Waterloo they have wisely attempted to prove that it was the British who lost the field. It was the French who retreated, say the British soldiers—because the British did not know how to retreat in good order, answer the French: how could we know how to retreat when we have had so little practice; rejoins the Irish trooper, and the matter ends by the Frenchman claiming the victory.

We have embalmed in our literature the fame of a very eminent English warrior of the Prince de Joinville school, hight Captain Bobadil. He possessed the same "longing after immortality"—the same desire for national pre-eminence—the same sanguinary appetite for conquest that characterises the pamphlet of this youthful scion of the house of Bourbon; but there was this difference—Bobadil was a private subject, and he proposed to conquer the French by only twenty at a time, whilst the Royal Prince's hatred of the English sailors "hath stomach for them all;" and this modern ogre would accept of no smaller dégoût than 15,000.

It is a matter of regret to see one whose position must give his opinions a considerable weight, endeavouring to encourage the insane feeling of hatred towards England, which has so long been evident amongst a party in France. We should always be sorry to see our Gallic neighbours led astray by such theoretic conquests as those of the Prince de Joinville. On this principle we object to the promulgation of such opinions; but, as far as Old England is concerned, no prince or potentate could adopt a more harmless amusement than inditing such pamphlets, which speak daggers, but use none.

The Standard of Thursday evening makes the following significant statement:—"We are enabled to state, and as we believe confidently, that the visit of his Majesty the Emperor of Russia to this country was immediately determined by the publicity given to the maritime note of his Royal Highness the Prince de Joinville."

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

His Majesty the King of Saxony arrived by special train at the terminus of the South Western Railway, at 20 minutes before six o'clock, on Saturday afternoon, and was received by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Major General Sir Edward Bowater. His Majesty and his Royal Highness entered an open (royal) carriage and four, and proceeded to Buckingham Palace. The King's suite followed in two of the royal carriages and four. The royal party arrived at the palace at 6 o'clock; the Queen received her august visitor in the Grand Hall. The royal dinner party at Buckingham Palace in the evening, included his Excellency Baron Gerndorff, the Duchess of Buccleuch, the Earl of Liverpool, the Earl of Aberdeen, and the Hon. Mrs. Anson.

On Sunday morning at half-past nine o'clock, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, went to Ashburnham House, to visit his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, and returned with his Majesty to Buckingham Palace. The Emperor was habited in a (scarlet) military uniform, and wore the Riband and Badge of the most noble Order of the Garter. The Queen received the Emperor in the Grand Hall. A déjeuner was soon afterwards served to her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, and his Majesty the King of Saxony. The Emperor, accompanied by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, afterwards visited the Queen Dowager, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the Duke of Wellington, at their several residences, as did also the King of Saxony. The Emperor of Russia and the King of Saxony, dined in the evening with her Majesty, at Buckingham Palace. A select party, including the Duke of Wellington, the Earl of Aberdeen, Sir R. Peel, and the Great Officers of State, had the honour of joining the august circle. The Queen and Prince Albert, the ladies and gentlemen of the royal suite, and the household, attended Divine service in the morning, in the Chapel Royal, Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Rev. C. L. Courtenay officiated. The Queen Dowager attended Divine service in the Chapel Royal, St. James's. Prayers were read by the Rev. J. C. Haden, the lessons by the Rev. J. Dakins, and the Communion service by the Rev. Dr. Sleath. The sermon was preached by Archdeacon Todd, from Matthew, chapter v., verse 16. Mr. Gomez presided at the organ.

Lieutenant General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Hardinge, Governor-General of India, was invested by the Queen on Saturday, at Buckingham Palace, with the Insignia of a Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath.

MONDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the King of Saxony, left Buckingham Palace on a quarter before o'clock on Monday afternoon, for the terminus of the Great Western Railway, at Paddington. The royal suites followed in four of the royal carriages to the terminus. The royal party arrived at Windsor Castle at six o'clock to a minute. A party of Life Guards formed the escort from Slough to the Castle. The Lord Chamberlain and the Master of the Household received her Majesty and Prince Albert, and the King of Saxony, upon their arrival. At six o'clock his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Sir Edward Bowater, left the Castle for Slough to receive his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, upon his arrival by a special train from town. His Imperial Majesty arrived at the station at twenty-five minutes past six o'clock. The Emperor and Prince Albert immediately entered an open carriage and four, and proceeded to the Castle, escorted by a party of Life Guards, the noblemen and gentlemen of his Majesty's suite, and Sir E. Bowater, following in two open carriages and four. A grand dinner was given on Monday evening in the Waterloo Gallery.

On Monday morning the Queen Dowager took her departure for the continent. Her Majesty left London at nine o'clock, and, thus, by the powerful aid of the "Man of Kent" engine, under the able guidance of Captain Coarlewood and Mr. Cubitt, was enabled to reach Dover from London in the brief space of two hours and a half. On her arrival at the terminus (where a guard of honour of the 77th regiment from the Castle, under the command of Captain Griffiths, was drawn up on the platform), her Majesty was received by Col. Rice Jones, commandant of the garrison, Captain Mercer, superintendent of her Majesty's packet station, and other naval, military, and civil officers, and under a royal salute, from the guns of the grand redoubt. At this magnificent terminus (which, by the way, was opened only on Monday last), the portion of the platform over which her Majesty walked to the waiting room was elegantly carpetted, and the whole arrangements reflected much credit on the taste of the superintendent, Mr. Adcock. Her Majesty's carriages had arrived by a previous train, and were by this time shipped. Her Majesty halted a few minutes in the waiting room, and affably acknowledged the attentions paid her by the authorities, after which she proceeded in a carriage and four to the Admiralty yard, where the Princess Alice steamer, Captain Smithett, was in waiting to receive her. The castle, the heights, the vessels in harbour, the government offices, &c., displayed their gayest colours; and the inhabitants, who seemed to have turned out en masse, greeted the illustrious visitor with hearty cheers as she passed along; her Majesty very graciously and courteously acknowledging these demonstrations by bowing on either side to the multitude. Exactly at twelve o'clock all was ready, and the vessel glided out of the harbour on her way to Calais, under a parting salute, and reiterated cheering and waving of hats and handkerchiefs.

TUESDAY.—The suggest visitors at the Castle went in the morning with his Royal Highness Prince Albert, to view the Ascot races. At twenty minutes before twelve o'clock, a party of the royal suite left the Castle for Ascot, to be in readiness to receive the illustrious party upon their arrival. The first carriage of state and all the officers of the royal household appeared in their Windsor uniforms. The Royal procession was formed at twelve o'clock. The carriage consisted of seven open carriages and four, the postilions in state liveries, and preceded and attended by a number of outriders in scarlet liveries. The first carriage contained his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, his Majesty the King of Saxony, and his Royal Highness Prince Albert. The great officers of state and personal attendants were distributed amongst the other carriages. A Russian messenger, with despatches, arrived at the Castle at half-past twelve o'clock, and delivered the Emperor to Ascot. The illustrious party returned to the Castle at twenty minutes before five. After the return of the royal party in the afternoon, her Majesty and Prince Albert promenaded in the grounds adjoining the Castle. His Majesty the King of Saxony walked out in the afternoon to witness the Eton regatta. The Eton scholars quitted the College soon after six o'clock, and about seven o'clock left for Surley Hall. A grand dinner was given by her Majesty to her illustrious visitors in the evening, in the Waterloo Gallery. The plateau had a very elegant appearance, a number of the choicest plants and flowers being interspersed among the splendid gold epergnes; these were placed in elegant gold vases, modelled after the celebrated Warwick vase.

WEDNESDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert and their august visitors went to witness the Review in the Great Park. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge arrived at the Castle at half-past nine o'clock, attended by Baron Knesebeck, having travelled from town by the Great W[illegible]tern Railway. The august party at the Castle was arranged at a quarter before [illegible] o'clock. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, and nearly all the gentlemen were on horseback. The Emperor was habited in a uniform of dark green, laced with red. His Imperial Majesty wore the ribband and badge also the star of the Most Noble Order of the Garter. His Majesty the King of Saxony wore a uniform of dark blue and gold. His Majesty also wore the insignia of the Order of the Garter, and those of the Golden Fleece. His Royal Highness Prince Albert appeared in a Field-Marshal's uniform. His Royal Highness wore the riband and badge of the Russian Order of St. Andrew, and the stars of other orders of knighthood. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge was in a Field-Marshal's uniform. The royal duke wore the riband, badge, and star of the Russian Order of St. Andrew, and the star of the Most Noble Order of the Garter. Count Orloff, Baron Gersdorff, and the other distinguished personages in the suites of the Emperor of Russia and the King of Saxony were on horseback in their different uniforms, and wearing their respective ensigns of knighthood. The Duke of Wellington, Commander-in-Chief, were the insignia of the Russian Order of St. Andrew. A numerous party of officers, including the Marquis of Londonderry (in his uniform as Colonel of the 2nd Life Guards, and wearing the insignia of Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath), Sir Willoughby Gordon, K.C.B., Quartermaster General; Sir John Macdonald, K.C.B., Adjutant General; Lord Fitzroy Somerset, K.C.B.; Captain Francis Seymour, the Marquis of Worcester, the Earl of March, and Sir Robert Gardiner, rode on horseback, forming a most brilliant escort to the august party. The gentlemen of the Queen's household (civilians) wore the Windsor uniform. Her Majesty accompanied by the Duchess of Cambridge and the Duchess of Sutherland, returned to the Castle at one o'clock, Col. Arbuthnot and Major-General Wemyss attending on horseback. The Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, Prince Albert, and their numerous and brilliant Staff, arrived at twenty minutes before two o'clock. At five o'clock the illustrious party left the Castle in open carriages for Virginia Water. The royal party visited the fishing temple, and returned from Virginia Water soon after seven o'clock in the evening. The dinner was served in state in the Waterloo Gallery.

THURSDAY.—This morning his Majesty the King of Saxony, attended by Baron de Getto, went to Clewer. Sir R. Peel left the Castle early for town. Prince Albert and his Majesty the King of Saxony went this morning to inspect the farm in an open pony carriage and four. After viewing the farm, his Majesty and Prince returned to the Castle shortly before one. The whole of the illustrious party at the Castle went to-day to Ascot. The gentlemen of the royal household all wore the Windsor uniform. At a quarter past one o'clock her Majesty and her august visitors left the Castle for Ascot. The illustrious party occupied seven carriages and four, the postilions in state liveries, and preceded and attended by outriders in scarlet liveries. The Queen was conducted from the royal apartments to her carriage by the Emperor of Russia, and his Imperial Majesty sat by her side. Prince Albert and the King of Saxony sat opposite. The Prince wore the Windsor uniform. At a quarter before five the illustrious party returned to the Castle, and were received by the Master of the Household. Her Majesty and Prince Albert, the Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, alighted at the Queen's entrance. The Emperor of Russia and Prince Albert walked to St. George's Chapel, through the forenoon. His Imperial Majesty and his Royal Highness afterwards went and inspected the royal stables. At eight last evening the august party sat down to dinner in the Waterloo Gallery. The tables were placed round the centre arch, on which were displayed a number of the largest and finest shields and salvers of the royal treasury, the former embellished with a variety of classical and mythological subjects in bass relievo, and the latter richly engraved with the royal arms, encircled by a deep border elaborately chased. The company included the Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, Dowager Lady Lyttelton, the Russian Minister and Baroness Brunnow, Baron de Getto, Baron Gersdorff, Baron de Thile, the Duke of Wellington, the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, the Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe, Earl Jersey, Earl of Aberdeen, Earl of Haddington, Earl of Morton, Earl of Hardwicke, Lady Peel, Sir Edward Codrington, Sir G. Cockburn, Sir H. Wheatley, Mr. G. Anson, Col. C. Wellesley, Hon. and Rev. G. Leslie Courtenay, Hon. Col. Drummond, Col. Wylde, Baroness Ahlefeldt, Baron Knesebeck, the Provost of Eton, the Rev. Dr. Proby, Baron Nicolay, M. de Berg, M. Koudriaffsky, Count Orloff, Le Comte d'Adlerberg, Prince Wassiltschikoff, Count Pahlen, Le Prince Radzwill, Col. Glasenap, Dr. Reinolds, M. de Minckwitz, Count Albert Vitzthum, Baron de Reichart, and Dr. Carus.

FRIDAY.—The Queen, Prince Albert, the Emperor of Russia, and the King of Saxony, in one carriage, arrived at Buckingham Palace at twelve o'clock, attended by an escort furnished by the 9th Lancers. The dinner and evening parties at Buckingham Palace will be what may be termed state. The Yeomen of the Guard and the Gentlemen-at-Arms being called into requisition. Immediately on the arrival of her Majesty and Prince Albert in town, a Privy Council was held at Buckingham Palace.

The Queen Dowager was received at Calais, on Monday, with more than the usual honours paid to a foreign Princess. The crowd of French and English was immense, and very respectful in demeanour. After taking dinner on board the packet, and the horses being put to the carriages, her Majesty left the quay at a little before three, P.M., for St. Omer.

The Queen has caused invitations to be issued from the Lord Chamberlain's Office, for an evening party at Buckingham Palace this evening, to meet the Emperor of Russia and the King of Saxony.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY OF LONDON, REGENT'S PARK.—On Tuesday, the second exhibition of plants and flowers took place in the delightful grounds of this society, and it is a pleasant duty to report that no fête of this description was ever conducted with such satisfaction to all present. The show was deservedly acknowledged by all to be of the most magnificent description, surpassing, according to the opinion of competent judges, any former exhibition of the kind held in this country. Amongst the principal amateur exhibitors were Lady Antrobus, Mrs. Wray, of Cheltenham, Mrs. Lawrence, Mrs. Marryatt, Miss Traill, Mr. Norman, and Mr. Hooker; in the nurserymen's classes were Messrs. Cattleys, Henderson, Gaines and Low. The weather which, for the whole of the week, had approached almost to inclemency, sudden.y underwent a most propitious change, and displayed the attractions of the gardens to such advantage, as to cause them to fill early with crowds of distinguished personages, among whom several thousands in number, the majority of whom remained until a late period of the evening. The bands of the Grenadier Guards and 2nd Life Guards were stationed in the gardens, where they performed several airs from operas, waltzes, polkas, the railway galopade, promoting, as heretofore on these occasions, the amusement of all present.

THE ASSOCIATED CATHOLIC CHARITIES.—Upwards of 120 gentlemen who are interested in this charity, assembled on Monday at the Freemason's Tavern, where an excellent dinner had been provided for them. The chair was taken by Lord Edward Howard, who was supported by the Earl of Arundel and Surrey, Lord Camoys, the Honourable H. Petre, the Honourable S. Jerningham, Sir R. Throckmorton, Scott Murray, Esq., M.P., &c., &c., and several other gentlemen of the Roman Catholic persuasion. The children, upwards of 300 in number, were marshalled round the room after dinner; and the report, which was read by the secretary, showed the charity to be in a flourishing condition.

BYRON'S STATUE.—A case of an extraordinary nature, and in which the names of many of the greatest characters of the age will figure, is about to be brought before the London tribunals. Thorwaldsen, as it is well known, had executed a colossal statue of Lord Byron, which he considered as one of his best works, and consecrated it to the chapel of Westminster, on condition of its being placed in this cathedral, beside the monuments of other poets. The chapter, at first, accepted the offer; but, it is equally well known, that some scruples were raised afterwards against placing the author of Don Juan in the sanctuary of a mausoleum; and the case containing the precious marble was never claimed by the chapter. The testamentary executor of Thorwaldsen being informed of this state of things, made some inquiries, and the masterpiece of Byron was soon found lying on the floor of a cellar in a state of extreme deterioration, amongst the fragments of the case, which the humidity of the place had reduced to a state of perfect rottenness. Consequently, a second duty attached by the executor, addressed a formal reclamation to the authorities, but when the custom-house officers went with him to the cellar, it was found that the statue had disappeared, and nothing but fragments of the case remained behind. The executors then addressed to the Custom-house a demand for indemnity. This, however, was refused under the plea that it cannot be answerable for goods refused by the parties to whom they are addressed, and that such goods remain in their stores solely at the expense and risk of those to whom they belong. At this stage, in fine, the executors have resolved on bringing an action for damages against the Custom-house of London. The sum claimed is £20,000 (750,000*l.*), at which the statue was valued by the artists of Rome on its being shipped to London.

DINNER TO MR. CHARLES KNIGHT.—On Wednesday evening, a dinner was given at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, to Mr. Charles Knight, of London-street, by a large party of his friends, in commemoration of his completion of the Penny Cyclopædia, as well as to mark their sense of his merits as an author and publisher, and to testify their respect for his personal character. The chair was taken by Lord Brougham; and amongst the company assembled were Lord Wrottesley, the Rev. Mr. Jones, the elthe commissioner; Professor Key, Professor Long, M. D. Hill, Esq., Mr. Christie, M.P., Mr. Chadwick, Mr. Porter, of the Board of Trade, and a host of literary, artistic, and scientific gentlemen, as well as influential individuals connected with the publishing world. upwards of 160 persons were present. Lord Brougham, in proposing "The Health of Mr. Knight," paid a high and deserved tribute to his exertions, his excellent speeches by Mr. M. D. Hill, the Rev. Mr. Jones, and other gentlemen, were made during the evening and much applauded.

CITY OF LONDON NATIONAL SCHOOLS.—On Thursday the supporters of these schools celebrated their anniversary at the London Tavern; the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor in the chair. The city members, several aldermen, and a large number of the corporation joined the feature board.

THE IRISH STATE TRIALS.—Sir Thomas Wilde, Mr. Fitzroy Kelly, Q.C.; Mr. Austen, Q.C.; and Mr. M. D. Hill, Q.C., have been retained by Mr. O'Connor, Knight, and other traversers, to conduct their case on the Writ of Error in the House of Lords.

ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL.—The anniversary dinner of the Royal Free Hospital takes place on the 11th inst., at the London Tavern. The distinguished nature of this charity is, that it affords relief without the delay incidental to recommendation from Governors—its portals being open to the unfriended sick of all nations. Lord Ashley is to take the chair, and a host of noticed talent is engaged to give variety to the proceedings. We heartily recommend this charity to the support of the benevolent.

THE FOREIGN REFUGEES.—On Thursday night a public meeting was convened at the National-hall, Holborn, for the purpose of ascertaining the public feeling as to the reception which should be given in this country to the Emperor Nicholas, and whether the principles entertained by Englishmen should be trampled upon by giving him a reception. Such is the substance of the placard announcing the intended meeting. Mr. G. Hetherington, a Chartist, was called to the chair. The platform was occupied chiefly by foreigners, among whom were a slight sprinkling of Poles. The body of the hall was crowded to suffocation by the working classes, while hundreds were outside unable to gain admission. Several resolutions were drawn up, and resolved upon, to the effect—amongst others—that the Emperor's visit to this country, in consequence of his treatment of the Poles.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COURTS-MARTIAL IN INDIA.

A general court-martial was held at Deesa, on the 18th of December, on Lieut. Medwin Ruxton Pilfold, late of Her Majesty's 2nd, or Queen's Royals, and now of the 95th Regiment of Foot, on charges preferred against him for various acts of irregularity and misconduct. The Court found the prisoner guilty of only a portion of the charge, and sentenced him to be placed at the bottom of the list of Lieutenants, and to be severely reprimanded. This decision appears to have given dissatisfaction to Sir Thomas M'Mahon, the Commander-in-Chief, who in his published remarks observes, with regard to it:—"It is with extreme concern that I have to record my unqualified disapproval of the final judgment of the Court, which is equally disgraceful to the prisoner and ineffective as the former, and with the exceptions before noticed, altogether unauthorised; for it is specially and distinctly declared, in the first clause of the 73rd Article of War for Her Majesty's Forces, that the loss of rank to an officer, 'under the rank and degree of a field-officer,' shall be adjudged by reducing him to the bottom of, or any other place on, the list of the regimental rank in which he may be serving, and there is no other provision in the article which can bear upon the construction in respect to the present case. As, therefore, a sentence of the above nature could not, for the reason before specified, be passed on Lieut. Pilfold, the Court was bound to have adopted the next effective penalty, calculated to maintain the discipline of the army; and I can only attribute these extraordinary awards, which have been now remarked on, to a most palpable error of judgment on the part of those who ought to have had a more correct knowledge of their duty. A reprimand to Lieut. Pilfold, for his incorrigible conduct, would, I consider, be totally unavailing, so I do not even confirm that part of the sentence." In consequence of a report under the above remarks, by the Adjutant-General of the Northern Division of the Army, of very serious misconduct attributed to Lieutenant Pilfold at Surat since the determination of his trial as above, Lieutenant Pilfold will continue under arrest in Surat, pending the investigations which will be communicated to the head quarters of the Northern Division of the Army.

Another court martial was held at Meerut on the 5th of March, to try Captain Beavan, of the 31st regiment of Native Infantry, for having needlessly delayed to join his regiment while on service in the field, and, having been found guilty, was sentenced to be cassiered the service.

At a general court martial assembled on board the Hon. Company's receiving ship Hastings, Bombay harbour, on Monday the 3rd day of April, 1844, of which Captain John Pepper, of the Indian Navy was president, and Captain F. T. Powell, of the Indian Navy, was tried on the following charge, viz.:—For having, when in command of the Hon. East Indin Company's steam-vessel Semiramis, through negligence and inattention, allowed that vessel to be wrecked, on or about the night of the 1st of August, 1843, on the African coast, on or near Ros Assir, whereby she was totally wrecked and the lives of her passengers and crew greatly hazarded. Upon which charge the Court gave the following decision: The court having maturely weighed and considered the evidence before it, is of opinion that the prisoner, Commander Frederick Thos. Powell, of the Indian Navy, is not guilty of any part of the charge exhibited against him, and do therefore most fully acquit him of all and every part of the same.

Ensign Edward Augustus May, of the 19th regiment of Native Infantry, was tried at a court martial held at Trichinopoly, on the 6th of March, for abusing the mess butler, and on being fined for his improper language at the mess table by the president of the mess having made use of the following words:—"You are a rascal, offens.ve language, namely, "You may fine me as much as you like; I am damned sorry I ever came to the regiment, and I will never come to the mess again, and wherever says I must say of the language attributed to me, says that which is untrue." The court having found the prisoner guilty, he was sentenced to be dismissed the service.

NAVAL APPOINTMENTS.—Lieutenants: R. J. G. Macdonald, and R. R. Quin, to the Collingwood. Assistant-Surgeon: A. Brown, to the Collingwood, Midshipman: F. Cotter, from the Mariner to the Volage. Naval Cadets: W. Clark, to the Prometheus; G. T. Richards, and R. P. Mercer, to the St. Vincent.

Major-General Sir James Henry Reynett, K.C.H., has been added to the list of officers who are in the receipt of rewards for distinguished services. He has been placed upon the scale of £200 per annum from the 26th ult. He served with distinction in the Peninsula, where, in addition to many minor actions, he was present at the passage of the Douro and the battles of Corunna, Talavera, Busaco, and Fuentes d'Onor.

CAUTION TO MARINERS NAVIGATING THE CHINA SEAS.—HONG-KONG, MARCH 1.—The Augustus, Cook, arrived here from Sydney, N.S.W., reports that on Jan. 9 she fell in with an unknown reef in lat. 7 55 N., long. 164 20 E., in form of a horse-shoe, in the extent of at least two miles. On the 15th January, in lat. 13 N., long. 163 E., was thrown on her beam ends, and had to cut away her mast.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—FRIDAY.

WRITS OF ERROR.

Shortly before Mr. Baron Parke took his seat on the bench, Lord Denman, Lord Chief Justice Tindal, the Lord Chief Baron, Mr. Baron Alderson, Mr. Justice Patteson, Mr. Baron Gurney, Mr. Justice Coltman, Mr. Baron Rolfe, and Mr. Justice Cresswell entered the court, when Lord Denman said, that the court was now assembled as a Court of Error, but from various circumstances the court was compelled to take an adjournment in the present arrangement for the sittings. On the 5th and 6th of July the Court would sit to take Writs of Error from the Court of Exchequer; but there was much uncertainty as to whether the Court would be able to hear any of the cases in error from the Court of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas. It might, however, probably be better that the usual days should be appointed at all events, if it were only as a matter of form. The days, then, on which the court would sit in error, would be the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th of July. The cases from the Queen's Bench would stand for the 1st and 2nd of the month; those from the Court of Exchequer would be for the 5th and 6th, the present understanding being that none of the cases would come on except those from the Exchequer. If it should so chance that they were able to get through a case so as to take the cases from the Queen's Bench and the Common Pleas, due notice should be given to the officers of the court. At present, however, it was anticipated that the number of writs of error which would be required in the present Term would be small. He was also understood to refer to the case of O'Connell and others, which is expected to be brought before the House of Lords about that period.) The learned judges then retired from the court.

POLICE.

MANSION HOUSE.—On Monday, a person of very respectable appearance, named James Egan, was brought before the Lord Mayor, in the custody of Daniel Forrester, the officer, charged with having received a Bank of England note for £194, knowing it to have been stolen. The prisoner, on the charge was excited by the case, the prisoner having, as was reported, been at one time manager and director of the National Bank of Ireland, whose property the stolen note was stated to be, and having been tried on the year 1842, in Dublin, for stealing a parcel of bank notes, of which the £100 note in question was one. Evidence having been taken against the prisoner, Mr. Wontner, the solicitor who attended for him, stated that the prisoner had been indicted in Dublin, for stealing the parcel, and acquitted, and he had subsequently brought an action against his prosecutors for false imprisonment, and obtained a verdict.—Mr. Wilkins, the barrister, then addressed the Lord Mayor on behalf of the prisoner, and contended that the evidence by no means warranted his committal. The Lord Mayor declared that he had formed a determination to commit. The prisoner was a man well versed in business, and perfectly understood the nature of the business of the concern which had been plundered. He had offered no explanation whatever of the manner in which the note he was accused of having received had come into his possession. The prisoner was then taken back to the Compter.

LAMBETH-STREET.—Daniel Dearlove, who has been in custody for several weeks past on a charge of stealing a cask box, containing bank notes and gold to the amount of £300, together with bills of exchange and bonds to the value of nearly £2,000, from the residence of his uncle, Mr. James Dearlove, was brought before Mr. Henry for final examination. Some additional evidence having been given, the prisoner was treated the matter with great apparent indifference, was fully committed for trial.

OXFORD.—On Monday William Foxley Norris was elected Scholar of Trinity College, and Richard Justin Ogle, Blount Exhibitioner of the same college. The Professor of Poetry (the Rev. James Garbett) will deliver his Terminal Lectures at the Clarendon, on Wednesday next, and Friday the 14th of June, at two o'clock.

THE SUPPOSED MURDER AT WIMBLEDON.—On Tuesday night information was brought to Great Scotland-yard that Charles Hall, the plasterer, of Wimbledon, who is suspected of having murdered his wife, by smothering her with a pillow, had been apprehended near to Seven Oaks, been examined on that day before a county magistrate, and remanded.

The entries for the different races at the ensuing Thames Regatta are being proceeded with, and will finally close on the 12th of June. Very few nominations have, as yet, been made, but all are no doubt waiting until the close, as is generally the case in such affairs. As in former years, the Regatta will take place on the Surrey-bridge.

THE GERMAN DWARFS.—We understand that the fortunate holder of General Tom Thumb has already realised a very pretty sum of money by his speculation; and it is well for him that he has done so in time, for here are three weewee things come from Germany, who bid fair to divert a smart share of the public attention in respect of dwarfs, from the Transatlantic imperfection in themselves. The General, who purports to be twelve years old, is twenty-five inches high (though we have just seen an announcement that he is now to be a little taller); one of our new visitors, Christian Brockstedt, is thirteen years old, bona fide, right up, straight down, and no mistake," to quote classic Jack Bray, as may be known unto all men by the certificate of his baptism and birth, duly signed and sealed by the local authorities; and yet he is only three inches taller than the alleged American, and weighs but one pound more. Moreover, the German blows lustily on the horn, and smokes no end of cigars, and takes lead[illegible] parts in a ballet of action, and does all sorts of things marvellous to behold in one so very small. Then there's his sister, Maria Brockstedt, eighteen years [illegible]yet only thirty-two pounds weight—three very nice little woman, indeed, chubby, rosy, smiling, symmetrical in a silk dress of mature size, with a good head of hair, dressed à-la-mode, who sings a song, and dances a dance as "twere a fairy of the olden time, or an elfin sprite of more modern Germany; and, indeed, we are by no means clear that these non-descript little fellows, by letting these pass as their guardians and exhibitors. At all events, they are something very much out of the common. There's another brother, Henry Brockstedt, twenty-two years of age, but only [illegible] inches high, and weighing but thirty-six pounds, who takes part in the ballet. Not the least curious feature in the matter is, that these taree so small personages had for brothers, born alternately with themselves, three persons, rather more than double the ordinary proportions. The "Klaverbad," as the diminutive trio are designated when they are at home, have been exhibited before, and have received the patronage and approbation of the King of the Netherlands, the dowal family of Baden, the royal family of Saxony, Prince Albrecht of Prussia, the royal court of Anhalt, the Duke of Altenburg, the ducal courts of Saxe Coethen, of Saxe Gratz, &c., as appears from certificates duly authenticated.

POSTSCRIPT

THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.—The Black Eagle steam-vessel, Commander S. B. Cook, has been ordered to be fitted, at Woolwich, for the express purpose of receiving his Imperial Majesty, and conveying the royal visitor to the Continent, on his return to his own dominions. A room, constructed of wood, is in progress of erection on the deck, for his Imperial Majesty's use.

THE EMPEROR AND POWERS OF EUROPE.—The France states, that on Thursday morning an officer attached to the military household of Queen Victoria arrived in Paris; that his first visit was to the British Ambassador, his next to the Russian Embassy, and after that to the Prussian Minister of Foreign Affairs; and further, that he is accompanied by two secretaries.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL.—On Thursday a Court was held for the despatch of business. Mr. Arthur Aston Dorrell was elected Chief Commoner. A recommendation in the City, relative to an increase of salary to Mr. Bullock, for his services as Judge in the Central Criminal Court, he applied. The report recommended that the salary of the present Judge, Bullock, at the Central Criminal Court, should be increased by £400 per annum. Eventually, after a long discussion, the sum of £200 a-year was added to the £600 which Mr. Bullock at present received as Judge of the Central Criminal Court, making his whole receipts as Commissioner, and as Judge of the Sheriff's Court, £1000 per annum.

Alderman W. Hunter and Challis will be put in nomination for Sheriffs for the year ensuing, at Guildhall, on Midsummer-day next. A rumour is afloat that the Livery will adopt some strong resolutions respecting the conduct of Alderman Gibbs.

The anniversary of the asylum of Free Watermen and Lightermen was celebrated on Wednesday by a public dinner, at which Lord John Russell presided. The subscriptions on the occasion exceeded £1000.

On Thursday evening a meeting of the Regeal Wardens of London was held in their large hall, Rose-street, Greek-street, Soho-square. M. O'Connell, Esq., M.P., who was present, said that the fine lately discovered upon the back of the corporation records, would prove fatal to the whole of the law proceedings, and the liberator would shortly be with them. It was then announced that £600 had been transmitted to the Association in Dublin since the sentence had been passed upon the traverse—

At a meeting of the Waterloo-bridge proprietors, held on Thursday, the renowned Romeo Coates proposed applying for Parliamentary power to dispose of it by lottery. The subject is to be taken into consideration at the next meeting.

Sir Henry Hardinge left town this morning at nine o'clock, for Belvoir Castle.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY FOUR-OARED SUBSCRIPTION MATCH.—This race was announced for five o'clock yesterday (Friday), but the start did not take place until nearly six, when the boats, six in number blue, yellow, red, white, black, and green—assembled off Messrs. Searle's, Lambeth. The prizes consisted, as usual, of the silver medals. Black was the favourite at starting. All, notwithstanding the rough state of the water, got off well, Black taking the lead and keeping it to the end of the race, which was terminated at Putney-bridge. There was a dead heat for the second place between Red and Blue, and the rest were beaten off. Black won very easily.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Friday, Mr. Carter held an inquest at the "Cottage of Content," Walworth, upon the body of Oliver Moore, aged 26, who was killed on the preceding night as he rode on the shaft of his dray, by a brickbat of porter rolling over him, and breaking his neck.—Verdict, "Accidental death."

THREATENING TO ASSASSINATE THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.—Yesterday the neighbourhood of Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, was much agitated in consequence of a Polish nobleman, of wealth and distinction, whose title is Count Ostrowski, residing at No. 22, in that street, having been apprehended by the police the evening before, on a charge of threatening to assassinate the Emperor of Russia, by shooting his Majesty on the first opportunity he could find. It appears that on Thursday while in his tailor's shop in Regent-street, he had uttered strong expressions and threats against the Emperor, and the foreman of the shop, knowing his violent temper, and fearing some rash act might ensue and immediately informed the proper authorities of police at Scotland-yard. In consequence of this the nobleman was speedily in the hands of the detective force, a warrant from a magistrate being procured with. He was taken, although after office hours, privately before Mr. Jardine, at Bow-street; and the offence of threatening being proved, he was bound over, himself in £300, and two sureties in £150 each, to keep the peace. Owing to the lateness of the hour, he had no opportunity of communicating with his friends, and was removed in a cab to Tothill-fields prison for the night. Yesterday, Chevalier Bunkhausen, the Russian Consul, had a private conference with Mr. Jardine, and afterwards Mr. Westmacott, a solicitor of Lincoln's Inn, came and tendered his names as bail, which were accepted as being respectable parties. Three o'clock was fixed on for the take the bail, and Mr. Laurie Murray was then in attendance as one, but Lord Dudley Coutts Stuart, the other bail, was not present. The Count was fetched from prison in a cab by Mr. Mace, the Chief Usher, and kept waiting till five o'clock, when a second bail was found in the person of Mr. Skinner, and he was then discharged. He is represented to be of large property, and to have served against the Emperor in the Polish army, as well as held the rank of captain in the French service, and to be a man of distinguished courage and gallantry, unfortunately but little tempered with discretion.

BOW-STREET.—ARREST OF A LUNATIC AT SIR ROBERT PEEL'S MANSION.—Yesterday an elderly man, short in stature, and dressed in black, was brought before Mr. Jardine, under the name of John Purdell, residing in Hare-street, Bethnal Green, weaver, charged with being insane, and delivering a letter at the residence of Sir R. Peel, Whitehall-gardens, of a violent character. The letter was read that he delivered at Sir Robert Peel's, and was a very proof of a disordered mind. It stated that the writer requested audience of Sir Robert for the good of the country, and that he had also challenged O'Connell, and had defended him; and that Sir Robert was the man to do England good, through the Lord Most High. On Mr. Jardine asking him what he had to say, the prisoner entered into a long, rambling speech, stating that he did not dislike Sir Robert Peel, but, on the contrary, he liked him much, but that he was certain Sir Robert Peel's intentions towards him had been frustrated by the devil. He had challenged O'Connell, and he [illegible]ters had been read in the House of Commons, but had there been stopped by envious men, and he was left to work the country good by himself. Mr. Jardine said his mind was evidently disordered. The brother of the prisoner stepped forward and said that he had a wife and four children, and was only unable on points respecting Sir Robert Peel and Mr. O'Connell. Mr. Jardine ordered him to St. Margaret's workhouse till he could be removed to a lunatic asylum.

ASCOT RACES.

ASCOT RACES—ARRIVAL OF THE ILLUSTRIOUS VISITORS.

ASCOT RACES.

TUESDAY.

The races were commenced under the best auspices. The wind for the last six weeks or two months has been blowing from the north east, but on Tuesday, it veered round to the west, and the weather suddenly became warm and genial. The course was in as good order as the long drought permitted it; immediately in front of the Grand Stand, and for about a quarter of a mile, it was in tolerable order, but on the lower ground it was as hard as a stone pavement, and in places much cut up and roughened. It was also generally known that the course would be honoured with the presence of royalty, and the announcement that her Majesty would be there with her illustrious guests might have been expected to have brought a great concourse of visitors. Such, however, was not the PIC-NIC PARTY, AT ASCOT RACES.

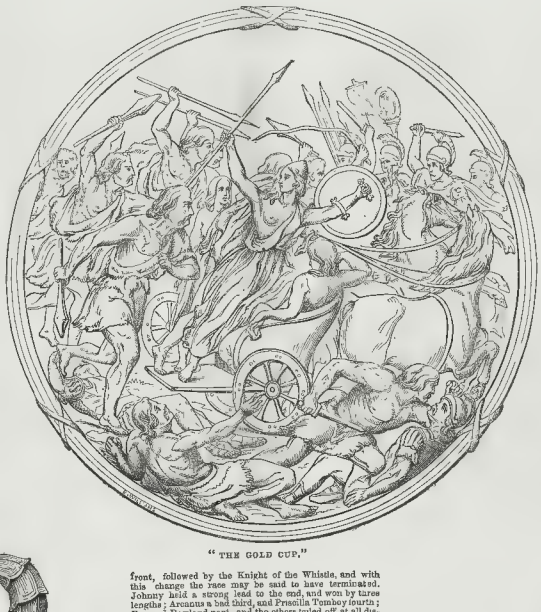
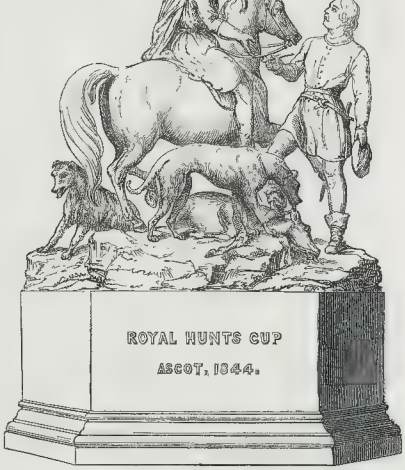
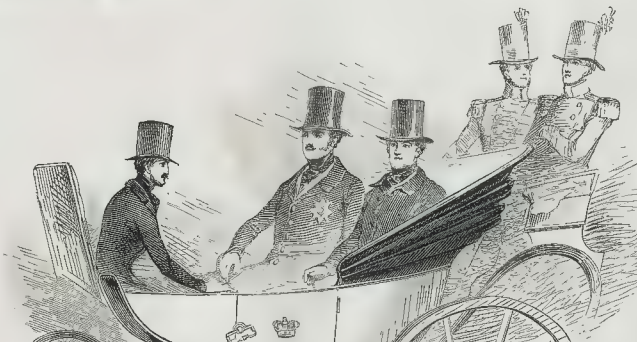
NEWSPAPER
ILLUSTRATED
LONDON NEWS

THE ASCOT PRIZE PLATE, 1844.



"THE GOLD CUP."





THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA, THE KING OF SAXONY, AND PRINCE ALBERT, AT ASCOT RACES, SKETCHED ON THE SPOT.

case. The heath was tolerably well attended, and the Grand Stand and the grass plot before it tolerably well filled, but there was nothing like the numbers that many contemplated, and certainly not so many people as have been collected on the first day of the races in some former years. It was shortly after one o'clock that the royal cortège came on the ground, and it was at once seen that her Majesty the Queen was not amongst the number of the illustrious visitors. Lord Rosslyn, as Master of the Buckhounds, led the procession, followed by the huntsman, Mr. Davies, the yeoman prickers, park-keepers, &c., and a long retinue of grooms and led horses.

In the first carriage were their Majesties the Emperor of Russia and the King of Saxony, and opposite to them sat Prince Albert. The Emperor was dressed in a plain blue coat, having no decorations whatever. The King of Saxony was also in plain clothes, with the riband of the Garter. Prince Albert wore the Windsor uniform. The illustrious visitors were most cordially greeted.

In the second carriage were the Duke of Wellington, Count Orloff, and other foreign noblemen. The Duke wore the Windsor uniform and the riband of the Garter, and was decorated with several stars. He had on over them a large Chesterfield frock coat. He was well received, and cheered at intervals by his admirers.

In the third carriage were Sir Robert Peel and the Earl of Aberdeen, with some of the foreign noblemen in attendance on the Sovereign; and in the other carriages were the suite of Prince Albert and some of the ladies of the Court.

The carriages having drawn up at the entrance at the back of the Royal Stand, the royal and noble party alighted. The Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, and Prince Albert, almost immediately appeared at the windows of the building. The cheers then became more loud and universal. The Duke of Wellington, on coming forward, was also again cheered. The races then began, which are fully described below, and which appeared to give great gratification to the two Monarchs. The Emperor of Russia more particularly appeared to take great interest in the proceedings, and was in conversation with Prince Albert for some time, apparently on the nature of the sport. Notwithstanding the gaiety and ton given to the race-course by the presence of persons of so exalted a rank, and the rarity of such an occurrence, the course appeared dull, and the want of something to do seemed to be felt by a very large class. Promenading was resorted to, and there was the usual scene of eating and drinking. At the conclusion of the race for the Queen's Cup, which was won very easily by Alice Hawthorn, the Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, and Prince Albert, left the Royal Stand, and, without any warning, came down upon the turf beneath to examine the winner, with whose points the Emperor seemed particularly pleased. On this occasion the police had much ado, from the suddenness of the visit, to keep back the public. The Emperor was loudly cheered, and evidently enjoyed the scene and the struggle of the spectators to get a close view of him. The royal party did not wait for the conclusion of the day's sports, but, after having seen this race, returned to Windsor Castle in the same order in which they arrived on the ground.

The Emperor of Russia intends to render his visit to Ascot more than a transient benefit to the races. In the course of the day Lord Rosslyn entered the Stewards' Stand, and announced that his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia had signified his intention of subscribing £500 per annum during his life, to be run for at Ascot-heath. Unlike the gift of the Grand Duke Michael at Newmarket, which is paid in cash, the Emperor has determined that his prize shall be a piece of plate of £500, bearing a shield with the Russian coat of arms upon it.

TUESDAY.

The following is an account of the sports, in the order in which they were run off.

The Trial Stakes, of 10 sovs each; two-year-olds, 4st 4lb; three, 7st 4lb; four 8st 7lb; five, 9st; six and aged, 9st 3lb. New Mile. Four subs.

Mr. Townley's Cerrana, 5 yrs (Robinson)	1
Lord E. Russell's Nat, 4 yrs .. (Sly)	2
Lord Chesterfield's Joan of Arc, 3 yrs (Nat)	3
Mr. Griffiths's Hophine, 3 yrs ..(Crouch)	4

2 to 1 on Cerrana, who waited on Hophine to the road, made the rest of the running, and won in a canter by four lengths. The three-year-olds were beaten off.

The Ascot Derby Stakes of 50 sovs each, h ft; for three-year-olds; colts, 8st 7lb fillies, 8st 3lb. Swinley Course. Seven subs.

Lord Chesterfield's The Miser Scarve (Nat)	1
Duke of Bedford's Panther (Robinson)	2
Col. Wyndham's Master Henry (Bell)	3

Betting.—6 to 5 agst Panther, 7 to 4 agst The Miser Scarve. The Miser Scarve took the lead, kept it, and won in a canter by three lengths.

The Ascot Stakes of 25 sovs each, 15 ft, and only 5, &c., with 100 added; the second to receive 50 sovs out of the stakes. One hundred and thirty-three subs, 109 of whom declared, &c.

Mr. Payne's Johnny, aged, 7st 3lb. (Nat)	1
Lord Chesterfield's Knight of the Whistle, 5 yrs, 8st 7lb. .. .. .. (G. Edwards)	2

Betting—7 to 12 agst Priscilla Tomboy, 6 to 1 agst Fox, 6 to 1 agst Knight of the Whistle, 7 to 1 agst El Mahorry, 7 to 1 agst Donnybrook, 10 to 1 agst Johnny, and 10 to 1 agst Maria Diaz.

Franchise made the running at a good pace, followed by the Odessa colt, Maria Diaz third, and Donnybrook and Fox next, Johnny heading the ruck in their wake. At the top turn Maria Diaz took the second place, but in a few strides resigned it to Donnybrook, who almost as soon was displaced by Fox; the latter retained his position until within half-a-mile of home, when Johnny then went in front, followed by the Knight of the Whistle, and with this change the race may be said to have terminated. Johnny held a strong lead to the end, and won by three lengths; Arcania a bad third, and Priscilla Tomboy fourth; Fox and Rowland next, and the others tailed off at all distances.

The Queen's Vase, added to a Sweepstakes of 20 sovs each, for three-yr-olds and upwards. Two miles. Eleven subs.

Mr. Saivin's Alice Hawthorn, 6 yrs, 9st 4lb (Hesseltine)	1
Lord Verulam's Robert de Gorham, 5 yrs, 9st 7lb .. .. .. (W. Cotton)	2

Betting.—3 to 1 on Alice Hawthorn, who made description easy by taking the lead from Princess Alice at the top turn, making all the running, and winning in the commonest of canters by six lengths; Robert de Gorham, who passed Princess Alice three-quarters of a mile from home, second; the others walked in. So hollow a race was never seen before at Ascot.

The Borough Members' Plate of £50, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each.

The winner to be sold for £150, &c. Old Mile. Fourteen subs.

Lord Chesterfield's The Artful Dodger, 5 yrs (Nat)	1
Mr. Copeland's Imaum, 3 yrs (Arthur)	2

Betting.—7 to 2 agst Artful Dodger, 4 to 1 agst the Seakale filly, 5 to 1 agst Llangollan, and 5 to 1 agst Miss Juha. The Artful Dodger made nearly all the running, and won cleverly by a length; the Seakale filly a good third, and Llangollan a bad fourth. The winner was claimed.

WEDNESDAY.

Under any circumstances a "review" would have been a powerful counter-attraction to the second day's racing at Ascot, and yesterday, excellent as was the bill of fare in the estimation of all who love and understand the sport, the extinction of all public interest in it was the natural and inevitable consequence of the announcement that the grand military spectacle in the Park was "got up" for the especial entertainment of royalty, domestic and foreign. To hedge to this formidable opposition to the amusements under his immediate control, the noble Master of the Buck Hounds delayed the commencement of the races until three o'clock, thus enabling those who survived the dust, heat, and fatigue of the review, to get to the heath in time to witness the whole of the running. Some "gluttons," in their love of pleasure, availed themselves of the opportunity so considerately afforded them, and made a day of it; but it must be admitted the number was very small, and thus some really good sport was almost thrown away upon a select and most apathetic assemblage.

The events recorded below, as fully as the quickness with which they were run off will permit, were not brought to a close until six o'clock. Some of them possessed considerable interest, and, had the "ring" been in a healthy state, would have given ample employment to the professional speculators. The state of abeyance, however, in which the betting for the late Derby remains, has, and for sometime will continue, to operate as a serious hindrance to betting round, and may ultimately do more towards assisting Sir James Graham's efforts to check the diffusion of a spirit of gambling than any harm he may receive from the report of the select committee.

The Swinley Stakes of 25 sovs each, 15 ft, with 50 sovs added. Swinley Course. 7 subs.

Lord Glenlyon's Ben y Ghlo, 4 yrs .. (J. Day, jun.)	1
Duke of Richmond's Pastoral, 3 yrs .. .. (Nat)	2

Betting: 7 to 4 on Ben y Ghlo, who jumped off with the lead, but was passed after running a quarter of a mile, and waited on the duke's colt to the lower turn; he then resumed his lead, kept it to the end, and won easy by a length.

The Fern Hill Stakes of 15 sovs each, 5 ft, and 50 sovs added. 13 subs.

Mr. Ongley's b f Mystery, 2 yrs (Petit)	1
Mr. Edwards's Hedgehog, 2 yrs (Whitehouse)	3

Betting: 3 to 1 agst Beaumont, 7 to 2 agst Hedgehog, 4 to 1 agst Prince of Wales, and 5 to 1 agst Mystery.

The Prince of Wales went in advance at a great pace for a quarter of a mile, and was then passed by Beaumont and Hedgehog, Mystery lying off; at the stand she closed with them, headed them at the end of the race, and won cleverly by a length, Beaumont a respectable third, and the others beaten so far that the judge placed them all.

The Great Ascot Produce Stakes of 100 sovs each, h ft, for three yrs old; colts st 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 3lb; with 200 sovs added for the winner, and 100 for the second horse. The winner of the Derby, 7lb; of the Oaks, 5lb; of the 2000 gs, or the 1000 gs, 3lb extra. Untried horses and mares allowed 3lb; once round. 29 subs.

Mr Osbaldeston's Sister to Martingale, 3lbs .. .. (Rogers)	1
Col. Peel's Zenobia, 3lbs (Chapple)	2

Betting.—2 to 1 agst Sister to Martingale, 3 to 1 agst Emerald; 7 to 2 agst Seaport; and 6 to 1 agst Jamaica. The Bee took the lead at a steady pace, followed by the favourite. Crosby third, Zenobia and Seaport lying in the rear. They ran thus to the Brickkiln-road, where the favourite took up the running, and had a clear lead for within a distance and a half of home. Zenobia then went up, headed her at the stand, and appeared to have the race in hand, but tired and ran out near the chair, and was beaten by half a length; Emerald a bad third.

Her Majesty's Plate of 100 guineas; three yrs old, 7st 2lb; four, 8st 8lb; five, 10st; six and aged, 10st 5lb. From the new mile post, once round and in.

Lord Verulam's Robert de Gorham, 5 yrs .. (W. Cotton)	1
Lord Glenlyon's Ben y Ghlo, 4 yrs .. .. (J. Day, jun.)	2

Betting.—6 to 4 agst Robert de Gorham; 4 to 1 agst Ben y Ghlo, 4 to 1 agst Wee Pet. Ben y Ghlo made the running, followed to within half a mile of home by Robert de Gorham and Wee Pet. The mare then took the lead, which she kept to the stand, where Robert went past her, had it all his own way, and won by five lengths; the tailing so great that all were placed.

The Royal Hunt Cup of 200 sovs, with 100 added, for three-yrs-old, &c. 32 subs

New Mile.

Sir T. W. Bulkeley's Bishop of Romford's Cob, 4 yrs, 7st 3lb (Marlow) 1
Colonel Anson's Attila 3 yrs, 6st 9lb .. .. (G. Edwards) 2
Lord Exeter's Maria Diaz, 4 yrs, 8st 9lb 3

11 to 4 agst Bishop of Romford's Cob, 5 to 1 agst Portunnus, 5 to 1 agst Attila, 6 to 1 agst Knight of the Wistelle, 8 to 1 agst Amoriso, and 10 to 1 agst Best Bower.

Maria Diaz jumped off with the lead, and, with Best Bower and the favourite in waiting, made running to the distance; the Bishop and Attila then singled themselves out to finish, the Cob leading, and winning cleverly by a length, Maria Diaz a good third, and Dahlia fourth.

The Coronation Stakes of 100 sovs each, h ft; for three-yrs-old fillies, 8st 7lb each; the winner of the Oaks 7lb extra; of the 1000 Guineas, 3lb; of both, 5lb extra. The new mile. 9 subs.

Colonel Anson's The Princess .. .. (Natt) 1
Lord Exeter's Mocha .. .. (Mann) 2
Betting.—8 to 1 on the Princess, who won in a canter, by two lengths.

THURSDAY

Repeated descriptions have so completely shown the Cup Day at Ascot of every particle of novelty, that without any dereliction of duty we might pass at once to the customary matter of fact details of the sport, were it not that the presence of the Queen, made the more welcome by the disappointment in Prosperity, accompanied by her illustrious visitors, gave it an interest that the racing itself failed to produce.

The morning, it is true, was cold, showery, and gloomy, in fact, anything but inviting; but the attraction was not to be resisted, and, long before the arrival of her Majesty, the assemblage on the course, if less numerous than on some occasions, was immense, comprising a phalanx of rank, beauty, and fashion, that is seldom seen now-a-days at a race meeting

The arrival of the royal party was not expected to take place until after the commencement of the races; accordingly the departure from the Castle was so arranged that the cortège entered the new mile about two o'clock. Its appearance was hailed with delight by the company, and its progress up the course elicited the warmest expressions of loyalty and attachment towards her Majesty and the Prince Consort, and of respect towards the august personages by whom they were accompanied. These greetings were warmly repeated on the appearance of their Majesties in the Royal Stand, and were most graciously acknowledged. The procession consisted of ten carriages and four, and a posy phaeton and pair, preceded, as on Tuesday, by the Earl of Rosslyn, the royal harbinger, and several of her Majesty's grooms, with led horses. In the first carriage were her Majesty, the Emperor of Russia the King of Saxony, and Prince Albert. The second carriage contained their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Duchess of Buccleuch, and the Earl of Jersey. In the other carriages were his Grace the Duke of Wellington, who was loudly cheered, the Princes Wassiltschikoff and Radzivil, Count Orloff, several Aide-de-camps, Ministers, and the various members of her Majesty's and Prince Albert's suite.—The departure of the royal party took place after the Cup race, which was over a little before four o'clock; the passage of the royal carriages down the course was accompanied by cheers and waving of hats and handkerchiefs, which ceased not until they were out of sight. The course was then cleared for the Grand Stand Plate, which was over a few minutes after four o'clock, and was succeeded by a shower of rain, just heavy and long enough to lay the dust, and make the journey homeward an agreeable one. We subjoin full particulars.

The Windsor Forest Stakes of 50 sovs each, h ft, for three yrs old fillies, 8st 7lb each; the winner of the One Thousand Guinea Stakes, Derby, Oaks, or Coronation Stakes, 5lb extra. Old mile.

Lord Vera ans a Charlotte 1
Mr. Fitzmore's Skeleton 2
Mr. Ford's Escola 3

The New Stakes of 10 sovs each, with 100 added, for two yrs old; colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 3lb; winners previous to starting of a stake of 100 sovs added, including the winner's own stake, 5lb extra; T.Y.C.

Mr R. Newman's Bloodstone 1
Mr Day's Old England 2
Mr. Mostyn's Pantaan 3

15 ran. Winner objected to.

A Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each, for three yrs-old which never won a stake before the time of closing; colts, 8st 9lb; fillies, 8st 5lb; the winner of either Ruddlesworth, the Column, Two Thousand Guineas, One Thousand Guineas, or Oaks Stakes, 3lb, or any two of the above, or the Derby, 10lb extra, no horse to carry more than 10lb extra. New mile.

Sir G. Heathcote's Campanero 1
Mr. Ford's Sir D. Gagney Dudley 2

THE GOLD CUP

By Subscription of 20 sovs each, with 200 added, the second to receive 50 sovs out of the stake; three-yrs-old, 6st 10lb; four, 8st 5lb; five, 9st; six and aged, 9st 5lb; mares and geldings allowed 3lb. To start at the Cup post and go once round, about two miles and a half.

Lord Albemarle's b g Defence 1
Mr. Townley's Corranna 2
Colonel Peel's Iuman 3

The Grand Stand Plate of 50 sovs (handicap), added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each. If fifteen subscribers, the second horse to receive 20 sovs out of the stakes. One round and a distance.

Lord Albemarle's Delaperre 1
Lord Exeter's Maria Diaz, four yrs, 7st 6lb .. .. (Mann) 2
Sir G. Heathcote's f by Velocipede, three yrs, 6st 4lb .. (Higgins) 3

Won by a length.

The Dinner Stakes of 100 sovs each, h ft, for three yrs olds; one mile (18 subs.)

Colonel Peel's Orlando .. .. walked over

FRIDAY.

MATCH.—Jewess beat Trapola.

The Wokingham Stakes.—First Class.

Mr. Stanbrough's Isleworth .. .. (Natt) 1
Mr. Balchin no Windsor 2
Mr. Udny as Nunnaka colt 3
Mr. Little's Julia 4

Won by two lengths.

The Second Class of Wokingham Stakes.

Mr. S. Herbert as Moustache 1
Lord E. Russell's Nat 2

Won by a head.

The Windsor Town Plate of 50 sovs.; two yrs old, 8st 6lb; three, 7st 10lb; four, 8st 3lb; five and upwards, 9st; mares and geldings allowed 3lb; the winner to be sold for 100 sovs. T.Y.C.

Lord March's Jew-boy 1
Mr. Greville's Portunnus 2

Eleven ran.

MATCH.—Assay received from Bother'em.

The Engravings upon pages 368 and 369 represent the most characteristic scenes at Ascot; as the arrival of the illustrious visitors on the course, a pic-nic party in full enjoyment al fresco; and portraits of the Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, and Prince Albert seated in the royal carriage; from sketches taken by our artist on the Heath: altogether presenting the most attractive points and incidents of this very splendid meeting.

THE ASCOT PRIZE PLATE.

The Plate which has been run for this year is highly creditable to French skill. The GOLD CUP, or principal prize, awarded on Thursday, is not, as its name imports, a drinking vessel, but in the form of a shield, 30 inches in diameter, weighing 300 ounces, silver gilt, and nominally of the value of 300 guineas, although its actual cost is far beyond this sum. It has been manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, (late Storr, Mortimer, and Hunt), of Bond street, from an original design by Mr. Howard, the execution and correction of which has been superintended by Mr. Baily, R.A. The design strongly reminds us of more than one of the Cartoons, lately exhibited in Westminster Hall. It represents a most stirring scene from early English history—Boadicea, the Queen of the Iceni, in a war-chariot with her two daughters, leading an her army to battle, and driving back the legions of Rome. The scene of barbarous Britons, and the polished Roman soldiers, is well maintained. The drawing is very fine, the grouping excellent, and the details are well carried out. The figures are in high relief from the base, and stand boldly out, so that a good effect of shadow is produced by the light in which the shield is placed. The work is throughout a splendid specimen of chasing, and, altogether, reflects high honour upon all engaged in its design and execution. It is a truly magnificent production, and would grace the sideboard of any noble mansion in England.

"THE ROYAL HUNT CUP" which was run for on Wednesday is also designed by Mr. Howard, and executed under the inspection of Mr. Baily, by Messrs Hunt and Roskell. It is one of the first class. It consists of a group in bright and frosted silver, representing King Robert Bruce and Sir Clair hunting down a stag which had long baffled all pursuit of the hunters. The King is on horseback, the Knight St. Clair on foot. The deer is prostrate and the dogs are in the act of seizing upon him. The incident is historical, and amongst the records of the Bruce's family. The group is very beautiful; it is at once chaste and animated. The artist has avoided coldness without exaggerating his story into a mere theatrical representation.

These prizes were much admired by the Emperor of Russia, on his Majesty's visit to the show-rooms of the manufacturers, on Monday last.

THE QUEEN'S CUP, which was run for on Tuesday, is designed and modelled by Mr. Cotterell, and manufactured by Messrs. Garrard, of the Haymarket. It is of the class, a very noble piece of plate, such as our stout and sturdy ancestors in the days of the Tudors would have delighted to have quaffed from. It is a large tankard of polished silver gilt, enriched with chasings in silver not gilt; the handle is solid and massive, and the lid is surmounted with a group representing the conflict between St. George and the Dragon, an old subject, but treated in a manner perfectly novel. The horse of the valiant knight lies stark; the knight, on foot, over the body of his steed, protects his head with his shield against the furious onset of his monstrous adversary, who with expanded jaws has seized the shield, and is preparing to crush it to pieces. The sword of the hero meanwhile is not idly employed, and it is obvious that he will ultimately be victorious. The splendid cup, or vase, for so it is called in racing parlance, attracted great attention, and was much admired at the race-course on Tuesday.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

ASCOT HEATH RACES IN 1844.

To gold refined gold; to paint the lily;
To throw a perfume on the violet.—SHAKESPEARE.

As little necessary as any of these things of supererogation seemed an accession of dignity and kings to the sole meeting of racing honoured by royal countenance. Yet such was its fortune during the week in which we write, and, as Gray's "Elegy" might, or should have said—

Full many a pignante morceau, hour on hour,
Is lost, whose sparkling fancies none shall hear;
Full many a yarn of "forty parson-power"
Steeves's maiden dulness to the ear.

We proceed to note the event in columns that shall afford it as fair a hope of immortality as the most "gorgeous monuments." It was on the last Tuesday granted to our wishes that the anniversary of Ascot's Olympics opened, in the presence of the Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, and the absence of our own fair Queen. Also were not those many familiar faces—the chevaliers who dealt in roulette, and thimbles and peas, and the youths whose ambition it was to excel in pricking the garter. Nevertheless, we were not quite abandoned to our own aversion; there were worthies to the rescue—many and not far between—in the vicinity of the Grand Stand.

There was the individual, long, slim, and unsubstantial as the ghost of a greybound in a consumption, who with the wail of a channel-house, without a penny of cost to his back, and an apology for a Wellington on one foot, told you he "dreamt that he dwelt in marble halls:" the carroty-poll'd Scotch piper with the indecent remains of what once were tartan trousers, and a dreadful bad squint, who made you his confidant in an affair with the Maid of Gowrie, and the young virgin with the couple and a half of affection's pledges at her side, and a pair of curiously-tinted eyes, who assured you "there is nothing half so sweet as love's young dream." With these, and other appliances, the week's sports commenced, and happy they who were there to see.

The drawing up of the curtain was a propitious one. Perhaps there never was a more perfect sample of what a holiday ought to be. The skies were blue and cloudless; the sunlight was as radiant as your true love's smile, and the air as fragrant as her sigh we were just in time to save ourselves from a simile anent her lips. As novelty is the great flavour of life, we speak of the new features of the festival as first tasted. Everybody knows, or ought to know, how the royal procession is marshalled on the royal course, with the royal corps of woodcraft in front, the equipages for use next, and those for show in the rear—the latter a servoy of pony carriages such as the good fairy in Cinderella alone could conceive or contrive. Such, of course, was its order on the occasion to which we now revert. In the first barouche of business was the Emperor of Russia and the King of Saxony, head-heads, full-grown, and colonic, and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, with his "beaver" only occasionally "up," as being more acclimatised. Apropos of being covered, we observed, the Duke of Wellington wore his hat continually in the Imperial and Royal presences: his claim to the privilege was felt. Shortly before the arrival of the cortège it was circulated that the Czar had announced his intention of conferring an annuity of £500 in perpetuity on the English turf—may he survive eternity, and ourself live to see it

Boots it not to tell of the racing issues of the week beyond their details, for they are of small account, and withal intrinsically of little achievement. The prizes were not handsome, merely observing en passant "it won't do here Mr. Ferguson." If this be a word to the wise, we trust those who can read its meaning will mark and inwardly digest it—howbeit the flavour may not relish. There is no betting: but there will be two good days for a Monsey Hurst next week—which is better.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—Betting was flat at the following prices:—

AGCOT PLATE

8 to 1 agst Johnny | 6 to 1 agst Patchouli | 7 to 1 agst Donnybrook
2 to 1 — Priscilla Tomboy | 6 to 1 — Fox | 8 to 1 — El Mahcrry
4 to 1 agst Lord Chesterfield's two.

GUEST'S VASE.

2 to 1 on Alice Hawthorn.

ASCOT CUP

7 to 4 agst Alice Hawthorn | 7 to 1 agst Lothario | 7 to 1 agst Corranna
10 to 1 agst Polson.
5 to 2 agst Alice for the two events

ST. LEGER.

1500 to 100, and 1000 to 93 agst Running Rein getting this and the Derby, and 5 to 1 agst him for this event, should he succeed in getting the Derby.—6 to 4 offered on Orlando agst him for the "double final" in the Exchequer, which is expected to come off towards the end of the present month.

DERBY.

12 to 1 agst Col. Peel's two colts (t) | 38 to 1 agst Lord G. Bentinck's lot (t)
20 to 1 — Cobweb colt (t) | 50 to 1 — John Day's.
Thursday was a dies non.

ETON REGATTA.

The annual regatta of the Etonians took place on Tuesday evening. At half-past seven o'clock, the boats being manned by the gentlemen, each crew being distinguished by their check shirts and sailor hats, started from the Brocas to Old Barley in the following order, attended by the band of the 1st Life Guards:—

UPPER BOATS.

Monarch, ten-oar.—Codrington, captain, of the boats, Babbington, Luttrell, ma., Sir M. Shaw Stewart, Harkness, Slade, Speke, Baillie, Ethelstone, Woodbridge—Mr. Finch, steerer.

Victory, eight-oar.—Sutton, captain, Myers, Williamson, Preston, Adlington, Mirehouse, Hurgiuson, Heyward—Shaw Stewart, mi., steerer

Prince of Wales, eight-oar.—Dickson, captain, Luttrell, mi., Talfourd, Myers, mi., Sayer, Mr. Hanbury, mi., Trumayne, Mr. Eliot—Mr. Lascelles, steerer.

LOWER BOATS.

Britannia, eight-oar.—Errington, captain, Winter, Fitzgerald, Mills, Alexander, Fredricks, Green, Mosely—Greenwood, steerer.

Dreadnought, eight-oar.—Burton, captain, Balguy, Hodgson, Beckwith, Boileau, Shipton, Dean, Jones—Mr. Fox, steerer.

Thetis, eight-oar.—Sutherland, captain, Nash, Boynton, Leslie, Cooper, Wallace, Trecfoott, Bailie, mi.—Lawford, steerer.

St. George, eight-oar.—Hornby, captain, Fellowes, Wrangham, Portman, Pott, Sutherland, mi., Board, Cooke—Richards, steerer.

After doing full justice to a handsome collation, which was provided under tents on the opposite shore, and drinking the usual patriotic and other toasts, they again manned their boats and pulled back to Windsor-bridge in beautiful style. They then rowed from the bridge to the Eyott for nearly an hour, during which time a splendid discharge of fire-works took place, consisting of six brilliant set pieces, royal salutes, crimson fire from floating barges, green fire, purple fire, flights of rockets of all colours, star shells, red fire, large stars, exploding mines, flights of Xaussier's water fire-works, yellow fire, batteries of Roman candles discharging coloured stars, golden rain, half-pound water rockets, Bengal lights, &c.

FULHAM REGATTA.

A very spirited race took place on Tuesday amongst the watermen plying at Fulham-bridge, many of whom have acquired celebrity, and have distinguished themselves as scullers in picked matches upon the Thames. The contest was with ten pair of sculls, in three heats, for a purse of sovereigns, given by the ladies and gentlemen of Fulham, and it drew a very large assemblage of persons. At three o'clock the following took their stations for the first heat:—W. Phelps, green; J. Kelly, sen., yellow; W. Hull, stripes; J. Hawkins, plaid; and J. Powell, sen., white.

The distance contested was from Fulham-bridge up the river, round a boat moored off the Crab Tree; down, round a boat moored off the Broom House; in, through the centre arch of Fulham-bridge.

Yellow took the lead, followed by plaid and white, the last two being scull and scull, and making a most excellent race all the way up. The three boats rounded the distance buoy on each other's quarter, and a very fine struggle took place, coming to the Broom House, and back to the barge. Yellow won by two lengths; plaid was second, white third, and stripes fourth.

Immediately after the close of this heat W. Snell, pink; J. Kelly, jun., blue; J. Powell, red; S. Knight, light blue; and J. Johnson, purple, went off for the next heat, rowing the same distance as before.

It was a very fine start, the first three boats by purple, closely followed by red and blue, and light blue well up. Off the Vice-Chancellor's red and blue passed purple, but the three boats turned round within a length of each other. In coming down blue took the lead, closely followed by red, white latter shortly afterwards regained his place, and won the heat; blue was second, purple third, and light blue fourth.

At half-past six the three first men of each of the two preceding heats, started for the grand heat. Yellow and red took the lead, waited upon by purple and plaid. In rounding the distance-boat blue and red got together, allowing purple to cut them off. In this way they continued some time, when red rowed by blue and purple at the same moment. In this way they continued round the boat, and although each tried his utmost no change took place. Yellow won by above a hundred and fifty yards, red was second, blue third, purple fourth, and plaid and white on his quarter. The race was very excellently conducted by John Phelps and John Freeman.

ROWING MATCH.—One of the most spirited wagers ever witnessed took place on Wednesday, between Thomas Cook, of Hungerford Pier, and Frederick Lett, of Lambeth, for £20. Of the former but little is known, save that he was engaged some two or three years ago in a sculler's match at Putney with Keatley, of Lambeth. Lett has been for some time a public favourite, having, when much younger, distinguished himself in three or four great cutter races, and last year at the Thames Regatta. The distance was, as usual, from Westminster-bridge to Putney, with tide, and at a little before five in the evening several of the Cambridge rowers, gentlemen of the Leander, and of the Guy's, Royal Academy, and other aquatic clubs, were drawing towards Westminster-bridge to witness the race. Lett being the favourite at five to four. The start took place exactly at five o'clock. Cook, who had won the toss for choice of stations, and had taken the Middlesex shore, dashed off with the lead, which he was, however, unable to retain above the Horseferry. Here they became scull and scull, and some very beautiful rowing followed until nearing Vauxhall-bridge, when Lett gradually drew himself a length in advance of his opponent, who, in a minute or so afterwards, again applied himself to excessive labour, and came up to his adversary's scull, but had not power to pass him. Lett again went a length or so in advance, and his opponent repeated his efforts to overhaul him, and again came alongside, but apparently exhausted by the effort, was unable to go in advance. A little above the Red House Lett was seen showing symptoms of distress, and Cook, stimulated by the cheers of his friends, again applied himself to his work, and in a most determined spurt, came almost scull and scull with his adversary. Lett here, by dint of superior generalship, worked his opponent over into the light, and suddenly changing his course, shot right away from his opponent, whose rowed could well retrieve his position. Cook, however, again tried hard for victory, and came nearly up to his adversary's quarter, but could not overhaul him, although he continued his exertions until within a quarter of a mile of the winning-post. Lett, after unceasing labour, won the race by three lengths.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

In consequence of Mario's sudden indisposition, the opera of "La Semiramide" was performed in place of "Lucia" on Tuesday night last; but his absence was fully atoned for by the presence of Grisi, in the part of Semiramide, than which nothing more splendid can well be imagined, considered, as it either may may be, a piece of acting or dressing or dramatic melody. She exhibited in the rocal Siddons of the Italian stage. The other parts were most ably sustained by Favanti, Lablache, Corelli, and Fornasari. In the ballet Cerito was, as usual, delightful. A contemporary remarks that "The ballet of the audience is here from time to time directed towards the royal boxes as if they expected every moment to be gratified by the arrival of her Majesty and her angust guests. Their natural desire was not destined to be gratified. We hear that on Saturday, however, this spectacle, surpassing any the stage itself can offer, will be enjoyed by the privileged frequenters of Her Majesty's Theatre, and those who may be fortunate enough to secure places."

Cerito is, as if accidental aristocracy could ever be placed on a par with artistical genius! Prah, pudet.

On Thursday night, Bellini's opera, "I Puritani," was performed at this house for "à ce qu'on dit" the last time this season. We hope it will be a long time before the last time of its representation may take place, even in the present season. Grisi was, as usual, unrivalled in the part of Elvira, and Mario in the obligato quartet, "A te O Cara," left us little to regret, although Rubini first enchanted us by his magic performance of that exquisite morceau of Bellini's gemins. Persiani, in the last act of "La Sonnambula," was, "as is her custom," the Amina. "La Vivandiere" followed, in which the fascinating Cerito danced the "Redowa Polka," extracting applause from every fastidiously "fine" the whole performance terminating with the ballet of "Ondine," in which her celebrated "Pas de l'Ombre" went far to leave almost all other danseuses in the shade. She certainly is in the possession of the "poetry of motion," and in the new "pas de deux" with Perrot, called "La Manola, or Arragonese Danse de Caractere," she, as well as he, exhibited extraordinary grace and dexterity. What a strange thing that one man, like St. Leon, should have two arts at his toes' and fingers' ends! Equally great, as the organists would say, as a manualist or pedalist. Yet it is so: St. Leon is as great with his digitals as he is with his feet.

MUSIC.

HERR OFFENBACH.

In truth this is an age of musical prodigies: scarcely have we time to sufficiently admire the last wonder than a new one springs up, and again engrosses our amazement. The best thing to do, in self-defence, is to adopt Horace's "nil admirari," and not be surprised at anything.

Herr Jacques Offenbach, the celebrated violoncellist, was born at Cologne in 1822. His first studies were devoted to the violin, under the direction of his father, a musician of considerable celebrity; but his penchant from his earliest age was for the violoncello. That "unspiritual God" Opportunity, afforded him the means of vindicating his pretensions to be a distinguished performer on his favourite instrument; for at a musical soirée given at Cologne, on which occasion one of Beethoven's quartetts was to be played, the gentleman to whom the part of the bass was assigned fell suddenly indisposed, and the young Jacques, nothing doubts, and even jeers, of the assembled company, requested permission to occupy his place. His application was acceded to, and his performance astounded everybody. At the age of fifteen he went to Paris, and, having passed his Oberthür, had the signal honour of being immediately admitted into the Royal Conservatory. Shortly afterwards he was engaged at the Opera Comique; but, in 1837, being of delicate health, and unable to undergo the fatigues of an orchestra, he retired to devote himself to the study of composition, which he pursued for the space of four years, under the surveillance of Halevy. In 1842 he made his début in the fashionable saloons of Paris, as a solo player, and was so successful that in a very little time he became L' Artiste à la mode in the French Capital. This season he has ventured into the great vortex, or musical whirlpool of London, and has "put off" with immense applause, every character he has appeared. He certainly is an artiste of first-rate ability, and, we might add, agility on his instrument, and moreover a man deserving the respect of every musician for his acquirements, and of every gentleman for his deportment.

FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

BONNETS.—Though the forms of chapeaux and capotes are decidedly fixed, there is a tendency to an increased width in the brims of the former. The close form for which we take the French name capote is always adopted for négligé, and is also employed in dress for morning visits or trimmings for demi toilette. The prettiest of the latter are the pink or blue silk crown bonnets covered with crape to correspond. A new style of trimming is coming into vogue, we mean a long wh te ostrich feather, attached on one side of the chapeau by a Bengal rose. A new material has appeared for chapeaux, which is only used for dresses; it is called the tissu Polka. Another for chapeaux only, and very much in vogue is the gaze Polka. A few black lace chapeaux, over white or cherry coloured crape, have appeared and are extremely pretty. Wreaths are more in use for trimming chapeaux than bouquets of flowers.

SHAWLS, SCARFS, MANTELETS, &c.—The polonaise, when made and trimmed in good style, is, perhaps, the most elegant, as it is one of the most expensive, summer pardessus; but those imitations of it—we mean the short pelisses, as we suppose we must call them—that are made of rich coloured crape, have appeared and are extremely pretty. Wreaths are more in use for trimming chapeaux than bouquets of flowers.

SHAWLS, SCARFS, MANTELETS, &c.—The polonaise, when made and trimmed in good style, is, perhaps, the most elegant, as it is one of the most expensive, summer pardessus; but those imitations of it—we mean the short pelisses, as we suppose we must call them—that are made of rich coloured crape, have appeared and are extremely pretty. Wreaths are more in use for trimming chapeaux than bouquets of flowers.

ROBES, &c.—High corsages keep their ground, those opening to the waist are still in a majority. Although there is no decided alteration in sleeves, and tight ones are in a majority, we have reason to believe that demi large sleeves will be soon introduced Barege has come a good deal into favour both for the promenade and the demi toilette, we mean the writable barege, not the substance of it. Muslin, tarlatane, and organdy, are all fashionable in evening dress, but the first only is seen in outdoor dress, and that but seldom. There are nearly as many robes untrimmed as trimmed round the border, but if a flounce is adopted, it consists either of flounces cut in round scallops at the edge, or of tufts. Several evening robes are made with double skirts; the upper one is looped on the left side higher than ones are in a habit, and flowers, or a rich ornament consisting of ribbon.

HEAD DRESS.—Although head-dresses of hair, decorated with flowers, are very numerous, we doubt if they are in a majority; for demi coiffures caps are still in great favour, and the most elegant of the first are composed of ribbons disposed in coques, which either mingle with the hair, or it is in ringlets, or encircle the face, if the hair is in bands: ends of ribbon float at each side. White and pink gauze caps, trimmed with narrow tulle ruches, are a good deal in favour.—Abridged from the "Ladies Gazette of Fashion."

Herr Jacques Offenbach, the astonishing Violoncellist, performed on Thursday evening at Windsor before the Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, Queen Victoria, and Prince Albert with great success.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

LATEST NEWS FROM INDIA AND CHINA.

We have received by the Overland Mail, which reached town on Tuesday last, letters and papers from India and China, extending to the 1st of May and 10th of March. The most important news from the former place is the murder of Soochet Singh, who had come to Lahore on the invitation of his uncle, Heerah Singh, and at the earnest request of the seditious troops, who afterwards deserted him. On his arrival, Heerah Singh, at the head of 20,000 men, and only about 500 under his command. He was overpowered, and, along with other chiefs, nobly fell, covered with wounds. Ninety-five of the female portion of his household are stated to have immolated themselves on hearing of his death—and his sons have left their homes, no one knows whither—but, of course, for the purpose of meeting present mischief, which has caused Heerah Singh great uneasiness. Goolab Singh—the remaining uncle of Soochet and brother of Soochet—who, according to latest accounts, was meditating a march on Lahore, in company with Kashmeira Singh and Peahord Singh, whose pretensions is seems now to have warmly espoused—is stated to be highly excited at the death of his brother, and has demanded the delivery up of Pundit Jellar, the favourite counsellor of Heera Singh, under whose advice he seems to have acted in this affair. The wife and children of this unfortunate man,

THE LATE M. LAFITTE.

FUNERAL OF M. JACQUES LAFITTE.

At half-past 12 o'clock, on the 30th May, the funeral procession marched from the Rue Lafitte for the Church of St. Roch, in the Rue Saint Honoré, in the following order:—

Two squadrons of Municipal Guards on horseback. A detachment of troops of the line.
A company of the 2d Legion of the National Guards, of which M. Lafitte was a member.

THE FUNERAL CAR,

The Pall held by M. Thiers, M. d'Argout, M. Arago, and M. Dupin;
Followed by a Deputation and other Members of the Chamber of Deputies, about 150 to 200 in number.

A company of the National Guards, 2d Legion. Detachments of Troops of the Line.
Groups of workmen, and students of the Ecole de Médecine and Ecole de Droit.
A company of the 2d Legion of National Guards.
Three of the King's carriages and about twenty mourning coaches.
National Guards of the 2d Legion.
A squadron of Municipal Guards on horseback. A squadron of Hussars.
An immense number of Troops of the line, and several pieces of Artillery, with lighted match.

All the shops in the Rue Richelieu, Rue de la Paix, Rue Castiglione, Place Vendôme, and the Rue St. Honoré were closely shut, and municipal guards were stationed at the corner of each street to prevent the circulation of carts and coaches.

At one o'clock the cortège reached St. Roch, where the funeral service was performed by the Archbishop of Paris. A funeral hymn was sung by the artists of the Académie de Musique and several Italians.

At half-past two o'clock the procession left the church and passed up Rue Richelieu to the Boulevards, which it followed to the Cemetery of Père-la-Chaise, where the family of Lafitte have a vault. On reaching the Place de la Bastille, the procession, with great solemnity, marched round the Column of July, the people crying out "Hats off," and shouting "Honour to the Martyrs of July." The procession entered the burial ground at half-past five o'clock; several speeches were made by M. Pierre Lafitte, M. Arago, M. Garnier-Pages, M. Philippe Dupré, M. Visenet, of Rouen, and a young student, in the name of the different colleges.

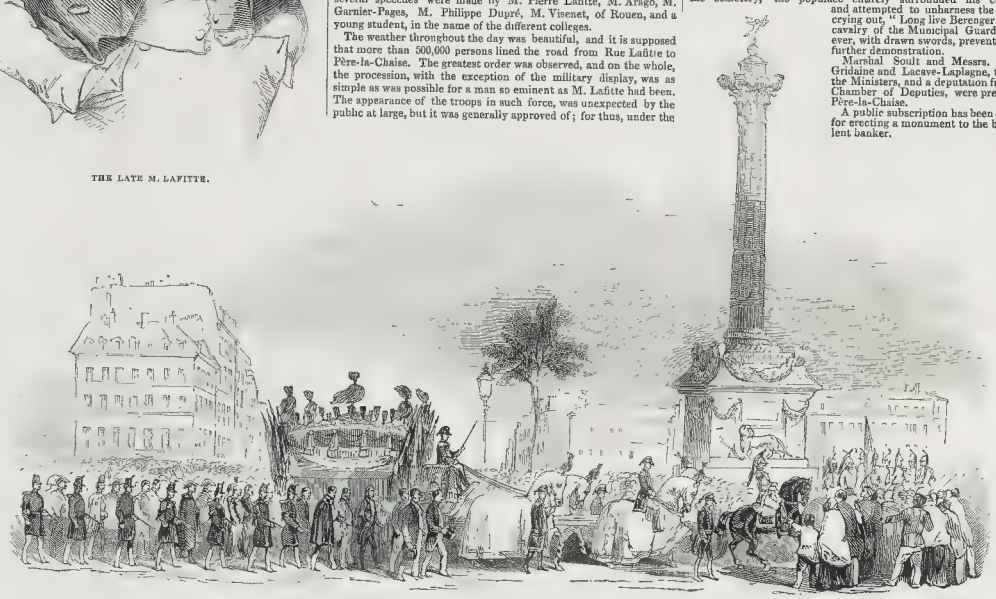
The weather throughout the day was beautiful, and it is supposed that more than 500,000 persons lined the road from Rue Lafitte to Père-la-Chaise. The greatest order was observed, and on the whole, the procession, with the exception of the military display, was as simple as was possible for a man so eminent as M. Lafitte had been. The appearance of the troops in such force, was unexpected by the public at large, but it was generally approved of; for thus, under the pretext of doing honour to the remains of the deceased, a guarantee was presented for the maintenance of order.

The following is an extract of the speech delivered by M. Garnier-Pages:—"Thus we have another day of mourning—another man of the people, beloved and cherished by the people, has fallen—the people mourn over his grave. In the name of the working classes—in the name of the martyrs of July—we approach the grave to render homage to the son of a workman—to a son of July—to a citizen, a minister; great by the goodness of his heart—great by his intelligence—great as an honest and benevolent man." M. Arago, in his speech, related the following anecdote:—"Lafitte was proud," observed the learned astronomer, "proud of his birth—proud that he rose from the people. Some short time previous to his death, his grandchild, the youngest daughter of the Prince de la Moskowa, playfully told her venerable grandfather, that at her school they called her 'Princess,' and that she could not make out why her grandfather was not a Prince. 'So I am,' observed Lafitte; 'and when again you are called a Princess, say that your grandfather is 'Prince of the Chisel,'" alluding to his father's trade as a carpenter. The following is also related of Lafitte:—In 1828, M. Charles Nodier, the author of "Trilby," had the misfortune to lose a sum of between two and three thousand francs. Madame Nodier, who knew of the existence of this money, which had been put by as a reserve, and having occasion for it for her household expenses, asked her husband to give it her. M. Nodier, much embarrassed, replied that he no longer had it by him, as he had placed it out at interest. "With whom?" asked Madame Nodier. "With Lafitte," was the reply. In the absence of Nodier, Madame went to M. Lafitte, and stated the object of her visit. Without hesitating, M. Lafitte said, "It is quite true your husband placed the money with me, you can go to my cashier and receive it." Poor Nodier was saved from an agreeable matrimonial tête à tête.

On Berenger, the justly-celebrated and popular poet quitting the cemetery, the populace entirely surrounded his carriage, and attempted to unharness the horses, crying out, "Long live Berenger!" The cavalry of the Municipal Guard, however, with drawn swords, prevented this further demonstration.

Marshal Soult and Messrs. Cunin-Gridaine and Lacave-Laplagne, three of the Ministers, and a deputation from the Chamber of Deputies, were present at Père-la-Chaise.

A public subscription has been opened for erecting a monument to the benevolent banker.



THE FUNERAL PROCESSION OF M. LAFITTE PASSING THE JULY COLUMN, AT PARIS.

SPRING EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL DEVON AND CORNWALL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

On Thursday week the spring exhibition of the above society took place in the assembly room of Elliott's Royal Hotel, Plymouth; and from 12 o'clock at noon until 5 P.M, the noble saloon was thronged by a constant succession of visitors, comprising all the rank and fashion, naval and military officers, &c., of the neighbourhood. The splendid band of the Plymouth division of Royal Marines occupied the orchestra, and delighted the company with their performances. The collection of plants and flowers was truly magnificent. The amateurs who contributed so much to the embellishment of the room were Mrs. Wells, of Cowley House, near Exeter; H. F. Spence, Esq., of Mutley, near Plymouth; W. C. Hodge, Esq., of Foands; J. Read, Esq., of Upland, Tamerton; Rev. W. Radcliffe, Warleigh; Mrs. Tucker, of Trematon Castle; W. P. H. Carew, Esq., of Anthony House; Sir Edward Thornton; R. Robertson, Esq., Membland, &c. &c. &c; and their various productions reflected infinite skill on their gardeners. At the head of the room a table extended the whole width of the spacious place: this was occupied by Mr. Alexander Pontey, nurseryman, of Plymouth, and was furnished with the choicest exotics of his stove and greenhouse. In the centre, and directly in front of the orchestra, was a beautiful device of flowers, with Mr. Pontey's name underneath. The tables on the side were decorated with a great number of beautiful plants, from the nurseries of Mr. F. Wood, and Mr. Rendle, of Plymouth. The grand stand in the middle of the room was appropriated to the amateurs; on the end, immediately opposite the entrance door, were exquisite collections of Ericas, Orchidaceæ, and others, from the conservatory of Mrs. Wells, Cowley House.

We have not space for the list of prizes, which fills two columns of the Plymouth Herald. Among the extraordinaries exhibited were, three fine large lemons, grown by Mr. Poole, at the King's Arms, Kingsbridge, in his open garden, the tree being merely defended in the winter by a frame of glass work. Also, a fine specimen of Paulownia imperialis, a new and handsome tree, recently introduced from Japan, by Dr. Siebold. Its leaves are exceedingly large, and the flowers are also handsome, and produced in great abundance.

The Prize Medal of the Society, and their Card of Merit, designed by Colonel Hamilton Smith, of Plymouth, are very tasteful works.

The Royal Hotel Assembly Rooms and Theatre, at Plymouth, is one of the finest public buildings erected by Foulston, in the West of England: it forms a quadrangle 272 feet by 220 feet, with a magnificent Ionic portico, one of the largest in this country, with columns 20 feet high, and 3 feet 6 inches diameter. The Assembly Room, in which the Exhibition was held, is one of a superb suite, and is 77 by 40 feet, and 32 feet high, with soffites springing from an entablature, supported by Corinthian columns; the ceiling being decorated by a late native artist, with the Synod of the Olympian Deities, cleverly painted: on many occasions, upwards of 600 persons have assembled in this noble salon.

The Royal Devon and Cornwall Botanical and Horticultural Society has now been in existence upwards of fourteen years, and has attained a position excelled by very few similar institutions. It ranks among its supporters, her Majesty the Queen Dowager, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales (by his Council as Duke of Cornwall), the Earl of Morley, the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, and nearly all the nobility and gentry resident in the vicinity of Plymouth. The interest taken in this Institution has been manifested by the great advancement in the character of the contributions, and the different classes of plants and flowers, particularly Pelargoniums Petunias, Calceolarias, Verbenas, and Pansies.

The annexed sketch of the Exhibition, is from the pencil of Mr. George Jago, master of the Plymouth Public Free School.

THE ROYAL DEVON AND CORNWALL BOTANICAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S SHOW, ASSEMBLY ROOM, PLYMOUTH.

FINE ARTS.—THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

SCENE FROM "COMUS."—FROM A PICTURE BY ETTY, IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

"Scene from Comus," by W. Etty, R.A. (Painted for one of the Frescoes to the Chinese Summer-house, Buckingham Palace Gardens.) In our general notice of this Exhibition, we had occasion to speak in terms of praise of most of the great works displayed. We shall now, as convenience and space permit, and the liberal permission of the several artists allow, proceed to notice a few of them in detail, accompanied by such engravings as may be necessary to illustrate their character and composition. The first for which we have the pleasure of claiming public attention, is a scene from the epilogue to Comus, in which the good spirit, after the triumph of "insnared chastity," proceeds to describe the blissfulness of his native climes—

O'er sensual folly, and intemperance.

Those happy climes that lie
Where day never shuts his eye;
————the gardens fair
Of Hesperus, and his daughters three,
That sing about the golden tree.

And where—

On beds of hyacinth and roses
——— young Adonis oft reposes,
Waxing well of his deep wound
In slumber soft, and on the ground
Sadly sits the Assyrian Queen;
But far above in spangled sheen
Celestial Cupid her famed son advanc'd
Holds his dear Psyche sweet entranc'd,
After her wandering labours long,
'Till free consent the gods among
Make her his eternal bride.

A passage eminently suggestive of poetic forms and harmonious combinations, and well suited, in all respects, to the refined, but gorgeous, fancy of the painter. In embodying the dreamy—the evanescent elements of beauty raised by the poet, consummate skill has been displayed; and this has been accomplished not so much by a literal rendering of his "flowing numbers," as by a translation of them into those forms and colours which the Venetians—and, we had almost said, Poussin—have made familiar, and, therefore, to a certain extent, credible, to us. Nothing can be more slight—indeed, it is but a sketch; but no work of its kind with which we are acquainted conveys at once such a rare combination of graceful forms and rich expressive colouring. We trust the fresco, for which it is the study, may be equally successful, and become a subject of as much pleasure to her Majesty as the picture before us has been to many of her tasteful subjects.

"Rienzi in the Forum." In accordance with our promise we now present to our readers an engraving of Mr. Elmore's very attractive picture. The words of Byron in part explain what the painter has had to describe on canvass:—

Then turn we to her latest tribune's name,
From her ten thousand tyrants turn to thee,
Redeemer of dark centuries of shame—
The friend of Petrarch—hope of Italy—
Rienzi! last of Romans!

Rienzi is in the centre of the picture: he is in the act of addressing his fellow-citizens, and exhorting them to recover their liberties, and assert their rights as Romans. The various groups with which he is surrounded, are listening with the attention the importance of his harangue demands, and the various effects produced upon the respective listeners are highly characteristic of the difference of feeling, and intelligence, and patriotism, amongst his auditors. It must be remembered that few of the Roman citizens of the days of Rienzi were fired with the zeal by which he was distinguished, until after he had aroused them to a sense of their abject state, and inspired them with a spirit of resistance to their oppressors by repeated exhortations. The painter has very properly kept this in mind, and very felicitously contrasted the energy of Rienzi with the more subdued appearance of the mob. The outline of the picture is flowing and grand, the groups are admirably disposed and arranged with an artistical skill, that makes all the parts subservient to the whole; in other words, the composition is technically correct and grand. The individual figures, and especially that of the speaker, are very vigorous and animated, and the colouring and the lights and shadows are well managed. We can say, with truth, that our engraver has done justice to the original of the very excellent painter, Mr. A. Elmore.

15. "Portrait of a Lady." By H. W. Pickersgill, R.A. A work of a high order as well as 186—"The Hon. Captain Gordon." The style of the works of this artist appears to be founded on a principle both to beauty, grandeur, and simplicity—a pure and refined taste is observable in all. Mr. Pickersgill has drawn largely upon his great predecessors in his department; without adopting the peculiarities of any, he has gleaned from most. The position of the lady in some hands would have been formal and stiff, but here rendered graceful, whilst the colouring of the neck and hands are Nature's own tints. Captain Gordon is simple and grand

"RIENZI IN THE FORUM." FROM A PICTURE BY ELMORE, IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

No. "Maternal Affection," by H. W. Pickersgill, R.A, is a composition of interest. The attitude both of the mother and child is full of sentiment. The colouring is rich and harmonious.

189. "A Portrait of G. Loftus, Esq.," has the richness and tone of the Spanish school.

THE MARKETS.

MARK-LANE.—FRIDAY.—In to-day's market, the supply of English wheat on offer was but limited, yet the demand for all descriptions of that article was in a very sluggish state, at Monday's quotations. Foreign wheat—both free and in bond—met a very limited enquiry at barely late rates. Superfine malt was in active demand; but other qualities were heavy. In consequence of the fine growing showers, spring corn, of all kinds, was dull, yet we can name no alteration in value. There was a dull sale at late rates.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 1310; barley, 200; oats, 1930 quarters. Irish: Wheat, —; barley, —; oats, 15,030 quarters. Foreign: Wheat, 5780; barley, —; oats, 2990 quarters. Flour, 8920 sacks. Malt, 8750 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 52s; ditto white, 54s to 60s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 46s to 49s; ditto white, 48s to 58s; rye, 28s to 30s; grinding barley, 20s to 21s; distilling ditto, 24s to 26s; malting ditto, 34s to 36s; Chevalier, ditto, 36s to 38s; ditto, 30s to 32s; brown ditto, 28s to 30s; Kingston and Ware, 60s to 63s; Chevalier, 64s; Tocleaver and Canadian to 32s; potato ditto, 22s to 25s; potato ditto, 18s to 20s; Youghal and Cork, black, 21s to 23s. Ditto white, 22s to 23s; tick beans, new, 36s to 38s; ditto, old, 38s to 40s; grey peas, 34s to 36s; maple, 35s to 36s; white, 33s to 35s; harlocs, 36s to 38s per quarter. Town made flour, 50s to 52s. Suffolk, 44s to 46s. Stockton and Yorkshire, 42s to 44s per 280 lbs. Foreign. Free wheat, 48s to 58s; Dantzig, red, 48s to 51s, white, 50s to 52s. To Land.—Barley, 14s to 20s; oats, new, 12s to 16s; ditto fine, 17s to 18s; beans, 32s to 34s; peas, 32s to 35s per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 23s; Baltic, 21s to 22s per barrel

The Seed Market.—For canary we have a steady demand, at an advance of 2s. In other seeds only a moderate business is doing, at late rates.

The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 50s to 56s; Baltic crushing, 35s to 37s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 34s to 38s; brownseed, 28s to 30s per quarter; coriander, 16s to 20s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 12s to 18s; white ditto, 16s to 24s; tares, 4s to 4s 6d per bushel. Rapeseed cakes, English, £5 to £5 10s per ton; foreign, £5 to £5 5s per ton: canary 40s to 60s per quarter

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8d to 9½d, of household ditto 6d to 7½d per 4lb loaf

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 55s 6d; barley, 30s 2d; oats, 21s 7d; rye, 34s; beans, 34s 10d; peas, 35s 4d.

Six Weeks' Average ending with the current Date.—Wheat, 55s 6d; barley, 31s 6d; oats, 20s 9d; rye, 31s 9d; beans, 33s 11d; peas, 31s 9d.

Duties.—Wheat, 17s; barley, 7s; oats, 5s; rye, 10s 6d; beans, 10s 6d; peas, 10s 6d.

Tea.—Some very large public sales of tea, comprising about 47,000 packages, have been brought forward this week. Although the attendance of the trade has been somewhat extensive, the demand has ruled heavy in the extreme, and prices have, generally, undergone a further change. Green qualities have realized full prices, but those of black sorts have been heavily supported. The stock in warehouse is now 37,199,000lbs. against 24,700,000lbs at the same time in 1843. The exports of the article from China, from the 1st of July, 1843, to the 29th of February, 1844, were 35,246,779 lbs.

Sugar.—Owing, chiefly, to the large arrivals, the demand for all kinds of sugar this week has ruled heavy, and prices have declined from 1s to 2s in some instances, 1s 6d per cwt. The refined market is heavy, and standard lumps have been sold at 50s per cwt.

Coffee.—The same causes which appear to operate against an advance in the value of sugar, are apparent in the demand for coffee, which has again declined in value to the extent of fully 1s per cwt. The value of ordinary Ceylon is now 72s 6d to 73s per cwt.

Rice.—This article continues very steady, and the rates are somewhat on the advance. Middling white Bengal is held at 11s per cwt.

Provisions.—We have still to report a very heavy demand for both Irish and foreign butter, the value of which must be considered lower. A few brands of new Waterfords have sold at 76s to 78s. Carlow, 80s; and Limericks, 80s per cwt. The sale for bacon is slow, at 42s to 46s for prime sizeable, and 42s to 44s for lean sides. In other kinds of provisions we have no alteration to notice.

Oils. This market is heavy, yet prices remain without material alteration.

Tallow. There is very little business doing in this article, yet prices are supported. P. Y. C. on the spot is 40s 3d to 40s 6d; and for forward delivery, 41s 3d to 42s per cwt.

Coals.—Ponton Windsor, 15s 6d; West Hartley, 15s; Elgin, 22s; Hetton, 21s 6d; Stanley, 21s; Shield's Footup, 19s; Langcake, 15s 6d per ton

Hops.—Although the accounts from the plantations are by no means flattering, the business doing in this market is unimportant at late rates.

Hops.—The accounts from the plantations are by no means satisfactory as regards the appearance of the young bine, owing to which the demand for all kinds of hops is firm at fully last week's quotations. Sussex pockets, 46s to 52s 6d; Weald of Kent 4os to 46s; East ditto, 44s to 48s; Mid ditto, 42s to 46s; Bitto Bags, 40 to 46; East Kent pockets, 47 to 49, Choice do, 50 to 52

Potatoes.—Fresh arrivals are in demand, at from 6s to 14s per ton. In other descriptions no change has occurred.

SMITHFIELD.—The supply of to-day's market was the very smallest for a considerable time. Although the beef trade has been very heavy, we have not to report any decline in the quotations. The supplies of sheep and lambs were moderate, and the demand was steady, at full prices. Calves were scarcely so good as last week, and the sale for them was very heavy. Pigs were dull, at our quotations.

Per 8lbs. to sink the offal.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 4d to 2s 6d; second quality do., 2s 8d to 3s; prime large oxen, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 4d to 3s 6d; coarse and inferior sheep, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; second quality ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; large coarse woolled sheep, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; prime Southdowns ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; large coarse calves 3s 4d to 4s 4d; prime small ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; large hogs, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; neat small porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 2d; lambs, 4s 4d to 5s 4d. Suckling calves, 17s to 28s; and quarter old store pigs, 16s 0d to 20s each. Beasts, 854; calves, 161; sheep and lambs, 12,860; calves, 362; pigs, 361.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—There were but moderate supplies of each kind of meat on sale to-day, yet the demand was in a very sluggish state, at barely Monday's currencies. The value of beef by the carcase:—Inferior beef, 2s 2d to 2s 4d; middling ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; prime large ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; ditto small ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; second quality ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; inferior mutton, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; middling ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; prime ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 10d; veal, 3s 4d to 4s 4d; small pork, 3s 8d to 4s 2d; lamb, 4s 6d to 5s 2d.

ROBT. HERBERT

COMMERCE AND MONEY.

Money has again become plentiful, and, from the transactions in the Foreign Exchanges during this week, it probable will, before we can still more abundantly supply the wants of the present moment. Notwithstanding uncommonly large importations of foreign wheat, and of foreign and colonial produce of all descriptions, more than usually extensive, and steady demand for bills, drawn on foreign merchants in payment for our foreign exports, still the value of our export trade is encouraging in the greatest degree. The supply of foreign bulk on the Royal Exchange for the sale last past day, being larger than the demand, in some instances the rates of the Foreign Exchanges were again higher, whilst all the rest of them remained as high as they were quoted the week previous to the last. The only conclusion, therefore, which can be drawn from these circumstances, is a farther importation of the precious metals into the United Kingdom and increased difficulty in finding employment for money. In the Share Market, a safety valve, no doubt, continues to be opened for the escape, in all events, of a part of our money surplus, and productive employment is consequently increasing amongst the labourers on the railways now in progress

The demand for shares is larger than it was last week, and, where prices are not higher, the previous rates of last week, are fully supported. The value of Great Western and Birmingham stock continues to be still affected by the disputes which now exist between the directors of the associations, and the cause of the former difficulty in finding employment of the latter has likewise been reduced by the same cause. Birmingham and Gloucester, Edinburgh and Glasgow, York and North Midland, and Northern and Eastern, on the contrary, are generally a good deal nearer their last week's prices. Manchester and Leeds, and Newcastle and Darlington, likewise continue in fair demand, and they can scarcely be purchased at last week's prices. The arrangements at length concluded for the completion of a line between Lancaster and Carlisle, a renewed demand has arisen for the shares of this association, and also for those of the connecting lines of railway on the western coast. Dundrums, because, when these undertakings are complete, the intercourse between Manchester, Liverpool, and Glasgow by railway will be continuous, and the traffic between the west coasts of Scotland and Ireland must consequently be very considerably increased. The value of the whole every thing has a healthy appearance.

On the Royal Stock Exchange the investment of money from without has had a favourable effect since our last publication. It has raised the Consols again to 103¼ for money, and to 103¾ for the dividend, for the time intervening between the leading Joint Stock Banking Associations have been improved in value by the same cause, particularly Stock for the Union Bank of London, which have been sold as high as 13. Bank Stock cannot be purchased to any extent under 200, and 210 is the price now asked for it. Exchequer Bills, 70 dis; Exchequer Bills, 70 dis 72 pm.; Consols for the Settlement, 89¾ to ¾; National Bank of Ireland, 14 to —; Ditto for Account, — ; South Sea Old Annuities, — ; South Sea Stock, — ; Union of Australasia, 37; Provincial Bank of Ireland, — ; Canada, — ; Colonial Bank, —

FOREIGN BONDS AND SHARES.—Belgian, 104¾ to —; Buenos Ayres, 35; Columbian Bonds, 14 to —; Venezuela, 5 to —; Chilian, 15 to —; Danish, 103 to —; Dutch Portuguese converted, 47; Peruvian, 7 to —; Spanish 5 per Cents, 23¼; Spanish 3 per Cents, 14¾ to —; Ditto 2½ per Cents, 6; Ditto 5 per Cents, 109¾; Russian, 118 to —; Austrian, —; Danish, 90 6 to —; Brazilian, 81¾ to 82, Chilian, 104; Cuba 6 per Cents, 106; Neapolitan, 106; Austrian Notes, 101

PRICES OF SHARES.—Birmingham and Derby, 61¾ to 62¾; Scarborough Branch —; Birmingham and Gloucester, 92¾ to 93¾; Bristol and Exeter, 80; Eastern Counties, 12; registered, 11¾; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 61 to 62; Great North of England, 100 to 101, Great Western, 152; Hull and Selby, 98 to 99; London and Brighton, 47¾; London and Blackwall, 7; Greenwich, 7¾; Ditto, 18¾ to 19, London and Birmingham Stock, 2-3, Manchester and Leeds, 104; Manchester and Birmingham, 57 to 58, South Western, 89 to 90; Midland Counties, 90; North Midland, 91¾; Newcastle and Darlington, 40, Northern and Eastern, 97¾; Paris and Rouen, 39; Paris and Orleans, 40; South Eastern and Dover, 26¾; York and Norwich, —; Dublin and Cashel, 5¾; Guildford Junction, —; Lancaster and Carlisle, 6¾ to 7; Chester and Holyhead, 6¾; North British, 23; Strasburg and Bale, —; Rouen and Havre, —; Caledonian, 7¾; Leeds and Bradford, —; Yarmouth and Norwich, 23; Bristol and Gloucester, 46 to 47; Liverpool and Manchester —; Glasgow and Dumfries, —; Leek and North Midland, 13 to 14; Guildford Junction —; Norwich and Brandon, —; Grand Junction, —; Trent Valley, 3½; Carlisle Dumfries, and Glasgow, 18 to 2.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 4.

MEMBERS RETURNED TO SERVE IN THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT.

CROWN OFFICE, June 4, 1844.—District of Burghs of Kilmarnock: The Hon. Edward Fitzgibbon Bouverie, in the room of Alexander Johnston, Esq., deceased.—County Palatine of Lancaster—Southern Division: William Entwisle, Esq., in the room of the Hon. Richard Scott Wilbraham.

BANKRUPTS.—T. STEPHENS, umbrella manufacturer, Newgate-street. J. CLARK, draper, Abingdon, Cambridgeshire. K. COLEMAN and E. R. HALL, ironfounders, Colchester, Essex. C. ALDERSON, tailor, Brighton. W. LINE, builder, Ramsgate. E. SEDGWICK, scrivener, Hythe, Kent. W. H. BATES, factor, Birmingham. J. SMITH, wine merchant, Warwick. E. BUCKMAN and E. BUCKMAN, ironmongers, Cheltenham. L. JONES, corn seller, Barnstaple, Merionethshire SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—A. C. WATT, merchant, Aberdeen. D. KAY, baker, Edinburgh. G. RITCHIE, Edinburgh, writer to the signet.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7.

WAR-OFFICE, JUNE 7.—1st Dragoon Guards: Lieut. G. W. C Jackson to be Captain, vice Turner, 1Dragoons: Lieut. S. Thompson to be Lieutenant, vice Jackson. 6th Dragoons: C Tower to be Cornet, vice Fitzwygram. 11th Light Dragoons: Capt. L Jones to be Major, vice Rotton; Lieut. S Harrison to be Captain, vice Jones, Cornet G. T. Duncombe to be Lieutenant.

17th Foot: F. Fortescue to be Ensign, vice Swinburne. 14th: Quartermaster E. Imray to be Quartermaster, vice Cartmail. 26th: Capt. W. T. R. Brady to be Captain, vice Brevet-Major W. H. Adams; Lieut. F. L. M'Dougall to be Captain, vice Brady; Ensign J. A. Brockman to be Lieutenant, vice M'Dougall, D. Tom to be Ensign, vice Brockman. 41st: A. S. Hardinge to be Ensign, vice Tomlinson. 49th: Capt. Sir W. Maxwell, Bart. to be Captain, vice John Charlewood, Lieut. L. C. Conran to be Captain, vice Sir W. Maxwell, Bart.; Ensign F. de Kantzow to be Lieutenant, vice Conran; H. D. Lannan to be Ensign, vice Ramsay. 61st: Lieut. F. Hasan to be Lieutenant, vice Dobson. 85th: Lieut. D. W. F. Lamb membrine to be Captain, vice Bennet; Ensign J. W. Wallington to be Lieutenant, vice Labalmondiere; Ensign J. D. Swinburne to be Ensign, vice Wallington. Ensign and Quartermaster J. Cartmail to be Quartermaster, vice Imray. 97th: Capt. Henry Thomas Earl of Caledon to be Major, vice C. T. Graves. Lieut. Radcliff to be Captain, vice the Earl of Caledon; Second Lieut. W. H. Taylor to be First Lieutenant, vice Radcliff, J. Fitzpatrick to be Second Lieutenant, vice Taylor.

1st West India Regiment. Lieut. T. J. Dobson to be Lieutenant, vice Hudson; J. Rose to be Ensign, vice Speedy.

HOSPITAL STAFF.—Brevet Lieut.-Col. J. R. Rotton to be Lieutenant-Colonel; Brevet Lieut. Col. J. Crosse to be Lieutenant-Colonel; Brevet Lieut.-Col. Rt F. Watson to be Major.

HOSPITAL STAFF.—Surgeon-Major C. Bell, Knt. John Hughes, Esq., Surgeon, First Class, vice J French, M.D.

BANKER.—Captain W. S. R. Brady to be Major in the Army; Captain H. T. Earl of Chichester, to be Major in the Army.

Lieut.-Col. Hartley Dixon, upon half-pay unattached, has been allowed to retire from the army, with the sale of his commission, Lieutenant Imray, late Quartermaster, to rank as Captain.

BANKRUPTS.—J. LEVETT, carpenter, Soham, Cambridgeshire. J. BATTEN, sheep dealer, Tuebarst, Berkshire. J. YOUNG, lacemen, Aldermanbury. W. BARNES, bonnet maker Ledgate-hill. J. FLEMING, ironmonger, Thame, Oxfordshire. A. B. W. KNIGHT, printer, St. James's walk, Clerkenwell. W. TURNER, blender, Manchester. J. L. SMITH cabinet maker. G. JENKINSON, butcher, Wolverhampton. J. PARKER, corn miller, Hull. R. H. SPENCE, matter, Leeds.

BIRTHS

At Dangstein, in Sussex, the lady of Captain Lyon, Esq., of a daughter.—In Albion-street, Hyde park, the lady of Nowel Stowers, Esq., of a son.—At Ibstone house, the lady of Philip Wroughton, Esq., of a daughter.—At Wimbledon, the lady of William Brown, Esq., of a son.—The wife of Mr. Serjeant Wilkins, of Hyde-park-gardens, of a son. At Wolverton vicarage, Bucks, the lady of the Rev. Henry Read Quartley, of a daughter.—At the Rectory, Little Wenham, Mrs. J. Cheseldy, of a son.—At 16, Duke-street, Edinburgh, the lady of Charles Stannard Eustace, Esq., of the county of Kildare, of a son and heir.—In Grosvenor-street, the Lady Mary Fortescue, of a daughter.—The lady of Arstan Miles Wood, Esq., of Orchard Leigh, near Ledbury, of a son.—On Tuesday last, the lady of Joseph Wilbam Moore, Esq., of Rioledge, Maids vale, of a son.—On Wednesday, the 5th inst., the lady of Robert Williamson, Esq., of Sea end, South-street, Chelsea, of a son.—At 13, Church-row, Newington, Surrey, the lady of John G. B. Burt, M.D., of a son.—At Kircaldrigan, Mrs Thomas Hope, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES

At the Abbey, Bath, Charles Frederick Jenkins, son of George Danvers Jenkins, Esq., to Catherine Mary, only surviving child of the late Rev. John Hughes, rector of Sedgwick, Wilts, and Fyfield, Hants.—At St. George-the-Martyr, Queen-square, Stephen Horner, Esq., of Hartlepool, Durham, to Sarah Ann, second daughter of G. F. Minton, Esq., Great Ormond-street.—At Staplegrove, Richard Reynolds Woodland, only son of Richard Woodland, Esq., of Bridgewater, to Fanny, third daughter of Edward Bedwell Law, Esq., of Stapleton lodge, in the same county.—At Hampton, Middlesex, Lieutenant Hamilton, R.N., to Bridget Sewell, of Walbrook, to Anne Hughes Potter, third daughter of the Rev. J. P. Potter, M.A., of Norton-hill.—At St. George's, Hanover-square, Thomas Cook, late of the Bengal Staff Cadet, to Miss Hulme, of Davies-street, Berkeley square, only daughter of Robert Hulme, Esq., of Kilburn.—At Ewell, Surrey, Charles Gilbert William Lennox, Esq., of Great Lyon, late of Ayr, to Mary Ann, eldest daughter of the late Richard Hall Gower, Esq., of Nova Scotia-house, Lewisham.—At Kettering, T. Smith Wodley, jun., Esq., of South College, ham. Notts, to Maria, third daughter of Henry Lamb, Esq., of Kettering.—George R. S. Lonsdale, Esq., of Gloucester Lodge, Regent's park, youngest son of the late Lieut.-Colonel Lonsdale

THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS by sending their Numbers to M. C. RHIND, General Bookbinder, 159, Fetter-lane, may have them Bound in the same Elegant Style, and uniform with the previous volumes of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, for Five Shillings.—N.B. Bound or deficient numbers supplied at Sixpence per Copy.

DUBLIN.—GEORGE YOUNG, Bookseller and Newsagent, 9, Suffolk street, Dublin, respectfully announces that he always on hand a large supply of the back numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Volumes can at any time be completed and bound in the Publisher's very handsome Binding. Subscribers may rely on having the Illustrated News, and all the London papers sent by the same despatch as from London. Catalogues of all the Periodicals and Stamped Newspapers may be had at 9, Suffolk-street (gratis).

THE ARTIZAN for JUNE contains—The Railway Department of the Board of Trade—Augmentation of Electro Magnetism—The Mines of Hungary—The Nature of Beauty—Constructive Carpentry—The Silk Trade of France—A Plea for the Magnetes of the Navy—Stephenson's Report on the Atmospheric Railway, &c. &c., with accounts of all new projects and inventions.—SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.

THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.—Three New SONGS, illustrative of "Faith," "Hope," and "Charity." Poetry by Rev. J. E. WREFORD and C. JEFFERYS. Music by STEPHEN GLOVER.—These songs are excellent alike in Poetry, Music, and Illustration; while the musician must be delighted with their harmonies, every family must feel the charm of their melodies. "Charity" is our especial favourite."—Musical World.—Post free, 2s. each, of JEFFERYS, 21, Soho-square.

ATMOSPHERIC RAILWAY.

Just Published, dedicated, by express permission, to Prince Albert,

MR. O'MALLEY IRWIN'S WICKLOW; comprehending its Topography, Antiquities, Romantic Scenery, Statistics, &c., illustrating the Direct Line and economy of the Atmospheric Railway. Price 2s. 6d. cloth; 2s. sewed.—London: NEWMAN and Co., 48, Watling-street.

MAXWELL'S HISTORY of the REBELLION in IRELAND. Part VI., Price 1s., with Two beautiful Illustrations, by G. Cruikshank.

By the same Author.

WANDERINGS in the HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS, with Sketches taken on the Scottish Border, being a Second Series of "Wild Sports in the West." 2 vols 8vo boards, Portraits, £1 4s. London: A. H. BAILY and Co., Cornhill.

This day is ready, price sixpence, post-free, 8d.,

THE BOOK of the BABY'S WARDROBE in KNITTING and NETTING. Receipts for Shoes, Socks, Bedding, &c. &c.

Also, Part I. of Knitting, Illustrated, post free, 1s. 4d.

THE KNITTER'S FRIEND. Fifty Original Receipts for articles of utility and elegance.—J. HOPE, 33, Queen street, Ramsgate, and at Berlin Shops

THE LUNGS and HEART.—Dr. MADDOCK, of the Inner Temple, Judd-street, Brunswick-square, has just published, price 3s. 6d., with coloured plates, a Treatise on the Efficacy of Medicated Inhalations in Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Chronic Cough, and Affections of the Heart. The remedies employed and the Bronchitis, Chronic Cough, and Affections of the Heart. The remedies employed and the most mode of using them are fully explained, and made intelligible to the general reader.

SIMPKIN and MARSHALL.—Dr. M. may be consulted before twelve, NOON, and after six in the evening

Just Published, price 1s., 4to.

A GUIDE to the EXHIBITION of the ROYAL ACADEMY, Trafalgar square (Open from Eight to Seven o'Clock), containing the CRITICISMS of the TIMES on 1,500 Pictures, Panoramic and Drawings (the whole forming a complete guide to the Exhibition), also, price 1s. 4to., THE UNJUST SUPPRESSION OF ART UNJUSTIFIED BY GOVERNMENT, containing the OPINIONS OF THE PRESS on this most arbitrary proceeding of her Majesty's Ministers.—Publishing Offices, No. 4, Trafalgar-square, Charing-cross, and 21, Paternoster-row.

This day is published, in Two Vols., post 8vo, with numerous Portraits, Price 24s., cloth, OLER ACTRESSES; or, Glances at Stage Favourites, Past and Present. By Mrs. C. BARON WILSON, author of the "Life of the Duchess of St. Albans," "Memoirs of Mona Lowne," &c. &c. Among the contents will be found Memoirs of Mrs. Nesbitt, Mrs. Edwin, Mrs. Powell, Miss H. Faucit, Mrs. Glover, Miss Brunton, Miss Paton, Mrs. Nesbitt, Mrs. Edwin, Mrs. Nisbett, Mrs. Orger, Miss Huston, Miss Kemble, Miss Duncan, Mrs. Mrs. Waylett, Mrs. Orger, Miss Huston, Miss Kemble, Miss Duncan, Mrs. Mrs. Waylett, Mrs. Orger, Miss Huston, Miss Rae, Mrs. Warner, Mrs. West, Miss Foote, Mrs. Yates, Keeley, Miss Rainforth, Miss M. Tree, Mrs. Warner, Mrs. West, Miss Foote, Mrs. Yates, Miss Love, Miss Kelly, Mrs. Alfred Shaw, Miss Stephens, Miss F. Kemble, Miss F. Horton Miss Taylor, Miss A. Kemble, Miss Cushman, &c. &c.—London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill! Edinburgh: BELL and BRADFUTE. Dublin. J. CUMMING.

IRRIGATION.—FIVE ORIGINAL COLOURED PLANS of IRRIGATED MEADOWS, ILLUSTRATIVE of Mr. J. HARTHAN'S SYSTEM of IRRIGATION, with Descriptions to each, appear in "The Farmer's Magazine" for June which contains upwards of thirty articles on Practical Farming and Grazing by two most eminent agriculturists of the day. Also, the Second Report on the Feeding of PIGS EXHIBITED BY HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT, at the Smithfield Cattle Show, with Horticultural Considerations, and a Report on the Corn Trade, &c. &c.

The Agricultural Year of Mr. Coleman (from the United States); is continued, and embraces the following subjects:—English Capital, Appointments in the Country, Hedges and Hedgerows, Iron and Sunken Fences, Rustic Parks, Ornamental Shrubs and Flowers, Climate of England, Agriculture, Population.—Office, 34, Norfolk-street.

CARTOUCHE, THE PRINCE OF ROBBERS.

Now ready, at all the Circulating Libraries, in Three vols., post 8vo.

CARTOUCHE. By R. B. PEAKE Esq.—"Mr. Peake's Cartouche is unquestionably a clever book."—Spectator.—"Mr. Peake has produced a highly interesting work, which will be a favourite at the Circulating Libraries for some time to come. The book consists of a series of Adventures of an exciting and extraordinary character on the part of the hero."—Observer.—London: HURST and BLACKETT, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Just published, price 1s., or forwarded to any part of the Country post-free on receiving a remittance of 1s. 6d., or sixteen postage labels

HOW TO DANCE THE LANCERS, all the QUADRILLES, GERMAN WALTZES, HIGHLAND REELS, &c., after the manner of M. COULON.—London: HUGH CUNNINGHAM, 195, Strand.

Just published, price 1s., or forwarded to any part of the country, on receiving a remittance of 1s. 6d., or eighteen postage labels

THE MYSTERIES OF LONDON. By FATHER NORTH.

London: HUGH CUNNINGHAM, 195, Strand.

BAILY'S SERIES OF WINNERS, Price £1 1s. each.—The above noble Series, by A. H. BAILY and Co. have published, and continue to publish, a SERIES of PORTRAITS of DERBY, OAKS, and LEGER WINNERS, and portraits of other Horses Celebrated for their Performances. For the purpose the Proprietors of other Horses Celebrated for their Performances. For the purpose the Proprietors have secured the services of Mr. J. F. HERRING, Sen., as well known as the celebrated Horse-painter. The likeness and execution of each is acknowledged to be equal to any of the Portraits in much larger, and, as Works of Art, much superior to anything hitherto published. The Winners of the Derby and Oak Stakes, at Epsom, for 1844, will be published about the End of June, forming the Fifth Series, Painted by CHARLES HUNT, after Mr. J. HERRING, Senior's Original Pictures.

The Series already Published are as follows, viz.:—

No. 1. BEGGS WINE ..... £1 1s. | No. 2. CHARLES XII. £1 1s.
No. 3. COTHERSTONE, Winner of the Derby, 1843. £1 1s.
No. 4. POISON Winner of the Oaks, 1843. £1 1s.
No. 5. NUTWITH, Winner of the Two Thousand, Ascot, and Doncaster Cups, 1843. £1 1s.
No. 6. CONFIDENCE, the Celebrated American Trotter, performing a Match in Harness, £1 1s.
No. 7. ALICE HAWTHORN. £1 1s.

This is the only Portrait of Alice Hawthorn ever published, and is considered by everybody who has seen it as a most perfect likeness of this celebrated Mare.

 Any Portrait may be had separate.

WORKS PUBLISHED BY W. S. ORR AND CO

GREECE, PICTORIAL, DESCRIPTIVE, AND HISTORICAL, by CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, D.D., Head Master, Harrow. Price 8 Guineas and a Half, cloth, lettered.

TRAITS and STORIES of THE IRISH PEASANTRY. By WILLIAM CARLETON. With an Autobiographical Introduction, Illustrat. ve Notes, and Graphic Illustrations on Wood and Steel. Now Complete in 2 vols, 21s. cloth, 8vo. Price and Graphic Illustrations on Wood and Steel. Now Complete in 2 vols, 21s. cloth, 8vo. Price 30s. cloth, lettered.

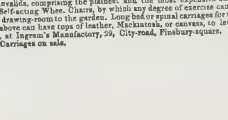
PICTORIAL HISTORY of FRANCE, From the Establishment of the Franks in Gaul to the period of the French Revolution, by G. M. BUTLER and THOMAS GARSEY enriched with Designs on Wood, by Jules David. 2 vols, royal 8vo, price 30s.

THE ILLUSTRATED SHAKSPERE (TYAS'S). The text revised from the best authorities. A Memoir and Essay on Shakspere's Genius. By BARRY CORNWALL. Introductory Remarks on each Play by some distinguished writer; with beautiful characteristic Designs on Wood, by Kenny Meadows. In 8 vols, imperial 8vo. Price £3 3s., cloth.

IRELAND BEFORE and AFTER THE UNION WITH GREAT BRITAIN. By R. MONTGOMERY MARTIN, Esq. Price 10s. 6d., cloth, lettered.

Ames Corner, Paternoster Row.

MOURNING—Court, Family, and Complimentary.—The Proprietors of the London General Mourning Warehouse, Nos. 247 and 249 Regent-street, beg respectfully to remind families whose bereavements compel them to adopt mourning attire, that every article (of the very best description) requisite for a complete outfit of mourning may be had at their establishment at a moment's notice. Widows' and Family Mourning is always kept made up; and a note descriptive of the mourning required, will ensure everything necessary for the occasion, being sent (in town or country) immediately. Ladies requiring Silks—either Satins, Satin Turos, Watered or Plain Decapes, and Widows' Silk Robes are replete with every novelty that modern taste has introduced in mourning millinery, flowers, collars, head-dresses, bugle bertnes, trimmings, &c. &c.—The London General Mourning Warehouse, Nos. 247 and 249, Regent-street, near Oxford-street.—W. C. JAY, and Co



INVALID CARRIAGES.—To be DISPOSED OF, a number of out-of door and in door WHEEL CHAIRS, constructed especially for the comfort of invalids, comprising the plainest and the most expensive builds. New and second-hand Self-acting Wbe. Chairs, by which any degree of exercise can be attained, suitable for the drawing-room to the garden. Long bed or spinal carriages for the very debilitated. Also for the drawing-room to the garden. Long bed or spinal carriages for the very debilitated. Any of the above can have tops of leather, Mackintosh, or canvass, to let up or down. On sale or hire, at Ingram's Manufactory, 59, City-road, Finsbury-square. N.B.—A variety of Children's Carriages on sale.

NOTICE to INVENTORS.—Office for Patents of Inventions and Registrations of Designs, 14, Lincoln's Inn-fields.—The printed Instructions, gratis, and every information upon the subject of Protection for Inventions, either by Letters Patent or the Designs Acts, may be had by applying personally, or by letter, pre-paid, to Mr. ALEX. PRINCE, at the Office, 14, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

THE NEW DISCOVERY FOR THE NERVES, by DR. GRANDISON, patronised by almost all of the Nobility.—This invaluable Medicine has performed the most extraordinary cures, and conferred the boon of nervous vigour upon thousands. Its combination is a discovery, and its efficacy proves how important a one. Sold by all Medicine Venders. Ask for Dr. Grandison's Chantry Pills.

"A wonderful yet safe Medicine."—Professor Mollet.

CHASTON'S PATENT INDIA RUBBER ELASTIC CORN PLASTERS are generally admitted to be the most perfect remedy that ever existed either Hard or Soft CORNS. From their elastic quality, they can be worn with perfect ease, however tight the boot or shoe fits the foot. Invented and sold by C. HASTON, Chemist, Watton, Norfolk. In boxes, price 1s. 6d., or thirteen postage stamps (free), a box will be forwarded (also free) to any part of the Kingdom NECESSARY PRECAUTION.—CONSUMERS of BRANDY are respectfully informed that J. T. SETTS, Jun., and Co. will not be responsible for any bottled Brandy that is not protected against fraudulent substitution by the Patent Metallic Capsules, embossed with the words "Setts's Patent Brandy, 7, Smithfield, Bars." Sold by the most respectable Wine and Spirit Merchants in town and country at 3s. 6d. per bottle, the bottle included.

MADDEN'S Registered PATENT KNIFE CLEANER meets with the most extensive and distinguished patronage, and is now established as an article of utility. Its cleanliness, simplicity, and efficacy, consumed with the advantages of removing all the dirt and noise, the saving of time, and the preservation of the knives insure universal favour. MADDEN'S KNIFE CLEANER, price 14s., may be seen and tried at the office, 14, George-street, Adelph...

PATENT BRANDY?—Important Distinction.—The pure and wholesome Spirit, of which we are Sole Proprietors, is BRETT'S IMPROVED BRITISH COGNAC, warranted not PATENT; whereas, if there be in fact such an article as "Patent Brandy," it is certainly—NOT IMPROVED! An Imperial Gallon, of the best sort, will be forwarded to order for 18s.; or a half-dozen Bottles for a sovereign. GENUINE samples may be had, or freely tasted, at our Counting-house.

HENRY BRETT and Co., Old Furnival's Inn, Holborn bars.

SHIRTS.—W. E. WHITELOCK, 166, STRAND (Established Twenty Years), supplies the celebrated Mariana's Longcloth Shirts for 8s. 6d. each, including Washing. They are made in the very best manner and latest fashion, and are superior to those usually sold for 8s. 6d. Fine Linen Shirts, 10s. 6d., usual price 12s. 6d. Any number of either sent to any part of the Kingdom free, upon the receipt of a Post-Office order for the amount, with is added, as part payment of carriage. The dimensions must be given to the tight measure of the neck, chest, and wrist.

GOLD LUSTRE.—The PARISIAN GOLD DETERGENT instantly revives the lustre of Gilding, removes Fly Spots, and renders covering from the fly unnecessary. The entire renovation of a large gilt frame costs only a few pence, and as the whole process is strictly confined to the surface, there is neither risk nor difficulty in the operation. Gold Detergent, 2s. 6d., per bottle; Ormolu Lacquer, and Bronze, 1s. 6d. each; and Stamp, 1s. 6d. Sold by UPTON and Co., sole proprietors, 4, George street, Hanover-square; 166, Basinghall-street, City; and by the trade in general.

NEW PATENTS.—BROCKEDON'S IMPROVED STOPPERS.—This important Invention, a Substitute for Corks and Bungs, has been and Great Improvements, become a pure, unobjectionable, and perfect means of preserving, for any length of time, Wine, Beer, Spirits, &c. They are cheap and easily applied, and the appearance when they are bare of fine Cork has received the highest approbation from former dare colour. Also, DECANTER STOPPERS, to keep Wine when is in daily use in perfect condition.—C. MACINTOSH and Co., 19, Walbrook, London, and 72, Stork-street, Manchester.

SIX POUNDS OF TEA and upwards, sent carriage free to any part of the kingdom at the WHOLESALE PRICE, on the receipt of a remittance or post-office order.

Black	3s. 8d., 4s. 0d., 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s. 0d., 5s. 4d., 5s. 8d., 6s. 0d., 6s. 4d., 6s. 8d., 7s. 0d., 7s. 4d., 7s. 8d., 8s. 0d., 8s. 4d., 8s. 8d., 9s. 0d., 9s. 4d., 9s. 8d., 10s. 0d., 10s. 4d., 10s. 8d., 11s. 0d., 11s. 4d., 11s. 8d., 12s. 0d.
Green	3s. 4d., 3s. 8d., 4s. 0d., 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s. 4d., 6s. 0d., 7s. 0d., 8s. 0d., 9s. 0d., 10s. 0d., 12s. 0d., 14s. 0d., 16s. 0d., 18s. 0d., 20s. 0d.

G. T. MANSELL and Co., Wholesale Tea Dealers, 2, Buckleraibury, Cheapside. A receipt will be given to responsible parties.

BLACK-BORDERED ENVELOPES 1s. per Hundred; black-bordered note paper, five quires for 2s.; the best satin envelopes, 1s. per hundred, all sizes; superfine satin note paper, 8vo. size, 6s. 3d. per ream; good Wash note do. per ream, 4s. 6d.; superfine letter paper, from 3s. per ream; French gilt edge wafers, 2d. per box; good wax, 1s. 6d. per lb.; leather blotting books, 1s. each; nibbles, round, gilt edges, 1s. 6d. per dozen (Oxford edition); paper books ruled to 3d. 4s., Addaster Figures, Vases, &c. Parties favouring this establishment with a visit, will obtain every information upon the premises. A large assortment of real BERLIN WEILS, both Brussels and Pelt, and point Valgaille, which being made at his late fabrique, no Notre Dame, are Nuges a Bruxelles, he can sell at the same price as at the manufactory. For a future time a delicate variety of Gloves, Hosiery, and, like brilliants, will ever retain an intrinsic value—Fortoga and British Lace Warehouse, DIXON, Principal Lacemen to Her Majesty the Queen, &c. 207, Regent-street.

TO all LARGE CONSUMERS of TEA.—STRUGNELL and Company, 221, Oxford-street, in respectfully acknowledging the patronage bestowed on them by the Nobility and Public generally since opening their extensive premises, solicit the attention of those large consumers of tea, and its advantages, they are dealers in TEA and COFFEE only, and restrict themselves to a ready money trade, thus maintaining a position as favourable as the first traders, they are enabled to sell their monetary articles from 10 to 20 per cent. under the usual prices, whilst their selection of quality will be found to surpass most establishments. Their Coffees, of sterling quality, are 1s. 2d. and 1s. 4d., the highest class Congous, 2s. 4d. and 2s. 8d. Superior Hyson, 4s. 6d. and 5s. 6d. Strong Congou, 3s. 4d. and 3

THE GREAT FIRE AT GRAVESEND.

EXTENSIVE CONFLAGRATION AT GRAVESEND.

A conflagration, unequalled at Gravesend during the last century, broke out on Sunday night last, in the shrimp boiling-house of Mrs. Sandford, West-street, Gravesend, and was not extinguished before twenty-six houses, including three warehouses, four licensed victuallers' establishments, and nineteen private buildings and shops, situate severally in West-street, Bath-street, and on Horncastle's and Elkin's quay, had been, with the major part of their contents, entirely consumed.

West-street is a narrow thoroughfare, stretching along the town of Gravesend, near to the bank of the Thames, from west to east, commencing at the Clifton Hotel, and intersecting a quantity of small avenues approaching the higher parts of the neighbourhood, and ending at the terrace-pier. About midway between these two points is Caroline-place on the east, and the extensive yards of Messrs. Rackstraw and Fletcher, merchants, on the west. On the north side of the block buildings within this area is the bank of the Thames, and upon the southern side is West-street, the whole being enclosed in a parallelogram 200 feet long by 120 feet deep.

The flames were first perceived by Henry Wickham, No. 8 of the Gravesend police, about a quarter to eleven o'clock, issuing from Mrs. Sandford's shrimp boiling-house, where it is conjectured that the fire must have originated from the stoker not having effectually extinguished the burning cinders raked out of the furnace. The wind, at the time the fire was discovered, was blowing rather fresh from the north, varying to north-east; but about three o'clock it lulled, or there is no saying where the damage to life and property might have ended. West-street consisted mostly of wood-built houses; in addition to which there were several large storehouses, containing the most inflammable materials.

As soon as Wickham observed the fire he raised an immediate alarm, and Superintendent North, with Inspector Oxley, and the whole of the Gravesend police, were quickly on the spot. Lieutenant M'Coy soon afterwards arrived with a number of the military from the depôt at Gravesend; and Major Kelly, commander of Tilbury Fort, sent a strong detachment of the troops under his command, who rendered most efficient assistance. The Kent-office engine from Dartford, three engines belonging to the corporation of Gravesend, the Royal Exchange engine from Crayford, and the Kent from Rochester, arrived in quick succession; but the fire spread so rapidly that the residents of High-street, Kempthorne-street, Bath-street, and even Wakefield-street, were actively engaged in removing their furniture from their houses, while West-street presented an indescribable scene.

The flames extended from Mrs. Sandford's to Union-wharf, being extensive premises on the west, which belonged to Mr. Beckett, brewer, of Gravesend, and were tenanted by the Star Steam Packet Company as a storehouse for pitch, tar, timber, and other articles necessary for boat building. In a short time the wharf was destroyed, and the fire next communicated to Mr. Saddington's salt warehouses, in which there were five or six barrels of gunpowder, and a large quantity of brimstone. Two of the barrels of gunpowder were rolled into the river before the warehouses took fire; but the remainder went off with a terrific explosion, blowing the roofs and walls of the adjoining houses to a considerable distance; the reflection upon the river of the ascending flames presenting, at the time, a terrific appearance on the opposite shore. The exertions of the firemen and military were now beyond all praise; but were attended with little effect, for the flames speedily extended to seven houses belonging to Mr. Saddington, on Horncastle quay, and which were in a few minutes burnt to the ground. They were tenanted by Mr. Parker, Mr. Jewes, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Thompson, Mr. Shepherd, Mr. Brown, and Mr. Johnson; and each contained from six to eight rooms.

The fire at this time was likewise burning with the utmost fury, eastward and westward of West-street, and in the course of its ravages three public houses were reduced to ashes, viz.: The India Arms, kept by Mr. Missing, whose stock is insured in the Sun-office; the Cock, by Mr. Pickering, insured in the Kent Fire-office; and the Fisherman's Arms, kept by Mr. James Collins, who is not insured. Mr. Matthews's premises (the extensive mast and block maker, were likewise seriously damaged, and the principal part of his timber, spars, and blocks destroyed. The stock and buildings were insured in the Dissenters' Insurance-office. Upon searching the ruins on Monday, Mr. Matthews discovered that his books and papers were in an iron chest. Amongst the other principal sufferers were Mr. Nettingham, boot and shoe maker; Messrs. Elkins and Co., marine store and coal dealers; Mr. Green, baker; Mr. Collingford, grocer; Mr. Simmons, clothier; and Mr. Brightwell, plumber and glazier. In order to cut off the connection between the houses in West-street, it was found necessary to commence pulling down the latter person's house, and it unfortunately happened that he had a son and daughter in the last stage of consumption, lying in bed. They were hastily removed to Mrs. Bennett's, in Kempthorne-street, but the fright had a fatal effect upon the youth, and he died on Monday morning. The daughter is not expected to live.

On Monday morning, soon after three o'clock, the wind providentially lulled: and by the most strenuous exertions the military and firemen, for the first time, began to get the mastery of the devastating fire; in two hours it was nearly subdued, although the engines continued to play upon the smouldering ruins throughout the whole of the day.

The estimated damage varies from £10,000 to £15,000. The greater number of the sufferers are very poor, and have large families, and those who were destitute of friends have been provided with a temporary lodging by the board of guardians, in some cottages in Stone-street, near the union house, belonging to them.

During the confusion that prevailed a poor shoemaker, named Hooker, was observed to leave one of the houses in a hurried manner, bearing on his shoulders the dead body of his daughter, which lay in the house at the time it took fire.

At eleven o'clock on Monday morning the magistrates met at the Town-hall to adopt measures for the alleviation of the distresses of the sufferers. There were present the Mayor, Mr. Staff, Messrs. Tecknell, Oakes, Spencer, and Dr. Joynes, the rector; and it was understood that they determined upon setting a subscription on foot. The Star packet directors likewise held a meeting at their board-room, in High-street, Mr. Cruden in the chair, and which Alderman Harmer and others attended, for the purpose, as it was said, of taking active steps to attain so desirable an object.

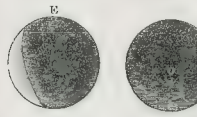
Our engravings, from sketches made on the spot by Mr. Landells, represent the conflagration at its greatest height; and West-street on the morning after the fire: of some houses little more than the foundation walls remain. The scene of devastation is truly afflicting; and cannot fail to excite the sympathy of every visitor; alike from the extent of the disaster, and the distressed condition of the majority of the sufferers.

RUINS AFTER THE FIRE, AT GRAVESEND.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.

A correspondent writes thus from the Isle of Wight:—

I observed this eclipse at Newport, in the Isle of Wight, on Friday, May 31 Having previously corrected the watch for Greenwich mean time, the beginning and end of the total eclipse were verified, according to the times computed, viz., 10h. 11m. 38s., and 11h 28m. 48s. To those who are but slightly acquainted with astronomical phenomena, it may be necessary to observe that all shadows are surrounded by a ring of fainter appearance, called the penumbra, because only part of the sun's disc is hidden therefrom, and which becomes gradually darker as it approaches the real shadow or umbra, where the whole of the sun's face is obscured. This penumbra occasioned the moon's eastern or left hand lower limb to appear rather dim, and a little flattened to the naked eye for several minutes before the moon had entered the real shadow. In the accompanying diagram, the circle at I represents the moon's disc a little after the immersion into the earth's shadow had taken place; the middle circle gives the appearance at the middle of the eclipse; and the circle at E shows the same after the moon's eastern limb had emerged from the earth's shadow. The whole circle of the section of the earth's shadow cannot, of course, be seen in the heavens, but only so much of it as falls upon the disc, or face of the moon; and as the boundary of this portion is always a circular arc, it affords an incontestable proof that the opaque body of the earth which occasions the shadow by intercepting the solar rays, must be of a globular form. It will likewise be observed that the central part of the shadow is darker than its extremities; this is occasioned by the refractive power of the earth's atmosphere, by which the solar rays are bent from a direct course, and thrown or converged into the shadow of the opaque ball.



ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.

In this eclipse, the moon, when completely in the shadow, was less obscured than is often the case, which shows the earth's atmosphere to have a higher refractive power than ordinary. In many total eclipses the moon's disc entirely disappears, as was the case with one observed by me on the 9th of June, 1816, when the moon's image was lost for nearly an hour, though the whole sky was very clear, and the stars extremely brilliant. In the middle of the present eclipse the upper limb of the moon was the darkest part, because the moon was then rather below the centre of the earth's shadow; this part appeared like dark copper or old mahogany, and the parts nearer the verge of the shadow, had a still lighter or orange-red appearance, very much resembling the star Antares, which was then a little below the right hand side of the moon.

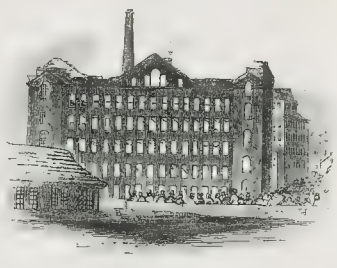
Persons interested in celestial phenomena should be reminded that there will be another total eclipse of the moon on Sunday, 24th Nov. next. No total eclipse of the sun will take place in England during the present century, but a very large eclipse of the sun will happen Oct. 9, 1847, in the forenoon

Newport, I. W., June 3, 1844. W. D. SNOOKE.

Another correspondent witnessed this interesting phenomenon from the ruins of Furness Abbey, in the north-west peninsula of Lancashire. At half-past 8 o'clock, the sun had been set some time to the writer, for the abbey ruins are in a narrow glen, surrounded by hills. Venus was shining with more than common lustre. The moon first peeped over the hill at 37 min. past 8, her whole disc being visible 43 m. past. She quickly assumed an unusual redness of colour, more like a pale sunset than a rising moon; and this tint continued for some time. The eclipse commenced at about 2 m. after 9; the daylight and the moonlight seemed to be now about equal, and continued so till the moon was wholly eclipsed, neither of them, at this time, appearing to cast a shadow; whilst the daylight lessened as the eclipse increased. When the disc was about half darkened, the eclipsed portion of the moon became visible, and continued to become more and more so till the total obscuration, which was at 9 m. after 10. The whole face of the moon was then of a coppery hue, much darker to the left (which would be the centre of the earth's shadow), than to the right, which was nearer the edge of the shadow. At length, this coppery hue grew lighter and lighter on the left side, as the centre of the earth's shadow travelled on to the right, until there was a luminous appearance round a considerable portion of the moon; and, at 30 m. past 11, her face again became visible, on the opposite side to that which was first darkened. The moon was now considerably higher in the heavens: daylight had departed: and, of course, she shone much more brightly than at the commencement of the eclipse; increasing and still increasing as the coppery veil was slowly and gradually uplifted; and she exhibited herself again in all her silvery brightness.

VAST WOOLLEN MILL DESTROYED BY FIRE.

We are indebted to a correspondent at Huddersfield for the annexed sketch of the shell of a large woollen mill belonging to Joseph



WOOLLEN MILL, FOLLY HALL, HUDDERSFIELD,

Kaye, Esq., situate at Folly Hall, which was destroyed by fire on Monday morning. The conflagration broke out on the third story, about a quarter before two, A.M., and at half-past two so rapid had been the work of destruction, that the roof and floors had fallen in; and before five all risk of the fire extending to the adjacent mills was removed. The building was occupied by various parties, who rented room and power from Mr. Kaye, and the loss is estimated at sixty thousand pounds, only very partially covered by insurance, as the offices objected to the risk from so many occupants in one building. Not less than seven hundred people will be thrown out of work by this unfortunate occurrence. The building is, or was, a handsome stone structure, forming the front of a cluster of mills equally large, all belonging to the same proprietor, and which must all have perished but for the entire absence of wind at the time. The building immediately behind was on fire two or three times, but was fortunately soon extinguished. When the conflagration was at its extreme height, the flames were above the large chimney, and burnt from the three upper rows of windows with an awful glare, so that at the distance of a mile the smallest type might have been read distinctly.

TRINITY MONDAY.—On Monday last, in accordance with annual custom, which has existed since the time of Henry VIII., the pensioners of the Master, Wardens, and Elder Brethren of the Corporation of the most Holy Trinity, and of Deptford Strond, in the county of Kent, the election of master, the proclamation of Deptford Fair, and other ceremonies connected with the day, took place, and, owing to the favourable state of the weather, the proceedings went off with great éclat, and both on Tower-hill and at Deptford there was a large attendance of people. The Wardens and Elder Brethren assembled in the great hall of the Trinity-house in the morning, to receive his Grace the Duke of Wellington, the Master of the Corporation, who, with his accustomed punctuality, arrived in an open carriage, precisely at eleven o'clock, the time appointed, and was received with loud cheering by the populace. On the arrival of the Corporation at Deptford a salute was fired, and the Master, Wardens, and Elder Brethren proceeded first to visit the almshouses, and afterwards attended divine service at St. Nicholas's Church, where an eloquent sermon was preached on the occasion by the Rev. Henry Melville, the chaplain of the Tower. At the termination of the service, which was attended by the inmates of the almshouses, the Duke of Wellington left Deptford, for town, in his carriage. According to custom his grace was to have presided at the banquet in the evening, but public business prevented him, and for the first time since the noble duke has filled the honourable and distinguished office of Master, he was compelled to absent himself.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, of 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 111, Vol. IV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1844. [Sixpence.

THE HOLY WAR.

CIVILIZATION has not yet so smoothed down the differences in human nature, but what we may every now and then discover the most startling incongruities. Thus in the midst of discussions about steam and railroads, and electric telegraphs, the world is soon to be startled by a "Holy War"—not a crusade, however, for the position of Christian and Mahometan is reversed; Europe no longer pours forth her thousands to devastate the East in the name of the Cross; one country alone has turned an invader of the deserts, and that only in the name of simple conquest, in which religion has the least possible share. The lust of dominion has replaced the fanaticism of creeds, and the religious zeal that fired the early crusaders has changed sides, and is now displayed by those who fight under the Crescent: the Mahometans of Northern Africa have, in fact, ceased to lie on the defensive only; they have taken the aggressive part, and threaten the French invaders with a "Holy War." Our neighbours will shortly have enough on their hands in the military way, to draw their attention from princely laments over the decay of their navy.

Could the Government of France under which the occupation of Algiers was effected, have foreseen the difficulties it would give rise to, the waste of blood and treasure it would cost, and the continual drain it would be on the national resources, it would probably have hesitated ere it took that first step which has since necessitated so many others, each succeeding one only increasing their embarrassment. The first intention of the French Government was, by seizing Algiers, to destroy that horde of pirates and rovers who levied constant contributions on the trade of the Mediterranean, to the disgrace and reproach of Christendom. We attempted to suppress them by the expedition under Lord Exmouth, and we succeeded in burning the hornet's nest, but not taking possession of it; they soon settled again, and recommenced their old practices with almost as much vigour as ever. This, of course, could not be tolerated, and towards the conclusion of the reign of Charles X., his Ministers made France the champion of Europe against the Algerines; and an army, almost unresisted, took possession of the city of the Dey. Great schemes were entertained of colonizing on an extensive scale, and a good deal was, indeed, attempted. But the necessity that attends all territorial conquest soon manifested itself. Having begun, there was no stopping: an army could not be confined to the walls of a town, and, if it settled in the vicinity, it was exposed to the constant attacks of the wild native soldiery, who cut off detached parties by sudden movements that no one could foresee, and fled into the interior with a speed that was difficult to follow. Thus, to hold a small district with safety, it was necessary to drive the Arabs from a much larger extent of territory; and as Abd-el-Kader has proved himself a commander of no ordinary powers and energy, this necessity has gone on increasing, till the outposts of the French army are advanced into the deserts of the interior; being spread over a large surface, isolated points are of course weakened, and have naturally enough become the objects of attack. In the French ranks too, many natives are employed, and these will be faithful only so long as the Europeans are strong; when the disproportion of numbers becomes very great, the Arab becomes the Son of the Desert once more, and is treacherous to those with whom he has allied himself. The opportunity of plundering is also as welcome to him as the chance of revenge, and the former seems the motive for the massacre of the little detachment left at Biskera by the Duc D'Aumale. But these petty acts of retaliation are merging into one great combination, between the Moors and Arabs. Abd-el-Kader has succeeded in compelling the Emperor of Morocco to comply with the demand of his fanatical people, and declare a war "of the Crescent" against the French invaders. A war into which this spirit enters is always a ferocious one; the savage spirit of the East will be roused to an excitement little short of madness—no quarter will be given, and though the courage, military skill, and discipline of the French troops will secure them the superiority in any general action (for the conquerors of the Mamelukes are not likely to yield to an inferior enemy), yet there will be particular cases in which reverses and disasters will be followed by the most terrible cruelties.

Thus in the nineteenth century, and, as Lord Brougham says, "towards the middle thereof," we see revived the conflict between the Moslem and the Frank, which has furnished so many pages to the history of romance, or to the romance of history. The soldiers of Mahomet once threatened the empires of Western Europe, but were arrested in their career by John Sobieski, the Polish hero. Diplomacy and internal decay have done more to reduce the power of the greatest Mahometan Empire than the sword, and the energy of the Moslem race seems to have gone to the darker and wilder tribes of Africa. They can dare to attack the armies and the discipline which the Moslem of Europe and Asia has long ceased even to dream of resisting.

There must be great power of commanding in those who can stir up a whole people to this degree of enthusiasm. All accounts concur in representing Abd-El-Kader as the origin of the movement, and its present director. The French have never conquered him, for he is as formidable after a defeat as before it. He is, evidently, a man of mind and expedients, having the confidence of chiefs and people. It is even said that he has driven the Emperor of Morocco into the war against his will. The Arab soldier has stirred up the fanatics of Fez against the Emperor, who is a money-loving, tax-levying monarch, and prefers commerce to war. The Moors of Fez are discontented with their ruler, and hate the French. Abd-el-Kader encourages both feelings to his own advantage, and it is not improbable that the predatory Arab Chief will yet make himself Sultan of Fez, and while he battles against the French on one hand, will strip the Emperor of a good part of his dominions on the other. The world may yet see the career of a Napoleon of the Deserts. The French will have to draw their forces closer together, and present a less extended line of attack, at least till they are reinforced, and their enemy will make good use of the interval before troops can arrive. But we confess we do not see the materials for the army that will expel the French in the following description of the force the Moors are bringing into the field:—

These levies of troops were at times drawn up outside of the city in one unbroken immense line, the cavalry in the middle, and the infantry on both sides. I did not see any artillery. Their firing and practice were wretched, many of the matchlocks missing fire. Whilst charging, which lasts some six or eight minutes, they sing "God is great!" &c. Besides "playing at power," which is firing on horseback at full gallop, these were their only military manœuvres. Their war-cry is "Ha, ha, ha.," pronounced with terrible guttural sounds and screamings, whilst their faces look as terrible as they can make them. In these grand shamfights, it is usual to divide the troops into Musaulmans and Christians, altering a little the dress to distinguish them. On one occasion the "mock" Christians ran down the "true" Musaulmans, and this was considered an evil omen. The amount of the levies of the provinces of Shedma and Rhalea (provinces of middling size) was about 120,000; but it must be recollected that every able-bodied Moor Arab is considered a soldier. The raw levies from the country are many of them badly prepared in different ways; and it is said that when their barley was consumed, they returned home to their huts or tents, for the Government neither gave them bread nor money.

DEPARTURE OF THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.—THE EMBARKATION AT WOOLWICH.

DEPARTURE OF THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA,

The Emperor of Russia, with a rapidity characteristic of all his movements, left Buckingham Palace shortly after five o'clock on Sunday evening for Woolwich, and, having inspected the royal dockyard at that place, in less than two hours embarked on board the Black Eagle steamer for Rotterdam, en route for his own dominions.

The royal cortège consisted of six of her Majesty's carriages; in the first of which rode the Emperor and his Royal Highness Prince Albert. Her Majesty, with the Princess Royal and the Prince of Wales, descended to the grand entrance hall with the Emperor, and took a final leave of his Majesty only when he had already entered the carriage.

The royal cortège, on leaving the palace, proceeded at a rapid rate through Kennington, New Cross, and Greenwich, arriving at the royal dockyard at the last minutes to six o'clock. Upon the carriage containing the Emperor entering the gates his Majesty was received by a guard of honour of the Marines, who were drawn up on the grand parade, a royal salute being fired at the same moment from a field battery of six guns stationed on the upper wharf. On alighting his Majesty was received by Prince Albert, Sir George Cockburn, Sir Thomas Hastings, Admiral Sir Thomas Hardy, Admiral Sir Edward Owen, Admiral Sir Thomas Bladen Capel, Admiral Sir Edward Codrington, and the Commissioner. The Lords Rivers, Lord Wharncliffe, and Lord Ellesmere, Lord in Waiting to the Emperor, who had been appointed an extra captain of the William and Mary yacht, for the service of the Black Eagle, was also in attendance. It having been arranged by the authorities that this nobleman should have the honour of commanding the vessel conveying his Majesty to the continent. In the dockyard was an assemblage of elegantly dressed ladies. During the shipment of the luggage and carriages on board the Lightning steamer, the Emperor and the distinguished members of his suite were conducted by Sir F. Collier through the factory. Previous his Majesty proceeded in company with the Prince Consort to the western slip on which the Prince Albert, 120 gun ship, is now in progress of erection. The royal party subsequently visited the new steam dock and the various other interesting features contained in the dockyard, and having spent nearly an hour in the inspection, at five minutes to seven the Emperor entered Sir Francis Collier's barge, and, accompanied by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, put off for the Black Eagle steamer, which was lying off the dockyard with her steam up, ready to put to sea immediately.

Upon reaching the deck, the Emperor inspected the temporary cabin or saloon, prepared for his reception, which is situate on the after deck of the vessel. Considering the short space of time all used to complete it, much credit was due to those employed. The fittings were extremely neat, and, at the same time, most convenient.

Prior to leaving the dockyard the Emperor took an affectionate leave of those officers who did not accompany him on board the steamer, and even after the vessel had slipped her moorings his Majesty remained in a prominent position on the deck, saluting the ladies in the most cordial manner.

Prince Albert took leave of the Emperor on board the Black Eagle. Their parting was of the most cordial and affectionate character. At seven o'clock [illegible] let go her moorings and dropped [illegible] arms as the steamer passed. The handsome imperial standard floated from the mainmast of the Black Eagle, and, attended by the Lightning steamer, she proceeded rapidly towards Woolwich Reach.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert returned to town immediately, attended by the Earl of Aberdeen and the other members of his suite.

Among the officers newly appointed to an Black Eagle for this occasion, is Mr. W Peel, son of Sir Robert Peel, who takes rank as First Lieutenant.

The Black Eagle arrived at Rotterdam at four o clock P.M., on Monday, after a delightful passage of twenty-one hours, the sea being nearly as smooth as a pond all the time. His Imperial Majesty on his arrival at the Hotel [illegible] ordered diamond rings and sums of money to be presented to the master-commander, additional master, and first engineer of the Black Eagle; and to the master-commander, second master, and first engineer of the Lightning; and the sum of £200 to be paid in England [illegible] of the crews of the two steamers.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, June 13.

SPAIN.

In my last I noticed certain intrigues for bringing about a marriage between the eldest son of Don Carlos and the Queen of Spain. I am now enabled, not only to give you full details, but such information as will convince you of the impossibility that such a plan can be carried out. It is a curious fact, that an those persons who were suspected of aiding Marotto in his infamous treachery to Don Carlos such as the Generals Cabrera, the present factotum of Don Carlos, Tamarits; Toledo, the Legitimate son of the Duke Infantado, and several generals—are the strenuous supporters of this marriage. The agents in London are Mr. Peter Borthwick and Lord Ranelagh's younger son, having recently, but who unfortunately, owing to misrepresentation, were the supporters of Maroto to the very day that he delivered the army to Espartero. For a length of time Don Carlos resisted the urgency of the match; but the intercessions of his wife, the Princess de Beira—whose counsels at all times have been funeste to her [illegible] husband—having been procured, Don Carlos consented to abdicate in favour of his son, whom he designated as Charles V. I said at the time this was impracticable, and you will find I am correct. I will give my reasons very shortly. The Christinos can never accept an abdication from Don Carlos, for, by so doing, they acknowledge his right to the throne—abdication implies right. In like manner Don Carlos cannot consent to withdraw his pretensions to the throne, because he acknowledges his being but a pretender, and as having for seven years signed official documents calling himself King Again, the eldest son of a King of Spain is, by virtue of his being the heir to the throne, created Duke of Asturias. This title is now borne by the eldest son of Don Carlos, and the marriage he offers in exchange for that would be with [illegible]la, who, of necessity, must take the title only of Infanta of Spain. [illegible] Don Carlos cannot consent that his son shall assume a title [illegible] which he has himself renounced, and which [illegible] therefore [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] objected to the motion as one that would be injurious to the public interests, and calculated to irritate and wound the public feelings. After a discussion in which Mr. French, Mr. Warburton, Alderman Copeland, Mr. T. Duncombe, Lord John Russell, and General Johnson took a part, the House divided.

For the motion	.. ..	19
Against it	.. ..	90
Majority	.. ..	—39

Mr. WARD then brought on a motion for a committee of the whole house, upon the present state of the temporalities of the Irish Church. Addressing himself to the comparative statement of the Established Church in England and in Ireland, he showed that while the English episcopal hierarchy might assume that it had to deal with a population of fourteen millions, with the superfluous fat between one and eleven millions added, that the Irish Church had but 2439 parishes, and only 750 000 Episcopalians, for whose spiritual instruction it received the net annual revenue of £633,000, not to mention the many grants for education, glebe houses, churches, and so forth. He then glanced at the past history of English policy in Ireland; traced the bulk of Irish grievances to the existence of so anomalous an institution as the Established Church, condemned by all reflecting men as a grievance, the house by reading printed placards, announcing the sale of the effects of the late Archdeacon of Meath, in which racing horses, hounds, beagles, and all the et ceteras of a fox-hunting squire, were the conspicuous features. What counsel did Sir Robert Peel mean to follow? Was he prepared to follow out the policy commenced in Catholic Emancipation, or to fall back upon the advice of such men as the Rev. Hugh M'Neile, who, in a lecture to the operatives of Liverpool, said, that Jesuit arrows were in the air, and that no security for this country without new restrictions being imposed on the Roman Catholics? Would the recent state trials pacify Ireland? Its people were universally of opinion that, if Mr. O'Connell had been an Englishman, he would not have been convicted. In truth, Ireland was our Poland; as such, she gathered round her the sympathies of the Continent; while England, with her broad principles of liberty as respected herself, and her generous encouragement in favour of the negro population of her colonies, staked security and happiness on the maintenance of the remnant of an exclusive system which ought to have expired with Catholic Emancipation. He called on them to put an end to it at once, and, by adopting the only course which can avert the Repeal of the Union, legislate for the empire, and accomplish the work commenced in the emancipation of the Roman Catholics. Lord ELIOT repeated the arguments by which the security of the church was provided for by the Act of Union, citing the sentiments of Grattan, Pumkett, Canning, and other advocates of the Irish claims, in order to show that their concession would not affect its integrity. Catholic Emancipation did not destroy the essentially Protestant character of the constitution; and looking to the way in which the Protestant clergy generally spent their incomes, to expend in remote and poor districts, he thought evil would happen to Ireland than to take away the revenues of the Establishment, and apply them to secular purposes. He hoped, therefore, that the house would reject the motion by a large majority. Mr. ROSS supported the motion. Mr. SHAW admitted that the neglect and mal-administration of the Irish Church in past times was one cause why there had not been more converts from the Roman Catholic religion to a purer faith; but the case of Archdeacon de Lacy was no specimen of the existing condition of things. He was an old gentleman of very peculiar habits, with a large private fortune, and, notwithstanding his sporting eccentricities, spending large sums of money in charities. Mr. Ward was misinformed when he stated the net income of the Irish Church at £630,000; that was the gross amount; and the net income, allowing for all deductions, was only £550,000. As there were, in round numbers, 1400 benefices, this would give £225 to each beneficed clergyman; but as, including curates, the number of clerical persons in Ireland was about 3200, the average amount to be divided amongst them was reduced to £170. The Irish Establishment would stand comparison with any other Church; pluralities were in course of abrogation; non-residence was rapidly diminishing; and church extension, chiefly by the aid of private exertions and funds, was vigorously carried on, in the erection and endowment both of churches and schools. The Irish clergy had suffered much, and were ready to suffer more; and it was an ungrateful return, after all their sacrifices, to seek to abolish Protestantism altogether. He was glad, therefore, that the Government had met the motion with a manly resistance.—Mr. REDINGTON commented on Mr. Shaw's statistics, and said, in opposition to his statement, that one fourteenth of the clergy of the Irish Establishment were absentees. For this a very sufficient explanation might be given. In his own parish there was not a single Protestant; and as the duties to which he belonged, not above thirty individuals attended the church. Such a state of things could not be prolonged for ever.

When Mr. Redington had concluded, the debate was adjourned, and the County Rates Bill having passed through committee, the House adjourned at half past 12 o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—WEDNESDAY.

The house did not sit.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. WEDNESDAY.

The Edinburgh and Glasgow, and the Delabole and Roche Railway Bills were severally read a third time and passed.

Mr. HUTCHEON GIBSON rose to call attention to the alarming increase of incendiarism in Suffolk, Norfolk, and parts of Essex. He was a magistrate for the county of Suffolk, and he believed, from inquiries he had made, that the laboring classes were well disposed, and would shudder with horror from such atrocious crimes. The gentry acted with kindness, and were desirous of ameliorating the condition of the poor. Notwithstanding this, the crime was increasing to a most alarming extent.—Sir J. GRAHAM said that Mr. Gibson had correctly described the conduct and character both of the gentry and the labouring classes in Suffolk, and yet incendiarism was increasing in it and the adjoining counties. The Government were determined to employ every means to put down this crime, and had been in communication with the lords-lieutenant and the magistrates, and every exertion would be made to discover the offenders.

The adjourned debate on the Temporalities of the Church of Ireland was then resumed by Colonel Rawdon, who, in illustration of the anomalous ecclesiastical condition of Ireland, took the town he represents, Armagh, in which the two primates resided; one the head of the English Church in Ireland, whose stipend was paramount in the hands of the Crown, and the other, a man of humble obscurity, unnoticed by Parliament, though reverenced by the body over which he presided. He argued at some length that the temporalities of the Irish Church had undergone great alteration at different periods, and called upon the house to abandon the mere pecuniary consideration of the question, to let common sense prevail, and do justice to the Irish people.—Sir J. WALSH opposed the motion.—Mr. MAURICE O'CONNELL hoped that they would never see the day when the Catholic Clergy would be willing to accept a state provision. The Registration Bill would not satisfy the people; and the State prosecutions had not shaken the influence of Mr. O'Connell with the people. He took the case of the well-known Catholic primate, Dr. Troy, whose worldly wealth, at the close of his long and laborious career, was trapence halfpenny, which was found on the chimney-piece after he died, the expenses of his funeral being defrayed by subscription; and asked if examples like this, contrasting with the large fortunes accumulated, and the worldly enjoyments participated in by the dignitaries of the Protestant Establishment, would not cause very serious effects in the minds of the Irish people?—Mr. FORBES was convinced that the granting of the committee would raise delusive expectations, aggravate and keep open the wounds of the country, and tend to undermine the security of the Establishment.—Mr. JOHN BROWNE supported the motion. Mr. G. H. HAMILTON regretted these annual attacks on the property of the Irish Church, through the medium of indefinite motions. The clergy of the Protestant Church were the friends of the Catholic Church, as the teacher of religious truth; and, though he disapproved of undue wealth or sinecurism in any church, the statistics which he adduced showed that the revenues of the Irish Establishment were not excessive. Allegations against it. The more the subject was inquired into, the higher and better would the Church of Ireland stand in the estimation of the public.—Sir CHARLES NAPIER said that the average of the incomes of the Irish clergy in 1833 was stated at £225 per annum. That was not too much—it was too little—for a Protestant clergyman; but it was too much for clergymen who had no congregation. The confusion of the Irish Church ought to be put an end to at once, before a war broke out, which, in the present state of European politics, was anything but an improbable event.—When Sir C. Napier sat down, no person rising, the several benches being exceedingly thin, Sir Robert Peel moved that a call for a division, and the gallery was cleared. The doors were scarcely afterwards re-opened, and Mr. BOATHWICK was found addressing the house. A discussion took place between Church and State, as being an essential principle of Catholicity, and of a national Church: regretted that the Irish Establishment had not hitherto enchained the Roman Catholics of that country, but reduced the question in dispute to a mere secular and pecuniary consideration; and in the course of a rather discursive speech, embodying a homily on the Church, he made several admissions, which were cheered by the Opposition as confessions that he was speaking against his own side.—Mr. V. SMITH said that, if Mr. Borthwick had not risen, the house would have been engaged in considering the practical remedies which should be adopted, as a consequence of the carrying of Mr. Ward's motion. But, having received refreshment from the Treasury, the member for Evesham had established a reputation as one of the best speakers against time in the house. [This allusion, we believe, referred to the fact that Lord Arthur Lennox had stopped an orange into the hand of Mr. Borthwick, while he was addressing the house.] Religion was not propagated by an Establishment—that being a result of managed exertion; the chief function of an established church was to preserve religion, and repress fanaticism. In Ireland, the Establishment operated as an anti-Protestant institution; and to counteract this effect, he would give—or at least offer—such a moderate national endowment to the Irish Roman Catholic clergy, as would place them in pecuniary independence of their congregations, without rendering them dependent on the State. He pressed on the Government the necessity of following up a course of conciliation and generosity towards Ireland, one part of which would consist in measures for reducing to due dimensions the overgrown Irish Establishment.—Sir J. GRAHAM inferred, from the language of Sir Charles and the thinness of attendance, that the motion and the discussion were deficient in novelty and interest. He frankly admitted that, down to a recent period, the Irish Established Church was marked by abuses and imperfections which no friend of it could justify. But a great change had taken place during the last quarter of a century; and it was the earnest wish of the Government, in protecting the Church in the possession of its temporalities, guaranteed as they were by legislative enactments, to give it the security necessary for its purification, and the extension of its influence. He would not be so unjust to the Irish people as to suppose a failure of their accustomed loyalty in the event of a war; and the Government, which had showed its disposition to do justice to so weak a body as the Unitarian Christians, might be credited as willing to act in a proper spirit towards their Roman Catholic fellow subjects. Although the terms of the motion left the question indefinite, its object was clear—that they should go into a committee of the whole House, in order to consider the best mode of despoiling the Irish Protestant Church of its property. There was no parallelism between the cases of Scotland and Ireland, except in the one point, that by the respective articles of union, England was bound to secure the Establishments of each country in all their rights and privileges. The Government were taunted with neglecting to legislate for Ireland. But, in addition to the Parliamentary and Municipal Franchise, and Registration Bills, they had another prepared, for the purpose of facilitating Roman Catholic endowments, through the medium of a permanent board of Commissioners, and he was aware of their good intentions, even if they might be unable to carry them. It was his conviction that, if the Protestant Church of Ireland were stripped of its property, it would revive the question of forfeited property, and give a general shock to titles; and, with these impressions it would be his duty to give an uncompromising opposition to the motion.—Lord JOHN RUSSELL was astonished at the high ground taken by Sir James Graham, seeing he was a party to a bill which took three hundred thousand a year from the Irish establishment, and transferred it to the pockets of the landlords—a measure which provoked the denunciations of Mr. Lefroy and Mr. Shaw, and the more measured, but not less decided, opposition of the Archbishop of Canterbury. For himself, he had been a party to the Church Temporalities Bill, in the hope that it would form a precedent for future reforms; and it was consoling to him to hear the favourable terms in which it was now mentioned. He had, however, heard the overthrow of the Constitution predicted three or four times, as a consequence of previous measures; and after their passing, he found the Constitution as flourishing as ever. He disapproved of voluntaryism in religion on two grounds; the natural necessities of man impelled him to supply his wants, but religion was not felt as one, especially when pauperism prevailed, and dependence on congregations subdued moral independence, as in the United States, where Ministers blinked the accursed institution of slavery. But the chief duty of the State, in connection with the Church, was to supply the means of general instruction in the moral precepts of Christianity, leaving adherence to specific doctrines to be determined by the will of the majority for whose benefit the Church is instituted. Objection was taken to the proposition for going into committee in order to consider the temporalities of the Irish Church, and they were asked what plan they had to propose? The very same objection was taken to going into committee in order to consider the subject of the Poor Laws of Parliaments, and yet, though supported by mere bit by bit Reformers, and by advocates of Annual Parliaments and Universal Suffrage, they managed to proceed to a tolerable harmony, and to effect a great change. A similar result might be expected with respect to the Irish Church, and it would be the wisest, as well as the most dignified, course to undertake it in time. Reliance was placed on Irish loyalty. True, they were warm-hearted, but they were also quick-sighted; and when they found that they had to bear grievances endured by no other nation, their attachment might be expected to turn into enmity; and such grievances were concluded, and the keeping of the Irish Church for public purposes were carried. The hostility between different bodies of Dissenters, as developed by the Chapels Bill, was far more bitter than was ever exhibited by the Church; and therefore the existence of an Establishment was no necessary cause of religious discord. An establishment should, however, be civilly subject to the State; and as the Roman Catholics repudiated all interference with their spiritual concerns, they could not ask the Government at the present State to divert property from its present uses, and, at the same time, to put it beyond their control. No small or trivial changes would give satisfaction or contentment. Looking to the principle of the progressive measures of the Government, and to the wishes of the assailants of the Church. But, at the same time, he did not think that the Established Church of Ireland was perfect, improved as it was; he would abolish or mitigate sinecurism and pluralities; and, though he would maintain the Church in its integrity, he was not opposed to reforms in its details.—Mr. SHEIL asked, if they were prepared to endow the Roman Catholic Church, what course they would adopt with Maynooth? Sweep it away altogether, or make it efficient; and yet those who intimated a purpose to offer what would not be accepted, were silent on a matter which involved a new principle, and would occur on refusal. The Government stood upon integrity and impartiality; members of the Cabinet were parties to a measure which took twenty-five per cent. from the parsons, and put it in the pockets of the landlords. What should they call it? Confiscation? [Mr. SHAW exclaimed, "An allowance in consideration."] An allowance! Be it so; the thing by any other name was still the same. Sir James Graham, in alluding to the danger of a disturbance of the Act of Settlement with regard to the property, he thought under-valued the strength of the Government. The "clergy reserves" in Canada were placed on the same footing as are now the temporalities of the Irish Church; yet the Legislature allowed them to purpose more or exchange with its views of sound policy; and in seeking a deduction from the revenues of a Church entirely disproportioned to their wants, they were not to be accused of violating its overthrow. It was a violation of contract to say that the Irish bishops were too highly paid in proportion to their duties. Why should the Archbishop of Armagh receive more than the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, or the Irish Protestant hierarchy, in the midst of a Catholic population, be paid at a greater stipend than the English bishops? They contended, too, that the number of the clergy should be reduced, seeing so many had churches without congregations. The church was the source of every difficulty in legislating for Ireland, as the experience of the Government was now teaching them: and in opposing the demand for a new appropriation of the "clergy reserves" in Ireland, they were opposing themselves to the wishes of a majority of the Irish legislatures as well as of its people, and Sir Robert Peel might find too late that all chances of conciliating the country were disastrously thrown away.—Sir R. H. INGLIS spoke amidst much impatience for a division. The Protestant Church in Ireland rested not on compact; it was the truth, committed to their keeping by a gracious Providence. They professed to seek not the life, but the money, of the Church, like highwaymen on a road.—Mr. WARD briefly replied.

On a division there appeared—

For Mr. Ward's motion	.. ..	179
Against it	.. ..	274
Majority	.. ..	—95

The other orders of the day having been disposed of, the house adjourned at half-past one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

After the presentation of a number of petitions on various subjects,

The Earl of CLARENDON rose to call the attention of the Government to the occurrences which had recently taken place in Africa. The forcible deposition of the Emperor of Morocco to the country, and his constant deference to the advice of England, had not prevented his proclaiming the "holy war" against another European power, the ally of England. It could not be supposed that the Emperor had taken that course with the sanction of the British authorities. However, it was now beyond doubt that he had made an invasion of the French territories in Africa, and that the war had commenced. With respect to the murder of the Spanish Consul at Tangiers, it was the fact that the man was killed in an affray brought about by his own conduct, and for which the authorities were not in the least responsible. It had been supposed, that the real reason to say that was the case, that the Spanish Government had been incited to declare war by France: but it was a curious coincidence that, after this, relations of a hostile character should so soon take place between France and the Emperor of Morocco. They might have been the result of accident, but they gave a colour to the idea that France desired to see Spain engaged in hostilities with Morocco. It was most desirable that the line of conduct now pursued by the Government of France should be in the possession of a friendly power, because it was from thence they derived their supplies for Gibraltar.

Lord MONTEAGLE then moved the appointment of a Select Committee, to inquire into the operation of the "import duties." This important motion led to an extended debate; after which their Lordships divided. The numbers were—

For the motion	.. .. ..	74
Against it	.. .. ..	183
Majority against the motion	.. ..	109

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at four o'clock.

The Glasgow and Coatbridge Railway Bill was read a third time and passed.

Petitions against the Bank Charter Bill, and against the Dissenters' Chapels Bill, were presented by several members.

The order of the day for the second reading of the Bank Charter Bill having been read, Mr. B. HAWES rose to move, that no sufficient evidence has been laid before the house to justify the interference with bankers' issues in the management of their circulation. The honourable gentleman said that he stood by the act of 1819, and he thought that no case had been made out for any further interference with that act. A protracted debate followed, in which Mr. Hastie, Mr. Newdegate, Mr. C. Buller, Mr. Darby, Mr. Gisborne, Sir R. Peel, and Mr. Munts took part. On the division the numbers were,

For the amendment	.. .. ..	144
Against it	.. .. ..	197
Majority against the resolution..	.. ..	53

The Bill was then read a second time, and ordered to be committed on Monday.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

Their lordships assembled at five o'clock.

Several petitions against the Dissenters' Chapels Bill were presented.

In answer to a question from the Earl of Wicklow, the LORD CHANCELLOR said there was no foundation whatever for the report that the circuits of the judges in this country had been postponed until after the writ of error in the state trials had been disposed of.

The Earl of MINTO wished to ask whether it was the intention of the Government to propose any measure for assisting parochial education in Scotland. The minimum income of the schoolmasters was 10*l.* a week, and the maximum was £36 a year. It was evident that for this remuneration the services of gentlemen of superior education could not be obtained. He begged therefore to ask whether it was to be hoped that at some future day the Government would take the subject into consideration.—The Earl of HADDINGTON would not go into any discussion upon the subject, and would confine himself to answering the question put by his noble friend. The attention of the Government had been turned to the subject, and although it was not in his power to say that the Government would introduce a measure this session, he believed that it would be done next session.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at four o'clock.

Lord OSBALDISTON presented petitions from Northampton against the Dissenters' Chapels Bill.

Mr. W. COLLETT moved that the Committee on the Monkland Railway Bill have power to proceed with the Bill with only two sessional members. It was with difficulty that a sufficient number of selected members could be obtained in the committee, and the proceedings were stopped in consequence. This delay was attended with the greatest expense to the petitioners, and he thought the subject deserved the serious consideration and attention of the Committee of Selection.—Mr. WALLACE, in seconding the motion, called the attention of the house to a similar case of inconvenience which had occurred in the Committee on the Paisley Gas Bill.—After some further observations the motion was agreed to.

Mr. T. DUNCOMBE presented a petition from W. J. Linton, William Lovett, Joseph Hanson, and others, residents in London, complaining of the detention and opening of their letters at the General Post-office, and praying for immediate redress. The letters were written from 47, Devonshire-street, Queen-square, within the last month, and the petitioners said that although they were not written for any political purpose and did not contain any treasonable matter, they had been detained at the post-office, by the post-office authorities, beyond the usual time, and they had been read at the post-office. The petitioners said they considered such a practice as an introduction of the spy system of foreign states—a system repugnant to the free system of the British constitution, and dangerous to liberty. They were prepared to prove the truth of those allegations, and they prayed for a committee to inquire into the subject. The petition was then ordered to be laid on the table.—Mr. THOMAS DUNCOMBE said the course which he might pursue would very much depend on the answer which he should receive from the right hon. gentleman (Sir James Graham) to a question which he should now put to him. His question was, then, whether the right hon. gentleman was aware that the letters of those individuals had been opened, read, and examined at the General Post-office, and if so, whether it had been done by the authority of any one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State?—Sir J. GRAHAM said the house was aware that from so early a period as the reign of Queen Anne, power had been invested in the principal Secretaries of State, by warrant, to detain letters, and to empower the Post-office functionaries to open them. That power came under the review of Parliament, in 1837, and by the Act of the 1st of Victoria, that power continued to be vested in her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State. With respect to the letters of the petitioners, a warrant had been issued. With respect to those of one of them, he had, on his own responsibility, issued a warrant, which was not now in force. Having made this declaration, he must beg further to add, that the power of the petitioners, by the responsible officers of the Crown by the law of the land—that it was entrusted to them for the public safety—that the Parliament of the country placed confidence in those who exercised it; and that it was not for the public good to press for inquiry into this particular case. (Hear, hear.) He had gone as far in explanation as he conceived it his duty to go. He must respectfully but firmly resist any attempt to call upon him for further information.—After a few words of desultory conversation between several members, Mr. DUNCOMBE said, that as he had no other way of obtaining the opinion of the house upon this very dirty transaction, upon which all explanation was refused, he should move that the house do now adjourn.

The gallery was then cleared, but the motion for adjournment was negatived without a division, it being understood that Mr. Duncombe would bring on the subject on a future occasion, on going into committee of supply.

TEXAS AND THE OREGON TERRITORY.

Though the question of the annexation of Texas to the United States may be laid aside by the vote of the Senate of the American Congress, it is nevertheless at so much present importance as to justify the attempt and interest which it has caused.

The following remarks are written for the purpose of explaining its history, and the grounds upon which the United States has threatened to make an encroachment on the Mexican as well as on the Oregon territory, for the two measures are intimately connected in their origin.

During the time that the French occupied Canada, many attempts were made to explore the western part of America, and especially the Mississippi river. Among the most remarkable were those undertaken under the direction of the celebrated and unfortunate Robert Cavelier de la Salle. He descended the Mississippi to the sea, and discovered the entrance of that great river into the Gulf of Mexico, on the 9th of April, 1682. The object of this expedition was to find a port, and "to re-establish a settlement from whence the French could harass the Spaniards." Accordingly, the French geographers drew their riches. On his return to France in 1683, La Salle was appointed to direct an expedition to reach the Mississippi by the sea. He sailed from Rochelle July 24, 1684. The voyage was favourable, but the ships were taken past the Mississippi, and after vain attempts to find its entrance to the sea, the party landed in Texas, near the mouth of the Colorado river. La Salle built a fort or stockade, and leaving part of his men in it, he endeavoured to discover the Mississippi over-land. In making this attempt, he was murdered by one of his companions, March 15, 1687. "Such," says an able writer, "was the end of this daring adventurer. For force of will, for vast conceptions, and for quick adaptation of genius to untried circumstances, he had no superior among his countrymen. He will be remembered through all time as the father of communication by the great valley of the West. Many of the parts left by La Salle at the fort were seized by the Mexicans, and some were condemned to the mines. The French did not again visit the country."

In 1803, the province of Louisiana, including Texas, was ceded, and was one of nine distinguished brothers of the family of Lemoine, which is at this day represented by the Baron de Longueil in Canada, was sent by the French Government to make a settlement on the Mississippi. In conjunction with his brothers, Bienville and Serigny, he founded the City of New Orleans.

In 1763, New Orleans and all the territory known by the name of Louisiana was surrendered by the French to Spain. In 1803, Bonaparte recovered it from Spain; but, fearful of its being taken by the English, it was sold in 1803 for eleven millions of dollars to the United States, the purchase being of "all lands on the west side of the Mississippi river, and then belonging to the United States, as far as the great chain of mountains which divides the waters running into the Pacific and those falling into the Atlantic Ocean between the territory claimed by Great Britain on the one part, and the ceded and Spanish on the other."

Out of these facts has the claim of the United States to both Texas and to the Oregon territory arisen.

In order to enable the United States to have the boundary of its new purchase defined, it was necessary to negotiate a treaty of limits with Spain, and by it the undefined line, mentioned in the purchase deed of Louisiana, was converted into a natural and defined line, namely the Sabine river. Texas, or Texas proper, but not satisfied with this, the Americans, who, in this purchase from France, recognised the rights of England in the Oregon Territory, had inserted in this treaty with Spain, to which England was no party, these words, "his Catholic Majesty cedes to the United States all his rights, claims, and pretensions, to any territories north of the said line."

Texas, by this arrangement, first induced France to declare that it sold a line through a country to which it had no title—they then obtained from Spain a definition of this line, and now they say, that from Spain and not from France they derive rights which exclude the very rights of England, recognised in that very agreement of purchase made with France, which it was the object of the treaty with Spain to define.

[illegible] England the [illegible] Texas [illegible] Mexico [illegible] Texas was [illegible] Mexico [illegible] Texas [illegible] Mexico [illegible] Texas [illegible] Mexico [illegible] Texas desirous that my country should derive all the advantages she can yet obtain, and avoid the sacrifices it would sustain by a rash attempt to recover a country, from which it has derived no real benefit."

TEXAS: CHURCH OF ALAMO, SAN ANTONIO DE BEXAR.

From 1836 to 1842 Texas advanced with rapidity, its population rapidly increased a great extent of country was brought into cultivation, and its independence was recognised by France, Belgium, Great Britain, and the Pope. The character of the population improved; courts of law were established throughout it, and the most perfect contentment with the new government existed. In these particulars it offered a remarkable contrast to the Republic of Mexico. It has had three elections for President. On the first occasion, General Houston was elected; on the second, General Lamar; and on the last, General Houston was elected a second time, and his term of three years is about to expire. Each of these elections was peaceably conducted, and no violence has disturbed the operation of the laws. In Mexico unfortunately, the administration of the law and course of the government have been habitually violated since it attained independence. The only authority that is really powerful is that of the military. The insecurity of life and property—the organization of robbers—and the impotence and folly of those in power, have checked the progress of all arts, of all commercial, agricultural, and general enterprise. That this must be so the following particulars will sufficiently prove:—The independence of Mexico was declared in 1821; the Emperor Iturbide was dethroned in 1823, and executed in 1824; in 1824 General Victoria was elected President, and is the only President who has served the legal term of four years; in 1828 Pedraza was elected President, but Guerrero was proclaimed by Santa Anna; in 1828 Pedraza retired; in 1829 Guerrero was President; in 1831 Guerrero was deposed, and Bustamente became President; in 1833 Pedraza was restored, but in the same year Santa Anna became President; in April, 1836, Santa Anna was taken prisoner by the Texans and Bustamente became President; in 1841 Santa Anna (through a revolution) again became President, and Bustamente was driven from the country. There have been two Constitutions promulgated since 1842, and Santa Anna may be considered to be despotic.

MOROCCO: VIEW OF TETUAN.

VISITS TO O'CONNELL, &c., IN THE RICHMOND PENITENTIARY, DUBLIN.

Thus political independence, which has spread civilization and settlements, and law, order, and perfect contentment with its public institutions throughout Texas, has produced in Mexico a continued series of revolutionary movements. No man has yet appeared to govern in Mexico who can estimate the value of directing the ambition of public men, from the pursuit of military distinction, to the more enduring honours of civil life, to which Washington instantly guided his countrymen when he sheathed the sword drawn against a foreign power, and turned to govern those as citizens whom he had commanded as soldiers.

GENERAL HOUSTON, PRESIDENT OF TEXAS.

In 1842, an ill-considered expedition from Texas to Santa Fé excited Mexico to a renewal of hostilities. Since then the country has been harassed by front er incursions, and by the anxiety of threatened invasion. The recognition of its Government has been obstinately refused by Mexico; and the people, too poor and too weak to compel compliance to their wishes, seek to obtain a cessation of hostilities through a connexion with the United States, which, if assented to—as it eventually may be—will have fatal consequences to the Government of Mexico. Texas cannot again form part of the Mexican dominions, and it is the interest of those from whom it has separated to have a weaker neighbour than the United States on the banks of the Rio Grande.

The late attempt of President Tyler to annex Texas to the United States is certainly very censurable. If aggression or encroachment is to be made, let it be performed in its own name, with the justification of fear, of danger, or of ambition; but the pretext is ridiculous, and, as a violation of the declarations of the existing treaty, of 1819, too immoral to be mentioned without censure, which has induced him to recommend it, among other reasons, on the ground that, "if accomplished, the Government will have succeeded in reclaiming a territory which formerly constituted a portion, as it is confidently believed, of its domain under the Treaty of Cession, of 1803, by France to the United States."

The drawings above given are from original sketches; and one is of the Church of the Alamo, against which, in the siege to which we have alluded, the chief assault was directed.

FRANCE AND MOROCCO.

In the Messager of Tuesday have been published despatches from General Lamoricière, commanding the French troops on the Morocco frontier, announcing the commencement of hostilities between him and the forces of the Emperor. Of the latter there were 1400 or 1500 cavalry of the Abd-el-Bokhari, and 900 Arab cavalry. The Moniteur of the same day announces that Louis Philippe has ordered that the Prince de Joinville hoist his flag of Rear-Admiral on one of the ships of the squadron of evolution, and repair on a cruise along the coast of the empire of Morocco, which, it is conjectured, the Prince may thus be enabled to gain over to pacific relations with France. When it is recollected that Morocco borders eastward on Algiers, the importance of these movements is self evident.

Morocco (properly Marocco) extends from S. to N. between 27 degrees and 36 degrees N. latitude of North Africa; the most northern districts forming the southern coast of the Straits of Gibraltar, and from east to west between 1 deg. 20 min. and 11 deg. 30 min. W. longitude. On the north, it borders on the Mediterranean, on the north-west and west on the Atlantic Ocean; on the south on the Sahara; and on the east as above. Its surface is estimated by Graberg at 274,000 square miles, or 50,000 square miles more than that of France. It is extremely diversified by mountains, hills, plains, and valleys; of the former, the most important is the celebrated Atlas ranges, which are covered with snow for several months in the year, and are said to rise 13,000 feet and upwards. Its coasts are generally elevated and rocky, and in many places inaccessible. Its plains vary much in fertility.

The empire is composed of the two kingdoms of Fez and Morocco, and is divided into thirty governments. Morocco, the capital, and residence of the Sultan, is surrounded by a wall thirty feet high, with square turrets at every fifty paces; and the circuit is six miles, but the area is far from being covered with buildings. Fez, or Fas, is, however, the most industrious and commercial town of the empire: it contains upwards of 100 mosques, and seven public schools; each trade is carried on in a separate street, and the commerce of the town with the seaports is very great.

We annex a specimen of one of the towns (from a sketch by a correspondent). Tetuan, not far from the Straits of Gibraltar, built on the declivity of a hill about half a mile from a small river (Martil) which falls into the Mediterranean about five miles from the town; the mouth of the river forms a harbour for vessels of middling size. It carries on a considerable commerce with Spain, France, and Italy, exporting wool, barley, wax, leather, hides, cattle, maize, and fruits, of which the valley of Tetuan produces abundance of the finest quality.

In the House of Lords, on Thursday evening, Tetuan was referred to by the Earl of Clarendon, as a place of considerable importance to Great Britain, both in time of peace and war, because upon this town and Tangier Gibraltar is almost entirely dependent for the support of its numerous garrison, and of its large population.

THE RICHMOND PENITENTIARY, DUBLIN.

The site of this now ennobled mansion is on the south of the city of Dublin, on what is called the Circular Road—a Lazenby Boulevart which far surpasses in beauty of scenery and salubriousness of atmosphere, the more notorious strada in Paris; where nothing is to be seen but conflicting countenances of politicians, morning, noon, and night. The ground upon which this immense pile stands was formerly a garden-nursery belonging to a Mr. Grimwood, a horticulturist and arborist of great celebrity. The debris of his floral culture are yet to be seen, for to parody Goldsmith's words, we may say—

"Near yonder crab (copse), where once the garden smil'd,
And still where many a garden flow'r grows wild."

Some outward fences show that once the scene was otherwise than it is at present. It is close to a branch of the Grand Canal, which in the first years of enthusiasm for Moore's melodies was so gondolieted and "made resonant as any one of Venice. From the heights of the building the principal objects of the city may be overlooked, and although "cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd," can bear any alleviation, it must be where "air is free and prospect wide."

The Circular-road includes almost all the city in its periphery, and a better spot could not have been possibly chosen than that occupied by the Richmond Penitentiary (established 1816); whether we consider its retired, or healthful situation. As to its distinguished inmates now, for whom there is neither "spes libertatis, nec cæra peculi," we can only congratulate them that they chance to be so well lodged, although against their wills. The city prisons are close and most unhealthy, but the Richmond Penitentiary contains gardens within its walls, wherein a man might study and effect all the classifications of Linnæus, if his genius inclined that way to read and cultivate, and enjoy as good health as if he were on the top of the hill gabouring Wicklow mountains.

THE GRAND REVIEW IN WINDSOR GREAT PARK.—THE ILLUSTRIOUS VISITORS AND STAFF.

THE GRAND REVIEW IN WINDSOR GREAT PARK.

In our journal of last week, we gave a spirited sketch of the illustrious visitors and staff at this grand military display. We now present our readers with a more finished engraving of the stirring scene.

The review took place on ground heretofore allotted for the purpose, an area (with a slightly undulating surface), nearly a mile in length, and perhaps a third of a mile in breadth. Some idea of the number of persons present may be formed from the fact that the whole length of this space was lined with spectators, several files deep; and that, in addition to those who were on foot and who had trusted to chance to gain a favourable point of view, there extended also along the whole line a file of carriages (the horses, of course, removed) so closely packed, as that it was difficult to pass between them, and very often four or five deep. Not a single available perch on these carriages but was occupied. Elegantly dressed ladies—many of them of high rank—were to be seen standing on the roofs, or on the seats of their own carriages, and their gay attire, mingled with the red coats of the Eton boys (who wore their Montem dresses), varied the scene in a manner strikingly animated and beautiful. There were also great numbers of noblemen and gentlemen on horseback. Even the trees had their occupants.

The details of the review were given in our last number.

The Emperor of Russia preceded her Majesty's carriage on horseback, with Prince Albert (who wore his Field Marshal's uniform) on his left, and the King of Saxony on his right. The Emperor's dress was a Russian uniform, the colour dark green (almost black), with a black helmet, with white feathers. He looked remarkably well, and presented a really noble appearance. He bowed very courteously to the spectators. The Duke of Wellington (who looked in hale and hearty health) rode immediately after the Emperor, surrounded by noblemen and officers in uniform too numerous to mention. Sir Robert Peel rode amongst them, and his usual blue frock coat and buff waistcoat contrasted oddly and strikingly with the splendid dresses around him. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge was one of those who rode immediately with the Emperor.

As the staff passed up and down the line, the Emperor rode by the side of the Duke of Wellington, and they interchanged frequent remarks upon the troops as they passed along. It was amusing, as the Emperor and the Duke went on side by side, to see the odd contrast in their mode of riding—the Emperor sitting forwards, with the knees more bent than our military men allow, while the Duke sat in the more (apparently) careless way—half lolling, half leaning back in his saddle, as he usually does when riding in the streets of London.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

GRINDSBROOK FONT, HIGH PEAK, DERBYSHIRE.

How many beautiful, grand, and romantic spots are there in England which are unknown and unvisited. It seems as though the Rhine alone had charms for the English traveller: it smacks of "foreign travel," and, perhaps, that is the reason why the voyage is so often taken, on the same principle that Sheridan's son wished to go down a coal pit, in order that he might say he had been down one. If the picturesque and grand were the only objects in view, Great Britain could furnish them in abundance; but the English tourist trusts too much to his guide-book, and fancies, when he has seen all it details, he has seen all that is other specimens of the same kind, but not so perfect as the one represented in the sketch.

The view from the precipice on which the font stands, is one of gloomy grandeur. Nothing meets the eye but the savage ravine, with here and there a stunted shrub clinging in the crevices of the rocks, and a rugged distance formed of black masses of peat and heather interspersed by naked wild-looking rocks. Near here is the track pointed out which the Highland drovers, "hating tolls and taxes," used to follow in the olden time. Tradition says they formerly drove their cattle over what are called "the tops" all the way from Scotland without paying a single toll. Steam has produced a change of scene even here. The drover no longer rolls himself in his plaid under a sheltering rock waiting for the dawn of day, but snugly ensconces himself in his berth in the steam-packet, with the perfect knowledge that his charge will not stray.

The torrent represented in the engraving dashes along for a mile-and-a-half, and forms a junction with the river Noe, in Edale, a tributary to the Derwent, after flowing through Dovedale, and gladdening the heart of many a fly-fisher.

The tourist in the High Peak will find a visit to Grindsbrook font well worthy of his labour, and will not fail in crossing the beautiful valley of Edale to be charmed by its picturesque character.

GRINDSBROOK FONT, DERBYSHIRE.

worth seeing. These books are frequently scanty in information, and the lack cannot generally be supplied by the inhabitants themselves, who, accustomed to the scenes by which they are surrounded from their infancy, perceive nothing remarkable in many objects which would interest a traveller, and would gladly barter them all for the sight of a London pantomime. The best plan for a tourist to adopt is to gain all the information he can, but, not depending entirely on it, explore for himself.

Grindsbrook Font, represented in the above sketch, is about four miles from Castleton. It takes its name from the little village of Grindsbrook, in Edale; a picturesque valley, about two miles from Castleton, passing through the gap in the mountain, called Man Tor, or the Shivering Mountain.

It is needless to say that the font is not used for ecclesiastical purposes; but it has its use. It has a bowl sufficiently capacious to mix punch in; and here, on the commencing day for moor-game shooting, the sportsmen assemble, and say many good things, and drink much good liquor.

The remarkable figure of this stone bears a strong resemblance to the Cromlechs, so celebrated in different parts of the country; near it are

THE MUSIC ROOM, BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

During the sojourn of the Court in the metropolis, this elegant apartment is frequently in requisition. It adjoins the State Dining-room, on the south side of the Palace, and is built to accommodate about two hundred persons, for whom, on full occasions, pew-like forms, of elegant brass manufacture, neatly backed, and seated with velvet cushions, are provided, and arranged, according to circumstances, in parallel rows, on three sides of the room, from three to five or more deep. Her Majesty and Prince Albert usually occupy the east side of the room, in which position a costly sofa is placed to receive them. The orchestra is a raised gallery on the south end of the room; its proportions are small, and not well adapted to the purpose. On grand occasions additional bands are placed in adjoining rooms, and the doors of communication thrown open. The effect produced by these concealed performers is frequently very striking. The domestic, or rather we should say, perhaps, the hospitable arrangements of the room make it altogether the most comfortable music-chamber in London.

THE MUSIC ROOM BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

SPLENDID ENGRAVING
FOR THE SUBSCRIBERS
TO THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

COMPANION PRINT TO THE COLOSSEUM VIEW OF "LONDON IN 1842."

The Proprietors of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS have great pleasure in announcing the forward preparation of a most Superb Engraving, as a companion to their celebrated large Print, entitled "London in 1842."

In selecting this engraving, they are convinced that the subject chosen, from its paramount interest and attraction, will meet with universal approbation. It will represent a Magnificent

PANORAMA
OF
THE RIVER THAMES,

bowing at one view "the Royal toward Thame," its "Forests of Masts," its crowded Docks and Port; its Fleet of Steamers; its

NOBLE BRIDGES, UNEQUALLED IN THE WORLD;

busy Wharfs and Quays; and the various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate banks, including

GREENWICH, AND ITS SUPERB PALACE-HOSPITAL;

and exhibiting the winding of the "Silver Thames" through the mighty mass of buildings that form the metropolis of Commercial World.

Showing as distinctly as in a Map, yet with beautifully picturesque effect, the several

STREETS OF THE METROPOLIS;

with the many hundred Churches, Palaces, Columns, and Arches; Government Offices, and Public Institutions; Club Houses, Noble Mansions, and Palatial Squares, embellished Street Architecture, Terraces, and Villas; Theatres; Railways; Parks and Public Walks; Factories and Warehouses; and, in short, a perfect Picture of the Vast Extent, Architectural Character, and Most Recent Improvements, of the BANKS OF THIS NOBLE RIVER.

To be Engraved in the

FIRST STYLE OF THE ART,

From a most Elaborate Drawing made expressly for the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS;

And which has occupied the Artists for several months, so that the strictest reliance may be placed on its accuracy.

The entire length of the PRINT will be

UPWARDS OF EIGHT FEET!

but it is impossible to enumerate one-tenth of the objects.

The interest of the subject cannot be surpassed, and the highest talent is employed in its execution

☞ Further announcements of this Magnificent Print will be duly given.

198, STRAND, April 13, 1844.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK

SUNDAY, 16.—Second Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 17.—St. Alban.
TUESDAY, 18.—Battle of Waterloo, 1815.
WEDNESDAY, 19.—William IV. died, 1837.
THURSDAY, 20.—Accession of Queen Victoria.
FRIDAY, 21.—Longest Day.
SATURDAY, 22.—Machiavelli died, 1527.

RISE WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending June 22.

Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
2 52	3 3	3 28	3 43	4 9	4 18	4 35	4 54	5 14	5 34	5 56	6 18

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Regular Reader," Workington, should write to any publisher of scientific works.

"A Constant Reader," Wexford, inquires why a luminous appearance should have presented itself during the entire time of the eclipse of the moon on 8th Feb. the 31st ult., although it was considered a total eclipse?

"G. J. S." Great Yarmouth, may address at our Office, 198, Strand.

"B. Z. B.!"—Certainly.

"A Subscriber from the Commencement."—We do not decide questions of gambling.

"A Constant Reader."—The Royal Agricultural Society's meeting will be held at Southampton, in the second week of July.

"W."—The Chess Problems have been omitted for want of room, but will be resumed. "The Chess Player's Chronicle" is published monthly, by Hastings, of Carey-street.

"Omega." The subject is noticed in the present number.

"A Reader," Dublin, is thanked for the sketch.

"T. D."—See future announcements.

"S. H." Langham-place.—We do not undertake to notice third editions of works.

"T. P." should apply personally to the overseer.

"M. R. F."—We shall not lose sight of the important subject.

"F. P.," Liverpool, should consult "Prichard's History of Man."

"J. L." So soon!

The engravings in our journal are on wood.

"A Subscriber," Carmarthen. We have not room.

"F.," Chewick.—See our present number.

"P. U. S. P." Guernsey.—We have referred our correspondent's letter to our Musical Reader, who, on a reconsideration of the matter, sets no ground to alter his opinion. Mr. P.'s accentuation of the line in question is a 3-4 trochaic tetrameter in the middle of a 6-8 measure.

"Alpha." Wakefield.—The portrait has been engraved, and shall appear as soon as possible.

"Z. C." Dublin.—Not at present.

"M. J. L.," Liverpool, should apply to an army agent.

"An Ardent Admirer."—We have not room at present.

"Brutus" should address a letter to the actuary of a reversionary interest society.

"T. R.," Runcorn;" "L. P.," Devonport. Under consideration.

"A Bath Corn dealer."—We cannot assist ourselves of our correspondent's suggestion.

"Grist" Very ingenious; but we have not room.

"C. B. H." Worcester-place.—October, 1839.

"H. H. H.," Plymouth.—We do not print our engravings apart from our Journal.

"Panens," Southampton.—At cricket, after a player has been caught out, the ball is not in play.

"Homo" We have not room.

"A Subscriber,"—The "Head and Heart" sketch will not suit our columns.

"J. J. F. At cricket, if either the striker's foot or his bat be within the crease, he is not out.

"Augur," Stratford.—The Chess Problems will be resumed anon.—The price of the Course for Volumes is 4s. 6d. One announcement will be given of the publication of the large print. Rembrandt was born in 1606, on the banks of the Rhine, near Leyden.

"An Admiring Subscriber."—A portrait of Madame Thillon appeared in our No. 107.

"The Rev. A. B."—A sketch, with brief description, will be acceptable. We have not room for the following:—Red Halls, by J. S. B.; Lines, by M. Ritn; Lines on the Anniversary, 5c.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1844.

THE Emperor of Russia has left us as rapidly, and at as short a notice, as he arrived among us; it seems his ambition to "come like a shadow, so depart." It is the same with his movements in his own dominions. The governor of his most distant province can never be sure that his Imperial master is not on the threshold of his door, where he has the best possible reason for thinking him safe in the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg. It may be, also, that the Emperor felt indisposed to prolong his stay for more reasons than one. We may well suppose that absence from his realms, on the part of one who holds such an immense part of the Executive Government in his own hands, must be very inconvenient; in the next place, he probably received intelligence of the rather sudden illness of the Empress, which has overtaken her on her journey to Berlin; and, lastly, there was an awkwardness in his being in the metropolis at the moment that half the aristocracy and gentry of the land were literally dancing a protest against his conduct as a ruler and a man at the Polish Ball. Trifles often have great influence, and occurrences less important than a ball have frequently troubled the diplomacy of statesmen, and affected the movements of kings. It is the principle on which a thing is done that is all in all; and the quadrilles and waltzes at Willis's Rooms were so many condemnations of the ruthless rule of the Czar—so many expressions of sympathy with the Poles. The refusal of the Lady Patronesses to put off the fête was spirited and dignified. It said, we will not relax in our efforts to relieve the distress of these unfortunate men, merely for the reason that the cause of their misfortunes is among us. And it is probable that the Emperor did not think he could afford to lose an independence; for, as a tribute to that, or from some compunctions visitings of conscience, he offered to give five hundred pounds towards the fund which it is the object of these ladies by all honourable means to increase. His offer was refused, and his gold was declined; more noble and more commendable was this second step than the first; viewing him as the source and cause of all these miseries and disasters to a gallant people, they refused to recognise his presence or receive his gift, rightly deeming that what the Poles require of the Emperor is not charity but justice,—not alms, but humanity. To crush a nation, to destroy a language, to root out religions, to shoot and flog and exile and incarcerate—to do all in fact that the most unlimited power can enable the worst of wills to effect, are not such trifles that they can be smoothed over by a paltry alms to the few who survive from among the victims.

But this is not the only instance of what is called the liberality of the Czar. He has distributed money, jewels, and snuff-boxes on every side, with profusion. Her Majesty's household have been amply complimented. The Ascot Race Fund is the larger for the Emperor's visit; the Society for the relief of Foreigners in Distress have experienced his bounty. The poor of St. George's parish, Westminster, have a gratuity, and the German Hospital and the household of the Russian Embassy have not been forgotten. He has also sent £500 to the monument preparing to the Duke of Wellington, and the same sum towards the completion of the Nelson pillar in Trafalgar-square. Now to both these gifts, but to the last especially, we have some objection. Trophies to British valour ought to be erected by British generosity. The donation towards the Nelson pillar was, it seems, made in consequence of the Emperor observing the unfinished state of the works, and being told as a reason, or rather excuse, that the funds were inadequate to the completion—that, in fact, the committee were in the position of the man who begins to build the tower without having counted the cost thereof. The Emperor on hearing this, flings his dole to the poor-stressed nation, as if saying, what you cannot finish at your own expence, complete at mine! Now it is discreditable to the English people in the first place that they should permit the undertaking to stop short in its progress for so shabby a reason. In the second it is still more discreditable to the Government, the people having done so much, not to step in and—at all events—furnish something proportionate. The generation that saw the triumphs of Nelson have well nigh passed away, and it may be said too, that the feelings of the present day are not so strongly with war and the great in war as of old. But the name of the hero is part of our history, and the Government might at least help to do it honour; at all events, we ought not to allow ourselves to be placed in the position of recipients of alms. The Government is supine—as it is in all matters that do not fill the exchequer—and the people are indifferent; but neither are so poor as to be compelled to take the gift—given with such an air of condescending pity.

THE Ministry has found itself in the unusual position of the defeated party in the House of Lords this week. The Church has been too strong for the Government, and though the Archbishop of Canterbury came to the rescue of the Duke of Wellington, they were both outvoted. It seems that a bill was passed some time ago providing for uniting, at a future time, the sees of St. Asaph and Bangor; the two bishoprics are to be made into one; thus the Government insist on, and this the Church, or at least a great portion of the Church, put forward as the champion of the integrity of the sees, and introduced a bill for repealing so much of the act that (prospectively) unites them. The Duke of Wellington moved that the noble earl's bill be read a second time that day six months, and, strange to say, the great duke was defeated, the majority against the Ministry being twelve. Whether it will make the house reverse its decision, as Sir R. Peel did with the Commons on the Factory Bill, remains to be seen. It certainly places the Ministry in rather an awkward position.

The great parliamentary topic of the week has been the Irish Church, a perpetual grievance which produces an annual motion and debate. On this occasion it has lasted two nights, and concluded by a majority of 95 refusing a committee of inquiry. The arguments on both sides have been rather repetitions of old matter than the production of new. The question is a peculiarly thorny one; there is danger in touching it, and there is equal danger in leaving it alone. The property of the Church has a kind of noli me tangere character about it which wards off legislation; but the spectacle the Church in that country exhibits is, at the same time, calculated to excite great discontent. Its bishops and archbishops are paid about three times the amount of what is considered sufficient for the same dignitaries in England. They receive more than any Lord Chancellor, any judge, or any chief officer of the State. While, on the other hand, the people are not only poor, but are the members of a church totally opposed to their faith. But, although the Church will be maintained, it must not be too secure. The majority of 95 is something, but there are passages of Sir R. Peel's speech that indicate impending changes. The following, we think, is pretty significant:—

> At the same time I admit that every reform compatible with the maintenance of the Church ought to be introduced. I admit that the pluralities which now exist, ought, if possible, to be abolished, and that where there are two rectories with such non residence ought to be put an end to. I am therefore unwilling to enter into the committee, not because I am of opinion that in its present state the Irish Church is perfect—not because I am opposed to the reform of the state of abatement—not because I am opposed to a greater equalisation of the revenues not because I am opposed to the increase of the emoluments of the working clergy—I do not mistake me, not on that account do I refuse to enter into the committee; but, seeing that this is not a question of revenue—seeing that an alteration of the amount of the revenue by a reduction of £50,000 or £100,000 from the revenues of the Church will not give the slightest satisfaction,—thinking it infinitely safer to stand on compact—to stand on the pledge that was given by Parliament —unless the overwhelming necessity of public policy compels me to change that opinion (loud cheers from the Opposition)—not being now convinced that there is that overwhelming necessity (cheers from both sides of the house)—believing that the Church is more secure, opposed as it is by a formidable brotherly, in consequence of retaining the present amount of property—thinking it desirable to have an Establishment,—thinking that a Protestant Establishment is entitled to the preference, believing it to be for the interest of religion that that establishment should be maintained—although I may be willing to improve in detail its constitution, yet, after the avowal of his opinions by the hon. gentleman opposite (Sir. Ward), knowing that he contemplates the total subversion of the Church, I will not consent to cause those expectations, upon which I should raise if I acceded to his proposal for going into committee."* (Loud cheers.)

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

The Queen and Prince Albert, the Emperor of Russia, and King of Saxony, went on Saturday evening to her Majesty's Theatre, to honour the performance of the Italian Opera with their presence

On Sunday her Majesty attended divine service in the Chapel Royal, Buckingham Palace. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of London.

MONDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert walked during the morning in the royal gardens of Buckingham Palace. His Royal Highness Prince Albert afterwards went to the Society of Arts, in the Adelphi, for the distribution of prizes. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice were taken their accustomed daily airings in the royal gardens. The royal dinner-party at Buckingham Palace included his Excellency Baron de Gerasdorff, the Duchess of Buccleuch, the Earl Delawarr, the Earl of Jersey, the Earl of Morton, and Lord Charles Wellesley. Shortly before half-past eight o'clock the illustrious party left the Palace in six of the royal carriages, for the Hanover-square Rooms, to honour the performance of the Philharmonic Concert with their presence. Her Majesty and Prince Albert, his Majesty the King of Saxony, and the Duchess of Buccleuch occupied one of the carriages.

TUESDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert took their usual early walk in the royal gardens of Buckingham Palace. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Mr. George Edward Anson, Lord George Lennox, and Major-General Sir Edward Bowater, went afterwards to lay the foundation stone of the new Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, in the Fulham-road. The royal dinner-party at Buckingham Palace included His Excellency Baron de Gerasdorff and the Duchess of Buccleuch.

WEDNESDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert walked in the royal gardens of Buckingham Palace. His Royal Highness afterwards rode out on horseback, attended by Major-General Sir Edward Bowater. The royal family were taken their accustomed airings in the royal gardens. Intelligence has been promulgated that the accouchement of her Majesty will take place at Windsor Castle. Preparations at the royal residence will be immediately commenced in anticipation of that interesting event, which is expected to occur early in the ensuing year. The Court will probably arrive at Windsor the first week in July. There is a rumour that their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal will visit the Isle of Wight (the Princess Alice remaining at the Castle) during the temporary seclusion of our beloved Sovereign; if so, their Royal Highnesses will reside at Osborne House, and the Dowager Lady Lyttelton will be in attendance. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent is expected to proceed to Frogmore House, from the Continent, on the 1st of July, by which time the extensive alterations in that mansion are to be completed.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER. A letter from Cologne, of the 5th, says, that her Majesty arrived in that city and put up at the Hotel Royal, where apartments had been taken for her and her suite. Her Majesty was to proceed the following morning to Mayence, in the Victoria steamer, belonging to the Dusseldorf Steam Boat Company, which the Queen had caused to be engaged some days before, through the London Company.

A marriage is said to be on the tapis between a noble Viscount, sitting in the Lower House, and the fair daughter of a Marquis, who enjoys considerable influence in the Whig political circles.

A Cabinet Council was held on Tuesday afternoon at the Foreign-office. It was attended by Sir R. Peel, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Wharncliffe, the Duke of Buccleuch, Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Ripon, Sir J. Graham, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Earl of Haddington, Earl of Ripon, Mr. Gladstone, Sir E. Knatchbull, and Lord G. Somerset. The Council sat an hour and a half.

ARRIVAL OF LORD SEYMOUR AT ROTHESAY.—At two o'clock on Wednesday her Majesty's war-steamer the Sydenham, arrived at the Southampton pier, having on board Lord Stuart de Rothesay and suite, from St. Petersburg, and their carriages. His lordship, who looks far from well, upon his landing, proceeded to the Dolphin Hotel, and from thence to his seat near Christchurch, where Lady Canning had arrived on Tuesday, for the purpose of receiving her noble father.

MORTALITY IN HIGH LIFE.—Intelligence was received in town on Saturday of the death of Lady Campbell, wife of Sir Archibald Campbell, Bart. Her lady-ship died on Thursday last at Succoth, Dumbartonshire. She married to Sir Archibald Campbell in 1795, by whom her ladyship leaves a numerous family.

We have to announce the demise of Lady Catherine Browne, who expired on Friday evening, shortly after eight o'clock, to the infinite grief of her family. Her ladyship was second daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Sligo, and was born on the 2d of May, 1802. It is supposed that the death of her ladyship resulted from a cold terminating in inflammation.

Sir George Pigott, Bart., of Knapton, died at Paris, on the 28th ult., in his eightieth year. He was the eldest son of Major-General Thomas Pigott, by the daughter of W. Carden, Esq.; married 1794, daughter of the Right Hon. Thos. Kelly, formerly Judge of the Irish Court of Common Pleas, and is succeeded in his title and estates by his son, now Sir Thomas Pigott; married 1831, daughter of F. Brummel, Esq., of Wyvanhoe, Essex, formerly Captain in the Royal Horse Guards (Blue).

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.—The travelling carriages and suite of the new Governor-General of India, left town on Saturday morning for Dover. His Excellency left Whitehall Gardens at four o'clock, by the Dover railroad, for India. The right honourable baronet had a long interview in the morning with Sir R. Peel, and several of the Cabinet Ministers, at the Premier's residence in Whitehall Gardens.

THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.

On Sunday morning the Emperor of Russia attended divine service in the chapel in Welbeck-street. His Excellency Baron Brunnow and the noblemen and gentlemen of his suite were in waiting. In the afternoon his Imperial Majesty took his departure for the Continent.

When the Emperor took leave of her Majesty, at Buckingham Palace, the Queen, Prince Albert, the Princes of Wales, and the Royal Princesses were present in the Marble-hall. On the departure of the Emperor, he graciously saluted the Queen, and cordially shook hands with all the ladies and officers of the household. The Emperor left the munificent sum of 20,000 ducats to be distributed among the domestics. As a proof of the total disregard of the Emperor of Russia of the luxuries and splendour with which he was surrounded, we may state that the Emperor always slept on the ground, on a leather tick, stuffed with straw, as being more conducive to health. His Imperial Majesty adopted the same course on the occasion of his first visit to this country, in 1817

At five minutes before five o'clock the Emperor was handed into one of the Queen's carriages by the Earl of Jersey, Master of the Horse, his Royal Highness Prince Albert accompanying his Imperial Majesty.

His Excellency Baron Brunnow accompanied his Imperial Majesty on board the Black Eagle, on Sunday evening, down the river as far as Gravesend, at which place the Baron, after having finally taken leave of the Emperor, landed and returned to town.

During his Majesty's recent sojourn at Windsor, while walking in the quadrangle with Prince Albert, the Emperor went up to one of the sentinels on duty, and, after conversing with him familiarly for a few minutes, requested him to show him his kit. The poor fellow astonished, and perhaps a little nervous at this easy approximation of the Emperor, hesitated for a moment, but, encouraged by a smile from his Royal Highness Prince Albert, proceeded to lay the contents of his kit and knapsack before the royal pair. The Emperor minutely examined the same, and, after addressing a few words of encouragement to the soldier, inquired and made a note of his name, doubtless with a view of rendering the poor fellow a substantial token of his remembrance.

Among the noble officers attendant on the Court at Ascot, was Mr. Superintendent May, who is an old Waterloo medal. When the Emperor left the Royal Stand to examine the successful competitor for the Ascot Cup, Alice Hawthorn, the name that officer's duty to clear the crowd away for the passage of the illustrious party. On returning to the stand the Emperor observed the Waterloo medal suspended on Mr. May's breast, whereupon he immediately inquired what regiment he had belonged to—in what portion of the fight he had been engaged, and many other questions concerning the battle, upon which Mr May satisfied his Majesty, who appeared much interested in the information afforded him.

It is said that the presents distributed by the Emperor during his short stay in this country have been most numerous, and are of an enormous value. Every individual who has ministered in any way, however humble, to the service or comfort of the Emperor, has been rewarded according to his deserts. It is said that his Majesty has left a considerable sum to complete the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar-square.

THE KING OF SAXONY.

On Saturday last, at twelve o'clock, his Majesty the King of Saxony held a levee at Buckingham Palace for the reception of the diplomatic corps.

On Sunday his Majesty attended divine service in the Bavarian Chapel, in Warwick-street, attended by the gentlemen of his suite, and afterwards visited Sir Robert and Lady Peel, in Whitehall-gardens; and Lord and Lady Jersey, at their residence in Berkeley-square. His Majesty dined with their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge in the evening, at Cambridge House.

On Monday morning his Majesty left Buckingham Palace at half-past ten o'clock, attended as usual, for the purpose of visiting and inspecting a number of the institutions and public buildings of the metropolis. The King viewed the Tothill-field Prisons, the Penitentiary, the Thames Tunnel, and also went to Lambeth Palace, to pay a visit to the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Howley. Shortly after the arrival of his King at Lambeth Palace a déjeûné was served to his Majesty and suite. His Majesty also walked through the Surrey Zoological Gardens, and inspected the interior of the extensive brewery of Messrs. Barclay and Perkins. His Majesty, attended by his suite, returned to Buckingham Palace at half-past six o'clock in the evening.

On Tuesday his Majesty visited the Bazaar, in Portman-street; and afterwards went to the Zoological-gardens, in the Regent's-park. His Majesty walked through the gardens, and viewed the interesting collection of animals. The King honoured Mr. Hope with a visit at his residence in Duchess-street, and inspected the gallery, and afterwards returned to Buckingham Palace to lunch, at two o'clock. Captain Siborne had afterwards the honour of presenting to his Majesty a copy of his "History of the Waterloo Campaign," to which his Majesty is a subscriber. His Majesty (to whom Captain Siborne has the honour to be personally known) was highly pleased with the delineation of the work. In the afternoon the King, attended by the Earl of Morton, Lord C. Wellesley, Baron de Gerasdorff, and the gentlemen of his suite, visited the British Museum, the United Service Club, and the Royal Polytechnic Institution. Before returning to Buckingham Palace, his Majesty honoured the Earl and Countess Delawarr with a visit, at their residence in Upper Grosvenor-street, and also visited the Countess Amherst.

His Majesty the King of Saxony left Buckingham Palace, soon after ten o'clock on Wednesday, for the purpose of inspecting a number of the public buildings of the metropolis. His Majesty went to the Tower of London, and, after viewing the numerous articles of interest in that ancient edifice, went to St. Katharine's Docks, and from thence to the Mint. The King remained a considerable time inspecting the different processes of the coinage. The illustrious party visited the Bank of England, where they were received by the officers of the corporation, who conducted his Majesty through the bullion department and

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Price Fivepence, Stamped Edition Sixpence, is published in Weekly Numbers, and in Monthly Parts, and may be had of all Booksellers and Newsmen in Town and Country.

Subscribers can have their Copies regularly forwarded from the Office, 198, Strand, by Post, at the following rates:—

Stamped Weekly Number	6d.
Monthly Part	2s. 6d.
Quarterly Volume	7s. 6d.
Half-yearly Volume	15s.
Yearly Volume	30s.

Subscribers can have their Copies regularly forwarded from the Office, 198, Strand, by Post, at the following rates:—

Stamped Weekly Number	6d.
Monthly Part	2s. 6d.
Quarterly Volume	7s. 6d.
Half-yearly Volume	15s.
Yearly Volume	30s.

Subscribers can have their Copies regularly forwarded from the Office, 198, Strand, by Post, at the following rates:—

Stamped Weekly Number	6d.
Monthly Part	2s. 6d.
Quarterly Volume	7s. 6d.
Half-yearly Volume	15s.
Yearly Volume	30s.

other portions of the building. A déjeûné was afterwards served in the Bank to his Majesty and suite. In the afternoon the King went to Lodge's Garden, Hackney, and on his return drove to St. Paul's Cathedral, to inspect that sacred edifice. His Majesty also inspected Guildhall. At six o'clock the King attended by his suite, returned to Buckingham Palace. In the evening, his Majesty honoured the Earl and Countess of Wilton with his company at dinner, at their residence in Grosvenor-square.

In consequence of his Majesty having accepted an invitation to dine this day with Sir Robert and Lady Peel, we have reason to believe that the King will not leave for Scotland before Friday next. Sir Robert Peel, Baronet has a distinguished circle to meet his Majesty, and Lady Peel, it is said, will have an assembly expressly in honour of her august guest

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—The annual conversazione given by Mr. Walker, the president of this very useful and flourishing institution, took place on the evenings of Friday and Saturday last, when the attendance was even more numerous than usual. On the former evening about three hundred gentlemen were present, but on the latter there was a much more brilliant assemblage, comprising the most distinguished persons for rank in science or the fine arts, who, it was gratifying to perceive, all felt the hospitality of the worthy host, who, attended by Mr. Manby, the secretary of the institution, received the visitors on arriving, and directed their attention to the objects most worthy of notice. In the principal saloon we noticed some good busts by Mr. J. E. Jones, one of Major Blakeney, one of Mr. Cotton, the Governor of the Bank of England, one of Mr. Perrier of Dublin, another of Mr. Manby, the secretary, all of which were remarkable for their striking similitude to the originals. There were likewise other busts by the same talented and rising artist, in the different saloons. A very beautiful, and, at the same time, simple sketch, made at Strathfieldsaye, of his Grace the Duke of Wellington on horseback, by Mr. E. H. Bailey, was much admired. Some bronzes from the collections of F. Hodgson, Esq., M.P., Mr. Deville, and Mr. Grissell, were placed in various parts of the rooms, as also wood carvings from Rogers, Pratt, and Vincent. A very beautiful engraving of the Duke of Buccleuch's dog, by T. Landseer, from a recent picture by his brother, artist, E. Cust, J. Rennie, P. Laurie, W. Cay, M.P., C. Pine, R. Inglis, M.P., H. Fleetwood, M.P., W. White, J. Trollope, M.P., H. Ellis, G. Murray, H. Webb, H. Douglas, T. Goldsmid, J. Huddington, G. Clerk, M.P., W. Tite, M.P., H. Drummond, Esq., M.P.; Admiral Sir B. Martin; Major-Generals Monteith and Pasley; Colonels Mabersley, Sykes, Jackson, Herbert, and Sloane; Lieutenant-Colonels Scottiswoode, Sabine, Ackerson, and Wells; the Lord Mayor elect, Alderman Sir John Cowan, and Sheriff Wilde; Counts Gola, Lopez, and De Rosen; Messieurs Horace Vernet, Baugniet, Goderalhl, Siemens, Shakespeare, Bunderwald, Vanzeliers, Hebeler, and Mr. Baron De Gerlach and Lindau, &c., &c. It were injustice to forget to state that the scientific enjoyments of the evening, which embraced all the most recent inventions and improvements, were greatly enhanced by the generous hospitality and attention of Mr. Walker, who received the most zealous and efficient co-operation from Mr. Manby, the secretary

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—The fifty-seventh anniversary meeting of the members and friends of this society was held on Monday at the institution, in John-street, Adelphi, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, President, in the chair. His Royal Highness was received at the entrance to the institution by the Duke of Sutherland, Mr. Pusey, and Mr. Baron Rothschild, and conducted to the great room, which was filled by a numerous company. Among the visitors present was the Eastern Prince, Meer Jafur Aleekham Bahadoor, the Nawab of Surat, attended by two native officers, all three being attired in the most splendid eastern costume. The proceedings were then opened by Mr. Whishaw, the secretary, reading the report, which briefly traced the progress of the society during the last ninety years; after which that officer directed the attention of his Royal Highness to the various subjects which occupied the society at its weekly meetings, many of which were illustrated by drawings suspended round the walls of the apartment. The rewards adjudged by the society were then presented by his Royal Highness in person to those entitled to them. The whole of the prizes having been awarded, the Duke of Sutherland proposed the grateful thanks of the society to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, for the honour he had conferred upon the society that day, and for the zeal he had shewn by the kind satisfaction manifested at the successful efforts of those individuals whom the committee had thought proper to reward. The Marquis of Northampton seconded the vote of thanks; which having been carried unanimously, his Royal Highness said, it afforded him the greatest possible satisfaction to attend the meetings of the society, and witness the successful efforts of its numerous members. He hoped the institution would go on prospering and extending its usefulness through all classes of the community. The Prince subsequently visited the model-room, and having taken leave of the Duke of Sutherland and the other vice-presidents of the society, returned to Buckingham Palace about two o'clock.

THE UNITED LAW CLERKS' SOCIETY.—Upwards of three hundred gentlemen of the legal profession assembled on Tuesday evening at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, to celebrate the twelfth anniversary festival of the foundation of the United Law Clerks' Society. The chair was taken by the Hon. Sir Robert Monsey Rolfe, Baron of the Exchequer, who was supported by Mr. Serjeant Kelly, Messrs. Watson, Jarvis, Cockburn, Bodkin, Knight Bruce, Oliver, Anderdon. The amount collected after dinner was nearly £300, which, we are sorry to say, is less by about £50 than was collected on the same occasion last year. There were some excellent speeches from some of the learned gentlemen who were present, and everything went off to the satisfaction of the company present.

THE LATE WILL FORGERIES.—It is understood that Mr. Maw will forfeit, the Bank of England have adopted some new regulations with reference to the granting powers of attorney for the sale or transfer of stock. When an application is made for a power of attorney, a letter is immediately forwarded to the party or parties in whose name the stock stands (pre-paid) of which the following is a copy:—"Bank of England—Application has been made for a power of attorney to transfer the stock standing in your name; I request you will sign and return the letter attached to this, stating the amount or stock to be transferred, and the name of the party to be your attorney." On the off sheet is the following letter, on the outside of which a postage stamp is also affixed —"I wish to give a power of attorney for the transfer of £ ——— stock." The Bank will not in any instance grant a power of attorney until answers have been received from the parties to whom the letters have been forwarded.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—This exhibition re-opened on Monday with a collection of pictures by ancient and lately deceased artists. He was cried character may be imagined when it is mentioned that the excellent exhibition pantes by the Italian, Spanish, Flemish, Dutch, and French painters besides a well selected assortment of specimens by deceased British artists.

NEW FREE GRECIAN GALLERY.—A new gallery was opened on Monday at the Hall of Commerce, Threadneedle-street, for the purpose of adopting measures to establish a new infant orphan asylum, the benefits of which are to be extended to persons of all religious denominations.

COUNTRY NEWS.

DARLINGTON.—SUDDEN DEATH OF W. BACKHOUSE, ESQ.—Much excitement of a painful nature was occasioned in Darlington, on Sunday last, by the sudden death of Mr. W. Backhouse, the senior partner of the old and respectable banking establishment of Backhouse and Co., Darlington. Mr. Backhouse, being a member of the Society of Friends, attended the meeting held in the evening as usual. He arose to address the congregation, and whilst in the act of speaking, fell down, and immediately expired.

OXFORD EXTENSION OF THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—The directors, accompanied by a large party of their friends, went down to Oxford on Monday by a special train, to inspect the works, which they found in a very satisfactory state. After inspecting the station at Oxford, and the bridges at Nuneham and Appleford, they returned to Paddington by a special train. On Wednesday morning the line was opened for traffic, and was found in very good order. The Oxford Station is now completed, and from the convenient situation and easy access, it is to be hoped, will give general satisfaction, having surmounted all the obstacles that opposed its formation. There are several platforms for the arrival and departure of the trains. The scenery in Duke Alley on the new line, is of the most pleasing description, and a splendid view is obtained of the Archbishop of York's mansion at Nuneham, near which there is a station. The journey is performed something under two hours and a half.

SOUTHAMPTON.—At eleven o'clock on Wednesday an alarming fire broke out in the timber-yard of Messrs. Sharpe and Co., agents for a wood paving company, immediately opposite the station at Northam. It was raged with great fury for some time, from the want of water, and the delay before the arrival of any engines, and even then, the scanty supply of water rendered them almost useless. Fortunately there was but little wind, or the destruction would have must have been immense. One new-built house, backing on the timber-yard, in the occupation of Mr. Nicholls, caught fire, but fortunately, from its having no windows at the back, the house was saved from destruction, but the furniture sustained great damage by being thrown into the street. Two cottages in the rear of the yard are nearly destroyed. Had this fire broken out in the night, the whole of Orchard-lane and place must have been totally destroyed from the very inefficient supply and almost total want of water. Messrs. Sharpe and Co. are insured, as is also Mr. Nicholls, but not so with the two cottages. The fire is supposed to have occurred by the overboiling of an iron vessel of pitch and tar.

STATE OF THE CROPS.—The extraordinary continuance of dry weather, added to the cold north-easterly winds which prevailed during nearly the whole of May has had a great effect in checking vegetation in those counties which lie nearest the metropolis.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

The eighth session of the present mayoralty commenced on Monday morning before the usual civic functionaries. The Recorder, in his charge to the grand jury, told them that the calendar contained the names of nearly 300 prisoners, which number would be increased before their labours had terminated. Many of the cases were of a most serious character; there were six charges of cutting and wounding, two of manslaughter, and no less than five of wilful murder—namely, four concerned in one offence, and one (that of Augustus Dalmas) standing singly. The case in which four persons stand charged is the Ratcliff-highway murder. A few petty larceny cases were tried during the day, but they were altogether uninteresting.

TUESDAY.

The Recorder sat the whole of the day, and disposed of a great many cases, felony, but there were none deserving publicity.

WEDNESDAY.

George Reginald Whitaker, a respectable-looking young man, surrendered to take his trial, on an indictment charging him with feloniously forging and uttering a forged cheque for £170, with intent to defraud Sir W. Call, Martin and Co., bankers. Mr. Doane conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Carkson the defence. The particulars of this case have appeared so frequently in the police reports, that it will be unnecessary to detail them again at any great length. It will be recollected that a young man named Thomas Brightman presented a forged check for £170 at the bank of Sir W. Call and Co., some time since. He was stopped and given into custody, and the explanation he gave was, that being out of employment he had advertised for a situation as light porter, and was answered by a person who appointed a meeting at the Peacock, Islington, and signed the name of Mr. Whitaker. Brightman accordingly went to the place, and saw a man who wore a large blue cloak, and blue spectacles with side shades. This Mr. Clarke, after some inquiry, engaged the young man and sent him on various errands, but merely appointed meetings at different places, without giving him any place of residence. On the 1st May he desired the prisoner to get the check changed, and to meet him at the King's Arms, opposite the East India-house. Unfortunately the young person had taken to Scotland with him a young Scotchman, named Mabeley, who had been employed by Mr. Clarke, and was at one time a young man of the highest respectability. He had been several years in the service of the East India Company, and returned in 1841 in the capacity of second officer of a ship. He was taken to Scotland with a view to his benefit, as either a cloak or spectacles, and the witnesses for the prosecution had proved that he had given his correct name and address at once upon being taken into custody. But it so happened that he was in a position to prove in the most satisfactory manner how this gentleman was occupied during the entire of the 1st of May; and he would conclude by proving from numerous witnesses that his character was most unexceptionable. He would state that Brightman was looking at a young Scotchman, who certainly did not appear a very sharp sort of person, was totally mistaken as to the identity of the prisoner.—Mr. Power, a law student, son of the late emeritus professor, deposed that he had known the prisoner from his childhood. He left school to enter the East India Company's service, and always bore the highest possible character. The landlady of the house No. 9, Quicksett-row, Scotland, where Mr. Whitaker lived, deposed that he did not leave the house on the 1st of May until after twelve o'clock (after the hour at which Brightman had received his instructions from his employer), and he had never had either a cloak or spectacles.—Other servants gave the same effect, and, as she saw the most satisfactory reasons for knowing the day to have been the 1st of May, Mr. Baron Gurney stopped the case, and said it was plain the witness for Brightman was mistaken. He was a rather dull young man—the very sort of instrument that was fitted for the purposes of the person who had employed him.

—The jury immediately acquitted the prisoner.—Mr. Baron Gurney said he had thought it necessary to allow the case to go the length it did in order that the prisoner's character might be completely cleared. He now wished it to be distinctly understood that the prisoner left the bar without the slightest stain or imputation upon him.—Mr. Whitaker was then discharged

POLICE.

BOW-STREET.—THREATENING SIR R. PEEL.—Oliver Walsh, a carpenter, was charged by Mr. Jardine, at the request of Sir R. Peel.—Mr. Jardine by the officers of the house of Mrs. Peel, charged with writing a letter of the most threatening character to Sir R. Peel. A warrant was applied for by Mr. Jardine, and being placed in the hands of Thornton and Kendall, they succeeded in apprehending the prisoner at an early hour on Tuesday morning, in his lodgings, No. 7, Upper Marsh, Lambeth. The prisoner being called on for his defence, admitted having written the letter when labouring under great excitement, in consequence of being denied justice. He had been ruined in Ireland where his property was seized, and destroyed, and although he had compared where his property was seized, and destroyed, and although he had compared to prove such facts before Mr. Callaghan and Mr. Tindall, magistrates of Dublin, they refused to examine any witness on his behalf, on the ground that he was out of his mind. Finding he could obtain no redress, he wrote to Sir R. Peel as a Englishman, but he got no redress. He had witnesses to prove how he had been robbed, but he might as well be without laws, or else live under the bush laws, as under the laws of New South Wales. He had his way in the world, for any justice that he could receive. He then came to London, and having written to Sir Robert Peel respecting his grievances, the answer he received was, that as the Lord-Lieutenant declined to interfere in the case, it could not be expected he would interfere. He then, in a moment of desperation, wrote the letter brought forward by the officer. The prisoner was held to bail, and the requisite security not being forthcoming he was removed to Tothill Fields Prison.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

CHARGE OF WILFUL MURDER AGAINST A MASTER OF A VESSEL.—On the arrival of the brig Chieftain, from Spalatro, with a cargo of boxes, at Southampton, on Tuesday last, the master, Captain Reay, was charged with the wilful murder of one of the crew, named George Harrison, on the 2nd of December last, near Spalatro. He was forthwith conveyed before the magistrates, and underwent a lengthened examination, in the course of which it appeared by evidence, that on the day named the ship's company returned from shore "rather fresh," when a quarrel took place between them, and the carpenter declared that he saw the master, without the slightest provocation whatever, place a pistol to deceased's eye and deliberately shoot him. The deceased fell, and survived twelve hours, when he died. On the part of the prisoner the prisoner handed into Court a certificate, bearing the signature of Charles Thomas Hall, British Vice-Consul at Fiume, officially acting at Spalatro, the purport of which was as follows: That he (Hill) had been officially instructed by Mr. Thomas G. Sorrell, R.N., her Britannic Majesty's Consul at Trieste, to investigate the circumstances connected with the death of the deceased, and, after careful inquiry, he had come to the opinion that it had resulted entirely from accident, and not wilfully, as was at first represented. He found the crew in a mutinous state, and greatly prejudiced against the captain. The magistrates consulted together for some time, and, on their return to the court, committed the prisoner for trial, which he took very coolly.

FIRE AT NOTTINGHAM, BAYWATER.—On Thursday morning, shortly after eight o'clock, the usually quiet neighbourhood of Notting-dale, Bayswater, was thrown into a state of the utmost consternation, in consequence of the outbreak of a fire, which was ascertained in the destruction of eight dwelling-houses and two carpenters' workshops, with their contents, including the working tools of from forty to fifty journeymen. The fire commenced in the small centre house of a newly-erected row of buildings, situate immediately behind the Norland-crescent, Notting-dale, Bayswater. With all speed three engines of the 6 section of the Fire Brigade, headed by Mr. Braidwood, and large bodies of firemen, were at the scene, as well as Mr. Connorton, with the West of England firemen and engine. The powerful engine of the County-office was also at the spot remarkably quick. The engines were from the first placed in good positions, and by dint of great exertion on the part of the firemen, they succeeded in staying the further progress of the fire, but not before eight of the houses, together with the valuable piles of timber and the two carpenters' workshops were entirely consumed.

ALLEGED MURDER.—Mr. James Conkburn Belaney, a surgeon, was charged before Mr. Broderip on Wednesday, at the Thames-office, with a charge of wilful murder of his wife, Rachael Belaney, by administering to her a quantity of prussic acid. It appeared from the evidence that on Saturday last the deceased was taken suddenly ill, when the prisoner called up the landlady of the house in which he lodged. The landlady requested that a doctor should be sent for, but before he arrived she deceased had expired. There were two tumblers on the table, in one of which was a liquid, but it was emptied down the sink. There were also some prussic acid in a paper on the table. The female servant deposed to the prisoner having sent her for a black draught for her mistress on Wednesday, she being indisposed. Upon a post-mortem examination of the body, a small quantity of prussic acid was discovered, but quite sufficient to cause death. After the decease of Mrs. B., the prisoner called upon Mr. Garrett, the surgeon, and accounted for her death by saying that he was in the habit of taking three drops of prussic acid, but having broken the bottle, by accident, which contained it, he gathered up what was spilled and put it into a tumbler, and placed it on the drawer, while he went to write a letter in an adjoining room, during which time his wife snatched up the tumbler, and said, "Oh, dear me! I have taken some of the strong drink out of the tumbler; give me cold water."—The prisoner was remanded.

FIRING OF HAMPSTEAD HEATH.—Between seven and eight o'clock on Sunday evening, the inhabitants of Hampstead were much alarmed in consequence of a report that Hampstead Heath had been set on fire. This statement proved too true, and on a body of the S division of police, and other persons, arriving on the heath, they discovered the furze, in that part at the rear of the Spaniards Tavern, and facing the Earl of Mansfield's, in flames, to the extent of between thirty and forty yards, and it was with considerable difficulty it was extinguished. Shortly before the fire broke out, a gang of young fellows were seen near the spot, and it is supposed that they wantonly set fire to the heath, but notwithstanding the exertions of the police they have been unable to trace out the parties

SUICIDE.—On Sunday morning, about half-past ten, a woman, having the appearance of a respectable mechanic's wife, threw herself off Westminster-bridge, near the fourth arch, and perished, attempts having been in vain made to save her by a policeman. She did not rise to the surface of the water.

DETERMINED SUICIDE OF ONE OF THE TREASURY CLERKS.—Mr. Higgs on Monday held an inquest in the drawing-room of Christopher Dermott, Esq., No 29, Shaftesbury-crescent, Pimlico, on the body of Henry Liddell Davies, Esq., aged 31, one of the clerks in the Treasury, who destroyed himself on Saturday in a most extraordinary and unexpected manner. Upon the jury viewing the body of the deceased, which was in one of the bedrooms of the house, and two witnessed a frightful spectacle. The deceased was lying on a bed, and two more were on a chair beside him. The wound he had inflicted in the throat was frightful to look at, for it had severed the windpipe, and the incision reached to the bone. Mr. Dermott stated that on Saturday morning, about half-past seven o'clock, he was called by the mother of the deceased, who had been both staying at his house, to see him, when he found him lying on the floor, quite dead. There was a wound in his throat six inches long, and about two inches deep. He must have been dead some hours. Of late he had been very desponding in his manner; but on the previous evening he had shaken hands with him, when he appeared collected, but there was a peculiar expression about his eyes. From other evidence adduced it appeared that the deceased had been in Dr. Sutherland's asylum, at Chelsea. The jury returned a verdict of "Temporary Insanity."

DESTRUCTION BY FIRE OF FIVE HUNDRED QUAILS.—On Sunday night, about eleven o'clock, a fire, attended with the loss of about five hundred quails, broke out in the cellar of the house, No. 29, Turnmill-street, Clerkenwell, in the occupation of Mr. Davenham, an extensive dealer in pigeons, quails, &c., who, a few months ago, by a similar calamity, lost above one thousand pigeons. The discovery was made by policeman Ware, G 49, who saw a body of smoke issuing from the cellar, upon which he gave an immediate alarm. At that time the inmates were in bed, when the whole succeeded in making their escape by jumping out of window, being assisted by the neighbours, with the exception of Mr. J. Pontem, brother-in-law of Mr. Davenham. He was in a room in the second floor, where he was discovered asleep by a man in charge of the Hatton-garden fire-escape ladder, and was let down by that means, amidst the cheers of the spectators, the flames then rapidly ascending the staircase. The Farringdon-street engine, followed by those from Whitecross-street and Watling-street, with Mr. Braidwood, quickly arrived, and were at once in play, have being an abundant supply of water. In a very short time the fire was overcome, the lower part of the house alone being damaged. There were in the cellar about five hundred quails, in cages, all of which were destroyed. Mrs. Davenham is insured on the stock-in-trade. A man nearly lost his life, while the fire was raging, by falling into the cellar, but was fortunately rescued by the firemen. He, however, was much hurt, and was obliged to have surgical assistance.

POSTSCRIPT.

DEPARTURE OF THE COURT FOR CLAREMONT.—Her Majesty, Prince Albert, the King of Saxony and suite, left Buckingham Palace in six carriages and four on Friday morning, at ten minutes past ten o'clock. The Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Buccleuch occupied one carriage, Prince Albert and the King of Saxony another; the remaining four contained the suite. A detachment of the 17th Lancers formed the escort. The visit to Claremont will be short, as her Majesty is expected to return to Buckingham Palace this day.

The hearing of the appeal in the case of the Queen v. O'Connell and others, in the House of Lords, is fixed for Monday, the 24th of July.

The Emperor of Russia left the Hague on Tuesday, at two o'clock, to return to his dominions ANNIVERSARY MEETING OF RAGGED SCHOOLS.—On Friday evening an examination of the children educated in these schools was held in the boys' school-room, Mount Pleasant, John Tutton, Esq., in the chair. Henry Altas, Esq., of the Foreign and British School Society, conducted the examination. The answering of the children in every department of useful and general knowledge elicited the unqualified approbation of the subscribers and friends of the institution, who attended in great numbers.

FEMALE PENITENTIARY.—Yesterday the annual meeting of this philanthropic institution, was held in the large room of the building situate at Pentonville. The meeting was most numerous and exceedingly interesting, principally ladies. The Earl of Chichester in the chair. Mr. Apsley Pellatt, honorary secretary, then read the report, which consisted of twenty-eight closely printed pages. It stated, that from April 1st, 1843, to March 26th, 1844, the applicants for admission were 154, many of whom were unsuitable to the institution, and were therefore declined. To eighty-nine the privilege of admission had been conceded. In the same period, eighty-four women left the institution, to fill respectable offices in society, as follows:—To go to service, 12; to their relatives or friends, 23; failure of health, 6; bad behaviour, which rendered removal necessary, 18; die, 1. The expenditure of the institution to March 26, 1844, was £1050 0s. 5d. had been received for work from the inmates. From the commencement of the charity to the last annual meeting, 675 females had applied for admission, of 396 of these the friends received 507 letters. Of 279 sent to service, 237 had been reconciled to their friends, 46 had married, 47 had emigrated, and 28 had died. Mr. Leach read the finance account, which stated that the receipts had been £2,200 2s. 3d., the expenditure £2,200 2s. 3d., leaving a balance of £.16. 3s. 3d. The company having inspected the house, and agreed to the report, separated

THE CHANCERY CRIMINAL COURT, FRIDAY.—(Before Mr. Baron Gurney and Mr. Justice Williams.)—At the sitting of the court this morning, Elizabeth Lundsay, Ellen Lundsay, and James Lundsay (their brother), who were tried and acquitted yesterday, for the robbery in the Queen's Palace, were put to the bar, there being other indictments against them.—The Solicitor-General said, after the patient attention the jury had given to the charge against the prisoners yesterday, he considered the ends of justice would be answered, and therefore should not offer any evidence on the other indictments.—Mr. Baron Gurney directed the prisoners (who appeared dreadfully agitated) to be discharged. They were then removed from the dock. The court rose at a quarter past one.

THE BATTERSEA MURDER.

Augustus Dalmas, aged 50, was placed at the bar, charged with the wilful murder of Sarah Eleanor M'Farlane, on the 29th of April last. The prisoner is known to have an accustomed firmness, but it was evident that he was of a feeble mental agony. The Solicitor-General, with whom are Mr. Bodkin and Mr. Chambers, stated the case for the prosecution: it was one of vast importance, as it involved the life of the prisoner at the bar. No doubt, from the sources of public information, the jury were in possession of most of the facts that would be laid before them this day, but he was sure they would not be influenced by anything they had previously heard or read. The charge against the unhappy man at the bar must be decided on circumstantial evidence; all the facts connected with the case would be laid before them, and he trusted the evidence they would discharge their solemn and awful duty in a manner which would be satisfactory. If they thought the accused was innocent of the charge against him, by their verdict they would say so; but if they were of opinion that the evidence proved his guilt, in the discharge of the duty they owed to their country they would say so. The public safety required that crimes of such magnitude as that charged against the prisoner should be punished with the utmost rigour of the law. The learned counsel then entered into a statement of all the circumstances he intended to prove by a number of witnesses. It was very similar to the facts lately detailed in our police reports. Mr. Wilkins then addressed the jury in a most effective speech, and concluded a powerful address, by imploring the jurymen to lean towards the side of mercy—to remember that though their erring judgments might fail, yet an all-seeing eye would, if the prisoner were guilty, pursue him, and avenge the innocent and an all-powerful and unerring arm would punish his secret crime; but that if they had reason afterwards to repent of a too severe verdict, it would be when repentance would be too late.—The Solicitor-General waived his right of reply.—Mr. Baron Gurney summed up. In this, as in very many other cases, they had only circumstantial evidence before them, on which to found their judgments. It appeared that the deceased had been for many years on terms of the utmost friendship with the prisoner. The last act of her life was the going with the youngest daughter of the prisoner to her mistress's house, and the first evidence they had was that of the prisoner's daughter, who observed her return home, and after the wound was inflicted. The learned Judge then read over and commented upon the evidence. They must consider that the account given by the prisoner of himself was that of a man who had been (for several days had elapsed) to prepare a story. It was for them, however, to weigh all the circumstances; and he could only say, that if they had a fair and reasonable doubt that the prisoner had committed the offence with which he was charged, then it was their bounden duty to return a verdict of acquittal.

The jury requested leave to retire, and they also begged that the prisoner might be seated on the bench, the jury reserved to their seats. The jury then retired, and at twenty three minutes to eight o'clock the jury returned into court, when the most death-like silence prevailed. Mr. Justice Williams having taken his seat on the bench, the jury answered to their names and the foreman returned a verdict of "Guilty." The wretched man, who maintained an extraordinary fortitude throughout the trial, was then removed from the dock.

POLICE.—SAVING THE LIFE OF THE EARL OF FITZHARDINGE. Yesterday (Friday) a man named Edward Johnson was charged at this office with threatening the life of the Earl of Fitzhardinge, under the following circumstances:—It appeared that the prisoner had an idea that the noble earl had got some property in his possession belonging to the prisoner, and had annoyed him from time to time respecting it. His lordship had not heard anything of him for some time until Thursday last, when the prisoner stepped up to him, and demanded his property. His lordship told him to call next day at his residence, at two o'clock, when he gave the prisoner into the custody. He was held to bail in £150, and two sureties of £50 each, to keep the peace

FOREIGN.

AMERICA.—SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM THE UNITED STATES. The royal mail steamer Britannia, Captain John Hewitt, with the mails from Boston and Halifax, arrived at Liverpool on Friday morning, after an excellent voyage of 14 days from New York, and 10½ from Boston, having left those ports on the 1st and 3rd respectively. She has brought seventy-five passengers. The Caledonia, which sailed hence 19th May, arrived at Boston on the 1st June, as seven days. As her letters were quickly delivered, it is said merchants in Boston to answer them by the Britannia. The Baltimore Convention had resulted in the nomination of James K. Polk, of Tennessee, as Democratic candidate for President, and George M. Dallas, of Pennsylvania, as Vice-President. This result is looked upon as most favourable to the Whig candidates, Mr. Clay and Mr. Frelyinghuysen. A great fire had occurred in New Orleans on the 19th ult., by which property to the value of 400,000 dollars was destroyed. Nearly three hundred valuable buildings were burned, and at least 2000 persons left houseless by the calamity. No fresh steps in the Annexation Scheme had been taken; the bill that it would be rejected by the Senate increased. As Congress would adjourn by the middle of June, its fate would soon be decided. The general Congressional proceedings do not possess any interest.

THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE'S GRAND FETE TO THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA, AT CHISWICK HOUSE.

ARRIVAL OF THE IMPERIAL PARTY AT CHISWICK HOUSE.

THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE'S FETE AT CHISWICK.

With notes by our own reporter.

Oh! 'twas as bright a gazey
As Wonder's eye could wish to see!
Beauty expressly went to show,
Her presence could more charms bestow
Than Wealth or Grandeur, Pomp or Pow'r
And make them fade around her bow'r!
When She was present, lilies blush'd—
And as she spake the birds were hush'd,
Or whisper'd to each other: "E'en
The proudest lord must own her Queen!"
Thus Beauty held her sovereign sway,
Presiding Goddess of the Day!

* * * *

Though Lebanon be now no more,
Still cedar walks by Thames's shore,
For Heav'nly contemplation form'd—
A monarch welcom'd ay, and charm'd
His mind, as garden did of old
The heart of Diocletian hold,
And forc'd a sigh, which well confess'd
"'Tis here that Liberty's at rest!"

Go—monarch, then, and salute with pow'r,
Learn the rich luxury of one generous hour,
Like that of Chiswick's hospitable home
And reap a Pilgrim's blessing hither thou did'st come!

The superb Palladian villa of the Duke of Devonshire at Chiswick was, on Saturday last, the scene of one of the most splendid fêtes ever celebrated in this or any other country. It was not only honoured by the august presence of his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, but also by the King of Saxony, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Duchess of Gloucester, and about 700 members of the principal noble families in the kingdom.

It is now five years since the Duke of Devonshire gave a fête of corresponding magnificence at that delightful retreat. In all its leading features every preparation was completed with a lavish disregard of expense; and, as it was the only private entertainment given to his Imperial Majesty during his limited sojourn in this country, the Emperor cannot fail to have a high opinion of the wealth and hospitality of our nobles, from the splendour which pervaded the entire fête.

THE RECEPTION IN THE SALOON.

The perfect manner in which this beautiful villa was fitted up last season by its noble owner, on the occasion of giving a series of public breakfasts, rendered much addition to its already extended accommodation unnecessary; but, during the few days which elapsed from the noble duke becoming aware that the Emperor intended to honour him with a visit, no time has been lost in making a variety of arrangements, a brief notice of which will form a necessary introduction to the annexed account of the princely entertainment prepared by his grace.

The whole suite of apartments on the ground floor of the villa (seven in number), were fitted up last year in the most beautiful manner, as a series of grand saloons communicating with each other, and opening on to the lawn at the back of the mansion. These apartments, uniformly decorated with light chintz drapery, were devoted to the general company; while two additional rooms in the eastern wing of the villa were expressly prepared for the accommodation of the Emperor, and the illustrious visitors invited to meet his Majesty. The apartment where the royal personages breakfasted was fitted up as a gorgeous tent. The entrance was through a smaller apartment, or ante-room, also uniformly fitted as a tent, communicating with the extensive suite of apartments above alluded to, and being entered from the lawn by a tastefully-designed and highly-ornamental portico.

The grounds of the mansion were in the most perfect order, and presented a beautiful appearance, the natural attractions of the spot leaving nothing that art could supply. A perfectly novel feature in the arrangements for this splendid fête was the introduction of the living giraffes, which last season formed a portion of the collection at the Surrey Zoological Gardens, but having been removed from that establishment on the secession of Mr. Cross from its management, are now on the point of shipment for St. Petersburg, and, at the duke's desire, were taken to Chiswick, to give his Imperial Highness an opportunity of seeing them before their departure for his capital. They were placed on a beautiful grassy slope, divided from the company by an ornamental canal that runs through the grounds, where, browsing in unrestrained liberty on such trees and shrubs, as best suited their palates, they formed, with their Egyptian keepers, an extremely picturesque Oriental group.

BANQUET IN THE IMPERIAL PAVILION.

THE GRAND CEDAR AVENUE—THE EMPEROR'S SYLVAN COURT.

The two splendid bands of the Coldstream Guards and of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue), comprising nearly 80 performers, were stationed upon the lawn, and performed a series of the most popular airs during the day; in addition to which his grace's chamber band, under the direction of Mr. Charles Coote, the duke's pianist, was devoted to the amusement of those among the distinguished company who preferred the music saloon.

At one o'clock the carriages began to arrive, and it was nearly four when the whole of the distinguished visitors had assembled. The equipages, generally, were very splendid; those of the Earl of Pembroke, Marquis of Ailesbury, Duke of Sutherland, Earl Brownlow, Marquis of Londonderry, Earl of Beverley, Duchess of Beaufort, Marquis of Westminster, Marquis of Lansdowne, &c., taking the lead, as each of their carriages were attended by outriders and four horses, the servants wearing their state liveries. Viscountess Pollington's pony equipage, driven by her ladyship, was greatly admired.

THE EXTERIOR OF THE SUMMER PARLOUR.

The Duchess of Gloucester, attended by Lady Georgiana Bathurst and the Hon. Mr. Liddell, was the first of the illustrious visitors who arrived, at about ten minutes to two. Her Royal Highness was welcomed by the Duke of Devonshire, who was in waiting in the vestibule. A royal salute was fired, and the full regimental bands of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) and Coldstream Guards played the National Anthem.

At five minutes to two, the august visitors and their respective suites arrived in six of her Majesty's carriages, preceded by outriders in state liveries. The Emperor, the King of Saxony, and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, came in the first carriage, escorted by a captain's guard of the 17th Lancers. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, attended by Baron Knesebeck and Baroness Ahlefeldt, came at the same time, so that it appeared as if their carriage formed part of the cortège; and, as it advanced up the avenue leading from the Great Western Road to Chiswick

THE PURPLE LAWN, WITH THE EXHIBITION OF THE GIRAFFES.

House, the Royal party were most enthusiastically cheered by the crowds assembled in the line.

Upon the Royal cavalcade entering the grounds, the Russian Imperial standard was hoisted on the summit of the mansion; the Royal standard of Great Britain floating at the same time over the arcade leading to the Italian gardens. As the illustrious party approached the grand entrance, a Royal salute of twenty-one guns was fired from a battery erected within the grounds, the two bands simultaneously playing the Russian National Hymn.

Our first engraving represents the grand front of Chiswick House, at the moment of the Imperial and Royal arrival.

The villa itself is approached by a noble avenue of ivy-clad trees, from which the portico is seen to great advantage. The general effect of the equipages, the extraordinary turn-outs of the ambassadors and the more wealthy peers, was an heraldic display—the colours and decorations of the state liveries all being regulated in accordance with the colours of the armorial bearings of the several parties—most gorgeous, and was evidently regarded with astonishment by many of the foreigners present.

The general company were received by the Duke of Devonshire beneath the grand portico in front of the recessed entrance for which the palace is remarkable; this celebrated feature was copied by Lord Burlington, from the Villa Capra, near Vicenza.

The Imperial and Royal visitors were handed by the duke from their carriages, and led by his grace to the portico, where they were first introduced to Lord Morpeth, and the other family connexions of the House of Cavendish.

On alighting, the Emperor most cordially extended his right hand to the Duke of Devonshire, who took it with both hands, apparently under strong emotion. The Emperor and the noble duke then exchanged embraces, and saluted each other agreeably to the Russian custom. Meantime the King of Saxony and Prince Albert stood bye, and witnessed the interview with much interest. Our second illustration represents this impressive scene. The noble duke also gave a most cordial reception to the King of Saxony and the Consort of our Sovereign.

The Emperor wore a dark blue dress-coat with yellow buttons, fastened closely at the throat, black trousers, cloth boots, and a plain beaver hat. His manner was unconstrained, and as it struck us, somewhat sailor-like; whilst his habits of leaning upon his stick, and swinging it to and fro, was far removed from the ordinarily received notions of Imperial state. His Majesty's complexion is dark olive, his eyes grey, and the lids slightly inflamed, as if by exposure to cold and wind.

The royal visitors were conducted by the noble host to the saloon, a superb octagonal apartment, hung with paintings by Titian, Raphael, Andrea del Sarto, &c. Here the Emperor held a sort of drawing-room, at which most of the company were presented.

Thence the Emperor proceeded through the magnificent state-rooms to the Music Saloon, examining, as he advanced, the splendid chef-d'œuvres of art, for which Chiswick House is so justly celebrated, and occasionally pointing them out to his distinguished attendants. These apartments were crowded with ladies, whose beauty and homage highly gratified the Emperor; to quote the noble duke's words, his Majesty was "affable to all." In his Majesty's progress through these rooms, he was presented a copy of our last week's journal, printed on satin.

In the Music Saloon, his Grace's private band were in attendance, and performed in the Royal presence a new fantasia entitled "Homage to the Emperor Nicholas," composed expressly for the occasion by his Grace's pianist, Mr. Coote. The Royal party remained in the music room more than half an hour, during which interval the following music was performed:—

Overture, "Oberon."—Weber. Duet, "Roberto Devereux."—Donizetti. Solo, Clarionet.—Lazarus. Pot Pourri, "Guillaume Tell."—Rossini. Duet, Harp and Violoncello, Messrs. Cooke and Champion.—Coote. Fantasia, "Bachemian Girl," Solo, Cornopean, Mr. Macfarlane.—Macfarlane. Pot Pourri, Russe, dedicated to the Grand Duke Michael.—Coote. Finale, 1st ac. "Il Barbiere."—Rossini.

At half past 2 o'clock, the Emperor and the Royal party left the Music Room, and proceeded to the wing of the palace known as "the Summer Parlour:" the illustrious guests being attended by the duke's corps (Mr. Holloway) and six of his state coaches, in state liveries. The Emperor took the arm of her Grace the Duchess of Sutherland, Prince Albert walking with the Duchess of Buccleuch, the King of Saxony led the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke of Devonshire taking the arm of the Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke of Cambridge walked with the Baroness Brunnow, the Duke of Wellington with the Countess St. Aulaire (the lady of the French Ambassador), Count Orloff with the Princess Radziwill, his Excellency Baron Brunnow with the Countess of Pembroke, followed by M. de Minkowitz and the Count de St. Aulaire.

The Summer Parlour had been fitted up by Messrs. Crace and Co., under the direction of the Duke of Devonshire, in the style of a royal military pavilion of the 17th century. On entering you first enter the ante-room, which was fitted up as a circular tent of the same period, the eye was surprised and delighted at the gorgeousness of its colours and the chivalric character of its decorations. A white ground, striped and diapered with the arms of the Emperor and of our Queen, with the badges of the House of Cavendish, were splendidly emblazoned and variously displayed. Around what might be termed the centre of the pavilion was a rich drapery hanging border, of crimson and gold, upon which were emblazoned, upon alternate shields, the initials N. and V.; and these again alternated with the Imperial and Royal crowns, and the Devonshire crest. On the longer sides, were two richly embroidered silken trophies, in juxta-position, emblematic of the friendly union of Russia and Great Britain. In the centre of the saloon, covers were laid for sixteen persons; and the dressing of the table was extremely chaste. The repast being prepared à la Grecque, silver plate only was used; the larger and more richly chased standard pieces being filled with clusters of fruit (the hot-house wonders of Chatsworth,) and groups of flowers, which had a charming and classic effect. We have seen several noble banquets, but we have certainly never witnessed any appointments that evinced such refined taste, or were, in themselves, so unexceptionably beautiful. "Flowers and silver," say we, in spite of all the temptations to exhibit gold," are the fit decorations for a fête champêtre."

At the head of the table sat Prince Albert and the Duchess of Buccleuch; on the right, the Duchess of Sutherland, the Emperor of Russia, the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke of Devonshire, the King of Saxony, and the Duke of Cambridge. At the bottom of the table sat the Duke of Wellington, and the Duke of Buccleuch. On the left, Count Minwitz, the Count de St. Aulaire, the Princess Radzivski, Baroness Brunnow, Count Orloff, and Lord Morpeth. Here the illustrious and distinguished company were seated, and the attendants, clad in the rich yellow Devonshire state liveries, began to distribute the good things of this life—which kings equally with plebeians enjoy—the scene was one not so much of princely as of friendly hospitality.

Our third engraving shows this magnificent scene. We should here add that over the centre of each side of the pavilion was emblazoned the date on which the fête took place (June 5, 1844)—fact rendered interesting by the determination of his Grace to preserve the apartment as it now stands, in honour of the Emperor's visit.

Whilst the delicacies were being discussed in the Imperial tent, upwards of a thousand persons, seated at large tables, splendidly appointed in different parts of the villa, were drinking the health of the Emperor, &c.

At the conclusion of the repast, the Royal party retired to the lawn in the rear of the villa, where they were soon joined by a number of the visitors who had partaken of refreshment in the adjoining saloons. Our fifth engraving shows the Emperor presenting himself to the company at this moment. Many were the agreeable recognitions which then took place, and the scene was one of truly elegant enjoyment. In about half an hour, the Emperor, taking the Duchesses of Cambridge and Sutherland, and accompanied by the noble host, promenaded the lawns, and then proceeded to the magnificent cedar-walk, where, beneath one of the splendid trees, a sort of court was held, and coffee and other refreshments were served to the company. The brilliant scene of royalty, rank, and fashion, is thus spiritedly sketched in the Times:—"Under the wide-spreading branches of a magnificent cedar tree, the Emperor held his court, surrounded by those only inferior to himself in rank, by whom the rest of the company, from the proudest to the most humble, were successively presented to His Majesty. There was an easy freedom in the Emperor's manner, which had the effect of entirely removing any degree of restraint that might otherwise have been felt by many persons. Did the Prince Consort observe a lady looking with an anxious eye towards the Emperor, the next moment, thanks to the politeness of his Royal Highness, she was before His Majesty, whose affability and condescending manner won the hearts of all."

Our fourth engraving shows this Watteau-like scene—the court beneath the boughs of the "goodly cedar."

The presentations concluded, the company dispersed in groups about the grounds—some few, among whom was the King of Saxony and his attendants, crossing the lake in boats, manned by the duke's watermen in their state liveries, for the purpose of inspecting the giraffes, which were on the opposite shore. Before the king's arrival, however, one of these animals waded across the water, and joined the company; an incident which much amused the Royal party. The band was stationed on the lawn, we suppose all this time, the performance of the most popular pieces of music, while a few dancers were enjoying the Polka to the melody of the Duke's private band in the Music Saloon.

Our sixth illustration shows the Great Lawn and Ornamental Water; with the temple and bridge, and the exhibition of the giraffes.

The whole of the company then quitted the lawn, and following the Emperor, passed the grassy amphitheatre in front of the temple, the bridge, the Napoleon walk, (an allée verte, the favourite retreat of the duke), the rosery, and the splendid conservatories in front of the latter his Imperial Majesty planted a tree. During their promenade, the ecstacy and the unbounded admiration of the Emperor and his suite; those specially noticed being the Magnolia macrophylla, grandiflora, and ferruginea, and the beautiful air-plant in the conservatory.

Shortly before four o'clock, the Royal party retired into the villa; after which the illustrious visitors, having first taken leave of the general company, took their departure in the order of their arrival. The noble duke accompanied his illustrious guests to the grand entrance, where, upon entering the Royal carriage, the Emperor expressed in feeling terms the high gratification he had derived from the opportunity afforded to him by his grace, of meeting so large a number of the English aristocracy. The King of Saxony and his Royal Highness Prince Albert also complimented his grace on the splendour of the entertainment he had afforded, and the whole of the illustrious personages having cordially taken leave of his grace, the royal cavalcade drove off in the direction of town, under a Royal salute, the joint bands again playing the Russian national hymn as the Emperor passed, and the Russian flag being lowered.

The great majority of the company remained in the grounds until after six o'clock.

Among the appointments should be noticed the national flags—the Russian, on the Summer Parlour, and the British in front of the Italian Garden—both which were very beautiful, and were made expressly for the occasion by Mr. B. Edgington.

There are some characteristics of this fête which merit special mention. All was plain, unaffected, and unostentatious: the company were simply but elegantly attired, no military or official uniforms being worn; the private gardens were en masse closed, the interior of the mansion undecorated by anything else save its own splendid furniture and unrivalled collection of pictures.

The pleasure-grounds and park include about ninety acres, together with an orangery, conservatory, and range of forcing-houses, 300 feet in length. It has been truly observed that "nowhere in the vicinity of London have wealth and judgment been so haply united; nowhere in the neighbourhood of the metropolis have we so complete an example of the capabilities of the Italian or classic style of landscape gardening, as at Chiswick House."

Our engravings have been executed from sketches taken during the fête, by permission of his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, which courtesy we have as much pleasure in acknowledging, as in illustrating the scenes of his Grace's elegant hospitality.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

HAMPTON RACES.

There's a trim rabble: are all hese
Your friends o'th suburbs? -Henry VIII.

If the doctrine of compensation be but a fiction of philosophy, it's a very pleasant one, and so let it pass for the once. Upon this principle may we not regard the fair and smiling suburbs of our vast metropolis as boons offered in a countervailing spirit by Nature to the myriads born to the entail of London drudgery? And right well has she discharged that duty, by encompassing their earthly purgatory with the loveliest of all sylvan paradises. Perhaps there is no district of our island wherein exist, in a similar space, so many scenes of passing rural beauty as in the environs of London. Choose at random, and chance gives you a spot of more loveliness than the most elaborate guide-book of the picturesque would enable you to find elsewhere. Of these, the valley through which the Thames flows from Henley to Kew-bridge is the Tempe. To put upon this sheet the names of the villages that lie scattered in its track, or that sheet were to compile a catalogue of Fairy Land. There, in that sunny knoll, is a bower for Venus; beneath those waving emeralds, shades worthy the Graces.

Hoc amat obscurum: volet hæc sub luce videri.

Such are the scenes among which those who go forth to Hampton Races bivouac. Suppose they make their ways by the quiet village of Thames-Ditton, let them go to the Swan, we'll back it against the Swan of Avon, given the fair company, if curious in relics, are there not the sites where Garrick's villa is, and Pope's was? There the artist has the apotheosis of Raphael to ravish him in the hulls of the gorgeous chamber, and, in short, there is a feast for every palate in this our modern Arcadia. But, we are on the Hurst, classic arena, whereon, as Chas. Matl.ews, the elder, was wont to sing, "Rings now are made;" but where rings are made no more—neither for love nor money. Is not the weather delicious? How pleasant the sod (albeit sadly shrivelled) beneath the trees! the peerless vault above; the clear and living stream that goes smiling past. And note the masquers how odd the medley. These in the extreme fashion of '44, those in the ultra style of '43—as if they had been put by in their own hand-boxes since the last season! The former are the elegantes of St. James's; the latter, "a trim rabble" the rural belles—"our friends o' th' suburbs." Who wants to read about the sport? Base is the slave that goes to Hampton for the lures of the racing! Racing, youths! as a thing one you approach through a street as long as Piccadilly and Oxford-street tied together, appropriated to the sale of gingerbread nuts! What an' if there are no temples to Terpsichore, are there shrines without end to fun Art musical? Won't that quartet of Jim Crows, on their heads, satisfy you? Debonnaire! Here is a bevy of angels, in satin pelisses, couleur de rose, and smiles that shame the sunshine. Gourmand? Look at those tables of Tyrian dye, groaning with the spoils of molten diamonds that mortals call champagne! See ye not that Hampton was a tryst of price, though shorn on its late anniversary of a day, and far from abundant in Olympics as regarded the two to which it was reduced. But of that as aforesaid, where the business of the turf bears about as fair proportion to the purposes of men's hearts (and women's), as Falstaff's pennyworth of bread to his "intolerable deal of sack."

Wednesday, the first of the meeting, was a gorgeous summer-day, all brilliancy and breeze—an atmosphere to set the spirit dancing like quicksilver. The attendance, however, was not good, neither the sport of much account: there were, indeed, three races, but not of a character to merit the immortality of our page.

Thursday, the proud Cup-day, was all fitting such an anniversary It was gorgeous, glorious summer, and such a company did it gather together as never before made tryst on the Hurst. Of the racing it is needless to speak: the prizes were not such, considering the state of the ground, as to bring good nags to the post, and the course was abominably not kept. Some of the jockeys declared they would rather ride a race of Cheseldine's on Sunday; many of the nobs were ridden over; and altogether it was an awful sight—the racing.

The fun was nitra-excellent: all the world was there, resolved to be happy, and frolic reigned supreme—somewhat, indeed, in masquerade—but still it was lively—high. Hampton Races are at a premium. It is to be hoped that next year the backers will show a spirit worthy their good luck.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The betting on Monday last, although it touched upon all the events at present in the market, was limited in amount and importance, requiring only a statement of the average prices:—

GOODWOOD CUP.

3 to 1 agst Alice Hawthorn (t) | 8 to 1 agst The Squire (t)

6 to 1 agst The Cure | 8 to 1 agst Bay Momus | 12 to 1 agst Ithuriel
8 to 1 — The Buck | 8 to 1 — The Princess

SOUTHUMBERLAND PLATE.

8 to 1 agst Bay Momus (t) | 12 to 1 agst Partaloon (t) | 14 to 1 agst The Era (t)
10 to 1 — The Cure (t) | 14 to 1 — Widnie Blaker (t) | 16 to 1 — The Baskaw

THE LATE DERBY.—3 to 1 laid and afterwards offered currently on Orlando

THURSDAY.—On Thursday, in consequence of Hampton races, there was no attendance.

HAMPTON RACES.

WEDNESDAY.—Sir James Graham's interdiction of gaming on race courses, although it may not touch several of the first class meetings, will have a serious influence on the minor ones, and more particularly on those within the "home circuit." Thus, Hampton, which has furnished sport enough for three profitable days, commenced on Wednesday with such diminished resources, that the third day has most reluctantly been given up. Egham, previously in a tottering state from the "poverty of the land," has also "pronounced," and several other places that we will not prejudice by naming, must inevitably adopt a similar course, if they be not compelled to quit the field altogether. The effect of this prohibition on Hampton was not confined to the curtailment of a day's racing those who were present must have been struck with the half-furnished appearance of the course, arising out of the absence of the long row of gay marquees that were wont to be all life and excitement.

The course was not kept by the police; a few were present, but the duties hitherto performed by them were entrusted to men employed by the lessees of the ground, and, it is due to them to say, were quite as well executed.

The assemblage of company was of that varied character peculiar to Hampton.

The day's sport, which was under the personal superintendence of the stewards, Count Bathyany and the Marquis of Worcester, assisted by Mr. Parsons, as clerk of the course, and Mr. Hibburd, judge, produced the following results:—

The Stewards' Plate of £250, added to a sweepstakes of 5 sovs. each; winner to be sold for 350, if demanded. Once round and a dis. 8 subs.

Lord E. Russell's Nat, 4 yrs .. .. (Sly) 1
Mr. Ongley's Queen of the Gipsies, 4 years .. .. .. (Rogers) 2

Won easy, by two lengths.

The Surrey and Middlesex Stakes, of 20 sovs. each, 10 ft. and 5 only if declared, with fifty added. 2 miles.

Lord Lonsdale's Blackdrop, 4 yrs. 8st.. .. .. .. (Rogers) 1
Mr. Willoughby, named Sandust, 4 yrs. 6st 9lb .. .. (Crouch) 2

Won by six or seven lengths.

The Strawberry-hill stakes of 3 sovs. each, with 25 added.—Heats, one mile and a quarter. Winner to be sold for 200. 10 subs.

Mr. Dockeray's Molly Mogg, 3 yrs .. .. .. (Bartholomew) 1 2 1
Mr. Prescott's Paradise, aged .. .. .. (Rogers) 0 1 2

The first heat was won easy by two lengths. Conjugation had third. The second neat was won by a neck, the second beating the third by a head; for this heat there were three or four false starts, and in the final one Mr. Rush's colt was left behind, and did not save his distance. The third heat produced a splendid race between the winners of the other two, and was won only by half a neck.

THURSDAY.

The Claremont Stakes of 10 sovs each, with 30 added by the Proprietors of the Course.

Sir S. Sprye's f by Sir Hercules 1
Mr. H. Mew's Corsican Tom 2
Her Majesty's Plate of 100 guineas; free for horses of all ages; three yrs old, 7st 5lb; four, 9st 11lb; five, 9st 11lb; six and aged, 10st 2lb. Two miles; heats.

Mr. Death's Misdeal, 6 yrs 1 1
Lord E. Russell's Nat, 4 yrs 2 2

The Hurst Cup of 40 sovs, in specie, free for all ages, added to a Sweepstakes of 3 sovs each. Once round and a distance.

Mr. Stanbrow's b h Isleworth, 5 yrs, won the first heat.
Mr. Balchin's Crocus, 4 yrs, a good second.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

THE SUSSEX PEERAGE

Their lordships sat in a Committee for Privileges upon the case of the claim of Sir Augustus D'Este to the Dukedom of Sussex. Among the Peers present we noticed the Lord Chancellor, Lord Denman, Lord Brougham, Lord Langdale, Lord Cottenham, Lord Ancaster, the Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Glenerny, Viscount Strangford, the Earl of Redesdale, Lord Campbell, and others. The greater portion of the judges were also in attendance. Previous to the commencement of the proceedings a long private conversation took place between the law Peers of the house. Shortly before eleven o'clock their lordships proceeded to consider the claim of Sir Augustus D'Este, and witnesses were called to the bar. Mr. L. Walker produced the register of his late Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, which was read.—Lord Campbell said, all these are honours. I believe, of the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland?—Mr. Walker said they were not. He was a Comptroller of his late Royal Highness's household at the time of his death. The witness then put in several letters, which he deposed to be in the handwriting of the late Duke of Sussex, and which contained various references to his Royal Highness's marriage with the Lady Augusta Murray. Among the documentary evidence tendered was a volume of "Young's Night Thoughts," on a leaf of which was the following entry, in the handwriting of the Lady Augusta Murray. "A present from Prince Augustus Frederick," after which appeared the following, in the handwriting of his late Royal Highness:—"April 4, 1793—Augusta lent the name of Murray for one more dear, Augustus Frederick."—Mr. Erle tendered a prayer-book in the same hand, the back leaf of which was the following entry in the handwriting of the Lady Augusta:—"By this prayer-book I was married at Rome to Prince Augustus Frederick, on the 4th of April, 1793, by the Rev. Mr.——." The next piece of documentary evidence put in was a volume of Shakspeare, containing the following entry, in the handwriting of his late Royal Highness:—"April 4, 1793—This moment I have come from my Augusta. Accomplished the sacrifice to all eternity. God has given me her. She depends henceforth upon me, and upon no one else. Oh! Lord, protect us and bless us with all godliness to serve thee, who liveth and reigneth with the Father and the Holy Ghost, world without end." A volume of Blair's Sermons was then put in, containing the following entry, in the handwriting of his Royal Highness, "Augustus Frederick gave this book to his dear wife, Augusta, May 22nd, 1793." Next came a prayer-book of the same work, containing the words "Augustus Frederick and Augusta," was also put in. A will, in the handwriting of his late Royal Highness, and sealed with the royal arms, was then put in. It was regularly attested, and was dated "Berlin, 8th Sept., 1799," and it stated that the testator was duly married on the 4th April, 1793, at Rome, to the Lady Augusta Murray, daughter of the Earl of Dunmore, a fact that the ceremony was performed according to the forms between the parties at the parish-church of St. George, Hanover-square, by banns, on the 5th December, 1793. The next document tendered was a will, dated 1800, in which the testator declared that he had been solemnly wedded, and duly married to Lady Augusta Murray at Rome, on the 4th of April, 1793, and afterwards at St. George's, Hanover-square, and also that Thomas Wilde, who was then present, was the principal witness to the legitimate son. This portion of the evidence was afterwards declared inadmissible. Mr. Erle then proceeded to read letters from the Duke of Sussex to Lady Murray, written on board the Endymion, in January, 1801, as to the manner in which she should be treated; and a letter to Sir Augustus D'Este, containing advice as to his conduct.—Letters from Lady Murray to the Reverend Mr. Gunn, and from the latter to the former were also read; and Mr. Gunn, the son of the Reverend Mr. Gunn, was called to identify those written by his father.—Letters of ordination by the Bishop of Norwich, admitting the Rev. Mr. Gunn to deacon's orders, were also put in evidence.—A letter of his Royal Highness to Lord Erskine was then about to be read, dated 1798, stating at full length the litigation which had gone on with respect to the property, and drawing a parallel between the case excluded on the same ground as the will. An officer of the Ecclesiastical Court produced a copy of the proceedings there, which was received in evidence. Lord Northwick, examined by Sir W. Wilde.—Had frequently seen Lady Murray and his late Royal Highness in Lower Grosvenor-street in 1800. His Royal Highness always treated her ladyship as his consort, and she was called the Princess Augusta. The Rev. Mr. Gow examined by Sir W. Wilde.—Deposed to having officiated for the Rev. Mr. Gunn in 1792, on account of his going abroad. He returned to England in 1793. Evidence was gone into for the purpose of showing, by corroboration, that the Rev. Mr. Gunn was the same person of the name of Lord Macclesfield, examined by Mr. Erle, deposed to having seen the Prince with Lady Dunmore and her daughter at Naples, in 1793. A register of the baptism of the claimant was then put in.—The further hearing of the case was postponed until Tuesday week.

EPITOME OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS.

His Majesty of Hanover has created a new distinction, in honour of fifty years' military service, and given it the name of the cross of Ernest Augustus. The first officer who receives this cross is his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge.

Letters from Constantinople mention that the Porte has adopted the preliminaries of a new convention with Persia, under the mediation of England and France.

Orders have been received from the Admiralty for the launching of the Porcupine steam packet, on Monday next, from the Dockyard, Deptford.

We understand, on the authority of a gentleman now in his 82nd year, and who was a passenger of the vessel, that the Great steam has not been equalled in dryness since the year 1785, which is a lapse of 59 years. The meteorologists have as yet assigned no cause for this unusual phenomenon.

The King of the French has presented our native composer, Mr. Balfe, with a splendid gold medal, value 4000 francs, in acknowledgment of his consideration of the composer's talents, but particularly for the merits of the Puits d'Amour produced last season at the Opera Comique.

Lord Francis Egerton's eldest son, the Hon. G. Granville Egerton, heir to the immense Bridgewater estate es, will come of age on the 16th instant, when the event will be celebrated by great rejoicings on the noble lord's estates in Lancashire.

There will, we understand, be some new appointments of Queen's Counsel previous to the ensuing circuits. We have heard the names of several gentlemen mentioned for the honour, but, at present, it would be premature to state them, as the arrangements are not fully completed.

On Friday last the Mayor of Limerick was entering the Exchange to preside at a meeting which he called in compliance with a requestion to address Mr. O'Connell in his captivity, when he was suddenly taken ill, and died almost immediately. Death was caused by the rupture of a blood-vessel.

A deputation, including the Rev. Dr. Stowart, the Rev. Dr. Cooke, Mr. Boyd, and Mr. Macrory, had an interview with Sir Robert Peel on Monday at his official residence in Downing-street.

The Emperor of Russia intends, it is said, during his present visit to his Royal brother-in-law, the King of Holland, at the Hague, to proceed to Amsterdam; also to the little village of Zaandam, formerly inhabited by Peter the Great, and whose cottage has, from time to time, been kept in the most scrupulous order, and preserved in nearly the same state as at the period when the illustrious carpenter resided there.

The King of Bavaria visited the Pope on the 25th ult., at the Vatican. His Holiness received the King most cordially. The accounts from the various Roman States continue satisfactory. Numerous Spanish families of distinction are daily arriving at Rome.

Sir Henry Hardinge, the new Governor-General of India, passed through Paris on Sunday on his way to Marseilles. He landed at Dieppe on Saturday.

Some days ago, a boiler at South Towan mine, in the parish of Illogan, exploded while the engineman was standing on the top of it. The poor fellow was blown through the roof of the engine-house, but after a little time he was so far recovered as to be able, with the assistance of a friend, to walk home.

The Crown Prince of Denmark visited Glasgow on Friday, from a journey by the Trossachs, by Loch Catrine and Lochlomond, and was engaged on Saturday, in company with the Lord Provost and other official gentlemen, in viewing some of the principal manufactories and public institutions.

The Rev. George Monnington, Head-Master of the Grammar School, Bristol, has been elected Vicar of Bitterne, near Southampton, in the room of the late Rev. James Powell, 55 years incumbent of that parish.

The Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas completed his 15th year of judicial office on Tuesday last, and is consequently entitled to claim his full retiring pension.

A duel was fought at Boulogne, on the 7th inst., between Captain Bulkeley, attached by Mr. Fitzgerald Hall, and Mr. Fitzgerald Hyde, attended by Mr. Finucane. Three shots were fired by each party without effect; after which they left the ground. The meeting was occasioned by Mr. Higgins having made some very offensive observations to the captain at the Café du Passage the preceding evening.

A Berlin letter of the 28th ult., in the Journal de Frankfort, states that the commercial negociations between the Earl of Westmoreland and Baron de Bulow have never been interrupted, and are now more actively followed up than ever.

A letter from Vienna, of the 29th ult., states that in case of need the troops of Russia are ready to enter Bulgaria, should the Turks not be able to subdue the Albanians.

The invitations annually circulated by the Duke of Wellington, to those present and other officers who took part in the memorable battle of Waterloo, for the Duke's banquet on the anniversary of that sanguinary struggle, have been issued.

The members of the Navy Club have appointed the 27th instant for their annual grand entertainment to the Earl of Haddington, in his official capacity of First Lord of the Admiralty, at the usual rendezvous of the club, the Thatched House Tavern.

We learn with pleasure that the Intendant of the Civil List in France has awarded, in the name of his Majesty Louis Philippe, a gold medal to Mr. Christopher Moore, for the sculptures sent by the latter to the exhibitions in the Louvre for the present year.

Mr. Balfe, the composer, received, by order of the King of the French, on Tuesday last, the great gold medal, bearing his Majesty's effigy, accompanied by a highly complimentary letter from Baron Fain, the King's private secretary.

Saturday a sumptuous banquet was given by the barristers of the home circuit to Frederick Thesiger, the new Solicitor-General, to congratulate him on his accession to office, at the Brunswick Hotel, Blackwall. Upwards of 120 members sat down. Mr. Platt, the senior member, presiding as chairman.

Two instances have recently occurred, within the present week, of a medical gentleman, of young ladies receiving severe wounds from scissors carried in the fashionable pockets à la Suisse in the crest.

It is currently stated, in the circles of fashion, that a grand fancy ball will be got up early next month, to be called the Waverley Ball, as the costumes are to be in accordance with the descriptions given by the great northern Lord of the heroes and heroines and leading characters in the novels of that prolific author.

The Wells Diocesan training school, from which so much was anticipated on its establishment, about five years ago, is to be finally broken up at the Midsummer quarter, it being found impossible to meet the unavoidably large expenses.

The late arrivals from Barbadoes bring accounts of the total loss of the brigantine Sir Walter Scott, which left that place on the morning of the 24th of April last, while on her passage from the Spanish Main to Kingstown, in Jamaica. The lives of all on board were saved.

Workmen were employed on Wednesday in preparing scaffolding for the purpose of affixing electrical rods from the base to the summit of the Duke of York pillar in Carlton-gardens, in order to protect the lofty pile from the effect of lightning.

The Lightning, which returned to Woolwich on Wednesday, brought intelligence of the arrival of his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia at Rotterdam, in the Black Eagle steamer, at four o'clock p.m., on Monday, after a delightful passage of 21 hours, the sea being nearly as smooth as a mirror all the time. The Emperor had left Rotterdam previous to the Lightning starting on her return to Woolwich.

On Wednesday evening, the gentlemen educated in Westminster school, held their annual festival at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James's-street, when about forty partook of a splendid dinner, at which the Hon. W. Ridley Colborne presided.

The report of the committee on the Tours and Nantes Railroad Bill has been disseminated among the members of the Chamber of Deputies. The report approves of the credit of 38,000,000f. required by the Government, and recommends the immediate execution of the measure.

The grand assemblage of troops which annually takes place at St. Petersburg in the commencement of summer, will, in the present year, be at the Emperor, be reviewed by Prince Paskewitch, assisted by the Hereditary Grand Duke Alexander and the Grand Duke Michael of Russia.

The Thatched House Tavern is at length progressing rapidly towards completion, the whole of the eight patent wire lengths of rope have been carried over, and on Wednesday morning several of the Directors were present, and witnessed the successful suspension of the first link of the massive chains which are to form the chief feature of the structure.

Marine Hospitals have been established at St. John's, St. Andrew's, and some other seaports, where sick and disabled seamen are received and provided with every comfort. These establishments are supported from a fund raised on the shipping frequenting the ports.

The Directors of the British North American Bank held their yearly general meeting on Tuesday and received from the Directors a report that was deemed most satisfactory, relative to the state of their affairs.

The frequent adulterations of tobacco, snuff, beer, tea, coffee, chocolate, and pepper, have induced the Commissioners of Excise to issue bills, calling attention to the state of the law, and expressing a determination to enforce the very heavy penalties against all offenders.

On Wednesday evening the Annual festival of the City of London Conservative Association was held at the Theatre Royal Covent-garden. Wm. Thompson, Esq., Alderman and M.P., president of the association, presided, supported by a large number of the citizens of London distinguished for their commercial enterprise and political importance

In the Court of Queen's Bench on Wednesday Lord Denman gave judgment in favour of Mr. Bernard Gregory to-day in the case of criminal indictment, brought against him by the Duke of Brunswick, until after Michaelmas term.

On Saturday last a splendid new ship, of 1000 tons burden, intended for the China trade, the property of Mr. Joseph Somes, was launched from the building-yard of Mr. Watson, on the river Wear. This vessel was named the Sir George Seymour, in compliment to the gallant admiral, lately one of the Lords of the Admiralty, who is now about to take the command of her Majesty's fleet on the South Pacific station.

The present spring seems to have been one of the strangest seasons ever known both in Europe and America. Whilst in England, France, and the north of Europe, it has been excessively dry, it has been just as wet in Portugal and Spain, in which countries the rain was almost incessant during the month of May. In the New World the drought has been as severe in the United States, Cuba, and Jamaica, as in the north of Europe, whilst in the little island of Barbadoes the rains have been as heavy as in the Peninsula.

IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN AND DROGHEDA RAILWAY.

The ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the metropolitan terminus of this spirited and important undertaking was performed last week, by the Right Honorable Lady Eardley Grey, the Lord Lieutenant, on which occasion he was surrounded by the most distinguished of the nobility and gentry resident in the Irish metropolis and its vicinity, and by the most scientific and influential representatives of its trade and commerce.

Shortly after two o'clock, his Excellency and suite arrived, and were conducted by George Hoyte, Esq., Deputy Chairman, and the other directors, who were in waiting to receive his Excellency, to the seats allocated for them in the pavilion.

After some short time occupied in the friendly interchange of compliments and recognitions of acquaintances, the process on moved forward to the site allocated for the first stone to be set. When the procession had arrived at the place for the ceremony, the Deputy Chairman addressed his Excellency, expressing the thanks on behalf of the company, for the honour conferred upon them by his Excellency so graciously condescending to undertake the performance of the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of so important and interesting an undertaking.

The apron having been handed by one of the pages to Doctor M'Neill, with his Excellency's permission he was girded therewith, and then proceeded to place in a bottle, prepared for the occasion, the current coin of the realm, from a farthing to a sovereign; two of the Dublin newspapers of that morning's date; and a manuscript account on vellum of the ceremony of laying the first stone, with the signature and seal of his Excellency appended to it. The bottle was sealed and deposited in an aperture cut in the stone for the purpose, and covered with a zinc plate bearing the following inscription:—

The First Stone of the Dublin and Drogheda Railway Metropolitan Terminus was laid by His Excellency Thomas Philip Earl de Grey, K.G.,
Lord Lieutenant General and General Governor of Ireland;
And the Line opened on the anniversary of her
Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria's
Birth-day 1844.

John MacNeill, Esq., LL.D., F.R.S., M.R.I.A., Engineer.
Wm. Deane Butler, Esq., F.R.I.B.A., F.R.I.A.I., Architect.
Messrs. Wallace and Sons, Contractors.

Mr. Wm. Deane Butler, the architect, on presenting the trowel to his Excellency, said, that the honour devolved upon him professionally, and on no previous occasion did he ever experience a more gratifying distinction than when so afforded him, and which was so much enhanced by the distinguished attainments and architectural taste of his Excellency—a reputation so generally acknowledged by his position as President of the Royal Institute of British Architects

His Excellency addressed the directors, congratulating them on the noble undertaking—so beneficial to the country—the completion of which they now celebrated on the birth-day of her Majesty.

His Excellency then went through the usual form of spreading the mortar and striking the stone, upon which, amid the cheers of all assembled, the band struck up the "National Anthem," and his Excellency drank, "Health and prosperity to the undertaking." Lord de Grey then, without the Board of directors, the engineer, &c., also joined. The top stone was then set into its place, amid loud cheering from all who witnessed the ceremony.

The procession returned to the pavilion, where a handsome collation, fitted up in one of the great foundation arches of the terminus. After refreshment had been partaken of, the Deputy Chairman of the Board of Directors, George Hoyte, Esq., who proceeded, proposed the health of "Her Most Gracious and Sovereign Victoria," which was most enthusiastically cheered, the band playing, "God save the Queen."

Mr. Hoyte next proposed the health of "His Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant and the Countess De Grey," who had conferred so distinguished an honour on this great national undertaking as to be present at the interesting ceremony which had just taken place.

This toast was received with the utmost warmth—the usual three times three and one cheer more.

His Excellency, after returning thanks, paid the highest compliments to Dr. M'Neil, the engineer, for the completion of his great work, and also to the architect, Mr. W. D. Butler, for the skill and taste displayed in the designs.

After the toast had departed, his Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant took occasion once more to express his delight at the signal success of the engineer-in-chief in this important work, and said it was his wish to bestow upon him the honour of Knighthood, and his pleasure was enhanced from the fact of his being an Irishman. A more appropriate stage could not be selected than the one where he (Earl de Grey) then stood.

A cushion being at hand, Dr. M'Neill knelt upon one knee; his Excellency taking the sword of one of the Aides-de-Camp, touched him on the head and shoulder, saying, "Arise, Sir John M'Neil."

The respected knight was warmly congratulated by all around on his receiving, at the hands of so respected a nobleman, an honour so well merited by his zeal, energy, and success in this undertaking

The greatest praise is due to Mr. Butler, the architect, for the tasteful manner in which the arrangements for the ceremony were completed.

ADDRESSES TO MR. O'CONNELL—REFUSAL TO ADMIT DEPUTATIONS.

A number of deputations from various parts of the country arrived in Dublin on Tuesday, for the purpose of waiting on Mr. O'Connell and the other state prisoners. Individual visitors were admitted; but, it would appear, deputations were excluded from the prison.

The following addresses were received by Mr. O'Connell, but not through the deputations appointed to present them:—From the Corporation of Dublin, Four Courts Ward, College Ward, town of Galway, parish of Caltry, county of Galway, town of Nenagh, county of Limerick, and Clondalkin, Municipal Commissioners of Trim, the parish of Ahascra, parishes of St. Peter's, Drum, and St. Mary's Athlone; parishes of Rollestown and Oldtown; Belfast; town Commissioners of Loughrea, and the repealers of Longford.

The Evening Post of Tuesday contains the following:—"A deputation from Bruff, in the county of Limerick, having this day proceeded to Richmond Bridewell, for the purpose of presenting an address to the state prisoners, they were refused admission. Mr. Smith O'Brien, as member for the county of Limerick, immediately addressed the following letter to Sir James Graham:—

"TO THE RIGHT HON. SIR JAMES GRAHAM, &c. &c.

"Dublin, June 11, 1844.

"Sir—Having been called upon, on the part of a portion of my constituents, to accompany a deputation, with a view to present an address to Mr. O'Connell this day, I was informed by the Governor of Richmond Penitentiary, that the board of superintendence have given directions that no deputation be admitted to present addresses to the state prisoners. Having granted leave to attend the board of superintendence would in regard to such a proceeding, be willing to conform to the desire of the Secretary of State, I take the liberty to ask whether the admission of persons wishing to testify the respect and affection of their fellow countrymen to Mr. O'Connell, and the other state prisoners, has your sanction. I may, perhaps, be permitted to add, that the local arrangements of the prison are such as to allow of the reception of deputations, without, in any degree, interfering with the ordinary discipline of the prison.

"I have the honour to be, your obedient servant,

"WILLIAM SMITH O'BRIEN."

REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—At the usual weekly meeting of the Repeal Association held on Monday, the rent amounted to £3,229. Even what the "monster meetings" were in progress, the largest sum ever received within one week by the Repeal Association was £3,103, acknowledged on the 19th of June, 1843, and £1,608 of which was from Cure, contributed at the meeting held in Ennis on the 15th. An American demanded by the £40 was also included.

THE WRIT OF ERROR.—The whole of the proceedings connected with the State Trials have terminated in the Irish Court of Queen's Bench, and the case is now nearly ripe for adjudication in the House of Lords. The greatest facilities are being afforded by both sides to bring the matter to a speedy issue.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—FRIDAY.—During the present week a very large quantity of English wheat has been received up to our market, owing to which the demand for it was in a depressed state, and prices 1s. to 2s. lower, with some instances a downward tendency. The show of fine foreign wheat was extensive, while that of low sort was heavy at here quoted rates. Very little foreign barley was on show; but some large contracts have been effected in the article for forward delivery, at unquoted rates. The best malt was a trifle dearer. In other qualities only a moderate business was doing. Oats, beans, peas, and flour, were quite as dear.

ARRIVALS: English Wheat, 9,380 qrs.; Barley, 320; Oats, 2,460 quarters. Irish: Wheat, —; Barley, —; Oats, 21,490 quarters. Foreign: Wheat, 200; Barley, 4,140; Oats, 1,280 quarters. Flour, 5,110 sacks, Malt, 3,480 quarters

English Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 49s; ditto white, 50s to 52s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 40s to 43s; ditto white, 44s to 48s; rye, 28s to 30s; grinding barley, 30s to 31s; distilling, 32s to 34s; malting ditto, 34s to 36s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 56s to —; brown ditto 52s to 55s; Kingston and Ware, 58s to 60s; Cheveller, 64s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, —s to 23s; potato ditto, 22s to 24s; Youghal and Cork, black, 21s to —; ditto white, 22s to 23s; tick beans, new, 36s to 38s; ditto, old, 38s to 40s; grey peas, 34s to 36s; maple, 35s to 36s; white, 34s to 35s; boilers, 36s to 38s per quarter. Town-made flour, 36s to 38s; Suffolk, — to 40s; Stockton and Durham, 32s to 34s per sack.

Foreign.—Free wheat, 48s to 50s; Dantz, red, 45s to 46s; white, 48s to 50s. In Bond Barley, 18s to 20s; Oats, 13s to 14s; Beans, 24s to 26s; Peas, 24s to 25s per last of ten quarters: Linseed cakes, English, £6 to £6 10s per 1000, rapeseed cakes, £5 5s to £5 10s per ton; canary 58s to 59s per quarter

Bread The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8d to 8½d; of household ditto, 6d to 7½d per 4lb loaf

Imperial Weekly Averages.—Wheat, 55s 6d; barley, 31s 4d; oats, 21s 11d; rye, 33s 11d, beans, 38s 11d; peas, 34s 1d.

Six Weeks Averages (the duty open).—Wheat, 55s 6d; barley, 31s 1d, oats, 21s 1d; rye, 32s 2d, beans, 38s 5d, peas, 34s 1d

Duties.—Wheat, 12s; barley, 7s; oats, 6d; rye, 12s 6d, beans, 9s 6d; peas, 10s 6d.

Tea.—In consequence of a very large importation of tea—to the extent of 3,000,000 lbs. having arrived in London during the present week—the demand for a descriptions is very heavy, and prices are wi h a fluctuating upward tendency.

Sugar.—Some very large arrivals of sugar having again taken place, and the show of samples being extensive, the super brown qualities are 6d to 1s per cwt. lower, and refined sugar 6d. per cwt. The refined market is dull, and the highest figure for standard lumps does not exceed 77s per cwt.

Coffee.—Ceylon qualities the enquiry is steady, at 42s to 46s for good ordinary. In most other kinds of coffee a good business is doing, and prices are well supported.

Beef.—We have had a fair business doing in Smithfield, at the following rates. Other kinds of coffee are heavy Provisions.—Provisions of Irish butter continuing extensive, dealers are acting with great caution, and prices, in many instances, are almost nominal. Prime Limerick, landed, has sold at 78s to 79s; and Waterford, 76s to 78s per cwt. The highest value of Friesland and Cork is 76s to 78s. Bacon is in good sale, and the lowest figure for Irish singed sides of provisions, are a dull sale.

Tallow.—The market has been inactive since our last, yet prices remain about stationary. The quotation of P.Y.C., on the spot, is 40s 3d to 40s 9d, and for delivery, 41s 0d per cwt.

Coals.—Carr's Hartley, 21s 6d, Orel's Hartley, 21s 3 Old Tanfield, 15s 6d; Foss, Wrekendyke, 18s 6d, Tanfield Moor, 20s, Killingworth, 22s 6d; Hawkes, 21s; Evenwood, —; Adelaide, 22s 6d; and Elvin, 22s per ton.

Hops.—Nearly the whole of the accounts which have come to hand, this week, are by far more favourable than for some time past, hence the demand for all kindsof hops is inactive, and prices rule very previous rates. In the duty no business has as yet taken place. Mussex pockets, 46s 8s to 56s 14s; Weald of Kent, 46s 12s to 48?, Mid Kent do, 47 to 50; do bags, 47 to 48s. East Kent pockets, 47 to 49?, choice do, 50 to 52?

Wool.—No public sales of wool have now commenced. Nearly the whole of the parcels offered, viz., about 10,000 bales, have found buyers at full prices. Upwards of 9000 packages have been imported this week.

Potatoes.—The best qualities of potatoes are in demand at 90s to 100s per ton. In other kinds very little is doing.

Smithfield.—There was on sale to-day forty cows and oxen imported, this week, from Holland, in good condition. The numbers of home-fed beasts were by no means large, yet the best trade was in a very sluggish state, at barely Sunday's quotations. The supply of sheep was only moderate, while the mutton trade was comparatively steady, at full prices. In lambs, the arrivals of which were good, a fair amount of business was done, and late rates were well supported. The veal trade was extremely dull, at a depression of 2d per 8lbs. Pigs were a mere drag, and the turn slower. Milch cows sold slowly at from £16 to £19 each.

Per 8lbs., to sink the offal:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 2d to 2s 4d; second quality do, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; prime large oxen, 2s 8d to 2s 8d; prime Scots, &c., 2s 8d to 2s 10d; coarse and inferior sheep, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime coarse woolled sheep, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime Southdowns ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; large coarse calves 3s 0d to 3s 2d, prime small ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; large hogs, 2s 0d to 2s 6d, neat small porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 0d, lambs, 4s 0d to 5s 0d. Suckling calves, 18s to 20s; and quarter old store pigs, 18s 0d to 20s each. Beasts, 47; cows, 139; sheep and lambs, 11,990; calves 140; pigs 410.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—A very dull trade here to-day, and prices were not supported; Per 8lb. by the scale:—Inferior beef, 2s 0d to 2s 2d; middling ditto, 2s 4d to 2s 6d; prime large ditto, 2s 8d to 2s 10d; prime small do., 2s 8d to 2s 10d; coarse pork, 2s 0d to 2s 2d; inferior mutton, 2s 8d to 2s 4d; middling ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; prime ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; veal, 2s 4d to 4s 0d; small pork, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; lamb, 0d to 0s 0d.

ROBT. HERBERT.

COMMERCE AND MONEY.

Very little animation has existed this week in any department of the money market, which may be in part attributed to the state of the weather, which is injuring the grass crops now in the fields. A large importation of foreign provisions, therefore, must take place in the course of the present year, and this circumstance may have a considerable influence on the rates of the foreign exchanges, by which, in future, it seems, the amount of money in circulation in this great empire is to be regulated. Last year-day, the demand for bills drawn on the Continent, in payment for our foreign export trade, was materially increased by purchases made of them for the payment of foreign provisions, either lately arrived or now on their passage to this country, but still no decline has as yet occurred in the rates of the foreign exchanges, because the supply of fore gn bills had proportionably been increased. There is, however, a probability that, for the balance of our foreign trade, exportation of precious metals may soon become necessary, and this impression is evidently acting on the sensitive nerves of the monied interest generally, at the present moment. Accordingly, since our last publication, very little animation has been displayed amongst the jobbers, dealers, and brokers at the English Stock Exchange, and all descriptions of our funds are somewhat lower. The Consols were down as low as 97¾ ex. div. for the opening, but they afterwards improved by perhaps ¾ per cent. India Bonds and Exchequer Bills also ran for pursuant on the payment of 5s. less premium; but they commanded last week. For the shares of Joint Stock Banks, on the contrary, higher prices have been demanded, for the more money becomes, the higher must be the rates charged for discount, and the greater therefore must be banking profits. In the Share market less business has been done this week than has been accustomed to report. A foolish dispute between the Directors of the London and Birmingham and Grand Junctions Railway Associations, has materially reduced the value of their shares, and an amicable adjustment of these disputes only can restore to them the confidence of the monied interest. Birmingham and Gloucester shares cannot be purchased under 93, and those of the Great North of England under 80, and those of the Manchester and Leeds have considerably improved in value. Business has likewise been transacted in the shares of the Edinburgh and Glasgow, and in those of the Manchester and Birmingham lines, at rather higher prices. On the whole, with the exceptions to what we have alluded above, the Share market continues to be in a sound and healthy condition.

On the Foreign Stock Exchange a fair quantity of business has been again transacted. Speculators have been amusing themselves with Mexican and with Spanish bonds, and the public have been purchasers of the Portuguese 4 per Cents. A promise, on the part of the Government of Buenos Ayres of good behaviour for the future, has caused some purchases of the bonds to be made at higher prices. A great deal of business has been also done in all descriptions of foreign securities of the Continent, and their value generally has been fully supported. The foreign demand still continues, though perhaps not to the same extent which it did two or three weeks ago. Here, too, health is visibly improving.

BRITISH FUNDS.—London and Westminster Bank, 29¾ to —; London Joint Stock Bank, —; Commercial Bank of London, 19¾; Provincial Bank of England, —; Bank Stock, 193; East India Stock, 260 to —; Union Bank of London, 15¾; Three per Cent. Consols, — to —; Three per Cent. Reduced, 99; Three and a Half per Cents, 1818, —; Three and a Half per Cents, 1826, 99¾; Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Reduced, 102; Five per Cents, —; Long Annuities, 15 7 16 to —; India Bonds, 95 premium; Exchequer Bills, 75 to — pm.; Consols for the Settlement, — to — ex. d.; National Bank of Ireland, 15 to —; Consols for Opening, 98 ex div.; South Sea Old Annuities, —; South Sea Stock, —; Union of Australasia, —; Provincial Bank of Ireland, 46¾; Colonial Bank, —; British North American Bank, 42.

FOREIGN BONDS AND SECURITIES.—Belgian, 105 to —; Buenos Ayres, 36 to 37; Columbian Bonds, 19 to 19¾; Venezuela, 42 to —; Dutch Bonds, 15 to —; Mexican, 34 to 34¾; Portuguese converted, 47¾; Peruvian, 28 to —; Spanish 5 per Cents, 22¾ to 23; Spanish 3 per Cents, 34 to 35; Dutch 2½ per Cents, 61¾ to 62; Dutch 4 per Cents, 101¾; Russian, 111 to —; Austrian, —; Danish, 90 to —; Prussian, 81 to 82; Chilian, 103; Cuba 6 per Cents, —; Columbian, —; Russian Bonds, 111.

PRICES OF SHARES.—Birmingham and Derby, 63 to —; Scarborough Branch —; Birmingham and Gloucester, 91 to 92; Bristol and Exeter, 91 to 92, Eastern Counties, registered, 13¾ —; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 66 to 67; Great North of England, 101 to 10½; Great Western, 132 to 133, Hull and Selby, 89 to 90; London and Brighton, 67¾; London and Blackwall, 7¾; Greenwich, 7¾; Croydon, 19¾ to 19; London and Birmingham Stock, 219, Manchester and Leeds, 105 to 107; Manchester and Birmingham, 89¾ to 89, South Western, 86 to 87, Midland Counties, 93¾, North Midland, —; Newcastle and Darlington, 49¾; Northern and Eastern, 97¾; Paris and Rouen, 38¾; Paris and Orleans, 38¾, South Eastern and Dover, 25; Lord and Norwich, —; Eastern Counties, —; Guildford Junction, —; Shrewsbury and Carlisle, 6¾ to —; Chester and Holyhead, 6; North British, 2¾; Strasburg and Basle, —; Rouen and Havre 12½; Caledonian, —; Ferry Bridge, —; Yarmouth and Norwich, 22; Bristol and Gloucester, 47¾ to —; Liverpool and Manchester —, Glasgow and Dumfries, —; York and North Mid and, 1 8 to 19?. Guildford Junction —; Norwich and Brandon, 7¾; Grand Junction, 234; Trent Valley, 8, Carlisle Dumfries, and Glasgow, — to

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 11.

FOREIGN-OFFICE, JUNE 11.—It is hereby notified, that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have received a despatch, dated the 18th of May last, from Sir Charles Adam, K.C.B., Rear-Admiral of the Blue, and Commander-in-Chief of her Majesty's ships and vessels on the North American and West India station and the seas adjacent, stating, that, in virtue of authority only conferred upon him, he had declared a blockade of the port and Island de Savanilla, in the province of Carthagena, and the same was on the 30th March last. It is further notified, that the measures sanctioned by the law of nations will be adopted and put in force with respect to all vessels and cargoes attempting to violate the said blockade.

BANKRUPTS.—J HEWARD, Hendon, Middlesex, hay salesman and farmer. D. ROSS, Leadenhall-street, City, wholesaleman and agent. H. LAKE, Cheltenham, printer and bookseller. J. DEALTRY, Burslem, Staffordshire, potter and shopkeeper. G. ENGLE Wine and Absom, Gloucestershire, miller. F. RUGELS, Cookroe, Northamptonshire, miller and beer housekeeper.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14.

WAR OFFICE, JUNE 14.—1st Dragoon Guards: M. Fenwick to be Cornet, vice Thompson. 11th light Dragoons. Lieut. E. V Mackinnon to be Lieutenant, vice Corcoran.

15th Regiment of Foot: Captain W. Fulton to be Captain, vice Dickinson. Lieutenant Captain J Ramsay to be Captain, vice Powell 30th: Captain W. F. Hoey to be Captain, vice Hutchinson. 31st: Lieut. and Captain J. Parker, of the Rifle Brigade, to be Captain, vice Fulton, who retires. W. G. F. Copland to be Ensign, by purchase, vice Porter. 47th: Lieut. H. M. Hamilton to be Lieutenant, vice Brought. 49th. Capt. C. T. Powell to be Captain, vice Ramsay 89th. Capt. R. B. F. Hamilton, from half pay, to be Captain, vice Fulton. Capt Lieut. G. P. Draught to be Lieutenant, vice Hamilton. 97th: Lieut. F. S. Corrance to be Lieutenant, vice Mackinnon.

3 West India Regiment. Ensign A W. Joyce to be Lieutenant, vice Decker, Regimental Quartermaster Lawless to be Ensign, vice Joyce.

3d West India Regiment. Lieut. E. S. Glen to be Captain, vice Berwick; E. A M'Taggard to be Lieutenant, vice Glen.

86. Hospital Staff.—Assistant-Surgeon C. H. Marchbank, from 30th Foot, to be Captain, vice Hoey, who exchanges

Memorandum.—For Promotions in the Gazette of the 7th instant, in the 86th Regiment of Foot, read 92d Regiment of Foot.

BATTALION OF ORDNANCE, JUNE 11.—Royal Regiment of Artillery—Second Capt. C. M. Rayner, to be First Lieutenant, vice Macartney, Second Lieutenant G. H. L. Mitman to be First Lieutenant, vice Wilkin

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.—S. WILCOCKSON, linen draper, Chesterfield, Derbyshire.

BANKRUPTS - D. MACFARLANE, wine merchant, Berners-street, Oxford-street. A. THOMPSON, grocer, Southampton. H. WOOD, woollen factor, Bauughall-street. E. BINGHAM, tailor, woollen draper, Bunningham. R. JOHNSON, sen., W. JOHNSON, and C. MANN, bankers, Romford, Essex. J. TAYLOR, commission merchant, Liverpool.

BIRTHS.

At Carmarthen, the w. of the Rev. R. Thomas, Master of Bancroft's Hospital, of a son.—At Plaistow, Essex, the lady of John Lenox, Esq., of a daughter.—In Clifford street, the wife of T. A. Stone, Esq., of a daughter.—In Upper Harley street, the lady of Edmund Peyte, Esq., of a daughter.—At Wansford, Cape Coast Castle, the lady of Thomas Harper, Esq., of a son.—At Mount Ida, Cork, the lady of Thomas Hackett, Esq., of a daughter.—At the Manor house, Chigwell, the lady of Mrs. Hitchcock, of a son.—At Bath, the lady of Norman Macleod, Esq., of a daughter.—At Brick, near Halifax, the lady of Robert Stansfield, Esq., of a daughter.—At Lee, the lady of Augustus Bellairs, Esq., of Upper Holloway, of a son.—At Bideford, the lady of Andrew Johnson, Esq., of a daughter.—At Kilham-place, Foxley-road, North Brixton, the lady of John Bishop, Esq., of a son.—At 10, Carlton-villas, Maida vale, the lady of J. A. Bayley, Esq., of a daughter.—At St. Andrew's Penzance, the lady of Rear Admiral Forrest, Esq., of a daughter.—At Petersham Lodge, Surrey, the lady of Andrew Buchanan, Esq., late M. C. S., of a son.—At Chesham, the lady of Joseph Sa., of a son.—At the Manse of Auchterderran, the wife of the Rev. R. Seymour, of a son.—At Stockbridge, the lady of the Rev. John Hawkins, Esq., of Bignor park, Sussex.—At St. Mary's, Islington, John, 2nd son of Thomas Harper, Esq., Colonel of Devon Hedsington, N.B., to Ruth, 3rd daughter of the late Thomas Gould, Esq., of Blaith, West Indies.—At Corfu, Mr. Colvin, to the widow of the late J. Masterton, Esq.

DEATH

At Calcutta, John Bensley Thornhill, Esq., of the Hon. Company's Civil Service, in the 34th year of his age.—At Durham, Dr. G. A. Charnley, of Manchester.—Wm. Cotton, James Cricton, Esq., eldest son of Cronton, Esq., in the 30th year of his age.—Of inflammation of the lungs, Emma Dixon, Esq., 39, Bank-lane, aged 18.—James Durnal, Esq., of Canchburn, and late of 18, Cheapside, in the 63d year of his age. Harriot Ann, widow of the late John Dutty, Esq., of Ropley, Hants.—At Funchley, Essex, infant of Lieutenant-General Sarah, aged 70.—At her house in Upper street, Park lane, Maria, relict of the late Francis Julyell, Esq., of Henbury Hall, Cheshire, and second daughter of the late Sir W. Lemon, Bart. At the Neighbery Hill, Madras, in the 29th year of his age, Captain Augustus Frederick Codd, of her Majesty's 6d Regiment. At Bombay, Lieutenant F F. Outram, of the Madras Sappers and Miners.—At Paris, in the Rue d'Anjou St. Honore, George rigott, Bart., of Kaupton, Queen's County, and Innisannon, county of Cork —At Mans, the Rev. James Ward, A.M., late Fellow of New College.—At Dalston Lieutenant-Colonel Robert Frederick, of Corsham, Wilts, aged 70.—Suddenly, at Kensington, Mr. Israel Piper, aged 67.—At Corfu, Sarah, wife of Mr. Rud, merchant.—At Stanley's Farm, Poyle, Bucks, aged 73, the Rev. George Nowell Watkins, perpetual curate of Long Sutton, in the same county.

H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT LAYING THE FIRST STONE OF THE NEW HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION, ETC., FULHAM ROAD.

THE HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST.

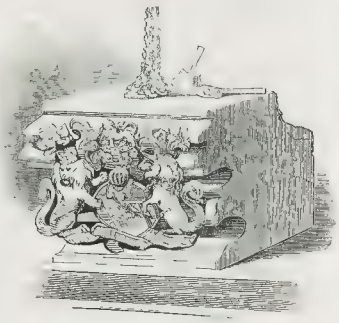
On Tuesday, his Royal Highness Prince Albert laid the foundation stone of a new building for this excellent charity, whose temporary hospital and asylum, with garden and grounds, are situate near the Royal College at Chelsea; the out-patient branch being in Great Marlborough-street. The hospital has only been in operation since September last; but to such an extent prevail the diseases for the cure of which it has been established, that already a large building is indispensable for the in-patients; whilst the out-patients crowd in such numbers for advice and medicines, that it is difficult even to find them shelter during the period of their attendance. To meet these exigencies, the institution has been patronised by her Majesty, and numbers in its official list some of the leading professional skill of the metropolis.

The site of the new hospital is at the north side of the Fulham-road, a little west of Pelham-crescent, a locality long recommended by the profession for consumptive patients. The interest excited by the ceremonial of Tuesday was very considerable, and the preparations were in good taste. For the accommodation of the company who were invited by the Committee, a splendid pavilion of striped crimson and white had been erected, this being the same pavilion that was used at the laying of the foundation-stone of the Royal Exchange. This part of the arrangements was under the superintendence of Mr. B. Edgington, Duke-street, Southwark, who also attended to fire the salutes at the arrival and departure of his Royal Highness Prince Albert. Within the pavilion was a raised platform of three steps; and the foundation-stone, of which we annex a representation, was richly sculptured with the royal arms. Prince Albert had arranged to be at the ground at one o'clock, and long before that hour numbers of persons had collected on the road and round the site of the building, for the purpose of seeing his Royal Highness, who arrived nearly a quarter of an hour before he was expected. The Prince came on horseback, attended by Mr. Anson, and alighted at the gate of the reception-tent, into which he was conducted by the Building Committee. The arrival of his Royal Highness was announced by a salute from cannon stationed on the ground, and a military band played "Rule Britannia." A procession was then formed from the reception-tent to the pavilion, and moved along the covered platform in the following order:—

The Chairman of the Building Committee.
The Building Committee in Pairs.
The Architect (Frederick J. Francis, Esq.,) bearing the trowel.
The Medical Officers.
The Treasurer, bearing the coins.
The Honorary Secretary, P. Rose, Esq., bearing the scrolls.
The Chaplain, the Rev. W. H. Howard, M.A.
The clergy in full canonicals.
The Right Reverend the Bishop of Worcester.
His Royal Highness Prince Albert
Supported by the President, the Vice Presidents, the Nobility, the Committee of Management, and the Builder bearing the plans.

When the Prince entered the pavilion, he was received with loud cheering, the band played the national anthem, and the royal standard was hoisted. A chair of state was placed on the platform for Prince Albert, near to the stone, which was raised aloft, supported by chains; but his Royal Highness did not sit down during the whole ceremony. The President of the Institution, after presenting some of the officers of the charity, addressed the Prince shortly on its nature and objects. The Lord Bishop of Worcester then offered a prayer on behalf of the institution, which was responded to by a number of charity-children, placed outside the pavilion, one side of which was drawn up, to enable a number of spectators within the enclosure to have a full view of the proceedings. A glass bottle was then placed upon the stone, into which the scrolls, after having been read, were placed by the Prince, who also placed with it coins of the present reign; and after having fixed on the glass stopper, he deposited the bottle and its contents in a cavity in the lower stone made for its reception. The builder then sprinkled water on the lower stone, and applied mortar on it, when a superb silver-gilt trowel was presented to his Royal Highness, who spread the mortar over the stone with the dexterity and care of one of the "craft." The stone was then gradually lowered into its place, and a mallet, with a suitable inscription, having been handed to the Prince, he gave the stone several blows with the instrument; and the cheers of the company, the report of the cannon, and the music of the band proclaimed that the work was done. Three small silver cups, containing oil, wine, and corn, the emblems of plenty, were subsequently handed to his Royal Highness, who poured them on the stone. The Bishop of Worcester advanced, and asked a blessing on the institution, and the children sang a hymn; after which, a copy of one of the scrolls previously placed in the bottle was signed by Prince Albert, the nobility and clergy present, and the members of the committee, most of whom contributed at the same time to the building-fund.

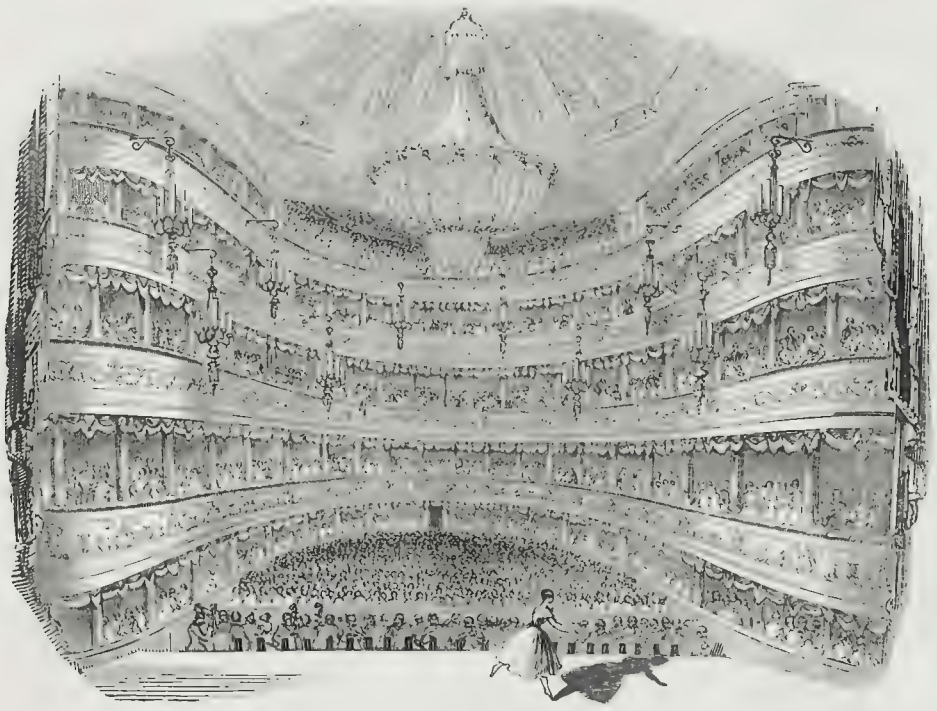
Amongst the distinguished persons in the pavilion were—The Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Harewood, Lord Eldon, Lord Howard, Lord Colborne, Lord Galloway, Lord Feversham, Lord Ernest Bruce, H. T. Liddell, Esq., D. Cotton, Esq., the Rev. W. Y. Irons, Rev. Chas. Kemble, &c,



THE FOUNDATION-STONE.

The entire ceremony was impressively performed, and the Prince, by his affability to the officers of the charity, won "golden opinions." His Royal Highness left the pavilion amidst loud cheers; and preceded by the Committee with their wands of office, the Prince having mounted his horse, repaired at a walking pace to the Bazaar, held at Chelsea Hospital, in aid of the funds for the proposed building; his Royal Highness passing down Smith-street, accompanied by the members of the Committee on foot. On his arrival at the College, the Prince dismounted, and walked round the range of tents in which the stands were placed, at each of which he purchased some article from the noble and fashionable patronesses who were in attendance, viz.—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duchess of Norfolk, Ladies E. Bruce, J. Russell, H. Paget, Grosvenor, the Dowager Lady Ashburton, Ladies Aylmer, Hamilton, Williams, E. Berkeley, &c., &c. The bands of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue), of the Fusilier Guards, and of the boys of the Military School, were in attendance, and played some popular airs as the company promenaded. The Prince left after a short visit.

THE FANCY BAZAAR, AT THE ROYAL HOSPITAL CHELSEA.



INTERIOR OF HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE, ON SATURDAY EVENING LAST.

The "fair" was held in the principal court of the Hospital; and the general arrangement of the tents is shown in our engraving. The company had the privilege of promenading in the Hospital gardens reaching to the river terrace, as well as in the grounds of Old Ranelagh. The attendance of persons of fashion was very numerous, and carriages continued to set down from the opening of the Bazaar to its close for the day; and the price of admission, the sum obtained for entrance money alone, will form a considerable fund for the charity. Among the more intellectual inducements were several printed copies of a tale, written by Mrs. S. C. Hall, the profits from the sale of which are to be appropriated to the building fund.

Of the superstructure of the Hospital, an engraving will be found in No. 98 of our journal: it will be a handsome structure, in the Tudor style, faced with red and blue bricks in patterns, and having Caen stone dressings.

MR. JOHN PARRY.

None but himself can be his parallel.

Thus we exclaimed coming out of the Hanover-square Rooms on Friday evening last week, after enjoying one of the most delightful concerts we had ever been present at. The general programme was in itself highly attractive—including the most distinguished artistes of the day, but "glorious John" himself was the centre of attraction, to which every curiosity and anticipation of amusement converged. Of a verity he is a "rara avis," whose songs and the peculiar style in which they are given, remind us of those "carmina" of old that were "argutis plena jocis," but contained not a jot of offence in them after all. The new Historical Romance, "Fayre Rosamonde" A.D. 1164, written by Albert Smith, and Haynes Bayly's "Déjeuner à la Fourchette" were received with the usual enthusiasm that awaits upon everything John Parry undertakes, or rather performs. The rooms were filled by a numerous and fashionable company, who all retired highly delighted with the entertainment provided by their musical host.

Mr. John Parry is of Cambrian descent, being, we believe, the only son of an ancient Briton, of similar name, who has "done some service" to music and poetry both in the Saxon and his native measure. No man was ever more deservedly respected for ability and character than Mr. P. senior, and the junior has walked the same path with honour and success, under the forest of parental care. We may consider his début at Braham's theatre as the first indication of those powers which have been subsequently matured into a more style of buffo singing. At first he used to sing sentimental ballads to his own harp accompaniment, now he gives comic musical narratives and recitations at the pianoforte in a style of humour [illegible]. He is such an universal favourite that no private party is deemed perfect unless he can be induced to attend, and a performance of concert is looked forward to with more anxiety than that which brings the "buffo cantante" before the auditory. Independent of his musical and vocal powers, Mr. John Parry possesses considerable ability as an artiste in the comic school: some of his drawings are as quaint and humorous as his singing.

MR. ALBERT SMITH

This is a gentleman of "infinite mirth," whose satire is not gall and wormwood, but pleasantry is always accompanied by harmless strokes of the most acceptable and amusable kind. In the various productions of his pen which have appeared in different periodicals, "Bentley's Miscellany," &c., there is a quaintness of humour, but if the author did not affect so much wit, they would be more palatable to the general taste. Mr. Albert Smith's blemish is that he puns in thought more often than in expression; the consequence of which is that some of the clearest language frequently becomes subservient to the dull ideas (for the puns are dull things), and while we admire the possession of intellectual power, we deplore its misapplication; since he can do better things. Mr. Smith has written some of Mr. Parry's most successful songs, and we have, accordingly, associated the above portraits.

HER MAJESTY, WITH HER ROYAL GUESTS, AT THE OPERA LAST SATURDAY.

Mirabile visu.

One of the most splendid sights that human magnificence could present to the eye was to be seen at Her Majesty's Theatre on this occasion. The presence of our gracious Sovereign and Consort Prince alone has often shed a lustre upon this aristocratic and noble salle, but, appearing as they did, attended by two such stars, or rather comets, as his Imperial Highness the Emperor of Russia, and his Majesty, with their respective trains of light, the spectacle was brilliant—nay, dazzling in the extreme. No theatre in the world could afford such a coup d'œil of majesty, nobility, beauty, rank—fashion—wealth—power—in short, all that can make a nation great or interesting, as was to be seen and wondered at on last Saturday night at the Opera.

At the end of the first act the National Anthem was sung with admirable effect; for then a beloved sovereign was receiving the heart-felt homage of her people, and the potentates of other lands were congratulating her upon their sincere and ardent affection. Her Majesty looked extremely well. Afterwards followed the Russian National Hymn, which was admirably executed by the band. The house was crammed from the floor to the ceiling. The opera "Il Barbiere," and other entertainments, were but heedlessly attended to—his Imperial Majesty's eyes seeming to basilisk everybody. Lablache volunteered many equivoques and jokes, and was much applauded, even by the royal party! The Fairy (not Fanny) Cerito, was as fascinating as ever—or shall we say more so—? "O" (to quote Romeo's extacy and parody it a little,)

She doth teach the foot-lamps to burn bright.

The engraving represents the danseuse in the fascinating pas de l'ombre.

By the way, we pitied many anxious beings in those side boxes which are ingeniously contrived to enable the audience, or rather would-be spectators, to look at their vis-à-vis neighbours instead of the stage, and could not help thinking of the desire of Philoxenus, a philosopher, who wished to have the neck of a crane, that he might enjoy the taste of his aliment longer, and with more pleasure. They stretched, and stretched, and stretched, but they were as far from seeing the "grand sight" as they were from the centre of the earth. When will our theatrical architects gain a little knowledge of their business?

MR. ALBERT SMITH. MR. JOHN PARRY.

MUSIC.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

The sixth concert took place on Monday evening last, and was honoured by the presence of her Majesty, Prince Albert, and their illustrious guest, the King of Saxony, and a numerous suite. In the first part, were performed Beethoven's splendid symphony in C minor, Maurer's concertante for four violins, Bennett's overture, "Les Naïdes," and Schubert's "Pierebras." The second part consisted of the conductor's music, illustrative of Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and which received at the hands of the enthusiasm it met with on a former night. But we hope that it is not to be "tonjours perdrix," and that the directors think there are other great men in the world besides Dr. Mendelssohn.

Beethoven's symphony was admirably led by Mr. T. Cooke, and elicited much applause. Maurer's concertante is but a poor affair, and owes its effect to the masterly manner in which it was executed by Sivori, Willy, Blagrove, and Sainton. Bennett's overture is a very charming and poetical production, but Schubert's is the work of a man whose genius seems to be out of its element. Of Mendelssohn's now well known and admired music, we have spoken before; it was again admirably performed. The vocalists were Madame Castellan, Miss Rainforth, Miss A. Williams, and Signor Salvi.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Costa's new opera of "Don Carlos" will be positively produced on Thursday. We subjoin the argument:—

Philip the Second of Spain married Isabelle de Valois, the betrothed bride of his son, Don Carlos; the unreasonable state plea for this unnatural union being the recent a peace between France and England. Don Carlos, who had served with honour in Flanders, was recalled to the Spanish Court, under the pretence of entertaining hereditary opinions, but truly that the King's rapacious jealousy of his wife's passion for Carlos might be appeased by the state murder of his son. The bigoted court and potent Inquisition, laboured assiduously and craftily to increase the evil suspicions of the monarch. The early passion of Carlos gained fresh fuel from the continual presence of Isabelle. His friend, Count Posa, returns from the Low Countries, to find Carlos sunk in deep despondency; he counsels him to seek oblivion of his unhappy attachment in the glory of war and chivalrous enterprise, and consents to arrange a farewell meeting between the unhappy lovers. Carlos sees Isabelle, bids her adieu, and seeks preparations for his departure. In the meantime, Gomez, a familiar of Philip—the chief enemy of Carlos—steals, from the private cabinet of the Queen, a miniature likeness, the former gift of the Queen. This he returns to the King of confirmation of his wife's disloyalty. The Council is convoked, and the father pronounces the doom of death on his son! On hearing the fatal sentence, Don Carlos seizes the poniard from the King's girdle, and stabs himself. The Queen Isabelle is consigned to the gentle mercies of the Holy Inquisition.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements cannot be received after Seven o'clock on Thursday Evening.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS.—The Tenth Annual Exhibition is now open, at their Gallery, 53 Pall Mall, next the British Institution.—Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d. From nine till dusk.
JAMES FAHEY, Secretary

GRAND POLKA BALL.—Mrs. JAMES RAE has the honour to announce that her GRAND FANCY and FULL DRESS POLKA BALL will take place at the HANOVER SQUARE ROOMS, under the most distinguished patronage, on THURSDAY, the 20th inst. Tickets, 10s. 6d. each. To be had only of Mrs. JAMES RAE, 16, Manchester-square, where the names of the Ladies Patronesses may be ascertained.

ROSHERVILLE GARDENS, near GRAVESEND.—These Delightful and Romantic GARDENS are DAILY OPEN to the Public ADMISSION, SIXPENCE each. A full Military and Quadrille Band is in constant attendance, and the Dancing is conducted by Mr. Nailer, Master of the Ceremonies. Refreshments of every description, and of the best quality, both hot and cold, will be served under the direction of Mr. JEFFERSONS, of King William-street, London, at very moderate prices.—May 25, 1844.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—LONGBOTTOM'S PHYSIOSCOPE exhibits the human face, with its varied expressions, on a gigantic scale, curiously contrasted with the living man. The OPAQUE MICROSCOPE magnifies effectively a succession of WORKS of the FINE ARTS, also, casts of ANCIENT INSCRIPTIONS taken by Miss Wilson from the WALLS of the TOWER of LONDON, cut by Lord Guilford Dudley, and other State Prisoners. The DAILY POPULAR LECTURES abound in interesting experiments. ARMSTRONG'S HYDROELECTRIC MACHINE. DIVING BELL and DIVER. NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS, &c., &c. The Music is conducted by Mr. T. WALLS, Mus. Doc.—Admission, One Shilling. Schools, Half price.

CHINESE COLLECTION, Hyde-park-corner.—Open every Morning at Ten, and every Evening at Seven.—Addition of SPLENDID NOVELTIES.—The Illuminated Pagodas, Mandarin Boats, and Chinese stories in full light, and composed of Porcelain, superbly decorated and richly gilt. The construction of these buildings occupied nearly four years, at a cost of 10,000 dollars. During the present month of the FEAST OF LANTERNS, on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings, the Porcelain Pagodas of Nanaim will be brilliantly illuminated with Chinese lanterns, and new and appropriate Chinese Fireworks. Several Chinese Punishments will be exhibited with the usual brief, illustrative of CURIOUS CHINESE PUNISHMENTS. A new scene, representing the Golden Island in the Tang-tze Keang, has recently been added to the super b Chinese Pavilion. The novel spectacle of the Feast of Lanterns will be illustrated by the introduction of numerous popular Chinese and English airs, by part of Prince Albert's Military Band.—Admission One Shilling.—Each evening's entertainment will commence at Seven, and terminate at Ten o'clock.

GRAND FANCY FAIR and PROMENADE, in honour of her Most Gracious Majesty's Accession to the Throne, and in AID of the FUNDS of the SHEFFIELDFIELD FISH STREET AND HILL DISTRICT SOCIETY, will be held on THURSDAY, JUNE 20th, 1844 at LORD'S CRICKET GROUND, ST. JOHN'S WOOD (instead of at the Colosseum, as originally intended).

COMMITTEE.

Major-General Sir James Cockburn, Bart., G.C.B	J. G. Deane, Esq.	R. Howe Madderas, Esq.
Rear-Admiral Sykes.	Thomas Dyer, Esq.	Major Oliphant.
Henry Ware, Esq., H.C.S.	Captain Bentinck, R.I.C.S.	Benjamin Oliveira, Esq.
Captain Sir George A. Westphair, R.N.	William Pelgate, Esq.	F.S.S., F.S.A.
Captain Sir Thomas Herbert, K.N., K.C.B	James Perkins (Vice)	John Porter, Esq.
Arthur Anderson, Esq.	J. F. Griffith, Esq., H.C.S.	Lieut.-colonel James Rigmaiden, R.N
Rev. Thomas Rawson, D.D., F.R.S.	James Hall, Esq.	Hubert B. Roe, Esq.
J. G. Carpue, Esq., F.R.S.	Beaumont Hanley, Esq.	Captain R. Salmon.
	Joseph Hawkins, Esq., F.S.A.	Captain Shee, H.C.S.
	Rev. Thomas Harris,	Captain Shee, H.C.S.
	Captain R. M Isacke, H.C.S.	Captain M. H. Sweny, R.N.
	J. B. Lyon, Esq.	Lieutenant Vaghorn, R.N.

Many of the Noble Patronesses, together with other Ladies of distinction, have kindly consented to preside at the stalls, which will be erected in spacious and elegant marquees. Military and other Bands will be in attendance, and perform throughout the day.

Contributions of Useful and Ornamental Works, Drawings, Prints, Books, Music Autographs, Minerals, Fruit, Flowers, &c. &c. are respectfully solicited to be sent to any of the members of the Committee, or the Office of the Central Society; or, should it be more convenient for them to be so forwarded, a messenger will call on an intimation to the effect be given.

The Gates will be opened at Twelve. Tickets of Admission (One Shilling each person—Children and Schools half-price) to be procured of any member of the Committee; at the Grounds; or of EDWARD WEST, Secretary.

Office, 35, Bucklersbury, London, June 15, 1844.

 Ladies are requested to put a price on the articles they may kindly send.

BAKER'S PHEASANTRY, Beaufort-street, King's-road, Chelsea.—Gold, Silver, White, Pied, and Name Pheasants. A great variety of Ornamental Water Fowl, including Black Swans, Carolina Ducks, and Sandwich Island Geese, Cobs for Stocking. And 87, Half moon-passage, Gracechurch-street. Some pure China Pigs.

LOSS OF TEETH SUPPLIED, without Springs, Clasps or Wires. Loose Teeth Fastened, and Filling Decayed Teeth with Mineral Marine Cement.—MOSES LE DRAY and SON, SURGEON DENTISTS, 42, Berners-street, Oxford street, continue to restore Decayed Teeth with their celebrated Mineta. Marmoratum applied without pain, rendering sponging and cutting the gums unnecessary, and rendering the operation of extraction unnecessary. They also Fasten Loose Teeth, whether arising from age or neglect, the use of caustic, or the cutting of the gums. Incorrodible Artificial or Natural Teeth, of surpassing beauty, to match in colour and shape those left in the mouth, fixed, from one to a complete set, without extracting the roots, or giving any pain, at the following charges:—A single tooth, 5s.; a set, 40s. Arranged on the most approved principles, and restoring perfect articulation and mastication. At home from Ten till Six. N.B. Removed from 60, Berners-street, to 42, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

ROYAL, FARMERS' and GENERAL FIRE, LIFE, and HAIL-STORM INSURANCE INSTITUTION.
Empowered by Special Act of Parliament. Capital, £500,000, OFFICES, STRAND, LONDON.

Duke of Rutland, K.G.	Earl Howe	Viscount Campden
Duke of Bedford	Earl of Strafbrake	Lord Wenlock
Earl of Stamford and Warrington	Viscount Torrington	Lord Feversham
Earl of Stair		Lord Stanley, M.P.

And 76 other Members of Parliament and Gentlemen.
HAIL STORM DEPARTMENT.
ADVANTAGES OF INSURING IN THIS OFFICE

An actually subscribed Capital of £500,000, secured by 1,933 shareholders, whose names and addresses are enrolled according to Act of Parliament.

Insurances effected on the most favourable terms.

Duration of profits amongst the insured every third year.

All losses, whether total or partial, paid in full, as soon after the occurrence as the value can be completed.

No average clause, so that the sufferer will be certain of receiving the full amount of his loss, to be settled as in the case of loss by fire.

Premium Sixpence per acre for Wheat, Barley, and Peas; Fourpence for Oats, Beans, Turnips, and Potatoes.

Glass in hothouses, greenhouses, or private houses, 25s. per cent.

The surplus profits, after paying an annual dividend of 5 per cent. to the shareholders, and providing for a reserved fund, will be divided every third year between the shareholders and the insured.

Detailed Prospectuses may be obtained at the office, or will be forwarded, post free, upon application.

The usual commission to Solicitors.

Agents are appointed in all the Principal Towns in the Kingdom

W. SHAW, Managing Director.

This day is Published, in 8vo., price 4s.,
THE COURT AT RAVENNA; a Comedy, in Five Acts.
By the Author of "The Robbers a Cave"
G. W. NICHOLSON, 215, Regent-street, London.

THE REDOWA POLKA, Danced by Mdlle. Cerito and M. St. Leon, at her Majesty's Theatre.—Just published, the charming Music of this favourite Polka, arranged for the Pianoforte, solo, price 2s.; duet, 2s. 6d.—"The newest importation of Polkas"—Athenæum, June 1.—"The music of the Redowa Polka is immeasurably the most graceful and characteristic."—Britannia.—"The Redowa is unquestionably the best of Polkas."—Times, May 24.—London: CHAPPELL, 99, New Bond-Street.

THE LUNGS and HEART.—Dr. MADDOCK, of the Dispensary, Judd street, Brunswick square, has just published, price 3s. 6d., with coloured plates, a Treatise on the Diseases of the Inhalatory and Circulatory Organs—Consumption Asthma, Bronchitis, Chronic Cough, and Affections of the Heart. The remedies employed and the best mode of using them are fully explained, and made intelligible to the general reader.—Sherwin and Marshall.—Dr. M. may be consulted before twelve, noon, and after six in the evening.

THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.—Three New SONGS, illustrative of "Faith," "Hope," and "Charity." Poetry by Rev. J. R. WREFORD and C. JEFFERIES. Music by STEPHEN GLOVER.
"These songs are excellent alike in Poetry, Music, and Illustration; while the musician must be delighted with their simplicity, the lover of poetry will feel the charm of their melodies. 'Charity is our especial favourite.'—Musical World.—Post free, 2s. each, of JEFFERIES, 21, Soho-square.

Just Published, price One Shilling, gilt edges,
NURSERY DITTIES, from the Lips of Mrs. LULLABY, with Illustrations by Leech.
THE PEACOCK AT HOME; 22nd Edition, with the BUTTERFLY'S BALL, by ROSCOE, and the FANCY FAIR. Price One Shilling, with coloured plates. London: Grant and Griffith (Successors to J. Harris), Original Juvenile Library Corner of St. Paul's Church yard.

THE ONLY ENGLISH EDITION AUTHORISED BY M. EUGENE SUE.
To be continued weekly, price 6d., No. 3, of a new and splendid Edition of the MYSTERIES of PARIS, adapted to the English Reader.
Illustrated with upwards of 700 Engravings on Wood of all the Characters, Scenes, Costumes, and Localities mentioned in this extraordinary work, executed expressly for this edition by the first Artists in Paris. Under the superintendence of Mr. CHARLES HEATH.
London: WM. S. ORR and CO., Amen corner, Paternoster-row.

A NEW WORK FOR LADIES. In 2 handsome volumes, with 400 Illustrations, price 18s.—THE GARDENER'S AND PRACTICAL FLORIST, containing a description of 400 Flowers and Shrubs, with plain directions for their culture and management; also, a series of Original Papers affording the proprietors and professors of each Flower, and 200 Articles explain ng every subject connected with the management of Gardens, Greenhouses, and Conservatories
R. GROOMBRIDGE, 5, Paternoster-row; and all Booksellers.

On the 29th instant will be published,
CHAMBERS' EDINBURGH JOURNAL; the First Volume of the New Series, price 6d. Handsomely bound in Embossed Cloth, specially designed for the work. The Volume will contain about 250 distinct Articles of an entertaining and instructive kind, and will form a handsome and portable Library Volume every half year.
London: WM. S. ORR and Co., Amen corner, Paternoster-row.

THE Afflicted with RHEUMATIC PAINS, Weakness in the Limbs, Joints, &c., also a read Mr CARBURN'S PAMPHLET, which will be sent to any part of the kingdom (free) on receipt of a letter, enclosing 1 post office order being addressed to Mr. Carburn's Dispensary, King's-cross, London, wherein indisputable proofs are adduced that for a few shillings, or even a few pounds, in some cases, a fortune from pain may be quickly effected, and, in a short period, a perfect restoration. Persons about to take the benefit of the Sea Air, &c., should read it, as their bodily health and strength, should pursue this pamphlet, it being the third n dition of 100,000.

HAND-BOOK FOR WALES
PANORAMA of the BEAUTIES, CURIOSITIES, and ANTIQUITIES of NORTH WALES, exhibited in the Mountains, Valley, Waterfalls, Lakes, Cities and Towns, Cast es, Ruins, &c., intended as a Pocket Companion to the Tourist and Traveller. By J. HESKINGWAY, Author of "The History of Chester," &c., and late Editor of the Hooker Chronicle. Second Edition, with Maps and Engravings.
London, R. GROOMBRIDGE, SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co; HAMILTON, ADAMS, and Co., LONGMAN and Co.; and H. HUGHES. Derbert: W. CURRY, Jun., and Co. Chester: BRACKNELL and PRICHARD.

Price 1s., the People's Edition of CONSTIPATION DESTROYED, or Exposition of a NATURAL, SIMPLE, AGREEABLE, and INFALLIBLE MEANS not solely of OVERCOMING, but also of completely destroying habitual Constipation, without using either purgatives or clysters; recently made in France, by M. WATTEL, Physician, followed by numerous certificates from eminent Physicians, and other persons of distinction. The same Edition, by the post, is 6d. Large Edition, 6d., or free by the post, 1s. 6d. Sold by JAMES YOUNG, and Co., Tavistock-st., Covent-garden, London, and by all Booksellers in the United Kingdom.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO THE ISLE OF WIGHT.
Embellished with Engravings.
A NEW GUIDE to the ISLE of WIGHT, viâ Southampton, giving a Sketch of all important Places and Objects on the Line of Railway, Southampton Water, and Solent, with a full and accurate description, Historical, Antiquarian, Geological, and Picturesque, of the Whole Island, to which is added Outlines of Town and Country Walks, and Excursions to Places in the Vicinity. By ALFRED WHITEHEAD. With a Map and Illustrations. Price 2s. 6d., cloth, gilt edges.
H. G. BOHN, 4, York-street, Covent-garden.

DR. CULVERWELL'S "GUIDE TO HEALTH AND LONG LIFE."
Elegant pocket edition, with Engravings, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 6d.
WHAT TO EAT—WHAT TO DRINK—HOW TO DIET.—WHAT CAUSES Indigestion, Flatulency, Acidity, Heartburn, and Nervousness; and suggestions for the General Conduct of Life; whereby Immunity from Disease may be secured, and a healthy and happy Old Age attained.

"Oh! that this too, too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew,
Or that the eternal world had not prescribed
Its canon 'gainst self-slaughter!"—SHAKSPEARE.

Or be with ease satisfied, not brutally pinch'd."—MILTON.
SHERWOOD, 23, Paternoster-row; and 21, Strand; and all Booksellers.

TO RAILWAY TRAVELLERS.—Listen! The Rai way Bell now Ringing

TRUNKS AND BRANCHES of all the RAILWAY LINES, stamped and unstamped RAILWAY BELLS AND ADVERTISERS.—On and after the 1st of July will commence the most complete and extensive List of Time Tables, Fares, and Stations, of every Railway in England, Ireland, and Scotland, now completed, and will be published, Supplied exclusively by the Managing Directors, Secretaries, and other Officers connected with the various Companies, instant by will. Railway Readings, Pressure and Excursion Guides, Route Lists, Extracts from Books worth reading, droll things for tea parsonages, and a variety of useful and pleasant matter adapted for your journey. Sixteen Pages, Royal 4to. Price Twopence Stamped Edition, Tuppence. Office, 1, Catherine-street Strand.

IRRIGATION.—FIVE ORIGINAL COLOURED PLANS of IRRIGATED MEADOWS, ILLUSTRATIVE of Mr. J. HARDING'S SYSTEM of IRRIGATION, and Descriptions to each, drawn in "The Farmer's Magazine" for June with contains upwards of thirty articles on Practical Farming and Grazing by the most experienced agriculturists of the day. A Highly Finished Steel Engraving of PIUS EXHIBITED BY HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT, at the Smithfield Cattle Show, with Horticultural Calendar, and a Review of the Corn Trade, &c. &c.
The Agricultural Tour of Mr. Loudon (from the United States) is continued, and embraces the following subjects:—English Capitol, Appearance of the Country, Hedges and Enclosures, Trees and Shrubs, Farm Buildings, Agricultural Societies and Shows, Gardens and Flowers, Climate of England, Agricultural Population.—Office, 24, Norfolk street.

WORKS PUBLISHED BY W. S ORR AND CO

GREECE, PICTORIAL, DESCRIPTIVE, AND HISTORICAL, by CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, D.D., Head Master, Harrow Price 2 Guineas and a Half; Morocco, 3 Guineas.

II.
TRAITS and STORIES of THE IRISH PEASANTRY. By WILLIAM CARLETON. With an Autobiographical Introduction, Illustrative Notes, and Original Illustrations on Wood. Complete in Two Volumes, Post 8vo., cloth, 20s.; cloth, lettered.

III.
PICTORIAL HISTORY of FRANCE, From the Establishment of the Franks in Gaul to the period of the French Revolution, by G. M. BUSSEY and THOMAS GARPEY—enriched with 400 Designs on Wood, by Jules David. 2 vols. super royal 8vo., price 30s.

IV.
THE ILLUSTRATED SHAKSPERE (TYAS'S). The text revised from the best authorities. A Memoir and Essay on Shakspere's Genius. By BARRY CORNWALL. Introductory Remarks on each Play by some distinguished writer with beautiful characteristic Designs on Wood, by Kenny Meadows. In 3 vols., imperial 8vo. Price £3 3s. cloth.

V.
IRELAND, BEFORE and AFTER the UNION WITH GREAT BRITAIN. By R. MONTGOMERY MARTIN, Esq. Price 10s. 6d., cloth, lettered.
Amen Corner, Paternoster Row

SUPERIOR FRENCH BEDDING.—HEAL and SON'S MATTRESSES, of pure wool and horse-hair, are quite equal to the best that are made in Paris; and they having been the original introducers of French Mattresses, have paid great attention to their manufacture; also Spring Mattresses, combining the utmost elasticity with the greatest durability. Also their Improved Bedsteads, which fold exclusively for the manufacture and sale of bedding (no bedstead or other furniture being kept), they are enabled to offer their goods at the same trade as the very best farm.—HEAL and SON'S Bedding Factory, 196, Tottenham-court-road, opposite the Chapel.

CROMER, NORFOLK.—The most quiet, healthy, and delightful Watering Place, the surprise and admiration of all the families of distinction, and of those Ladies and Gentlemen who have visited it from its peculiar position and locality to the sea, and which is now be utiful and picturesque country which surrounds it naturally; can now offer to Visitors, for their reception and comfort, THE HOTEL DE PARIS, formerly the marine residence of the late Right Hon. Lord Suffield, which fronts the sea, and is only a very short distance from it, commanding at one view a vast expanse of the German Ocean, the Cliffs, the Cliffs and Lighthouse, with a fine and beautiful Beach. This property has been purchased by Mr. Edward Reppings of Swaffham, who has made very extensive additions and improvements, under the superintendence of an eminent Builder, and it is now in truth one of the most delightful retreats for the invalid, the valetudinarian, or the healthful visitor. The Hotel is conducted by Mrs. Garthan a daughter of the late respected Mr. Tuckey, and those visitors who may honour it with their patronage, may rely upon every attention being paid to merit their future support Continental Gentlemen will also find upon trial that their peculiar convenances has not been disregarded; they will have a private room devoted to their use, and every attention paid to their commercial pursuits and personal comfort. This marine establishment will be conducted on liberal principles. The Posting and Livery Stables by James Gray, a respectable resident. Hot and cold Baths, careful Guides and Attendants for open Sea Bathing and Sailing Excursions.

"LA SYLPHIDE" PARASOL can be closed instantaneously, wi hout moving either hand. W. and J. SANGSTER beg to inform the public that they have obtained Her Majesty's Letters Patent for the above invention, which from its utility and simplicity is expected to be generally adopted in preference to that inconvenient method hitherto in use. The extensive orders already received for "La Sylphide" have enabled the patentees to submit it to the public without any additional charge.—W and J. SANGSTER, Patentees, 140, Regent street

CUSTARDS WITHOUT TROUBLE. Neither Sugar nor Eggs are required with ORRIDGE'S CUSTARD POWDER; the addition of boiling Milk is all that is necessary to produce Custards of the most delicious flavour, for more wholesome and economical than those prepared by the old process, and not to be surpassed as richness. A more perfect article is impossible. Prepared by ORRIDGE, Chemist to the Queen, Broadway, Deptford, in boxes, 1s., 2s., and 5s. each; and also by EDWARDS, 67, St. Paul's Churchyard; and all Chem sts

PATENT BRANDY?—Important Distinction.—The pure and wholesome Spirit, of which we are Sole Proprietors, is BRETT'S IMPROVED BRITISH COGNAC, warranted NOT PATENT, whereas, if there be in fact such an article as "Patent Brandy," it is evidently NOT IMPROVED! An Imperial Gallon, of the best sort, will be forwarded to order for 18s., or a sample bottle for 1s. in stamps, to any part of the sovereign. Genuine samples may be had, or freely tasted, at our Counting house.
HENRY BRETT and Co., 64, Farringdon-st., Holborn-bars.

CORNS and BUNIONS.—PAUL'S EVERY MAN'S FRIEND is a speedy and sure cure for those painful annoyances, without cutting or pain. It is a luxury to the tenderest feet, acting on the Corn with the most gentle pressure, producing a delightful relief, and entirely eradicating both Corns and Bunions. Prepared by John Paul, in boxes, at 1s. 1½d., or, three in one, for 2s. 9d., and to be had of C. KING, No. 7, Napier-street, East, Hoxton, and all wholesale and retail medicine vendors in town and country. The genuine has the name of John Paul on the Government Stamp. A 2s. 9d. box cures the most obdurate Corns.—Ask for Paul's Every Man's Friend.

NEW PATENTS.—BROCKEDON'S IMPROVED STOPPERS.—This important Invention, a Substitute for Corks and Bungs, has, by new and Great Improvements, become a pure, impermeable, and perfect mean of preserving, for any length of time, Wine, Beer, Spirits, &c. They are cheap and easily applied, and the appearance which they now have of fine Cork has removed the prejudice against their former dark colour. Also, DECANTER STOPPERS, for Wine, the shape which is in daily use in perfect condition.—C. MACINTOSH and Co., 19, Walbrook, London, and 72, York-street, Manchester.

A LUXURY FOR WARM WEATHER.
BERDOE'S SUPERIOR LIGHT SUMMER FROCKS, WATERPROOF.—An extensive variety of the above in NEW and greatly improved materials (in lieu of the unsightly rubbish made by Cheap Tailors), now ready, guaranteed to exclude any rain whatever, and confidently recommended to those who regard a respectable appearance, or wish to avoid disappointment and vexation. BERDOE'S CLOTHING of every description, upon the lowest terms possible, consistent with true economy and ultimate satisfaction.
W. BERDOE, TAILOR, WATERPROOFER, &c., 69, CORNHILL (north side.)

DINNER SERVICES, TABLE-GLASS, &c.—SANDER and CO., 319 and 320, Holborn (corner of Southampton Buildings, and opposite Gray's-inn-gate), have constantly on view the largest stock in London of Table glass (plain and cut), Dinner, Dessert Breakfast and Tea Services and Toilet Sets in China, Ironstone, and Earthenware Ornamental China, Papier Maché and Iron Tea Trays, Chandeliers, Lustres, Argand, Solar, and Table Lamps, Hall lanterns, Stained or pain Alabaster Vases, Vases, &c. Parties favouring this establishment with a visit, will obtain every information relative to prices, and will not be importuned to make purchases. Goods delivered in town and at the docks carriage free.

SUPERIOR SATIN NOTE PAPER, 6s. 3d. per ream, the full 5th size: good useful Bath note, 5s. per ream; thinner, ditto, five quires for 1s.; Queen's note, from 6d. the quarire ream, black-bordered crape ops, is per hundred; made of the finest Irish linen, 2s. 6d. Black-bordered Sets, note paper, envelopes, and French gum wafers, 2s. per box; the best satin envelopes, all sizes, 1s. per hundred; prayer books from 1s. each, bibles, from 1s. 6d. each; testaments, 10½d. each, and an immense variety of bibles, prayer books, church services, &c., in every variety of plain and ornamented bindings may be had of BRADDON, STATIONER, Booksellers, and Publishers, 87, New Bond street, corner of Oxford street.

ISLINGTON AND PENTONVILLE.
DIX and BRISTOW beg respectfully to call the attention of the friends of the above to their extensive and fashionable stock of SUMMER DRESSES, SILKS, and SHAWLS, &c., which, for cheapness and variety, will be found, on inspection, equal to any house in London. A large assortment of Muslin Dresses, for the present and fast colours, from 1s. 3d. each; Balzarines, from 2s. 6d., De Lanes, Casimeres, and Paisantans, at unusually low prices. Also a good plain and fancy Silk from 1s. 6d. per yard; a Rich Brocade Lyonese Silk, 4s. 6d. Black Gros from 3s. 6d. Cashmere Shawls, full size, from 10s. 6d. each. A great variety of Barege and other Shawls, from 4s. 6d. Parasols of every description and price.
Pentonville House, 2 Il gh-street, Islington.

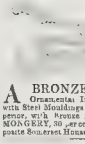
CITY of LONDON FASHIONABLE TAILORING ESTABLISHMENT, 76, King William street, London bridge. Messrs BURGH and LINDSAY, (late J. Allen), have respectfully to inform the nobility and gentry and families to view the largest and best-assorted Stocks in London of superfine cloths, casimeres, and waistcoatings of the most town and country patterns, trousers, vests, &c., for the present season. The style of cut and make of every garment are guaranteed equal to the first and most expensive houses at the West End, and for Cash payment, a saving of 40 per cent will be effected, and will be found the cheapest, as well as the most economical establishment made up by pulling shoppers and hunters at prices to astonish and delude the public. Also a large assortment of goods entirely manufactured from the Establishment for assortment of light Summer Over Coats kept ready made.—62, King William-street, City. Established 1818.

SCHWEPPE'S SODA and POTASS WATERS, constantly supplied to the Royal Palaces at Windsor and London, as well as by the principal Nobility and Gentry of the United Kingdom, and recommended by all the leading medical profession, continues to be manufactured on the same principles by J. B. and Co., aided by the powerful machinery, and the valuable experience of half a century. Every bottle has its due proportion of alkali, which is rarely, if ever, the case with the inferior waters. To prevent counterfeits, the Label, with their signature on one side, without which none is genuine. Schweppe's Liquid Magnesia, to supersede the use of magnesia in its use of Liquor, containing a high proportion of magnesia is greatly recommended by the faculty as a most valuable anti-acid. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors, in bottles at 1s., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 10s each. Every genuine bottle is distinguished by a label,—J. B. and Co., Dorset-street, London; and also at their branch manufactories at Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby

IMPORTANT to FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A consignment can be effected on the purchase of furnishing ironmongery, by visiting the PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS, 36, Baker street, Portman square, where may be inspected the most extensive STOCK of IRONMONGERY GOODS in the Kingdom, consisting of fenders, fire-irons, cooking utensils, German silver wares, drawing room stoves, shower and vapour baths, ornamental iron work, garden implements, japanned water cans and toilette ps, best sheffield plates, kitchen ranges, fenders and fire-irons, ornamental wire work, flower-stands, table cutlery, &c. Every article being marked in plain figures, at the lowest possible price, will, fully convince purchasers at this establishment of the great advantage resulting from Cash payments, as the Proprietors sell every article of the very best manufacture, at a saving of a least 30 per cent.—THORPE FALLOWS, and CO., 36, Baker-street, Portman square. A liberal allowance to merchants and shipowners.

METCALFE'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH BRUSH and SMYRNA SPONGES.—The Tooth Brush has the important advantages of searching thoroughly into the crevices of the teeth and cleaning them in the most effectual and expeditious manner, and is famous for the fine quality of its bristles. An improved Clothes Brush, that cleans in a third part of the usual time, and incapable of injuring the finest nap. Penetrating Hair Brushes, with the improved Round Bone handle, which does not soften like common hair. Flesh Brushes, of improved graduated and perforated Bone. Velvet Brushes, which act in the most surprising and successful manner. The genuine Smyrna Sponges, with their fine and delicate fibre, unrivalled for absorption, quality, and durability, by means of direct importations, dispensing with all intermediate parties, profits, and charges. Observe the only warehouse for the genuine Smyrna Sponge.—ONLY at METCALFE'S sole establishment, 130 R, Oxford street, one door from Hollies street.—Caution.—Beware of the words "from Smyrna" used by some houses

TWENTY YEARS LOSS of HAIR, and WONDERFUL RESTORATION.—"Church street, Wed by, October 19, 1841.—Gentlemen,—Of the last supply of OLDRIDGE'S BALM OF COLUMBIA, every bottle was sold immediately after it arrived. I have many more applications, only waiting for a further supply, which I hope you will send without the least delay. Orders have poured in more than ever since the powerful effects of the Balm have become known. I am, and ultimately shall be head shaved and wore a wig. At my recommendation he tried the Balm; and, after using 3 according to the directions, for a short time, the young hair appeared, and he has now as fine a head of hair as any person in Whaby Town, &c., JOHN KILVINGTON.—To Messrs Kenaby, Brothers, 15, Westmoreland buildings, Aldersgate street, London."—OLDRIDGE'S BALM prevents the hair turning grey, and the first application causes it to curl beautifully, frees it from scurf, and stops it from falling off.—Price 3s. 6d., 6s., and 11s per bottle. Ask for O'Ldrige's Balm of Columbia, 1, Wellington-street, Strand.



A BRONZE SCROLL and SPEAR FENDER, 15s.; Ditto, 18 inch, 17s. 6d.; 4 feet, 24s.; 4 feet 6 in., 30s.; Steel Fenders, 2 feet, 6d. to 4 feet, 24s. Chamber Fire Irons, 3s. 6d. per set. Fire Screens, with Bronze Heads, 11s. 6d., and every description of FURNISHING IRONMONGERY, 30 per cent. lower than any other house. R. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, opposite Somerset House.—Illustrated Catalogues, gratis, or sent post free.—Established 1818.

WHAT is more beneficial to the Health of Children than regular and systematic exercise in the open air, or it less salutary in mental than in bodily improvement? CHILDREN'S CARRIAGES, near, light, easy, compact, and perfect y secure, combining an immense collection of the various designs and dimensions, warranted well built. INVALIDS' WHEEL CHAIRS on every plan and some of comfort to Invalids, from the cheapest to the most expensive build, secondhand, as well as new), on Sale or Hire. LONG BED or SPINAL CARRIAGES. SELF ACTING WHEEL CHAIRS, by which any degree of exercise for the arms can be attained, suitable for the drawing-room or garden.

INGRAM'S Manufactory, 29 Cheapside, near Finsbury-square.

NOTICE to INVENTORS.—Office for Patents of Inventions and Registrations of Designs, 14, Lincoln's Inn-fields.—The printed Instructions, gratis, and every information upon the subject of Protection for Inventions, either by Letters Patent or the Designs Act, may be had by applying personally, or by letter, pre paid, to Mr ALEX. PRINCE, at the Office, 14, Lincoln's-Inn-fields.

VINO ALEATICO and MONTEPULCIANO from Florence, being the pure juice of the grape without brandy. Orange and Lemon Trees from 5s to 20s. each. Jessamine and Palm Plants. R. HALL begs to advise the arrival of the above delightful summer wines; also, some Marsachino in pint bottles, at his Foreign Warehouse, 69, South Audley street, Grosvenor-square, facing the Church.

INCOME WITHOUT RISK.—The LONDON GENUINE TEA COMPANY, Established November 5, 1838, at 23, Ludgate hill, are now selling an entire list of Agents, and persons desirous of such an appointment, by which many have derived considerable incomes, without risk, during the last twenty six years, are requested to apply to the Company, at their Warehouses, 2, Laurence Pountney hill, London.

REFORM your TAILORS' BILLS.—Fashionable DRESS COATS 30s. and 42s. 6d.; frock coats, silk facings, 42s. and 50s.; new pattern summer trousers, 10s. 6d.; or three pair for 30s.; splendid summer waistcoats, 7s., or three for 20s.; sort of livery, 63s.; ladies' elegant riding habits, 65s. and 84s.—DOUDNEY and SON, 69, Lombard-street (established, 1784), celebrated for good and cheap boys' clothing.

GOOD COMMON TEAS, in Chests, or smaller quantities, at 3s 3d. 10lbs. Finer qualities, 4s. 4s. 6d., 4s. 8d. Green, 3s. 10d. Hyson or Gunpowder 4s. 10d. to 5s. 8d. Roasted COFFEES, 1s., 1s. 2d., 1s. 4d., 1s. 8d.—Letters, enclosing Post-office orders, punctually attended to.—Messrs. W. WOOD and Co., original Commission Tea Company, 94, Cannon-street, City.

PLATE SUITED for PRESENTATION.—Committees or private individuals requiring splendid or simple articles of PLATE for Presentation may, by addressing a paid letter, have drawings sent for their approval. A number of large articles, as Epergnes, Cups, Waiters, &c. are always in stock, second-hand; a list of these, with prices, may be furnished.—T. COX SAVORY, Silversmith, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

MADDEN'S Registered PATENT KNIFE CLEANER stands with the most extensive and distinguished patronage, and is now established as an article of utility. Its cleanliness, simplicity, and efficacy, combined with the advantages of removing all the dirt and none the saving of time, and the preservation of the knives, insure universal favour. MADDEN'S KNIFE CLEANER, price 15s., may be seen and tried at the office, 14 George street, Adelphi.

ALABASTER, MARBLE, BRONZE, SPAR, and other ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM LIBRARY, and DINING-ROOM, consisting of Groups, Figures, Inkstands, Candlesticks, Obelisks, Inlaid Tab es, Weights, Vases, &c. Imported and Manufactured by J. TENNENT, late MANN, 149, Strand, London. J. T. has a large variety of Mineralogical Specimens, and Fossils; and arranges elementary collections of each at 2, 5, 10, 20, to 50 Guineas each

EAU de COLOGNE, 10s. per case of six, or 2s. singly, which, as soon as first preparation, in 1709, has maintained an undisturbed supremacy over all other distilled compounds, can be had direct from the Manufactory, by addressing a line or application to H BREIDENBACH, 85, Park-street, Grosvenor-square, and manufactures at Cologne. This Eau de Cologne is no spurious imitation of Farina's, but the genuine article made on the spot, and sold by me.—Jouane.

GRAVESEND, calling at Rosherville.—EAGLE and FALCON Steam-packets from West-End, Hungerford-market Pier, at 9 and 11 o'Clock precisely; London-bridge Wharf, 4 past, 9, and 4 past 11, Brunswick Quay, Black wall, at 2 past 12. Returning from Town Pier, Gravesend, and Rosherville Pier, at 2 past 4, and 4 past 6, for Black wall, London-bridge, and Hungerford.
Eagle Steam packet Office, Hungerford street, Strand.

STOOPING of the SHOULDERS and CONTRACTION of the CHEST are entirely prevented and gently and effectually removed in Youth, Ladies and Gentlemen, by the occasional use of the PATENT ST. JAMES'S CHEST EXPANDER, which is light, simple, easily employed outwardly or invisibly, without bands beneath the arms, unconstructable contrivance, or ingredient to exercise. Sent per post, by Mr. A. BINYON, 46, Tavistock street, Strand, London, or full particulars on receiving a postage stamp

GOLD LUSTRE.—The PARISIAN GOLD DETERGENT instantly restores the Lustre of Gilding, removes Fly Spots, and renders covering from the fire unnecessary. The same restoration of a large gilt Frame costs only a few pence, and as the whole process is merely spunging the surface, there is neither risk nor difficulty in the operation. Gold Detergent, 2s 6d., per bottle; Ormolu, Lacquer, and Bronze, 1s. 6d. each; and Lamp, 1s. 6d. Sold by GIPTON and Co., sole proprietors, 19, George street, Hanover-square; 105, Basinghall-street, City; and by the trade in general.

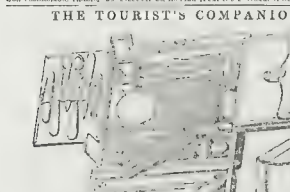
WATERMAN STEAMERS.—These fast and favourite boats the pride of the river, for THAMES TUNNEL, LIMEHOUSE, GREENWICH, BLACKWALL, CHARLTON, and WOOLWICH, now leave the following Piers every morning:—Hungerford Market, Middlesex side, Adelphi, Surrey side, Tower Gardens street), Temple bar (bottom of Essex street, Strand), Blackfriars bridge, Southwark-bridge, and the City Pier, (Fishmonger's hall Wharf, Upper Thames-street); also for Southwark-bridge Pier, Westminster-bridge, Temple bar, Adelphi, and Hungerford Pier, from City Pier every twenty minutes.—N.B. By the Watermen fast and favours e Boats No. 1 to 11.

GOWLAND'S LOTION.—This elegant preparation, an original formula of the late Dr Gowland, for all Impurities of the Skin continues to maintain its unrivalled pre-eminence with its splendid properties of speedily eradicating every species of Eruptive Malady, Discoloration, &c., and of preserving and enhancing the beauty of the complexion by a congenial action upon the skin as perfectly innocent as it is agreeable and efficacious. "GOWLAND'S LOTION," is a favourite with the Nobility, the Gentry, and the Public generally, without whom none is genuine. Prices, 2s. 9d., 5s. 6d.; quarts, 8s. 6d.
Sold by A. Perfumers and Chemists

FOREIGN WINES greatly REDUCED in Price, for Cash, on delivery.

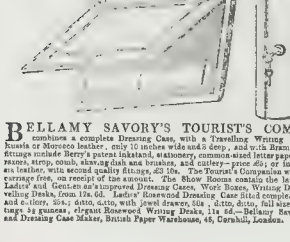
Sherry (pale or brown) .. .. at 21s., 24s, 30s, 35s, and 40s per dozen.
Port (fine and wood) .. .. 24s, 30s, 36s, and 42s do.
Ditto (crusted) .. .. 30s, 36s, 42s, and 48s do.
Madeira .. .. 72s, 40s, and 48s do.
Claret .. .. 14s, 16s, 18s, and 24s do.

Bucellas, 27s.; Vidonia, 24s.; Lisbon (dry or sweet), 24s.; Marsala, 21s.; Cape, 24s.; Constantia, 42s.; Pure Old Burgundy, 24s. per dozen, the price of old ones. Hampers at the rate of 9d. per dozen, in quantities of one dozen and upwards. The Wines are warranted genuine in quality and flavour, and those at only one price the finest imported, any not approved of exchanged, or the money returned. Orders per post must be accompanied by a remittance. Continuing thus to offer Wines at such terms only, we solicit the attention of those who may fear to purchase through an advertisement to the fact that, in a most extensive sale in town and country, out in twenty-one years, only two demurrals (and them in the lowest priced wines) have we been required to make an exchange.—Samples can be tasted at the Office.—COKN WALL and CO., 14, Walbrook, City.



SUPERIORITY AND ECONOMY IN YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S DRESS.
"That coat is cheap which is excellent."—Archbishop Hall.
AT the FASHIONABLE CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, 156, Fleet street, Young Gentlemen's Clothes are made with greater care, taste, and elegance than are usually bestowed upon them. Superfine Cloth Dress, Shooting Jacket, Waistcoat, and Trousers, £1 18s., and every description of dress and Youths' Fashionable Clothing on equally moderate terms. Families waited upon with patterns and specimens. Country residents can be fitted by send ng an old suit.—RODGERS and Co., Fashionable Tailors, 156, Fleet street, London (next the Bolt and Tun).

THE TOURIST'S COMPANION.



BELLAMY SAVORY'S TOURIST'S COMPANION combines a complete Dressing Case, with a Travelling Writing Desk. It is in Russia or Morocco leather, only 10 inches wide and 5 deep, and with Bramah's lock. The fittings include Berry's patent inkstand, stationery, common-sized letter paper, ivory-handle razors, strop, comb, shaving dish and brushes, and cutlery—price £6; or in imitation Russian leather, with second quality fittings, £3 10s. The Tourist's Companion will be forwarded carriage free, on receipt of the amount. The Show Rooms contain the largest variety of Ladies' and Gentlemen's improved Dressing Cases, Work Boxes, Writing Desks, &c. Travelling Desks, from 12s. 6d. Ladies' Rosewood Dressing Case fitted complete with brushes and cutlery, 5½s.; ditto, extra, with jewel drawer, 6½s.; ditto, ditto, full size, with silver fittings 3½ guineas, elegant Rosewood Writing Desks, 11s. 6d.—Bellamy Savory, Stationer, and Dressing Case Maker, British Paper Warehouse, 45, Cornhill, London.

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reductions of price at once sets aside all rivalry either of the Swiss manufacturers or any other house.—Read Jones's Sketch of Watchwork, sent free for a 2d. stamp

POPE and PLANTE, Manufacturers of all the best descriptions of HOSIERY at very moderate prices. Elastic and durable, have introduced ELASTIC GAITERS for Ladies, peculiarly neat and convenient in their use of material and textures applicable for the present season, suitable for home, the carriage, promenade, or equestrian wear. Can be forwarded in a nurse—a, Water or cream, Pall-mall.

NECESSARY PRECAUTION.—CONSUMERS of BRANDY are respectfully informed that J. T. BETTS, Jun., and Co. will not be responsible for any bottled Brandy that is not protected against fraudulent substitution by the Patent Metallic Capsules, embossed with the words "Betts's Patent Brandy, 5 Smith field Bars." Sold by the most respectable Wine and Spirit Merchants in town and country at 3s. 8d. per bottle, the bottle included.

CHASTON'S PATENT INDIA RUBBER ELASTIC CORN PLAISTERS are generally admitted to be the most unique and best to eradicate either Hard or Soft CORNS. From their elastic quality, they can be worn with perfect ease, however tight the boot or shoe fits the foot. Invented and sold by S CHASTON, Chemist, Watton, Norfolk. N.B.—On receipt of thirteen postage stamps (free), a box will be forwarded (also free) to any part of the Kingdom.

SIX lbs. of good BLACK TEA for 17s.; Six lbs. of YOUNG HYSON for 18s., and Six lbs. of CEYLON COFFEE for 6s. The public would never lose sight of this important feature, viz.—that through weal and through woe through evil and good report, the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY can supply every Tea Dealer in a trading over the importation price, and they are determined to do it.—Offices, No. 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate-street.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style, by Mr WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden square. Private Lessons at all hours. Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. An Evening Academy on Mondays and Fridays. Lessons in the Tarn and Vals in Days. Every day.—A card of terms may be had, on application, as above. The room may be engaged for private parties.

EMPLOYMENT.—Persons having a little time to spare, are requested that Agents may be appointed in London and Country Towns by the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY, for the sale of their celebrated TEAS, Offices, 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate-street). They are proved to be very leading customers, from an ounce to a pound, with the prices and weight marked on each parcel, and but little trade is to occasioned by the sale, the business is only 1½ per annum, and many, during the last nineteen years, have realized two Guineas per week. The Agency, without risk, set of less. Application to be made (if by letter, post paid) as above

ELEGANT FRILLED SCARFS, 12s. 9d.—BAILEY and CO respectfully announce the Ladies and the Public in general, they have received their New Patterns for June, in WATERED and SATIN MANTILLE SCARFS, which will be submitted to the public during the week. Two cases of Victoria Body Scarfs, at 1s. 1½d., worth 2s. 6d. Velvet Mantille, without seam, at 18s. 6d., trimmed with Chantilly lace. Satin Mantle, of the prevailing fashion, at 9s. 9d., ditto with Chinese lace. 1,750 brown silk Parasols, with ivory tips, 5s. 6d., worth 8s. A factory of cambric check Turkish Dresses, 3s. 6d., full length. 750 inch Cashmere Dresses, 7s. 11½d., full length. With a Manufacturer's Stock of Paisley Shawls, white grounds, at 11s. 9d., the largest size.—Orders carefully attended to.—Observe, BAILEY and Co., Albion House, 71, St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

FOR STOPPING DECAYED TEETH.—Price 4s. 6d. Patronised by her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. Mr. THOMAS'S SUCCEDANEUM, for Decayed Teeth, however large the cavity. It is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and will remain firm in the tooth for many years, rendering extraction unnecessary, arresting the further progress of decay. All persons can use Mr. Thomas's Succedaneum themselves with ease. Full directions are enclosed in every case. Sold by Mr. THOMAS, Surgeon-Dentist, 64, Berners street, Oxford-street. Price 4s. 6d., and can be sent by post. Mr THOMAS continues to supply the Loss of Teeth on his new system of Self adhesion, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any painful operation whatever. At home from Eleven till Four ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE.—A Rare Union of Utility and Elegance.—By Royal Command of her Majesty the Queen, H. R. H. Prince Albert, the Royal Family, and Nobility.—A fragrant White Powder prepared from Oriental Herbs of matchless virtue for strengthening, preserving, and cleansing the Teeth. It eradicates the pernicious formation of tartar, and by the removal of that extraneous substance, imparts a salutary growth and freshness to the gums. It removes from the surface of the teeth the spots of incipient decay, polishes and whitens the enamel, rendering it firm and the last aspect of impurity, the most pure and pearl-like whiteness, while, from its salubrious and disinfecting qualities, it gives sweetness and perfume to the breath. Price 2s. 9d. per box, duty included.

CAUTION.—To protect the public from fraud, the Hon. Commissioners of her Majesty's Stamps have authorised the Proprietors, Messrs. ROWLAND and SON, to engrave on the Government Stamp, thus:—A. ROWLAND & SON, 20, Hatton Garden, which is affixed on each Box.

THE HAIR.—Of the numerous compounds constantly enrolled, for promoting the growth or reproduce on of the Hair, few survive even in name, beyond a very limited period, whilst ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, with a reputation unparalleled, is still on the increase in public estimation. The singular virtues of this successful invention for Restoring, Preserving, and Beautifying the Human Hair, are too well known and appreciated by the public to require comment. The very lists of the elite and distinguished patronage it enjoys, its general use in all countries, together with its intrinsic merit, sufficiently evidence its claims to favour, are authorities which stamp its superior excellence and take over all attempts of rivalry. Public attention is unceasingly preferred, to counteract great demand creates the cupidity of unprincipled shopkeepers, who vend the most spurious trash as the "genuine" Macassar Oil, wherever the genuine article is freely the invention and property of A. ROWLAND and SON, and the amalgamation of its costly constituents is closely guarded by them, hence shopkeepers are entirely ignorant of its component parts—thus proving the imposition of all other articles bearing the title of "Macassar Oil." The genuine article has the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL engraved in two lines on the Wrapper, and on the back of the wrapper nearly the same, containing 28,000 letters—Price 3s. 6d., Family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, per bottle.—"A" All others are FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS!!!

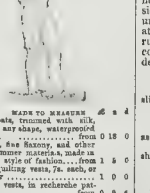
BRITISH and FOREIGN INSTITUTE.—At a General Meeting of the Members of the Institute, held this day, the Right Hon. the Earl DEVON in the chair, the report of the general state and progress of the Institute, with the balance sheet for the year ending 31st March last, having been read by E. Hough, Esq., seconded by George Jones, Esq., and carried unanimous y; That the report and balance sheet be received and adopted, and entered on the minutes of the Institute. Moved by William Tite, Esq., seconded by Henry Tudor, Esq., and carried unanimously: That the report and balance sheet be printed and circulated among the members. Moved by James Pigeon, Esq., seconded by the Rev. George Arnold, and carried unanimously: That the Meeting are of opinion that the management of this Institute has been hitherto satisfactory and they rely upon the Committee to continue the same as much as may be capable of being carried into effect consistent by with the fundamental principles of the original constitution of the Institute. Moved by William Tite, Esq., seconded by Dr. Epps, and carried unanimously: That the best and most cordial thanks of this Meeting be given to the Right Hon the Earl of Devon for the great attention he has paid to the interests of the Institute, to which its establishment and success are to be greatly attributed, and particularly for his conduct in the chair this day. Moved by Dr. Camps, seconded by J. Bethune Baly, Esq., and carried unanimously: That the warmest thanks of this Meeting be presented to Mr. Buckingham and the Committee, for their services and exertions in conducting the affairs of the Institute during the past year.
June 7, 1844.
(Signed) DEVON, Chairman.

SELF MEASUREMENT. Country residents will duly estimate the convenience of the following plan, by which they may secure a perfect fit. Orders executed with dispatch and exactness.

DIRECTIONS FOR COAT.
From 1 to 2 and on to 3 for full length; from 4 to 5 for elbow point, and to 6 for sleeve length, round the arm at 5, and wrist at 8; round the breast at 7, under the coats and waist at 9, under the coat.

VESTS.
From 1 over the shoulder to vest length in front, with Breast and Waist measure as instanced in coat measurement.

TROUSERS
From length from top at the hip to B; from A to B for length between the legs; round the waist, and round the bottom at B, as desired, giving 4 inches for ease for a perfect fit.



READY-MADE.	£ s. d.
Tweed Tegluenas .. .. from	0 8 5
Ditto, superior quality, with silk collars, cuffs, and facings	0 16 0
Cashmerette coats in a variety of shapes, handsomely trimmed...	1 0 0
An immense stock of Holland and Fantasy blouses .. .. from	0 3 6
Splendid summer vests .. .. .. from	0 2 6
An endless variety of cashmere and Persian vests, splendid patterns 3s. to	8 5
Washing satin vests, warranted.. ..	0 6 0
Cloth trousers..	from 0 9 0
Single milled does..	from 0 11 6
A great variety of SUMMER TROUSERS	from 0 7 0
Dress coats edged..	from 1 0 0
Frock ditto	1 4 0

MADE TO MEASURE	£ s. d.
Tweed coats, trimmed with silk, made in any shape, waterproofed	from 0 18 0
Cashmere, fine Saxony, and other light summer materials, made in the first style of fashion.. ..	from 1 5 0
Figured quilting vests, 7s. each, or three for	1 0 0
Cashmere vests, in rechercheé patterns..	from 0 9 6
Summer trousers, in great variety of materials	0 16 0
Single milled Victoria, and plain dress trousers	0 17 6
Best quality West of England	1 2 0
Dress coats	from 1 12 0
Best manufactured..	2 15 0
Mourning to any extent can be had at five minutes' notice, at the following prices:—
Men's suits, dress coat, vest, and trousers	3 16 0
Boy's ditto, jacket, vest, and trousers	from 0 18 0

IMPORTANT.—Any article purchased, or ordered, if not approved of, exchanged, or the money returned

OBSERVE.—E. MOSES and SON, Tailors, Wholesale and Retail Woollen Drapers, Outfitters and Genera. Warehousemen, 154 Minories, and 86, Aldgate, City, opposite the church.

CAUTION.—E. Moses and Son are obliged to guard the Public against imposition, having learned that the unredeemable-like falsehood of being connected with them, or it's the same concern, has been resorted to in many instances, and for obvious reasons. They have no connexion whatever with any other Establishment; and those who desire genuine Cheap Clothing, should call or send to 154, Minories, or 86, Aldgate, opposite the church to prevent disappointment, &c.

N.B. No Business transacted at the Establishment from Friday at sunset until sunset on Saturday, when Business is resumed until twelve o'clock.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, April 16.—Her Majesty's ship Cleopatra has arrived here with damage, having been on a coral reef on the coast of Madagascar, and whilst recovering the kedge used in warping her off, Lieutenant Molesworth and seven men were massacred by the natives.

MONTREAL, May 18.—The Fish Hawk, from London, is lost on the eastward part of the banks of Newfoundland.

BOSTON, May 18.—The Britannia steamer arrived here from Liverpool, on the 13th instant, in lat. 46, long. 45, passed several icebergs, a ship under jurymasts, and a brig in company. A vessel of about 300 tons, bottom up, and apparently but recently coppered, was passed on the 16th April, in lat. 38, long. 15, by the New England, arrived at New York.

CARLISLE, June 8.—The Caroline Ottilee, of Seimemunde, from Dunkirk to this port, capsized outside the bar yesterday, but has since been towed into the harbour and laid on the ground; two men drowned.

ALTONA, June 6.—A vessel laden with horses is supposed to be lost in Heuliphafen, a great number of dead horses having washed ashore near there and along the coast.

CORK, May 28.—The Carolina Matilda from Noss to this port, is ashore near here, abandoned; crew supposed to be drowned.

MILFORD HAVEN, Jan. 6.—The wreck of the Spring, waterlogged and abandoned, was fallen in with on the 26th of April, in lat. 46, long. 43 W., by the Leontine, arrived here from New Orleans.

QUEBEC, May 14.—The barque Suir, from Llanelly to this port, leaky, with stern carried away, and two hundred tons of coals thrown overboard, was spoken with 30th of April, in lat. 47, long. 57, by the Amelia, arrived here

NEW YORK, May 21.—The Trenton, arrived at Boston from Liverpool, passed the wreck of a vessel of about 250 tons, dismasted, decks swept, and even with the water's edge, jarboard bow stove in, painted green inside, with old-fashioned pumps, was passed on the 20th ult., in lat. 40, long. 39. The ship Jane Walker, of Liverpool, abandoned, foremast only standing, and full of water, was passed by the same vessel on the 26th ult., in lat. 46, long. 44

The arrivals at Liverpool, foreign and coastwise, last week, were unusually numerous, owing to the late change of wind to S.W. On Tuesday, for instance, sixty vessels arrived; on Wednesday, ninety-four; on Thursday, fifty-seven; and on Friday, thirty-nine; making a total, in the four days, of two hundred and fifty sail.

ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL.—The annual dinner of the Royal Free Hospital took place on Tuesday evening, at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street. Lord Brougham, the benevolent gentleman at our own coronation. The right honourable Lord Ashley, M.P., in the chair. The noble chairman was supported by Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., Viscount Ebrington, M.P., Sir Walter G. Stirling, Bart., Viscount Sandon, Sir John Hanaker, the Rev. Dr. Major, the Rev. Dr. Ric. Thomson Hankey, Esq., Honourable Granville Ryder, M.P., Mr. Edward Wigram, Mr. J. G. Hubbard, Mr. F. Vernon Wentworth, Bank Directors, F. P. Walesby, Esq., &c. The noble Lord's loyal and patriotic toasts were given and received with daly honoured. "Prosperity to the Royal Free Hospital was then given. The object of the charity, which embraces the entire human race, without respect to age, class, or profession, is to afford instant relief, both medical and surgical, to all sick and diseased persons, having no other means of succour, and that without letter of recommendation or other introduction, save that of real disease or misfortune. As many as 30,000 persons were relieved during the past year. The institution was established in 1828, and has relieved upwards of 136,054 since that period. The toast was responded to with the utmost enthusiasm. Dr. Marsden, the benevolent founder of the institution, was drunk with all the honours. Due acknowledgment was made to the very efficient services of the honorary secretary, the Rev. Mr. Packman, of the Chapel Royal, and the medical staff of the establishments. From the united exertions, it appears that upwards of 300 individuals apply daily at the asylum in Gray's-inn-road: all of whom receive advice and medicine, and the most urgent and destitute cases are admitted into the wards. The total amount of subscriptions was about £7,000. Amongst the subscriptions announced was the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, 100 guineas; the East India Company, 100 guineas; Lord J. Stuart, M.P., five guineas; Lieutenant Tracy, R.N., ten guineas; Viscount Sandon, ten guineas.

LAUNCH OF "THE MONARCH."

This splendid mercantile frigate, adapted especially for passengers, was launched on Saturday week, from Mr. Green's yard, at Blackwall, and the great beauty of the vessel, the grandeur of such a spectacle, and the fineness of the day, attracted many thousands to witness one of the grandest achievements of manual labour. The Monarch, by admeasurement, is 1400 tons burthen; the length of her keel is 168 feet; her length, over all, 180 feet; and her depth, from the upper deck to the kelson, 32 feet. The breadth of her beam is 40 feet, and it is only in this particular that she is inferior to the first-class frigates of the royal navy. She has an entire flush deck fore and aft; is pierced for 50 guns, and capable of carrying a greater number; for, besides the ports on a side upon the main deck, there is also an equal number of large scuttles on the lower deck, which, with timbers and planking are chiefly of teak the planks next the keel are American elm, five inches thick; above this is teak, to the wales, which are formed of English oak. Her upper sides are entirely of teak; and her bitts, capstan, and most of the interior work are of the same wood. Her figure-head is a most elaborately carved copy of that of the old Queen Charlotte yacht (now preserved in the model-room at Somerset House), promenade deck. There is, however, this difference, the copy presents a good likeness of Queen Victoria, whilst the original bears that of her grandmother. Her Majesty is holding the sceptre in her right hand, with the ball and cross extended in her left. The stern is particularly neat—a large gilded crown in the centre, supported by two radiant stars. The unobstructed view along the upper deck, as she laid upon the slips, was very fine. There are twelve commodious and well fitted-up cabins, averaging 11 feet by 10 feet each, and a spacious saloon, 40 feet by 30 feet, on the deck, the fore part of which is bulkheaded off for the ship's company. The lower deck has eighteen cabins (making thirty in all), of about similar dimensions, these two aft ones being the largest, 18 feet by 16 feet each, with stern windows. The whole are well ventilated and lighted from the ports, and the numerous skylights on the decks must render every part below perfectly luminous. Before the lower deck cabins is a roomy space for trunks. The masts and yards are of larger dimensions than usual for merchantmen and, when ready for sea, she will be one of the finest vessels out of the port of London. We have given a correct view of the Monarch, as she reposed on the slips, a few hours previous to her being launched, with the national colours flashing in the bright rays of the sun. Whilst building, the timbers, &c., are supported by the means of shores; but when ready for going into the water, a frame-work called a "cradle" is attached to the lower planks of the bottom, fore and aft; the shores are removed as well as the blocks underneath the keel, and the ship settles down with her whole weight upon the cradle, which rests upon the slips—an inclined plane of planks (running on each side), well greased, and having a projecting piece of wood on each side, to act as a guide, and to keep the cradle in its right position. The ship has now nothing to hold her from starting but a loose piece of wood on each side the bows, called a dock or dog-shore. But to afford a better understanding, we must refer to the annexed engraving. By looking at the ship above it will be seen that the frame-work of the cradle runs the entire length, from the bows to the stern. The after part is constructed nearly similar to the fore part, but we have afforded a description of the latter, in order to show the nature of launching.

A. The ship's bows.
B. The sliding planks, forming the upper part of the slips, a firm fixture.
C. The bilgeway of the cradle, large baulks of timber, resting on the greased sliding planks, and kept in their place by the pressure of the ship.
D. A stout cleat on the bilgeway to receive the head of the dog-shore.
E. The dog-shore, about five feet six inches in length, and six inches square.
F. The trip shore, a piece of stout wood about nine inches in length, to act as a sort of trigger, to knock off the dog-shore sway.
G. The rubband of the slip, a fixture, and against which the foot of the dog-shore rests
H. Upright pieces of timber called "poppits."
I. Plank bolted to the bows to hold the poppit heads.
K. Cleats bolted to the bows to keep the plank, I, from rising.
L. Shvers, or wedges, under the poppits, to drive them up close to the plank.
M. Blocks laid on the ground, on which the whole fabric rests.
The fixtures to the land are the blocks, M, the sliding planks, B, and the rib-band, G. The fixtures on the ship are the planks, I, and the cleats, K, bolted to the bows. The bilgeway, C (timber about fifteen inches square), is merely kept in its place by short shores from the keel. The poppits, H, rest their heels on the bilgeway, and are preserved in their upright position by pieces of wood fore and aft, called "tie-planks;" their heads are inserted in grooves in the plank, I, but both bilgeway and poppits are entirely free, the weight of the ship keeping them from moving; and in order to do this more effectually, the shvers or wedges, L, are driven in under the poppits, to make the pressure more secure. The dog-shores, E, resting its foot against the land fixture, G, and its head against the cleat on the moveable bilgeway, C, acts as a sort of fixture to the ship, and prevents its descending down the inclined plane, the slips. The trip-shore, F, supports the dog-shore, but both are perfectly free except from pressure. Thus situated, the vessel is ready for launching, and at the proper time of tide, when the signal is given, the trip-shore and dog-shore are knocked away, and the impediment being removed, the bilgeway moves down on the sliding planks, and at the moment of the start a bottle of wine is flung against the bows, and the ship receives its future name. When she enters the water, the whole of the cradle being quite freed from pressure, and buoyant, immediately floats away, leaving nothing on the ship but the plank, I, and the cleats, K, bolted to the bows, A. By this simple contrivance, the immense mass is sent into its destined element, and an extremely anxious few minutes it is to the builder, and most gratifying to his heart when he beholds her riding on the waters in safety.

LAUNCH OF "THE MONARCH," EAST INDIAMAN, AT BLACKWALL.

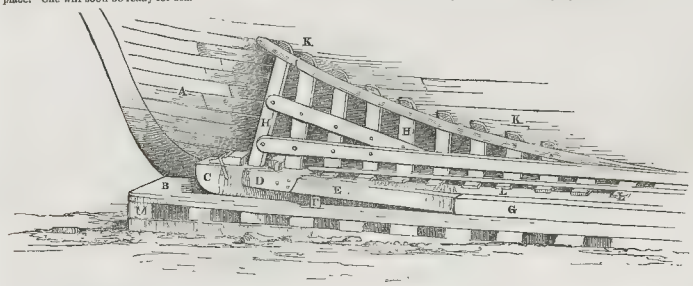
The Monarch, about one o'clock, on Saturday week, was named by Mrs. Babb, a member of Mr. Green's family, and the vessel went off in the grandest style, whilst the shouts of assembled thousands not only marked their pleasure at the spectacle, but testified their best wishes for her future prosperity. Not a single accident occurred to mar the occasion. The ship is designed for the East India trade, and we understand that nearly the whole of the cabins are already taken, and the freight prepared. Mr. Green, with his usual liberality, gave a handsome entertainment to his friends, in which ample justice was done to the fare provided.

Yesterday the Monarch was in a very forward state; her masts were in, tops over the mast-heads, and the lower shrouds in their place. She will soon be ready for sea.



"THE CRADLE."

The keel of a sister-ship to the Monarch has been laid down on the blocks, next to the slips from which the other has been launched, to be named the Leander.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The sailing match for the Grand Challenge Cup, given by the Royal Thames Yacht Club, took place on Monday, and a first rate match it was. With reference to the Challenge Cup, it will, perhaps, be remembered, that it must be won two consecutive seasons before it becomes the property of the owner, otherwise it is again to be put into the hands of the club, after being held from the moment of contest till the ensuing year. Last season it was won by the Enigma, one of the yachts engaged in the present contest. Great interest was excited by the match in consequence of the known first-rate character of the boats engaged in it, and the Comet steamer, which was hired to attend for the conveyance of members of the club, was crowded at an early hour of the morning by a fashionable company, including a large number of ladies. Several other steam-vessels, bearing heavy freights of parties interested in the "affair," also accompanied the yachts in their progress; and the piers at Greenwich, Blackwall, Woolwich, and Gravesend, were lined with spectators, who loudly cheered the crews of the contending vessels as they passed down the river. Nearly thirty yachts attached to the Royal Thames and other squadrons were also "out," and added much to the enlivenment of the scene. Amongst them was the Pearl, having her noble owner (the Marquis of Anglesey) on board.

The weather in the morning was, no doubt, beautifully fine in the estimation of those who were not deeply interested in the match, but it was not so in the opinions of those who were immediately engaged in the contest; for many and loud expressions of regret were heard at the lack of wind—there was scarcely a cap-full blowing, but what there was came from the north-west, a favourable point for the run down. The yachts were moored off the Royal Hospital, Greenwich, whence they were to start, and sail to Coal-house Point, about two miles below Gravesend, and return again to Greenwich.

At ten minutes past twelve o'clock the signal to prepare was given, and the six following boats belonging to members of the club were soon in a state of readiness to obey the order to start:

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners' Names.	Distinguishing Colours
Mystery	25	Lord A Pagit	Blue pierced white, red Maltese cross.
Exquisite	18	C. S. Tatham, Esq.	White, blue cross, gold star
Gazelle	29	T. Rutherford, Esq.	White, with red arrow.
Enigma	29	J. Wilkinson, Esq.	Crimson gold Maltese cross and balls.
Blue Belle	29	J. Chandless, Esq.	Light Blue
Gnome	29	Captain Mereon	Blue and white, with star.

Precisely at a quarter past 12, the "starting gun" was fired, and in another instant the sails of all six were seen at the mast heads. The Mystery and the Gnome, the former of which was to windward and the latter to leeward, got clear off, but all the others in wearing round ran foul of each other; this however caused only a few seconds delay. The race then commenced in gallant style, the Gnome having the lead, followed by the Mystery and the Gazelle, with the others close behind. In Woolwich Reach a good breeze sprung up, which enabled the Gnome to increase her distance a-head: the Gazelle took the place of the Mystery, which was thus left third, Blue Belle being fourth, Enigma fifth, and Exquisite several boats' lengths behind Enigma. On entering Half-way reach, the race became very interesting; the contending yachts ran beautifully before the wind, and they were all in a cluster with the exception of the Gnome, which was a dozen boats' lengths in advance of the others. A good deal of pretty manœuvring took place at this point. The Blue Belle ventured in shore to windward of the Mystery and took the breeze from her, so that she thus lost considerable way. The Enigma performed a similar manœuvre, and with the same effect in reference to the Gazelle, which shortly afterwards lost her topsail. The tact and management of the respective crews were admirable, and the speed was excellent. Just below Gravesend the Enigma passed all her competitors, and got slightly a-head. The following are the periods at which they rounded the flag buoy:—

Enigma	22	minutes to	3
Gnome	21½	—	3
Blue Belle	20½	—	3
Mystery	20	—	3
Exquisite	18	—	3
Gazelle	16½	—	3

At Gravesend the Blue Belle succeeded in passing the Gnome and Enigma, and gained the first position, but she was not allowed to maintain it long. The Mystery came up and shot a-head of her before she reached Rosherville. The breeze at this time was a stiff one and right in their teeth, so that the work became heavy and serious. The Enigma sprung her mast, which obliged her to take in her gaff topsail; but with this disadvantage, she ran a "good third." At Erith it was apparent that the struggle would be between the Mystery, which had the lead, and Blue Belle, which closely followed her; the others were considerably astern. The crews of both vessels exhibited admirable skill, and made tack after tack without either increasing or diminishing the distance between them an inch. So it was all the way home; the Mystery at the flag buoy being only 15 seconds in advance of her gallant competitor, the Blue Belle. The yacats arrived at Greenwich in the following order:—

Mystery	1	minute	15	seconds before 8
Blue Belle	1	—	—	— 8
Enigma	4	—	25	— after 8
Gnome	5	—	20	— — 8
Gazelle	10	—	3	— — 8
Exquisite	20	—	—	— — 8

The arrangements made by the stewards to enable their friends to witness the race were excellent, and the utmost possible accommodation was afforded to every person on board the Comet. Adams's brass band was in attendance, and performed several pieces of music in a highly creditable manner during the day.

The estimated value of the Challenge Cup, of which we annex an engraving, is about 200 guineas. Its height is about eighteen inches; it is of the usual vase form, and the lid is surmounted by a figure of Neptune in his car, drawn by sea-horses; the cup is supported by three dolphins, surrounded by bulrushes.

THE THAMES ROYAL YACHT CLUB CHALLENGE CUP.

LAUNCH OF "THE TUDOR," EAST INDIAMAN, AT NEWCASTLE-UPON TYNE.

LAUNCH OF "THE TUDOR," EAST INDIAMAN.

On "the glorious first of June," a splendid and first-rate vessel, built by Messrs. Smith, of St. Peter's, Newcastle upon-Tyne, was launched amidst a great concourse of spectators. She was named "The Tudor;" her burthen is about 1150 tons, and she is the largest vessel by five feet that has been built in the above dock. A little after five o'clock, on a signal given, and while the band, stationed in the yard, played "Rule Britannia," she was loosened from her ways, and glided gracefully into the water, amidst the firing of cannon and the hearty cheers of the assembled multitude.

"The Tudor" is built from the latest and most improved models, combining burthen and swiftness of sailing; her cabins are fitted up elegantly, and with due regard to comfort; whilst her berths are both numerous and commodious.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 112, Vol. IV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1844. [Sixpence.

POST-OFFICE ESPIONAGE.

WHETHER the present Home Secretary has deliberately planned out a scheme for making himself more unpopular than he is already, we know not, but he could not have hit upon anything so likely to effect his purpose as to order, in a time of perfect domestic quiet, the detention and opening of letters committed to the care of the Post-office. No public establishment has so much in its power; the most unreserved of family communications, not to be profaned by the eye of a stranger; the most important commercial correspondence, the knowledge of which by others might involve whole establishments in ruin—all these are completely in the power of the Government officials. A fragile seal is all that stands between them and the secrets of a whole community. What has inspired that universal confidence which allows men without the slightest misgiving (as far as the Post-office is concerned) to put their very souls upon paper, and entrust even more than life and wealth to the care of her Majesty's Government? Simply the conviction, till now unshaken, that the seal, which, like that of Solomon in the Eastern fable, held in captivity so many spirits of good and evil, was sacred and inviolable. The statute which makes the detention or opening of a letter a misdemeanour had but little weight with the public. The disposition that is only withheld from crime by the fear of punishment, is the very last to be trusted, and the boundless confidence of the people was created by a long experience of official honesty. It is no slight injury to public morals that this confidence has been destroyed—not by a mere underling, but by the chief of the executive department of the Government—the officer who controls the administration of justice—the Secretary of State. The measure has all the objections that can apply to an official act, and in doing and defending it, Sir J. Graham has exhibited the worst faults which can be possessed by a public man. The act itself was unworthy, because petty and mean; and impolitic, as it was wholly uncalled for. In doing it, the Home Secretary was unscrupulous, rash, and oppressive; and when called to account in Parliament, he, with as much bad taste as bad temper, refused to give a single reason for his conduct, obstinately confining himself to an assertion of two things which no one disputed—that he had the power and had thought proper to use it. Much more was necessary, by way of explanation of a proceeding so sure to excite public feeling. Government is armed with extraordinary powers, but they are to be used only on extraordinary occasions. In dealing with traitors and enemies of the public weal, a Government may be justified in getting information when and how it can. In war, an enemy's despatches are opened and read, if seized, as a matter of course; and the thing is so well known, that communications are often written and sent on purpose to be intercepted. The opening of a private letter from Charles I. to his Queen, by Oliver Cromwell, is said to have been the cause of the final rupture between the King and the Parliament; it proved that in Charles no trust could be placed, and that he would be bound by no conditions. The captive King even then contemplated the execution of Cromwell; and the game being thus reduced to the desperate one of life against life, the warrior who never felt a scruple sent to the scaffold the monarch without faith.

But war, whether foreign or civil, is, happily, an exception to the general rule, and society is not to exist in a period of foreign peace and domestic tranquillity, as if we were on the eve of social disorganization. To foes we may act in the spirit of Shakspeare's Edgar, and say, with him—

> Leave, gentle wax,
> To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their hearts,
> Their papers are more lawful!

But every discontented man is not an enemy, and to put the most objectionable part of the machinery of official power in operation for the very petty purpose of getting at the private thoughts of a Chartist orator, like Mr. Lovett, or of an unfortunate Italian, as we presume M. Mazzini, from his name, to be, seems encountering a needless amount of odium for a result ridiculously contemptible. What need the State care for the private promulgation of the same mad theories of Government that have for years past been expressed in public? For the next two centuries, at least, our Constitution is not likely to be superseded by the "five points," nor is the state of the public mind at all favourable to a conspiracy for dethroning our gracious Queen. Neither do we believe there is any plan hatching for delivering up our fleet of war steamers into the hands of that "royal imp of fame," the Prince de Joinville. As far as any plot against the State is concerned, Sir James might have slept in as much security as the ticklish state of the ministerial majority would have allowed him. And what, we would beg to ask, are the internal squabbles of other States to us, that we should disgrace ourselves by making our Post-office an instrument of the detestable police of Italy and Austria—a system never to be named by Englishmen without abhorrence? Sir James Graham has doggedly refused to give any reason for his step, and the public mind is therefore left free to ascribe it to the worst possible motives. So it is currently stated that a sacred trust has been violated by the Executive, to oblige one of the Italian Governments. The late outbreaks have been confined to the Papal States and Sardinia; many victims have been shot, more imprisoned, and some have escaped. Those who remain may have friends and sympathisers in England, and the letters of these last might possibly give the Italian police a clue to some, who, being implicated in the rising, may have managed to conceal themselves. But even if information could be afforded by this means, we say it is a base and cowardly act on the part of the Government of a great nation to betray the thoughts of those to whom our soil has given a refuge, and whose persons not even a Secretary of State would dare to deliver up. There is to us an unspeakable baseness in it; it is gratuitous, mean, and useless treachery. Why should we condescend to aid the leaden despotism of Austria, or the miserable imbecility that seems to paralyse the temporal Government of the Pope? Under his sway, every liberty of thought, action, and speech, seems to be crushed, while his administrative is at once so incapable and so corrupt that the people are, in addition to other evils, plundered and starved. The wiser Metternich manages to feed and amuse the people he oppresses, and though not free, they are contented. Still the espionage of Austria is incessant, and at present it is assisting the Pontiff to keep down his subjects, on the same principle that keenly interests a man in the extinguishing a fire next door. But we have nothing to do with their blunders or their crimes; England ought to scorn even the attempt to make her either the spy or the policeman of any state on the face of the earth. The probability is, that it is the best and worthiest men who in these countries are driven to revolt, as in the case of Silvio Pellico and his comrades, while we should no more aid an Emperor or Pope in perpetuating political vengeance now, than we assisted the National Convention of France to seize and guillotine the emigrant Royalists. On every account this tampering with letters for the benefit of a foreign power is an act of which we ought to be, as a nation, ashamed. Even as a means of detection, it is but a poor expedient. If it is once known to be resorted to, the Post-office simply ceases to be trusted, except for mere matters of business. A most striking instance of this is given in the case of the Marquis de Custine, the author of an able work on Russia. He knew that every letter of a foreigner is, as a matter of course, opened at the Russian Post-office, and that if he put on paper what he really thought, he would, within twenty-four hours, have been escorted to the frontiers. He baffled the Government by a very simple expedient; he sent through the post, letters written to be read, full of admiration of all and everything. The letters he should have sent, had he been free, he wrote at the same time also, but retained them, publishing them when he returned to France! Russia has gained nothing by her jealousy; the opinions were recorded and given to the world, and given with the addition of the discredit to the Government of obliging itself to be so outwitted.

"VICTORIA LAND," IN THE SOUTH-POLAR REGIONS, DISCOVERED BY CAPT. SIR J. C. ROSS.

We attach no blame to the Post-office establishment, which could not do otherwise than obey orders; but we sincerely regret that it should have been so instructed. The whole question has been very well stated in a characteristic letter from Mr. Carlyle to the Times, and we conclude by quoting a portion of it, as anything from the pen of the eloquent author of the "French Revolution" must possess an interest:—

> Whether the extraneous Austrian Emperor and miserable old chimera of a Pope shall maintain themselves in Italy, or be obliged to decamp from Italy, is not a question in the least vital to England or its interests. But it is a question vital to us that sealed letters in an English Post-office be, as we all fancied they were, respected as things sacred; that opening of men's letters, a practice near of kin to picking men's pockets, and to other still viler and far fatallier forms of sometimes-murderdom, be restrained to us in England, except in cases of the very last extremity. When some new Gunpowder Plot may be in the wind, some double-dyed high treason, or luminous national wreck not avoidable otherwise, then let us open letters: not till then. To all Austrian Kaisers and such like, in their time of trouble, let us answer, as our fathers from of old have answered:—Not by such means of help here for you. Such means, allied to pickpocket and vilest forms of scoundrelism, are not permitted in this country for your behoof. The right hon. Secretary does himself detest such, and even is afraid to employ them. He does not: it would be dangerous for him! All British men that might chance to come in view of such a transaction, would incline to spurn it, and trample on it, and indignantly ask him, what he meant by it?

The working of this great establishment being at all times interesting, and public attention being at the present moment so directly called to it, we have given views of the interior and management of the office, which will convey a clearer notion of the stupendous character of the arrangements than any description, however lengthened.

"VICTORIA LAND."

VOYAGE OF CAPTAIN SIR J. C. ROSS TO THE SOUTH POLE; AND HIS DISCOVERY OF A GREAT SOUTHERN CONTINENT.

In the beginning of the year 1839, the British Government, as our readers are aware (see No. 95 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS), having determined on sitting out an expedition, for the purpose of investigating the phenomena of terrestrial magnetism in various remote countries, and for prosecuting maritime geographical discovery in the high southern latitudes, H.M. ships Erebus and Terror, commissioned by Captain James Clark Ross, sailed from Chatham on the 29th of September, 1839. In addition to carrying out the above-mentioned leading views, it was enjoined to the officers, that they should use every exertion to collect the various objects of nature history which the many heretofore unexplored countries about to be visited would afford.

On the outward voyage they touched at most of the Atlantic Islands, making a longer stay at some of them in order to ascertain the nature of the local observations that were instituted. At Madeira, which was the first visited, they called in the middle of October, and remained eleven days, and then made Teneriffe and the Cape de Verde, where they called for a brief space on St. Paul's Rocks under the line, in long 29 deg W. St. Helena was the next destinat on and the course which it was found necessary to follow took them to the Island of Trinidad off the Brazil coast, in 20 deg. south.

After a good week at St Helena, the vessels sailed for the Cape of Good Hope, arriving there on the 4th of April, 1840. The Cape may be regarded as the starting-point, where the history of the voyage of discovery that we have included South Polar Discovery, would commence. On the 6th of April, until they quitted Simon's Bay, and first entered a cold and inhospitable latitude of deg S., on the 17th of the same month, they, only four days after leaving a westward course, they passed to the south of Marion's Island, formed of flat terraces of black volcanic rock and rude snow-capped mountains. Here occurred the first botanical phenomenon, the Macrocystis pyrifera, a remarkable gigantic seaweed), being exceedingly abundant.

On the 28th, after a succession of storms, the Crozet Islands were gained. This group lies far to the eastward of the position that had been assigned to it, namely, in lat. 47½ deg. S. and long. 46 ½8 deg. E. They are all volcanic, and of the wildest and most rocky aspect; the harbours are very few, and some of the islands are entirely inaccessible. The mountains rise in peaks and cones to an elevation of 4000-5000 feet, exhibiting patches of perpetual snow on the summits, while dense fogs frequently envelope their bases, borne from the sea, to such an elevation, that the highest points alone are visible. To all appearance the vegetation is equally scanty and stunted as that which Kerguelen's Island afterwards afforded, and the questions which were put to a party of miserable seafarers in some of the Dutch whalers, touching the circumstance of whether the vaunted "Cabbage" of the latter island also inhabits the Crozet group. Scudding before heavy westerly gales, on the 6th of May a remarkable conical rock, called Bligh's Cap, was descried; it lies 46 deg. south-west extremity of Kerguelen's Island, but thick weather prevented Sir James Ross from making the land, from which the ships were again driven to a distance of 150 miles, and obliged to beat back, finally casting anchor in Christmas Harbour on the 12th of May, 1840.

At Kerguelen's Island, all the plants that had been originally detected by the illfated Cook were gathered in great numbers, and the two naturalists attached to the Erebus and Terror stand these, together with many other species, a remarkable proof of the uniformity of the climate, and the comparative mildness of the winter season. The ships left Kerguelen's Island on the 20th of July, and arrived in the river Derwent, Van Diemen's Island, on the 16th of August, 1840.

On the 12th of November, 1840, they quitted Hobarton for the first voyage to the South Pole, during which the only interesting land they visited were many plants were Lord Auckland's Islands, lat. 50½ degrees S., long. 166 degrees E., where they arrived after a week's sail from the last mentioned coast, and staid there during the spring months of that latitude; and Campbell's Island, in lat. 52 degrees S., long. 169 degree E. Quitting that island again on the 17th of December, the ships finally sailed for an entirely unexplored region of discovery, the Macrocystis and D'Urvilea were found in large quantity floating with the current nearly as far south as any open water remained free of bergs, in lat. 61 degrees S. The vessels entered the pack-ice in lat. 68 degrees S., long. 175 degrees.

During this voyage the vast extent of continent, called, in honour of her Majesty "Victoria Land," was discovered, together with the active volcano "Mount Erebus," the extinct one "Mount Terror," and that icy barrier, which, running east and west, in the parallel of 78 degrees S., prevents all farther progress towards the pole.

Our cut exhibits a fine view of those extraordinary mountains, and of the perilous situation in which the ships were placed, at the time of the discovery. The icy barrier, swaying to the vast undulation of the ocean, is also shown in a very striking manner.

The expedition returned to Hobarton, Van Diemen's Island, late in the autumn (of that latitude), April 7th, 1841; on the 7th of July again started from Van Diemen's Island, and after a short visit to Sydney, cast anchor in the Bay of Islands, New Zealand, August 12th, 1841, where the ships remained three months. This time was spent in collecting materials for a Flora of New Zealand.

The second exploring voyage was commenced on the 15th of November, 1841.

After tracing the Macrocystis into the 67th parallel, the ships entered an icepack of immense magnitude on the 18th of December, in lat. 69 degrees S. Here they were entangled until February 2nd, 1842 (the midsummer of these cheerless regions), making no more progress during that time than from the latitude just mentioned to 68 degrees, where they emerged into comparatively open water to the southward of a large body of the pack, which, however, trended to the westward. At this time the season was far advanced, and as, in the preceding year, the retreat had been commenced, through absolute necessity, on the 9th of February, so Captain Ross did not think proper now to re-enter the pack-ice, but proceeded along its edge to the westward, advancing so far as 187 degrees W., and then to the southward and eastward.

On the 23rd of February the expedition came in view of the grand Victoria Barrier: the day being fine, the voyagers approached within a mile and a half of the Barrier, finally reaching 78 degrees, 10 minutes S. lat. in the long. 162 degrees W., having made six miles farther than in the preceding year, the highest latitude hitherto attained. Under a different command, these efforts had been expected; for after the long detention, the rapidly closing season rendered any progress very difficult; but it was a great object to verify the magnetic and other observations, and to ascertain still more positively the position of the pole. Unable to proceed eastward, the retreat was commenced, tracing the pack edge. Seaweed was again met with on reaching the parallel of 64 degrees, and occasionally when running down the parallel of 65 degrees, from 170 degrees W. to 80 degrees W., and thence in great abundance to the Falkland Islands, where the ships anchored in Berkeley Sound on the 6th of April, 1842, not having seen land for 128 days, since leaving New Zealand.

A prolonged stay in the Falklands, though the season was winter (April to the beginning of September), afforded ample opportunities for thoroughly investigating the Flora of that interesting and now highly important group.

On the 6th of September, the early spring of the southern latitudes, the Erebus and Terror, with a portion of the officers, sailed from Berkeley Sound for the neighbourhood of Cape Horn, and arrived there, after having been driven far out of their course by the equinoctial gales, on the 21st, casting anchor in St. Martin's Cove, Hermit Island, lat 55 degrees, within a few miles of the famed Cape Horn, which is immediately opposite the mouth of the Beagle. This is the most southerly spot on the globe which possesses anything above a herbaceous vegetation. Here, in the sheltered bays, the two kinds of antarctic beech, the evergreen and deciduous, form a dense, though small forest, and ascend, on a stunted form, to an elevation of 1000 feet on the hills.

The third cruise to the South Polar Regions was commenced on the morning of the 17th of December, 1842, when the expedition sailed from Berkeley Sound. An opportunity was afforded again of tracing the southern limit of Seaweeds. The Macrocystis was lost in lat. 55 degrees S., long. 57 degrees W.; but on attaining lat. 63 degrees, long. 54 degrees, another species, the Scytothalia Jacquinoti appeared, which had been originally discovered by Webster during the stay of Captain Forster's ship the Chanticleer, in Deception Island, one of the South Shetland group. On the 28th, land was made, which was named Palmer's Land, to which the name of "Terre Louis Philippe" has since been given by D'Urville. The ships were already in the pack-ice, through which they penetrated, tracing the land to 64 degrees W.

Unable, after a series of fruitless efforts, to penetrate farther than 65 degrees, and after having been more or less entangled in the ice for thirty-seven days, Sir James Ross finally bore up, and, not without difficulty, the ships had been extricated from the pack-ice, commenced tracing its edge to the eastward. A succession of easterly gales rendered the progress in the advancing season tedious and hazardous. At last, however, on the 22nd of February, 1843, the pack was lost sight of, trending to the south-west. On the 26th the antarctic circle was recrossed, and in spite of the rapidly shortening days, dark nights, and continual bad weather (for throughout the month of February, corresponding to an English August, only one day elapsed without snow), the commander persevered in holding a southerly course. On Sunday, the 5th of March, the weather being very thick, with occasionally snow squalls, the ice was made, a field whose appearance affords a sure indication of the proximity of pack-ice, and on the afternoon of the same day a heavy pack was descried, only a few yards ahead, with a terrific surf breaking on it. The ice here was such as not to allow of being "taken" (or entered), even under the most favourable circumstances, and the ships were accordingly put about in lat. 71 deg. 30 min. S., long. 15 deg. W.

The thickness of the weather made it impossible to ascertain the course and position of the pack, and the northward voyage was commenced under violent N.E. equinoctial gales. Bearing to the northward, the ice encountered on both tacks, and the vessels were found to be in a blight of the pack, with the ocean loaded with bergs, and while the continued snow-squalls prevented the possibility of seeing any object ahead, the heavy seas and snow-laden state of the rigging rendered all human exertions ineffectual. From that date to the 11th of March, matters remained much the same, the ships beating to the northward with as much press of sail as could be exposed, trusting to Providence alone for guidance among the bergs. On the 12th the position assigned to Bouvet's or Circumcision Island was passed, but the weather rendered all endeavours, for three days, to discover land in the place of no-avail. Both ships had a narrow escape of running foul of an iceberg, even when the sea was breaking, eighty feet high. The Erebus, passing to windward, struck one of the floating masses from it; and the Terror, to windward of her consort, did not recover the danger till almost too late, when bearing up, she ran along the edge of the berg in the wash of the surf. On the 24th D'Urville and Auroyaste were seen in lat 51 degrees S., and the last berg on March 25th, in latitude 47 degrees S., the ships finally gaining the Cape of Good Hope on the 4th of April, 1843, within two days of three years after they had first quitted that port for the high southern latitudes.

We are indebted for the preceding valuable communication to Dr. Joseph Dalton Hooker, of Kew, botanist to the expedition, who is now engaged by order of the Lords of the Treasury in preparing for publication a complete "Flora Antarctica," in which the plants of Lord Auckland's and Campbell's Island's of Kerguelens, and the Falkland Islands, of Tierra del Fuego, and of the south circumpolar regions, will be fully described and illustrated. Such a work is much needed, and will form a valuable addition to our scientific libraries. The first part will be issued in a few days.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, June 20.

SPAIN.

My last accounts from Madrid are to the 12th; they contain no political news of importance. The Minister of Finance was endeavouring to raise money for the immediate necessities of the State, the voyage of the two Queens having completely exhausted the treasury, but without success. Several conferences had taken place with the directors of the bank of San Fernando, but the security demanded could not be granted by the Minister. I must correct myself, I informed that Don Carlos never consented to abdicate; that, pressed by those visionists anxious to bring about a marriage, he once, and only once, in the heat of discussion promised to retire from public life, provided his son was recognised as Charles the Sixth. The conferring on M. Munoz, the husband of Christina, the title of the Duke de Rianxares, with the dignity of Grandee of Spain of the first class, has given great offence to the ancient nobility. The people seem to regard the new peer as a fit subject for their merriment, and many piquante paquanades have been posted against the walls. The Duke is now on his road to Madrid; he crossed the Bidassoa on the 13th, and will reach the capital on the 16th.

Private letters from Cuenca to Cadiz to the 19th, continue to give accounts of the levies held by the Carlists, but contain no news of any interest.

A farm near Aguilina, on the frontiers of Catalonia, was attacked on the 5th by four armed brigands. Fortunately some Custom-house officers came up in time to protect the inhabitants. Two of the brigands were killed, and the third was severely wounded.

Notwithstanding the 196 Carlists that since the 22nd of last month in Valencia and La Mancha, a greater portion of the southern provinces continue to be overrun with numerous guerilla parties.

ITALY.

A letter from Naples of the 4th, contains the following anecdote, the truth of which it guarantees:—"It is known that the Kingdom of Naples recognised the Government of Mexico, through the influence of France. A similar embouring state, which beholds with great displeasure French influence exercised in Italy, wished to take its revenge for the snort of check it had met with on the Spanish question, and found occasion for it in the case of Mexico. The Duke de Montbel, ex-Minister of Charles X, was despatched some short time since to Naples, charged with a matrimonial mission. M. De Montbel made most advantageous offers—he even consented to marry sans dot. His Majesty, though a great lover of money, would not listen to the proposal, and intimated to M. de Montbel very politely that Naples was not in want of husbands."

The branch railroad from Caserto to Capua has been opened to the public, and we can now travel direct from Naples to Capua by Castello: a branch line to Nola is far advanced. The exhibition of National products was opened on the 31st of May.

GERMANY.

The German papers contain long accounts of the riots of the journeymen weavers in Silesia, considered as very serious. A great number of the rioters had retired to the mountains. The property of the master weavers destroyed, is said to be of considerable value. Some rioting has also taken place at Breslau, but the injury was confined to the breaking of windows.

Immediately after the funeral of the Duke d'Angoulême, the Duchess, accompanied by the Duke de Bordeaux and Mademoiselle, will take up her residence at Kirchsberg.

The population of Vienna was, at the beginning of the present year, 375,634 souls, being an increase of 13,000 since 1839.

The Augsberg Gazette contains the following intelligence from the frontiers of Turkey:—"The latter end of May, the Montenegrins attacked a caravan of Turkish merchants who were returning from Italy. They killed a number of them, and took away their goods and horses, and then sent to M. Vadika the bleeding heads of the unfortunate tradesmen as a sign of victory."

A letter from Dresden of the 8th says, that the son of the celebrated composer, C. M. Weber, was on the point of setting out for London, to bring back the mortal remains of his father, deposited in the Catholic chapel in Moorfields; the clergy have generously offered to pay the whole expense of the transport; while a committee of professional musicians and dilettanti has been formed for receiving the body of the great maestro with all solemnity, for conducting it to the general cemetery, and for erecting a monument to the memory of the author of Der Freyschutz of suitable magnificence.

A letter received from Brussels gives the following state of the receipt of the Belgian railroads for 1843:—Passengers, 2,482,259 francs; for merchandise, 3,518 285 francs; total, 6,004,539 francs. The expenses of working them were 5,000,000 of francs, so that the profit has been 3,004,539 francs; after deducting 1,334,869 francs for the interest of the capital employed, which was 137,573,077 francs, there remains 469,000 francs for dividend.

FRANCE.

The Morocco affair continues the great, and I may say the only subject of conversation. The partisans of the Minister consider that the quarrel will be settled without fighting. The oppositionists and republicans are determined to have a war, coute que coute; they rely on their idol, the Prince de Joinville, for picking a quarrel. The Prince left Paris on the morning of the 17th, the bearer of positive instructions to watch, and not to act. We believe many rumours afloat giving as certain that as first the Prince indignantly refused so pacifics a mission, but ultimately gave way, and promised to act with temper and moderation. I much doubt the truth of all these gobe-mouches reports. The Prince is a young and spirited officer, with too much good sense to wish to embroil France in a war; the opponents of the Government and the enemies of the King, however, do everything in their power to inflame the minds of the people. The only thing worth remarking, and which has caused some sensation, is a species of scene official article in the Journal des Debats. After some remarks on the pacific views of the Emperor of Morocco, the journal says, "A provocation of this nature cannot be suffered to remain unpunished, and the Consul General of France at Tangiers, has been instructed to demand the most complete reparation." This hostile declaration is followed by, "this, we do not doubt, the governors of Morocco will at once grant, knowing well that it cannot resist its being enforced." The Journal des Debats avails itself of the quarrel with Morocco, to make the following declaration as regards Algiers worth recording:—"In repudiating every idea of acquiring a new territory, we are resolved to maintain the entirety and establish the security of what we do possess. We will preserve for Algeria what we may more surely call our grace."

A telegraphic despatch was received on the 12th inst., at Toulon, ordering the immediate recall of the Suffren, line of battle ship, from the islands of Hyères, and to fit her up with all possible expedition for the reception of the Prince de Joinville.

The Viceroy of Egypt is about to send to Paris, Hussein Bey, his third son, and Achmet Bey, the eldest of Ibrahim Pasha's children. The two young Princes are about the same age, eighteen years. To extend the advantages which Egypt would reap from their stay in France, the Viceroy will have them accompanied by twenty young persons, selected from amongst the most considerable families, or amongst the best pupils of the Cavalry, Artillery, and Polytechnic Schools. The Princes and their fellow pupils will be placed in France under the direction of Stephen Effendi, the Secretary of Mission in Paris. The brothers of the Princes are to join or replace them, according as their age will allow them to travel with advantage. They will leave Egypt about the 18th of June.

Two explosions by explosion of gas have occurred in the coal mines of Marchienne-au-Pont. By one of these, seven men were killed, and eighteen wounded; by the other, two persons were killed and five wounded.

A terrible duel fell on the 13th, at Blaisois, in the department of Ain, on the house of a weaver, and killed his wife whilst suckling her infant—the child was unhurt.

Many pre-reliefs of the hall of the ancestors of Maeris have just arrived in Paris from Egypt, having been sent to the Royal Library from that country by a French traveller. They present about sixty portraits of the Pharaohs in their dynastic order.

The following is extracted from an interesting work, called "L'Histoire des Prisons de la Seine:"—"In 1794 there were twenty-eight prisons in Paris, containing 7166 inmates. At present there are only seven prisons, including one for females; there are, besides, a house of repression and a prison for soldiers. Under the ancient régime, before 1789, Paris and its environs had ten prisons, one of which was the Port-l'Evêque, a house of detention for debtors, as well as for disobedient or uncivil comedians"!

In a recent duel, between a professor of a military school of the Netherlands and a lieutenant, the former was killed. The survivor has been tried before a court-martial, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. The two seconds were condemned to three years of the same punishment.

An entirely new race of horses has been introduced into France, called Nedjdi, the pure blood of which will be preserved by means of stallions and mares presented to Louis Philippe by the Viceroy of Egypt, in 1842. These valuable horses are kept at the Arab stud-house, in the park of St. Cloud.

The price of bread is this week fixed at 3d. (about 3¼d.) the 2 pounds, French weight.

Prince Napoleon LouisBuonaparte intends publishing a pamphlet, called "Extinction of Pauperism."

The Court has gone into mourning for the Duc d'Angoulême. I have also learnt that the Count of Viennes has been ordered into mourning for sixteen days.

An extensive sporting establishment has been introduced into France, called Nedjdi, the pure blood of which will be preserved by means of stallions and mares presented to Louis Philippe by the Viceroy of Egypt, in 1842. These valuable horses are kept at the Arab stud-house, in the park of St. Cloud.

The price of bread is this week fixed at 3d. (about 3¼d.) the 2 pounds, French weight.

Prince Napoleon LouisBuonaparte intends publishing a pamphlet, called "Extinction of Pauperism."

The Court has gone into mourning for the Duc d'Angoulême. I have also learnt that the Count of Viennes has been ordered into mourning for sixteen days.

An entirely new race of horses mishes between the Monte Videans and the forces under Oribe, the latter have been defeated. Fruetuoso Rivera is stated to have collected a large body of men and horses and to have expressed a determination to bring the war to an end by a general engagement.

CHINA.

HONG-KONG.—The Cormorant transport ship arrived at Woolwich on Tuesday, and after landing a detachment of invalids from the Royal Artillery stationed at Hong-Kong, proceeded up the river to Deptford. The Cormorant left Hong-Kong on February 2nd, with detachments of the Royal Artillery, the 18th, 55th, and 98th Regiments. Of the Royal Artillery, two died on the passage home; of the detachment of the 18th Regiment, three died; of the 55th Regiment, about fifteen died; of the 98th Regiment, about thirteen died; and one woman and three of the ship's crew, and several man-of-war sailors invalided, and on their passage home. The sickness at Hong Kong only became serious about this time last year, the casualties, previous to that period, being scarcely in a greater proportion than is usual at favourable stations; and it is somewhat singular, that at the latest dates, only one private of the large detachment of Royal Sappers and Miners in China, under Lieut. Collinson, R.E., had died, the other seven who had been sick, and greatly emaciated, having entirely recovered their health and strength, and are now engaged in superintending Chinese workmen in constructing eligible buildings for the troops, and raising fortifications. Colonel Chesney, on his arrival at Hong-Kong, assumed the command of the Royal Artillery, and under his immediate superintendence every step has been taken to render the island more healthy, and when the stagnant water is drained off, it is expected sickness will not attack the troops again in a severe form. The island is described as healthy in some parts, and in contrary in other parts, which could only be ascertained by experience of its pestilential character, and the latter will be avoided in future.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

On Tuesday night the return of Fanny Elsler attracted a brilliant and crowded audience. We have so often chronicled the rapid steps this prima donna of danseuses makes season after season in public favour, that we have nothing left to say, unless it be, that if possible, she is more fascinating than ever.

On Thursday Costa's new opera seria "Don Carlos," was performed for the first time, and for the composer's benefit, as the bills announced. It is a work of more dramatic power, and orchestral taste (his skill was never doubted) than we had hitherto given the author of "Malek Adel" credit for. In full of graceful melody and erudite harmonic constructions, without being surcharged with that over-instrumentation which was the besetting sin of his former productions. Last week we gave an outline of the plot of the libretto we will now speak of the music; the principal dramatis personæ. Isabella (Grisi), Don Carlos (Mario), Posa (Fornasari), and Filippo (Lablache), than whom a more splendid quartet could not be well imagined, were the chief personages who performed Costa's beautiful music. Perhaps Filippo, welcome as he always is, appears "monotonously" on the scene, but we must not object to a small fault, where of beauties "plura nitent in carbine!" The Trio Andante was a most exquisite morceau, and the duet between Fornasari and Lablache bids fair to rival Bellini's celebrated one in the "Puritani." Grisi had some exquisite "bits" to sing, and the house was extremly thronged by rank and fashion. Room is a vulgar word in the Opera House—so it is with us: we have neither room nor space to say or write any more about Costa's very admirable production till next week.

HAYMARKET.

On Tuesday night last the long-talked-of "Prize" Comedy was produced at this house, and unfortunately turned up a "Blank!". To write a sterling comedy requires a combination of abilities on the part of the author rarely to be met with united in one person. A thorough knowledge of life—an almost intuitive perception of the nuances of character—a perfectly graphic pencil to sketch them—a smack of sentiment—a considerable fund of humour—a deep mine of wit, that does not always exhibit its riches—a vein of corrective, not invective—satire—a constructiveness that can invent a probable series of incidents—a felicitous power of making everybody speak after his own fashion (thereby preserving identity, as old Homer did in all his characters)—and above all, Good Taste, are necessary concessions, or equivalents, before one can venture to attempt the task of Comedy. And were these discernible in the "Prize Comedy?" Not one of them. The piece is incoherent and plotless.

The dramatis personæ by the way, why does Mr. Farren place a long accent on the second syllable of dramatis?) consist of the Earl of Hunsdon, a retired Minister (Stuart), his lady (Mrs Clifford), his son, an Etonian youth, who has learned more slang than Latin (Mrs. Nisbett), a wealthy retired citizen (Buckstone), seeking eagerly after aristocratical elevation; his wife (a kind of Lady Duberly) a vulgar good sort of body (Mrs. Glover), their servant Bridget (Mrs. Humby), a nondescript Captain "of all work" (Buckstone), a Lieutenant in the Navy (Hall), and a treacherous friend of the Earl's (Tilbury), and, though last not least, an old gentleman, Sir George Mordent (Mr. Farren), who tries to be as sarcastic as his text will allow him to be—

These all in soft confusion sought the shade
And fil'd the pause that comedy had made.

Oh! Horace! Horace! you little thought when you wrote

Eupolis, atque Cratinus, Aristophanesque poetæ
Atque alii, quorum comœdia prisca virorum est.

You little thought we could parody your lines and deplore in our days the loss of our Congreves, Farquhars, Murphys, Sheridans, Colmans, atque alii, who upheld our ancient comedy. Of the present generation we cannot say one word in favour. It is a chance-medley-medley of characters, and is distinguished throughout by the lowest and most witless dialogue that was ever spoken on a stage. Occasionally it is indecent—witness that speech of Bridget in the garden, where the resolves upon tracing the footmarks. We are sorry to say thus much of it, but a comedy that is sent forth to the public as the "power and pith" of English dramatic energy,—as a sample of its genius in that difficult line of composition, cannot be looked upon too inquisitively, by any one who wishes to preserve the comœdia prisca or rather vera. There was an evident willingness of exertion on the parts of the actors to do their best to keep the ship afloat, but despite all their efforts it sank in of public disapprobation. Webster very adroitly extricated himself, in a short address to the audience, from any connection with the seven wise men upon whose judgment the presented play was deemed superior to the other ninety-six or seven, and seemed to meet the verdict of the audience as stoically as if he had anticipated it. One word at parting: if ladies will write such things and ladies play such smoking parts as the Etonian Gamin, if vulgarity rudely turn out politeness, and coarse thoughts garbed in bad grammar take precedence of refined idea—why then indeed, farewell to comedy.

The deep—deep sea

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Weariness
Can secure upon the flint, when restive sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.—SHAKSPEARE.

Whoso would eat and drink with an essence of relish that will make him wish, with Quin, his throat was a mile long, and every inch of it palate: whoso would sleep with a forty parson-power, and snore upon flint stones, must play cricket. Its species in the title to this our article. "As hungry as a hunter" is a proverb, and let the corporation of Bristol be assured of this great fact in gastronomy, "that better is half a yard of pudding" in the human vertiginis with a "Be-fe-fum" yearning in it, than a universe of calipash to a morbid gaster. We have read in history of a fellow who could sit sleep because of a rose leaf that inconvenienced him: we know many for whom the whole set of Messrs. Miles and Edwards'un vain essayed to secure a wink. We should have liked to see them at roost after an autumn day among the Perthshire hills with the grouse; or a second manage with Kent against England at Lord's; and consequently now triumphantly as fine a game as ever was played at stumps. On this occasion, the new rules came first into operation, which may be thus epitomised:—Every run which is made for a "wide ball" is scored against the party by whom it is bowled. To this end the names of the bowlers are attached to the scoring tallies, and the whole number of runs got off wide balls are carried out from the "wides" so scored

On Monday, the Hampton setting took place at Tattersall's (a small affair of course), and an attempt was made at wavering on coming events, which truly cost their shadows before, for dull as blue-devilism they were. A "gent" with the outward man of a sinking sheriff's officer was there serving subpœnas in the matter of an assault and battery case at the last Doncaster meeting, in which a Mr. Wood is plaintiff, and Leadbitter, the well-known body-guard of the leger, defendant. Wood was served with a summary ejectment from the cheerful precincts of the Stand no doubt, because ourself was present at the execution of the process; whether the verdict of the jury shall be "served him right," remains to be seen. The Running Rein and Orlando case was also on the carpet. They took all they could get (naturally), that Colonel Peel won. Some laid 9 to 1 about it; some, they say, laid 5 to 2: this latter we did not see. The issue is near at hand, though not so near as the daily papers announced. The week's racing consisted of the two days at Bibury and Stockbridge, and like two at Hatcham Park—the suburban meeting. The only event of account was displayed at at Bibury, the Champagne Stakes for two-year-olds. This was won by Captain Delmé's Alarm, a colt in next year's Derby—and one destined to be in the betting, too. We now come to the fun that is to say, to Hatcham Park. Nothing can sound less Olympian than the earthy tabernacle of this tryst—at the back of the Rising Sun, OLD KENT ROAD." There's a bathos! The place itself is not so bad, when you get to it—but there's the rub. When somebody wrote to ask Brummel to dine in Russell-square, his answer was, he should be very happy to accept the invitation, if he only knew where to change horses. The same may be said of Hatcham Park: it really is a very long way from anywhere. But un excellence of order, and in social decorum it might have set a lesson to courtly Ascot. Nothing could be more admirable. The racing, for second rate pretension, was very good; good horses, good riders, and, better still, really good stakes. With a little more time and embellishment Hasham Park will be quite on equal terms with Hampton.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The "ring" is still so much depressed by the anomalous position in which Cotherstone stands in the late Derby, that betting on Tuesday's events is almost at a stand still. We shall, therefore, simply remark that Parthian and Fousain are the present "lions" of the Northumberland plate, and that the investments by which the prices of the other favourites are governed, are insignificant:—

	NORTHUMBERLAND PLATE
5 to 1 agst Parthian (t)	10 to 1 agst The Rea (t)	20 to 1 agst Galanthus
7 to 1 — Fousain (t)	12 to 1 — The Rashaw	20 to 1 — Pompey
8 to 1 — Bay Momus	20 to 1 — What LEDGER
8 to 1 agst Bay Momus	10 to 1 agst Ithaniel (t)	30 to 1 agst Infidel
	12 to 1 agst Le Sancy
	5 to 2 on Orlando (t)

THURSDAY.—The attendance was good, and included some of the "influentials:" but business was as dull as to be scarcely worth mentioning. The only bets we heard were 4 to 1 agst Parthian, 7 to 1 agst. Fousain, 8 to 1 agst. Bay Momus, and 20 to 1 agst. Whistle Junkin, for the Northumberland Plate; 200 to 100 on Orlando, and 3 to 1 against Bloodstone for the "Trials;" and 100 even on twelve agst. the field for the Goodwood Stakes. Offers to take 5 to 1 about The Curé for the St. Leger. There is not the slightest prospect of the trial, Orlando versus Running Rein, coming on before Monday week. At Messrs. Tattersall's sale, this day, Ratan and Extempore were sold to Mr. Shackel for 800 guineas each.

THE THAMES REGATTA.

The first of the "three glorious days" for the professional and amateur watermen of the River Thames was celebrated on Thursday, with less of that pomp and circumstance than might have been expected on such an occasion. The morning was occasionally showery. The whole of the arrangements were settled after the most business-like fashion; there were no mistakes, no squabbles, and everything went off to the satisfaction of every one present, excepting, we suppose, the unsuccessful competitors. The committee had provided a steamer for the use of their friends: we were anxious to see the sports of the day, but as the vessel was moored off Putney they had not a favourable opportunity for seeing several of the heats.

The first match of the day was a contest between amateur scullers for a silver challenge cup, given by Mr. Layton; this, after a well-contested struggle, was won by G. J. Bumpstead, Esq., who displayed qualities of a first-rate sculler as a sculler. The next race was a pair oars match for a purse of eighty sovereigns, to be rowed for by watermen. After a hard struggle this was won by Lett and Campbell. These were followed by the apprentices race for a coat, badge, &c., presented by E. Byrne, Esq.

The committee were punctual in keeping time, but it is to be regretted that the competitors did not keep their colours in the head of their boats, as it would save much confusion and mistake. Each waterman wore dresses of his colour, which was an excellent arrangement. Towards the close of the afternoon's sport the company had very considerably increased, and things wore a much brighter aspect than at the opening.

On Thursday John Stewart, and Sarah, his wife, were committed from Clerkenwell to the House of Correction for three months, with hard labour, as vagrants. They are well known as begging-letter impostors.

FRIDAY.—At the usual hour the races commenced. The first race, the Amateur Pair Oars for two silver cups, was won by Messrs. James and Dalgleish. The Fifty Sovereign Prize for four-oared boats, was won by the Newcastle crew. The Watermens' Sculls for 50 sovs, was won by Newell. The Gold Challenge Cup, eight-oared match, was won by the Oxford University Club. The Chelsea crew won the Landsmen Sweepstakes. The day was remarkably fine, and the attendance very numerous.

THE WATERLOO BANQUET

Tuesdaylast being the anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington gave his customary banquet at Apsley House, to a numerous party of the gallant officers who participated in the glories of that ever memorable engagement.

Long previous to the usual hour of meeting, the gateways of his grace's mansion were crowded by persons of all classes, anxious to obtain a glimpse of the distinguished veterans who were to assemble at the noble duke's hospitable board. By seven o'clock some hundreds of individuals had congregated, including a number of noble equestrians, and many of the nobility in their carriages, which rendered that populous thoroughfare nearly impassable for an hour, a strong body of police under Superintendent Baker, were, however, so instrumental in preserving order, that not the slightest accident occurred.

shortly before seven the carriages began to arrive, and while the company were gathering, the full band of the Grenadier Guards (the Duke's regiment), stationed in the vestibule, performed a variety of martial music

The Marquis of Anglesey, Lord Strafford, Lord Saltoun, &c., on being recognized by the assemblage without, were warmly cheered

It was twenty minutes past seven when his Royal Highness Prince Albert arrived from Buckingham Palace, attended by Major-General Sir Edward Bowater, (a Waterloo officer) and Lord George Lennox. The Duke of Wellington was at the door to welcome his Royal Highness, as the carriage entered the court yard, and on the Prince alighting the noble and gallant duke advanced and cordially greeted his illustrious visitor. The duke then conducted his Royal Highness to the sa son where all the company had met, the band, as the Prince passed, playing the "Coburg March."

At half-past seven precisely dinner was announced, when the duke, with the Prince and the other guests, repaired to the gallery where, as usual, a sumptuous repast awaited the presence of the host and his friends

It is quite unnecessary to give a lengthened description of the splendid spectacle always appropriated for this annual entertainment, for, in a note of it, as our readers, its valuable and extensive collection of paintings, by the ancient masters, particularly of Italy and Spain, is well known, and the superior and costly nature of its embellishments have often afforded admiration to our haute noblesse

The table presented most of its general features, the celebrated and certainly unrivalled Portuguese plateau, with its many splendid statues and figures, being placed along the centre of the table. At each end of the gallery were sideboards of gold plate, the assemblage having many conspicuous pieces of massive ornamental plate, presented at different times by the noble duke. The gallery was illuminated by candelabra, and the only lights for the table were from the two stupendous porphyry pedestals, richly mounted in ormulu, sustaining about fifty lamps, which were presented to the duke by the Emperor Alexander of Russia. There was a profusion of the choicest exotics, not only in the gallery, but in the superb rooms through which the company passed.

The banquet was served up in the service of gold, and the dessert service used was the magnificent set of Potsdam china, a gift from the late King of Prussia to his grace

The gallery, when all the guests were seated, attired in their rich and varied uniforms, decorated with the orders and medals acquired by their gallantry, could not fail to excite the admiration of the fortunate beholder, as presenting a gorgeous coup d'œil. The Duke of Wellington was supported on the right by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and on the left by his Excellency Prince Castelcicala. The Marquis of Anglesey sat on the right of Prince Albert. The duke and Prince Albert were the full uniform of Field Marshals in the British army.

It was remarked by all present that the duke appeared in the enjoyment of most excellent health and spirits.

The full regimental band of the Grenadier Guards played selections of music during the banquet, under the direction of Mr Creaton.

On the dessert having been placed on the table, as is customary, the Duke of Wellington rose, and proposed "The Queen." Band—"The national anthem."

The noble and gallant duke next proposed the health of "His Royal Highness Prince Albert." Band—"The Coburg March."

Field-Marshal his Royal Highness Prince Albert, in compliment to the toast, after a brief address, concluded by giving the health of the illustrious host—"The Duke of Wellington," which was drunk upstanding, with all honours.

The Duke of Wellington, in a few words, returned thanks. Band—"The British Grenadiers"

"The Army" was then given by the duke. Band—"The Grenadier's March."

The noble Duke then, in energetic language, gave as a toast, "The Cavalry that fought at Waterloo." Band—"The Albert Gallop."

The Marquis of Anglesey acknowledged the toast.

The Duke of Wellington next proposed "The health of Lord Strafford and the old Guardsmen."

Lord Strafford and the whole of those officers attached to the several brigades of the Guards rose. His lordship, in a short speech, returned thanks for himself and brother officers. Band—"Love not."

The noble and gallant host then rose, and in a few flattering observations concluded by giving "The health of Lord Saltoun," which was drank amidst general applause

Lord Saltoun replied, gratefully thanking the noble duke for the honour conferred upon him by proposing his health. Band—"The Sons of Wellesley."

The noble duke next proposed "The health of Lord Hardinge, the gallant colonel, having re...ce...

His grace then gave as a toast, "Earl Cathcart and the Staff Officers of Field Marshals," which acknowledged the toast. Band—"Marseilles."

Sir John May's health was then proposed by the noble duke, and after that gallant officer had returned thanks,

The noble duke, in proposing the health of Sir James Kempt, remarked that he had been prevented from dining with them this day from severe ... so, he would assure them that no one could more ... than he (the duke) did. His grace then gave "The better health of Sir James Kempt," which toast having been duly honoured,

His Royal Highness Prince Albert said the duke made a movement to retire.

It was after ten o'clock when the noble duke and his Royal Highness Prince Albert adjourned to another room to partake of coffee; and, en attendant, many of the gallant company departed.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Major-General Sir Edward Bowater and Lord George Lennox, left at twenty minutes past ten, the noble and gallant duke accompanying his august guest to the royal carriage in waiting in the court yard, the military band performing the "Coburg March."

All the company had left by a quarter to eleven, the duke himself going afterwards to the Duke and Duchess of Somerset's party.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

Sir Moses Montefiore has prescribed his co-religionists at Jerusalem with two presses, and the necessary types, for printing Jewish tracts. The office consists of 22 people of that persuasion. A number of works, as well as an almanack for the year, have already been printed at Jerusalem.

The Life of a novel entitled "Clisson et Eugénie," from the pen of Napoleon, and the authenticity of which has been verified by a commission appointed by the Duke of Bassano, is now in the library of Count Titus Dzialynski, of Kossnia near Posen. This library possesses also the plan which Napoleon drew up when he intended to offer his military services to the Sultan, as he was then in very straitened circumstances, occupying a small room in one of the bye streets of Paris.

The hand loom weavers in Carlisle are at present all fully employed, and so great has been the demand for their labour, that an advance of wages has taken place upon several fabrics manufactured in that place.

The monument to Sir David Wilkie is now erected in the church of Cults. It is truly an exquisite work of art. So striking is the likeness, that many of the parishioners who have seen it discovered at once the features of the man whom it is designed to represent.

Two handsome gold watches reached New Cross on Monday morning, from her Majesty the Queen Dowager, as presents to the engine-driver and fireman who took her Majesty to Dover on the preceding Monday.

We learn that Ministers have declared their desire of having the complaints brought by the Court and the inhabitants of Guernsey, against the Lieut. Governor, heard by the Privy Council in the last week of July.

The annual examination of the boys in the British and Foreign School took place on Wednesday in the large school-room, which was crowded by a most respectable auditory. Sir George Grey, Bart., M.P., took the chair. The answers to questions proposed by the visitors, as well as those put by the monitors, were most satisfactory. The whole exhibition was stated by the chairman to be one of the most effective of the kind ever witnessed.

The Pope has conferred the Cross of Commander of the Order of St. Gregory the Great on Count F. de Merode and on Count de Hompesch, President and Vice President of the Belgian Colonisation Society, as a special mark of his sat afaction with the proceedings of the company, and the services which it has rendered to the Church in central America.

Ten of the Canadian rebels convicted in 1838, named Hiram Sharp, John Gilman, Ira Polly, Orrin W. Smith, Benja Woodbury, George T. Brown, Dan Lakan, Robert Q. Collins, John Thomas, and Edward A. Wilson, have received a free pardon from the British Government at the instance of the American Minister.

After an investigation of nearly three days, the magistrates of Leeds committed ten of the military and seven civilians to take their trial on charges of being concerned in the riotous proceedings which took place in that town some time ago.

Sir Robert Peel has answered the application of the London bankers for an extension of the Bank of England's power of issuing on securities beyond the £9,000,000 in case of emergency.

At Nottingham, last week, six carriers were convicted (one in £10 and costs, the other five £5 and costs) for carrying passengers for hire without a License.

It is now an ascertained fact that the hay crop of the present year will be little more than one third of the usual average. This has given a great rise to linseed cake and other substituted articles of fodder.

A labourer on Monday last a labourer in Dedham, in Essex, received the pleasing and unexpected intelligence by post, that he was entitled to a legacy of £900, bequeathed him by the late William Fisher, Esq., of Hoxted.

On the morning of the 18th inst. the tri-coloured banner, by which the brave Scots Greys on the battle field of Waterloo was presented at Windsor Castle, and placed in the guard chamber over the beautifully executed bust, by Chantrey, of his Grace the Duke of Wellington. This is the twenty-ninth banner received by the Duke of Waterloo.

On Wednesday morning, at four o'clock, died, at his house in Museum-street, Mr. Thomas Hudson, the well-known comic-song writer and singer. For the last thirty years the town has been enlivened by his droll effusions, peculiarly adapted for post-prandial harmony

A jubilee in honour of the genius of Burns, is about to be celebrated under the auspices of a committee of gentlemen at the Lord Committee of Ayrshire, in which the patriotic scheme originated. Committees of influential gentlemen in Edinburgh and Glasgow are either forming, or in the course of being so to co-operate in giving eclat to the anticipated scene.

The annual festival of the Freemasons Asylum, the crowning charity of the Masonic body, took placeon Wednesday, under the auspices of the Hon. Colonel Anson. There was a large muster of "the craft" and other friends of benevolence, as the dinner was not confined to Freemasons on this occasion.

Some ruffian has defaced the inscription on the obelisk at Quebec, pointing out the spot where General Wolfe fell.

Some bas-reliefs of the hall of the ancestors of Mœris have just arrived in Paris, from Egypt, having been sent to the Royal Library from that country by a French traveller. They present about 60 portraits of the Pharaohs in eyastic order.

The members of the club of "True Highlanders" mustered very strongly at their Highland costume, on Monday, and proceeded to Blackheath, headed by their piper, and spent a delightful day in playing the national game of "shinty," nearly similar to the game of golf in England.

The Chartists of Westminster have it in contemplation to erect a large building to be called the Locke and Watt Hall, which is to be a school for their instruction in science, literature, the fine arts, moral, social, and political economy, and also for the education of their children. It is, moreover, to have a new-room and library.

On Tuesday the Trinity Bnoy steam-yacht towed off to its station, on the Goodwin Sands, a stupendous safety beacon, designed and executed, we perceive, by James Walker, Esq., C.E., under the auspices of the Trinity Board. The beacon is intended not only to be a guide to mariners, but also a place of refuge for the crews of vessels cast away on the fatal Goodwin.

Herr JacquesOffenbach, the celebrated violoncellist, has been presented with her

THE GRAND OXFORD COMMEMORATION.

THE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

This famed triennial festival may be said to have commenced on Sunday, when charity sermons were preached by the Dean of Jersey, at Carfax; and by Dr. Hampden at St. Clement's; and a new organ was opened by Dr. Marshall, at St. Paul's. In the evening, there was a grand promenade in New College Gardens, Christ Church Meadows, and the Broad Walk, which were crowded with gay company until nightfall.

On Monday night, the first Ball took place at the Town-hall, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion; the walls were covered with pink drapery, on which were festoons of green foliage. The room was lighted with gas jet from the ceiling, and with wax lights in branches from the walls. Refreshments were served in the council chamber. Dancing commenced at half-past nine o'clock and continued about five hours; the room was much crowded.

On Tuesday morning the usual sermon in aid of the Radcliffe Infirmary, was preached by the Bishop of Chichester (late Principal of Brasenose College), in St. Mary's Church, every part of which was completely crowded, the galleries usually occupied by undergraduate members, were filled by elegantly-dressed ladies, as were also the parochial pews below; the whole formed a beautiful coup d'œil. The musical part of the service was the "Te Deum" and "Jubilate," the anthem, "Plead thou my cause," Mozart, and the Old Hundredth Psalm. When the congregation left the church, the High street was nearly filled by it. One of our engravings represents the university procession just issuing from the highly-decorated porch of St. Mary's. The collection was considerable. The horticultural exhibition, in the afternoon, surpassed any that has preceded it. The show was held, by permission, in Worcester-gardens, and afforded every opportunity for displaying the various productions, which were most tastefully arranged in six marquees, and every spectator seemed highly delighted with the entertainment. An excellent brass band played at intervals during the time the gardens remained open. At four o'clock the first concert commenced in the Sheldonian Theatre, in which a temporary orchestra was erected for the occasion. The performance was Handel's oratorio of the "Messiah," with a very full orchestra, containing first-rate talent, both in the vocal and instrumental departments. Every part of the theatre was crowded, and many ladies were unable to obtain seats. The favourite choruses, "For unto us a child is born," and "Lift up your heads," were particularly well executed, and the Hallelujah chorus was powerfully performed. The voices of the female chorus singers were rather too prominent, but on the whole it was a masterly performance.

On Wednesday morning the ancient and beautiful city of colleges presented an unusually striking appearance. Fresh arrivals were continually taking place, and fresh applications for beds and accommodation were pouring in long after inn and lodging-house keepers had declared verbally, and still more intelligibly by their charges, that they had no further hospitality to extend to the chance wayfarer.

Oxford, a place which can never be visited without feelings of the deepest interest by any man who has the least respect for the learned institutions of his country, or is in any way amenable to the laws of association, has been, during the past week, invested with new sources of attraction. The colleges, libraries, promenades, and other objects of interest with which this noble seat of learning abounds, were visited by groups of strangers, and in other respects the place was unusually cheerful. All who had the means were liberally performing the rites of hospitality, and all the ingenious contrivances of hearty goodwill were put into requisition to make the sojourn of visitors [illegible] and memorable. Great numbers of the clergy, as well as civilians, and others connected with the university, were seen in different directions, and not a few considerably advanced in years, as though renewing the recollections of their youth, and regarding with pride and tenderness the scenes of early and honourable competition.

The concert this morning—the first grand miscellaneous concert of the University Musical Festival took place in the theatre at 12 o'clock. Long before that hour, the theatre, both the pits and galleries, was filled with a large assemblage of beauty and fashion. Sir R. Bishop, Mus. Bac., Oxon, acted as conductor, and Dr. Marshall presided at the pianoforte. The principal vocal performers were Mesdmes. Dorus Gras, Miss Rainforth, Miss M. Marshall, Mrs. Alfred Shaw, Signor Salvi, Mr. Manvers, Mr. J. Bennett, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. H. Phillips, and Herr Staudigl. Among the instrumental solo performers were Signor Sivori, Messrs. Card, Grattan, Cooke, Harper, and Signor Dragonetti. Leaders of the band, Loder and Cramer. The concert was in all respects highly satisfactory. The extraordinary professional ability engaged insured this, but everything was in accordance—a fine morning, after the abundant and most salutary rains of the previous night—a large and splendid audience, together with the highest musical talent, presented a combination which could hardly fail to yield cheerful and universal enjoyment.

In the Divinity School, was read, by Robert Wheeler Bush, M.A., scholar of Worcester College, the Theological Essay, for which the prize was awarded. Our engraving shows this fine room, with the promenade of the company; it presents one of the rich Gothic interiors in the country, and it has a splendid stone roof, which was repaired and restored by Sir Christopher Wren. The room itself was originally built in 1480.

Thursday, the grand day, was commenced by a Convocation, held at half past eight o'clock, for the purpose of admissions to ad eundem degrees; the access to the Convocation House being through the small entrance, next to the Ashmolean Museum.

The most magnificent scene, however, was in the great Sheldonian Theatre. This fine edifice, which is one of the principal ornaments of Oxford, was designed and completed in five years, by Sir Christopher Wren, at an expense of nearly £15000, defrayed by Archbishop Sheldon. The ground-plan of this theatre was taken from that of Marcellus, at Rome; and by a consummate contrivance and geometrical arrangement, it is made to receive, with convenience, upwards of 3000 persons. The richly-painted allegorical ceiling has the appearance of canvas strained over slit cordage &c. The theatre is used for Lord Crewe's Annual Commemoration of Benefactors; the recitation of Prize Compositions, and the occasional ceremony of conferring degrees on distinguished personages. When filled, it is particularly striking and splendid. The Vice-Chancellor, Noblemen, Professors, Doctors, and Proctors sit in their robes, in the northern or semicircular part of the theatre, on elevated seats; in the area are Masters of Arts and strangers; the Bachelors and Under-graduates sit in the upper galleries, and the ladies in the galleries below.

Among the interesting proceedings in this theatre on Thursday was the recital of four prize essays and poems, gained by the following gentlemen. English essay on "The Principles and Objects of Human Punishments," by C. E. Pritchard, B.M., Fellow of Balliol. This gentleman is one of the sons of Dr. Prichard, of Bristol, so well known to medical and general science by his able writings, particularly by his highly interesting and valuable work "On the Natural History of Man." The Latin essay on "Literarum Humaniorum Utilitas," is by the Rev. Harris Smith, B.A., Fellow of Magdalen College. This gentleman is brother to the Rev. B. Smith, whose conversion to the Romish faith occasioned so much sensation two years back. The Latin verse, "Triumphi Pompa apud Romanos," is by Mr. Edwin Palmer, scholar of Balliol College, and also Ireland and Hertford scholar, a nephew of Mr. Horsely Palmer and Mr. Palmer, M.P. for Essex. This young gentleman, who has already gained so many academical distinctions, was one of the foundation scholars of the Charterhouse School. The prize in English verse is "On the Battle of the Nile," and is by J. L. Brereton, scholar of University College. The Crewean Oration was delivered by the Rev. William Jacobson, M.A., Public Orator, being the first occasion upon which this gentleman discharged the duties of his office in public.

The honorary degree of D.C.L. was conferred on the Right Hon. the Earl of Powis; Sir William Coles Medlycott, Bart., formerly Gentleman Commoner of Trinity College; Captain Sir James Ross, R.N.; Major-General Pasley, Royal Engineers, C.B.; Sir John

THE PROCESSION FROM ST. MARY'S.

THE BOAT RACE.

Wither Awdry, Knight, M.A.; George Bowyer, Esq., M.A.; Donald Maclean, Esq., M.A., M.P. for the city of Oxford; William Entwisle, Esq., M.P. for South Lancashire; Mr. Sergeant Talfourd; George Biddell Airy, Esq., M.A., F.R.S., Astronomer-Royal; Francis Baily, Esq., F.R.S.; Professor Struve, Astronomer to his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias; Charles Robert Cockerell, Esq., R.A., Member of the Royal Institute of France.

Soon after eight o'clock, the entrance gates to the theatre were besieged, and shortly after they were opened, the building was crowded. The orchestra and the seats under the gallery were soon filled with elegantly dressed ladies, and the undergradates' gallery was speedily filled; and, although the new regulations kept them quiet for a few minutes, the clapping of hands once begun, was instantly followed up. A cry for "The Ladies," was instantly followed by cheer upon cheer. The Queen, the Queen Dowager, Prince Albert, the Prince of Wales, were loudly applauded. The mention of "the Duke of Wellington" called up the undergraduates en masse, who cheered most heartily; as were the Vice-Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor's lady, and the new proctors; then followed a groan for Jelf, a cheer for those rusticated last year, and a groan for the New Regulations. The names of Dr. Pusey, Hampden, and Faussett, and Mr. Macmullen, were received with cheers and disapprobation. Towards eleven o'clock the procession entered the theatre, the Vice-Chancellor being loudly cheered: then followed the noblemen, the heads of the houses, doctors, and proctors; among whom were the Earl of Eldon, Sir R. H. Inglis, Bart., M.P.; T. G. B. Estcourt, Esq., M.P., &c. The convocation was then opened by the Vice-Chancellor, and the degrees were conferred; the gentlemen being introduced, with appropriate speeches, by Dr. Phillimore, the Regius Professor of Civil Law. The Earl of Powis and Capt. Sir James Ross were enthusiastically cheered. The engraving represents the superb theatre, and this most starring scene. The English prize poem, the "Battle of the Nile," was vociferously applauded.

Another of our illustrations shows a recent boat race on the Isis, with a view of the famed "city of spires," from a sketch by Mr. Whittock. It is altogether a very animated spectacle, as well as a scene of great picturesque beauty. Not the least attractive of "the Commemoration" proceedings has hitherto been the procession of the University boats, and the cutters of all the colleges, which had taken part in the University boat races, in the order in which they had gained prizes, and thus they rowed from Iffley to Oxford. This striking river spectacle was to have been enacted on Tuesday, but was deferred in consequence of the heavy rain; and was again postponed on Wednesday from a similar cause.

One of the great attractions of the festival was the completion of the Taylor Institute, of which we shall present an engraving next week. This edifice, designed by Mr. Cockerell, R.A., has been founded by the bequests of Sir Robert Taylor, the architect, and of Dr. Randolph; the one for the study of modern languages, the other for a picture and statue gallery, the structure being intended to serve both purposes. It stands at the angle of St. Giles' and Beaumont-streets. Although the composition has some defects and inconsistencies, its masses are bold, striking, and picturesque, and have an universal expression of richness.

TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.—On Thursday, the gentleman educated in this college, celebrated their anniversary at the Clarendon Hotel, the right hon. the master in the chair.

THE LIVERPOOL COLLEGE.—The half-yearly Distribution of Prizes, in this excellent institution, took place on Monday, in the theatre of the College, when nearly 3000 persons were present; amongst whom were the Rev. J. Cowpheare, the Principal; and the Rev. Dr. Booth, Rev. J. H. Brown, Vice-Principals; the Rev. J. J. Higgins, the Rev. H. M'Neile; E. Molyneux, J. Booker, R. Hardbord, W. Jones, E. Jones, — Leyland, — Muncaster, — Shaw, S. L. Trotman, — Booker, Esqrs.; the Rev. J. Brooks, senior Rector of Liverpool, and Chairman of the Board of Directors, in the chair. The speeches of the Reverend H. M'Neile, and the Chairman, by their fervid eloquence, elicited great applause.

FIRE IN WHITECHAPEL.—On Monday morning, a fire broke out in the filtering-house of Messrs. Craven and Lucas, sugar-bakers, Duncan-street, Whitechapel, and the loss of property thereby occasioned, is estimated at £1000.

DEATH OF MR. CAMPBELL, THE POET.

Musarum comes.

Another string from Music's lute is gone,
The chord that thrill'd with Hope a ecstatic strain,—
We ne'er shall hear its magic sounds again,
Its tuneful tass of melody is done—
Its minstrel master a rest at length is run—
That hands a cold which once could wake the lyre
With all the rapture of Poetic fire,
And sing of Pity—Love, or warlike theme,
E'en all Imagination a self might dream!
Scholar! as deeply skill'd it approve the worth
Of the precursors as thyself to show
Descend not from a high Parnassian birth,
The Muses all thy sisters) in deep woe,
Thro e'en for Heave n, lament thy leaving Earth. W.

We regret to have to record the death of Mr. Thomas Campbell, which took place on Saturday last, at Boulogne.

THE LATE THOMAS CAMPBELL.

Scotland gave birth to Thomas Campbell. He was born at Glasgow in 1777, where he was sent early to school, under Mr. David Alison, who had a method of instruction in the classics purely his own. Campbell began to write verse in his boyhood, and some of his earliest attempts at poetry are yet extant among his friends in Scotland. When twelve years old, he quitted school for the University of Glasgow, where, in Greek, he was the foremost student of his age, and made poetical paraphrases of the most celebrated Greek poets: subsequently he came the pupil of the celebrated Dr. Millar, who was then delivering philosophical lectures in Glasgow.

Campbell quitted Glasgow to remove into Argyleshire, where he accepted a situation in a family of note. It was in Argyleshire, among the romantic mountains of the north, that his poetical spirit increased, and the charms of verse took entire possession of his mind; and there he wandered alone by the torrent, or on the rugged height, reciting the strains of other poets aloud, or silently composing his own; and several of his pieces, which he has rejected in his collected works, were long handed about in manuscript in Scotland.

From Argyleshire, Campbell removed to Edinburgh, where he became intimate with the late Dugald Stewart, and almost every other leading professor of the University. At the age of twenty-one, he produced his celebrated "Pleasures of Hope," which, for twenty years, produced the publishers between £200 and £300 per annum, although the poet received at first but £10 for the copyright.

Within three years from this time, Campbell quitted his native country for the Continent; and while residing at Hamburgh he composed "The Exile of Erin" from the impression made upon his mind by the condition of some Irish exiles in the neighbourhood of the above city. The poem was set to an old Irish air of the most touching pathos, and will perish only with the language.

THE CONVOCATION IN THE THEATRE.

Campbell travelled over a great part of Germany and Prussia, visiting the universities, and storing his mind with German literature. From the walls of a convent he commanded a view of part of the field of Hohenlinden during that sanguinary contest, and proceeded afterwards in the track of Moreau's army over the scene of combat—which impressive sight produced the celebrated ode, "The Battle of Hoenlinden," which is as original as it is spirited, and stands by itself in British literature. In Germany, too, Campbell made the friendship of the two Schlegels, and the venerable Klopstock. His travels in Germany occupied him fourteen months, when he returned to England, and, for the first time, visited London. He soon afterwards composed those two marine odes, "The Battle of the Baltic," and "Ye Mariners of England," and though, as Byron lamented Campbell wrote so little, these odes are enough to place him unforgotten in the Shrine of the Muses.

In 1803, the poet married Miss Sinclair, a lady of Scottish descent, but of whom he was deprived by death in 1828. He resided at Sydenham, in 1831, when literary pursuits demanded his removal to the metropolis. It was at Sydenham, in a house nearly facing the reservoir, that the poet produced his greatest work, "Gertrude of Wyoming." About the same time, Campbell was appointed Professor of Poetry in the Royal Institution, where he delivered lectures, which have since been published. He also undertook the editorship of "Selections from the British Poets," which have lately been reprinted.

Soon after this, Campbell re-visited Germany, and returned to England in 1820, to undertake the editorship of the New Monthly Magazine, it is said at a salary of £1000 per annum. In 1824, he published "Theodric, a Domestic Tale," perhaps the least popular of all his poetical works.

By his marriage, Campbell had two sons; one of them died before attaining his twentieth year; the other, while in the University of Bonn, where he exhibited symptoms of an erring mind, which afterwards ripened into mental derangement of the milder species.

The next event in Campbell's life will embalm his memory for ages to come: we mean, as the originator of the London University, now University College. He was likewise instrumental in the establishment of the Western Literary Institution, in Leicester square.

Campbell, as has been already stated, was educated at Glasgow, and received the honour of election as Lord Rector three successive years, notwithstanding some powerful opponents, among whom were the late Mr. Canning and Sir Walter Scott.

Mr. Campbell's literary labours are too well known and estimated to require from us anything more than a rapid enumeration of his most popular works. In his studies he exhibited great fondness for recondite subjects; but his ever-delightful theme was Greece, Greek, and literature. His lectures on Greek poetry appeared in the New Monthly Magazine. He also published "Annals of Great Britain, from the Accession of George III. to the Peace of Amiens," and was the author of several articles on poetry and the belles lettres in the Edinburgh Encyclopædia. Among his poetical pieces, the minor ones display considerably more energy than those of greater length. "The Pleasures of Hope" is entitled to rank as a British classic; and his "Gertrude" is perhaps one of the most chaste and delicate poems in the language. His fugitive pieces are also extensively known—as his "Hohenlinden," the beautiful "Valedictory Stanzas to John Kemble," and the "Last Man"—the latter worthy of Byron.

Several years since Mr. Campbell relinquished the editorship of the New Monthly Magazine; but a few years since he contributed to its pages a series of "Letters from the South," the result of a short residence in Algiers.

Of late Mr Campbell wrote but little, and that chiefly prose. Of these works, his "Life of Mrs Siddons" is, perhaps, the least successful. Nor has his edition of Shakspeare professed by a life of the great bard, taken higher stand. He was in the receipt of a pension of £184 per annum, from royal bounty.

In person Mr. Campbell was below the middle stature, well made, but slender. His features indicated great sensibility; his eyes were peculiarly striking, and of a deep blue colour; his nose aquiline; his expression generally saturnine. His time for study was mostly during the stillness of night; he was remarkable for absence of mind; was close, reserved, and kind in his disposition, but of quick temper; his amusements were few; but, in the flow of soul, there are few men possessing more companionable qualities. His heart was, perhaps, one of the best that ever beat in human bosom; it was that which should have belonged to the poet of Gertrude, his favourite personification. Nor must his enthusiasm for the succour of the Polish refugees be forgotten in our enumeration of his kindly excellence.

A contemporary, in estimating Mr. Campbell's genius, says:—"In common with every lover of poetry, we regret that his works are so few, though, when a man has written enough to achieve immortality, he cannot be said to have trifled away his life. Mr. Campbell's poetry will find its way wherever the English language shall be spoken, and will be admired wherever it is known." The memory of such a man should be enshrined in a niche of resting-place; and as a gratifying token that such a tribute is already contemplated, Mr Moxon, of the Chancery Bar, one of the executors of the deceased poet (in the absence of Dr. W Beattie, the other executor), has applied to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster Abbey, to ascertain whether, in the event of the friends of Mr. Campbell being desirous that his remains should be interred in the Poets'-corner in the Abbey, the necessary permission would be granted for that purpose; and the Dean and Chapter have been pleased to signify to Mr. Moxon that such permission would be given.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, 23.—Third Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 24.—Midsummer Day.
TUESDAY, 25.—
WEDNESDAY, 26.—Gilbert White died, 1793.
THURSDAY, 27.—Dr. Dodd executed, 1777.
FRIDAY, 28.—Queen crowned, 1838.
SATURDAY, 29.—St. Peter.

MOON WATER at London bridge, for the Week ending June 29.

Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. h. m. 7 32	A. h. m. 8 5	M. h. m. 8 33	A. h. m. 9 8	M. h. m. 9 40	A. h. m. 10 16
M. h. m. 10 54	A. h. m. 11 34	M. h. m. 0 15	A. h. m. 0 56	M. h. m. 1 39	A. h. m. 2 24
M. h. m. 3 10	A. h. m. 3 58	M. h. m. 4 47	A. h. m. 5 36	M. h. m. 6 26	A. h. m. 7 16
M. h. m. 8 6	A. h. m. 8 57	M. h. m. 9 48	A. h. m. 10 38	M. h. m. 11 28	A. h. m. 0 0
M. h. m. 0 32	A. h. m. 1 0

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Ignoramus."—The sentences 'on O'Connell, &c., are as follow:—Daniel O'Connell—To be imprisoned for 12 calendar months, to pay a fine of £2000, and to enter into securities to keep the peace for seven years, himself in £5000 and two sureties of £2500 each. John O'Connell, Esq., Gray, T. Steele, E. Barrett, C. G. Duffy, and T. M. Ray—To be imprisoned for nine calendar months to pay a fine of £50, and to enter into securities to keep the peace for seven years—themselves respectively in £1000, and two sureties of £500 each.—The above were omitted in a few impressions of our early edition.

"Miss S. S."Bacelos, is entitled to the large print, the publication of which will be duly announced.

"S. S." Pitt-street.—Felton's Improved Method of Performing Commercial Calculations.

"C. E. M."—We have not room.

"A. Z.," Christchurch.—At present we cannot.

"R. L. C.," Cambridge.—One shilling.

"Guernsey."—The sketch may be of use anon.

"C. C. L." Romsey, is thanked for the suggestion.

"Virgil," City.—See our late numbers containing the "Polka."

"J. O., G.," Limerick.—We have not room.

"Alpha Beta."—Declined.

"Solitor,"—See our present number.

"C. W.," Chard, Somerset.—When any news arrives from the place, we shall be glad of the illustrations.

"J. P. P." Enniscorthy.—The money may be inclosed. It is not requisite to remove the glove before shaking hands.

"J. R. W.," Northampton.—The price of the covers is 3s., not 4s., as stated last week. The price of the portfolio is 4s.

"A Cantab," Cambridge.—The Comte de Paris is heir to the throne of France.

"G. . . F. S.," Cheltenham.—We have not room to reprint the long communication on the late weather.

"J. W. H.," Greenwich.—Not at present.

"F. S., Jun.," Newcastle.—Declined.

"S. B., Jun.," Brentford Bridge, cannot recover by law, as all sporting lotteries are illegal.

"L. G.," Cheltenham.—We have not space to dilate upon the Cartoons.

"L. L."—None whatever.

"Z. D. B."—The request is impracticable.

"Umbra," Nottingham, in reply to a question in our last number, "why a luminous appearance should have presented itself during the entire time of the late eclipse of the moon?" states that he (Umbra) did not witness such appearance although he observed the eclipse through one of Dollond's four-foot reflectors.

"Brixton."—Bank Post Bills are included in the Liabilities.

"An Everlasting Admirer," Oxford, is thanked for the hint. The Taylor and Randolph Institute shall appear next week.

"W. C."—The account of the feast at Great Easton, Leicestershire, reached us too late.

"Consanguinitas" Truro.—We believe our statement to be correct.

"A Subscriber," Liverpool.—See a future number.

The Durham Regatta shall appear next week.

"T. D.," Chichester.—We have not room.

The picturesque Temperance Gathering at Roche Abbey was illustrated last year. It will be held on June 25th.

INELIGIBLE. -Lines on the Emperor of Russia; Enigma, by J. B. M.; Lines on the Departure of a Friend; Lines, by a Novice; Lines on a Physician's Diploma; Lines, by a Constant Reader, Liverpool.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1844.

THE past week has been an exciting one to the politician. The vessel of state has been among shoals and quicksands, part of the crew have mutinied and joined the enemy, and at one time there were many rumours afloat that the pilot had given up the helm in disgust. It was rather premature however; he has weathered the storm, by the same summary process by which he succeeded on a former and similar occasion; he has compelled his supporters to revoke their decision; some did it with tolerable docility; others hesitated, being as reluctant to eat their own words as ever Ancient Pistol was to swallow his leek, but the ministerial cudgel prevailed. "Vote as I bid you," says the Premier, "or I leave you;" and then they all understood the alternative—it was letting in the Whigs, which would have been bad enough; or going to their constituents on a general election, which would be rather worse; and no remote probability that both these evils would come together. So once more Sir R. Peel has succeeded; it cannot be said that he has triumphed, for there are many reasons which render this short and easy method of dealing with a rebellious section of a party unadvisable as a general rule. In the first place, it cannot be done often; and the Premier has gone to the verge of prudence in already doing it twice. In the next place, a threat, joined with a command, may produce obedience; but it creates a feeling that deprives the support so obtained of all cordiality. And symptoms are not wanting that this dragooning of the majority back to their party colours will yet be remembered. If Sir R. Peel threatens to resign too often, there are not a few of his pressing supporters prepared to let him do so. At present, indeed, he stands in the same relation to his party that Othello does to the Venetian Senate; which, however it may

> Gall him with some check,
> Cannot with safety cast him; for the souls,
> Another of his fathom they have not
> To lead their business.

But the fact that they cannot do without him, is no security that they will not make the attempt; for men when provoked will do rash and imprudent things. Were they to depose Sir R. Peel from his leadership it would lead to a reconstruction of the Cabinet; but it would scarcely let in the Whigs; they may be looking on at these divisions and discontents as tending to give them a chance of office, but the majority of 90 still exists and must be broken down by an election before any Whig Ministry can dare attempt to seize the reins of power.

Some surprise has been expressed that the Prime Minister should have chosen such a course as calling on the House to rescind a vote, on a question in which there was really no principle involved, the difference between Mr. Miles and the Government being only one of less or more. The West India interest was contented, with respect to one kind of sugar, to have a less amount of protective duty than the Government had fixed upon it. The reduction proposed by the planters would have lessened the cost to the consumer, and the increase in the quantity purchased would, in a short time, have gone far to make up the deficiency to the revenue. The Chancellor of the Exchequer too has coffers in which there is at present no lack. After the vote of Friday night, negativing the Government proposition, there was, we think, an opportunity of yielding gracefully to the decision of the majority. The difference between 24s. and 20s. as the duty per cwt. on one kind of sugar, was scarcely worth such a display of Ministerial absolutism, offending those it coerced, weakening the hold of the Government on its supporters, and diminishing the respect of the people for the Legislature.

THE "Church Vestries' Bill," which was discussed on Wednesday evening, is one of those measures brought in by what is called an independent member; that is, a gentleman who having taken up a crotchet thinks proper to bring in a bill upon it, unsupported either by public opinion out of the House, or any party within it; legislating, as the Yankees call it, "on his own hook." The Masters and Servants Bill was one of these measures, which of all others require to be closely watched; for by the joint operation of ignorance and carelessness, the public might, and indeed do, find themselves burdened with a law that, if its purpose had been fully known, would have been universally execrated. There is a great deal too much of this meddling spirit in Hon. Members, who must be doing something—if it is even mischief. At one time the public are obliged to struggle, as if for life and death, to crush some bill that would cover one of their few open spaces—heath or common—with brick and mortar. At another, they are compelled to fight against some encroachment on their personal liberties, or against an enactment that would subject them to great expense for an almost needless purpose. But for the press and a few active Members of Parliament, we verily believe the statute book would become the receptacle of acts, every one of which would be a public nuisance. The Government never seems to think it its duty to protect the community against this amateur legislation. In fact, there is no bill so bad, or so unpopular in its object, but its author may count on the Government committing itself to support it; and when the bill is thrown out or defeated, as in the case of the Masters and Servants Bill, the Government of course shares the discredit. The manner in which needless obloquy is thus courted, is to us incomprehensible. The discussion of Wednesday evening affords another instance of this fatality. A supporter of the Ministry brings in a bill that nobody asks for; containing provisions that no one understands; and introduced for reasons that have never been explained. It is opposed, of course; but not by the Government. Several divisions are taken on it, with decreasing numbers in its favour, and at last it is shelved for the time by an adjournment of the House, carried against the supporters of the bill, and virtually against the Government itself. The Ministry ought really to take more care how it adopts these strong and doubtful enactments for its own, for the sins of the measures are visited on those who advocate them.

We are sorry to see it stated that there is pending an invasion of the sylvan shades of Greenwich, that most favourite resort of the smoke-dried Londoners. An immense tank, to supply the Hospital with water, is to occupy with its unsightliness one of the prettiest spots of the Park, blocking up two pathways, and sweeping away the ancient barrows, which have been hitherto carefully preserved as objects of antiquarian interest. There is, certainly, as we have seen it remarked, a conspiracy against fresh air and green turf, even in those places where one might think the usage of ages had given the people a prescriptive right. This piece of ground, the subtraction of which is contemplated, is to be taken from the people, it appears, by some arrangement (as these things are called) between the Board of Admiralty and the Commissioners of Woods and Forests. We heartily wish the principle of finality could be applied to these encroachments. Greenwich Park is the last place that ought to be profaned by the axe and trowel; and if the Earl of Lincoln or Mr. Sydney Herbert persist in their wicked purpose, it is to be hoped that the shade of the august Elizabeth may visit them, wearing her darkest frown, to scare them from felling the trees she planted. It may be as well to interpose a little human effort, also, for old associations have but little effect on Government Boards; we do not think they would carry out their project if it was actively resisted.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

Her Majesty and suite arrived in town on Saturday from Claremont, as did also his Royal Highness Prince Albert and the King of Saxony, who visited the horticultural exhibition at Chiswick en route.

On Sunday morning the Queen and Prince Albert, the royal children and household, attended divine service in the Chapel Royal, Buckingham Palace. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Norwich. Prayers were read by the Hon. and Rev. C. Courtenay.

On Monday her Majesty and Prince Albert took their accustomed walk in the royal gardens. The Queen's dinner party in the evening included the King of Saxony, the Duchess of Buccleuch, Baron de Neumann, Austrian Minister; Baron de Gersdorff, Saxon Minister; the Duke of Wellington, the Earl and Countess Delaware and Lady Mary West, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl of Morton, M. de Minckwitz, Count Albert Vitzthum, Major Reichardt, and Dr. Lepsius.

The Queen and Prince Albert walked on Tuesday morning in the gardens of Buckingham Palace. The Prince rode out on horseback afterwards, attended by Sir Charles Lemon. At a quarter past nine the Queen and the King of Saxony left Buckingham Palace to honour the Italian Opera with their presence.

On Wednesday afternoon the Queen held a Court at Buckingham Palace, for the reception of an address, on the throne, from the Corporation of the city of Dublin. The deputation from the Corporation arrived at the Palace at half past two o'clock, and were conducted to the library. The deputation consisted of the Lord Mayor of Dublin, Aldermen Hutton, Gardiner, John Keahan, and Cornelius Egan; Town Councillors Jeremiah Dunne, John L. Arabin, Staunton, Charles P. Gavan, Myles Tobyn, Richard White, John Reilley, William Fitzpatrick, and Joseph Mollan. The Lord Mayor and deputation were accompanied by the Very Rev. Dr. O'Connell, chaplain to the Lord Mayor; Mr. Thomas Atkins, sword-bearer; Mr. James Curran, mace-bearer; Mr. Thomas Reynolds, Marshal of the Sheriffs; Mr. Thomas Sumoll, High Constable of Dublin; Mr. P. O'Brien, Lord Mayor's secretary; and Mr. J. Macnamara Cantwell. The deputation were conducted from the library, up the grand staircase, to the green drawing-room, by Sir William Martins, Gentleman Usher in Waiting, the Lord Mayor appearing in his scarlet robes, with his gold collar of office. His lordship was supported on either side by his chaplain, the Rev. Dr. O'Connell, and his private secretary, Mr. P. O'Brien. The Marshal of the Sheriffs, Dublin, and the High Constable, and also the Mace Bearer and Sword Bearer, carrying their respective official ensigns, preceded his lordship. The Aldermen and Town Councillors followed, wearing their different municipal robes. The Lord Chamberlain received the deputation at the entrance to the throne-room, and conducted the corporation to the presence of the Sovereign. The Queen was seated on the throne, his Royal Highness Prince Albert standing by her side. The Duke of Wellington stood on the right of her Majesty. Sir R. Peel, Lord Wharncliffe, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Stanley, Sir J. Graham, the Earl of Haddington, the Earl of Ripon, and Lord G. Somerset, were in attendance on the throne. The deputation having been conducted to the foot of the throne, the Lord Mayor read the address from the corporation of the city of Dublin. His lordship then advanced, and presented the address before the Sovereign with the usual reverences. Previous to the reception of the address, the Queen held a Privy Council. It was attended by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Lord President, the Lord Privy Seal, the Commander-in-Chief, the First Lord of the Treasury, the Secretaries of State for the Home, Foreign, and Colonial Departments, the First Lord of the Admiralty, the President of the Board of Control, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the Lord Steward, the Lord Chamberlain, and the Master of the Horse. The Queen had a dinner party in the evening at Buckingham Palace. The company included His Majesty the King of Saxony, the Duchess of Buccleuch, his Excellency Baron de Gersdorff, the Earl and Countess of Jersey and Lady Clementina Villiers, the Earl of Morton, Lord Charles Wellesley, M. de Minckwitz, Count A. Vitzthum, Baron de Reichardt, and Dr. Carus. The band of the Grenadier Guards, conducted by Mr. Creaton, was in attendance at the palace during dinner.

On Thursday, the Queen and Prince Albert, attended by the Marchioness of Douro, Hon. Miss Lister, Hon. Miss Devereux, Earl of Warwick, Captain Mervell, Colonel Arbuthnot, and Sir E. Bowater, honoured the Italian Opera with their presence. Prince Albert left Buckingham Palace at 20 minutes past 10 in the morning, in a carriage and four, attended by Mr. Anson, Lord G. Lennox, and Gen. Sir E. Bowater. The Prince went to the terminus of the Great Western Railway at Paddington, and proceeded by a special train to Slough, proceeding from that station in a royal carriage to Windsor Castle, where he arrived at a quarter past eleven. His Royal Highness walked from the Castle to the farm, and afterwards proceeded in a carriage to Eton College. After laying the foundation stone of the new range of buildings, and partaking of a déjeûné, the Prince took his departure with his suite for Slough, arriving at that station at three; and his Royal Highness travelled to town by a special train, and returned to Buckingham Palace shortly before four.

THE KING OF SAXONY.—On Saturday evening his Majesty the King of Saxony honoured Sir Robert and Lady Peel with his company at dinner. On Sunday his Majesty attended divine service in the Roman Catholic Chapel, in Wardour-street, and at midnight, honoured the Times printing-office, in Printinghouse-square, with a visit. His Majesty was conducted over the whole establishment, and manifested great interest in the operations of the composition and the construction of the machines. On Monday morning, at half-past ten o'clock, his Majesty attended the usual levée at Buckingham Palace for the purpose of inspecting the Royal Hospital at Greenwich. His Majesty, after viewing the hospital, honoured the Governor with his company at a dejeuné. The King afterwards went to Woolwich Dockyard, and then proceeded to visit the Royal Hospital at Chelsea. The King inspected the boys of the Royal Military Asylum at Chelsea, and returned in the afternoon, at half-past five o'clock, with his suite, in two open carriages and four, to Buckingham Palace. On Tuesday morning his Majesty went early to St. Paul's, and ascended the dome at five A.M., to have a panoramic view of London before the fires are lighted. From St. Paul's his Majesty went to Smithfield, and from thence to Billingsgate. The King afterwards went to Covent-garden market. His Majesty was on foot, and was attended by the gentlemen of his suite. His Majesty was also present at the inauguration of the Wellington Statue at the Royal Exchange, and in the evening accompanied the Queen to the Italian Opera. On Wednesday his Majesty visited the National Gallery and Royal Academy, and afterwards visited the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the following distinguished personages at their respective residences: the Duke of Wellington, the Duke of Devonshire, Earl and Countess Delaware, the Earl of Wilton, the Countess of Mansfield, the Earl of Aberdeen, and Sir Robert and Lady Peel.

The King of Saxony took his departure from Buckingham Palace on Thursday morning on a tour. The Queen and Prince Albert conducted their august guest to the Grand Hall, where he took leave of their illustrious visitor. His Majesty also took leave of the ladies and gentlemen of the royal suite, and was handed to his carriage by the Master of the Horse and the Equerries in waiting. The King quitted the Palace at twenty minutes past nine, attended by his Excellency Baron de Gersdorff. Baron de Reichardt and Dr. Carus followed in another open carriage. Mr. Colquhoun had an interview on Wednesday with the King of Saxony.

Thursday being the seventh anniversary of her Majesty's accession to the throne, the morning was ushered in by the ringing of the metropolitan church bells, and at one o'clock the Park and Tower guns fired royal salutes. In the evening the houses of her Majesty's tradesmen were brilliantly illuminated.

Married, on Monday, at St. George's, Hanover-square, by the Venerable Archdeacon Shirley, Keith Stewart Mackenzie, Esq., of Seaforth, to Miss Hope Vere, eldest daughter of the late James Joseph Hope Vere, Esq., of Craigie Hall, and Blackwood, N.B. The bride was given away by the Duke of Wellington.

The Marchioness of Landowne's concert, which was appointed for Wednesday night, was suddenly put off in consequence of the alarming illness of the Hon. Miss Fox, only sister of the late Lord Holland, who, we regret to hear, is suffering from very severe indisposition, and doubts are seriously entertained of her recovery.

A Cabinet Council was held on Monday afternoon at two o'clock, at the Foreign Office. It was attended by Sir Robert Peel, the Duke of Wellington, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Wharncliffe, the Duke of Buccleuch, Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Stanley, Sir James Graham, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Earl of Haddington, Earl of Ripon, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Sir Edward Knatchbull, and Lord Granville Somerset. The Council sat two hours. A number of Members of Parliament called during the afternoon, at the residence of Sir Robert Peel, in Whitehall Gardens.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS.—The court of examiners have admitted the following gentlemen members of the Royal College of Surgeons: Edmund S. G. Arnold, Guy's Hospital; John Gould, University College; Joseph Williamson, Newcastle; William Westall, Guy's Hospital; Henry A. Hare, Bristol; James D. Cronin, Dublin; Samuel T. Badger, Birmingham and St. Bartholomew's Hospital; Edward Garraway, Guy's Hospital; Capel William Blashfield, Guy's Hospital.

DEATH OF JOHN LAINSON, ESQ., LATE ALDERMAN OF BREAD-STREET

WARD.—On Monday morning, at an early hour, and after a most protracted illness, died John Lainson, Esq., at his residence, No. 56, Euston-square. The deceased gentleman for nearly forty years filled the office of Alderman of Broadstreet ward, in which he had carried on business, under the firm of Lainson, White, and Co., for nearly half a century. He succeeded the late Mr. Alderman Atkins, in 1835, and served the office of Sheriff in 1838. In 1842, the per od (owing to the rejection of Alderman T. Wood) for his being chosen Lord Mayor arrived, he being the senior Alderman, but feeling himself incompetent to the duties of that office on account of his health, he declined the aldermanic gown, and Alderman Humphery was elected Lord Mayor in his stead. His resignation caused one of the most severe contests known in the City for the vacancy which then terminated in Mr. Hughan being elected after a scrutiny which lasted several days. The deceased was also a magistrate for the county. He has left a widow and large family.

POST-OFFICE NOTICES.—The following notices were issued on Tuesday at the General Post-office, St. Martin's-le-Grand :—" General Post-office, June, 1844.

On and after the 1st of July next the British rate of postage of 6d. the half-ounce on letters addressed to or posted in the city of Hamburg, conveyed by the Hamburg packets, will be reduced with the Bremen rate of 3d. the half-ounce, and such combined rate of 8d. the half-ounce, &c., may either be paid in advance or left unpaid, at the option of the sender; but not be permitted. This regulation only according to the existing practice, will not be permitted. This regulation relates only to letters transmitted between the United Kingdom and the said city of Bremen by the Hamburg packet. Those conveyed by private ship, or by way of France, Holland or Belgium, will be chargeable with the same rates of postage to which they have hitherto been subjected. The next mails for Malta, Greece, the Ionian Islands, Egypt, and India, via Southampton, will be dispatched from the room on the morning of the 3rd of July. Lady Mary Wood, for India, &c., mails, on the morning of the 3rd of July. Dublin, for Sydney, New South Wales, 1st of July."

SOUTH LONDON FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The first grand flower-show of the Floricultural Society took place on Tuesday at the Surrey Zoological Gardens, and notwithstanding the threatening aspect of the weather, attracted a numerous and fashionable company. The show of flowers was, on the whole, exceedingly good. The fuchsias, heaths, and geraniums, as usual, were remarkably fine. The specimens of vegetables and fruit were of an average quality. The society distributed to the successful competitors during the day nearly 70 prizes in medals and money.

THE WESTMORELAND SOCIETY.—The Westmoreland Society, for the maintenance and education of children born of indigent parents in the county (natives of the county), held their ninety-fourth anniversary on Tuesday evening at the City of London Tavern. The Right Honourable the Postmaster-General and Lord-Lieutenant of the county, the Earl of Lonsdale, President of the society, filled the chair. The funds of the institution were preserved timely and ample assistance from the long list of donations and subscriptions received during the evening.

EAST INDIA HOUSE.—A Quarterly General Court of Proprietors of East India Stock was held on Wednesday at the East India House. Captain Sheperd, the Chairman of the Board of Direction, presided.—Mr. Hogarth, the Chairman of the By-laws Committee, brought up the report of that committee, which stated that the by-laws had been duly observed.—Mr. Poynder had given notice of the following motion :—" That the despatch of Lord Auckland, of the 17th November, 1838, by which his lordship rejected the proposed plan of the Bengal Government, and recommended the annual money payment of £9000 to the Temple of Juggernaut (to which recommendation the Directors assented by their despatch of 2nd June, 1840), be considered by the Court of Proprietors on motion for abrogating such money-payment, upon the ground of no original pledge or engagement having ever been given for the same by or on behalf of this Company, as erroneously alleged by Lord Auckland in his despatch."—The hon. proprietor, in alluding to the delay which had occurred in putting an end to this practice, said it was impossible not to feel, and feel strongly, that there was some influence working at a distance from the spot, otherwise that delay could not have taken place.—The CHAIRMAN said, that he had on a late occasion written a letter on this subject, but all that he could at present say was, that the Court had not yet received any communication. He hoped, however, before the again assembled, that he should be in a position to give the Court more satisfactory information on this important subject. (Hear, hear).—Mr. Poynder then intimated that as the subject was still in abeyance, he should withdraw his motion for the present.—Mr. Lewis, after a few observations, also withdrew for the present his motion relating to appeals in the courts of Sudder and Zillah, in India, to Privy Council.—Mr. Sullivan, who had given a motion on the subject of the affairs of Scinde, intimated, that after the noble manner in which the executive had performed their duty, he should not occupy the time of the Court by bringing it forward now; but if justice were not done, he should bring it forward on a future occasion. The motion was accordingly withdrawn, and the Court shortly afterwards adjourned.

MEETING AT THE CARLTON CLUB.—A meeting of members of Parliament, who entered at the Carlton Club at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, pursuant to a requisition signed by five members, between 60 and 70 members of the House of Commons were present. The John Yarde Buller taking the chair.—Mr. Disraeli inquired by what authority and for what purpose the meeting had been convened ?—Lord Ingestre replied, that he, in conjunction with Mr. Forbes Mackenzie and other gentlemen, had thought it advisable, after the vote of Friday night, that there should be a meeting, and had, accordingly, issued a note convening it.—Mr. Mackenzie added, that he was authorised Mr. Mackenzie has always denied that his observations could possibly bear this construction) to state, that if the meeting would unanimously sign a declaration of confidence in Sir R. Peel's Government, he would not resign office, but continue to conduct the affairs of the country.—Mr. Ferrand asked by whom the statement had been authorised, and whether it was expected that the 50 Conservatives, who voted with Mr. Miles in opposition to the Government on Friday night, were expected to change their votes ?—Mr. Mackenzie declined to answer these questions.—Mr. Christopher, however, said, that he was one of those who had voted against Sir R. Peel on Friday; but he was still prepared to sign a declaration of confidence in the Government, rather than let in the Whigs.—Lord Sandon professed himself willing to sign a general declaration of confidence, reserving to himself, however, a right of private judgment.—Sir Howard Douglas was prepared to sign a similar declaration of confidence.—Mr. Blackstone declined to support so extensive a declaration.—Mr. Blakemore said that the meeting was one of Conservatives, and he was surprised therefore at Mr. Ferrand's presence.—Mr. Disraeli declined to enter into a definition of Conservatism, but Mr. Blakemore declined so embarrassing a task.—Several members expressed their dread of a declaration of "unlimited confidence," as they were quite in the dark as to the Minister's future measures, and knew not which interest might be next assailed. The meeting, which was very noisy, and evidently far from unanimous, closed without coming to any decision, and adjourned until 12 o'clock on Monday. The quiet manner in which Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues left the House of Commons on Friday night, was also one to her Majesty, the Queen, which will be presented through Sir James Graham, by Mr. Blood. The chairman having retired, Mr. Fergus O'Connor addressed the meeting, which separated after giving three hearty cheers for Mr. O'Connell and Repeal.

EXETER HALL.—The Sacred Harmonic Society has made arrangements with Mendelssohn, to conduct the performance of his oratorio "ELIJAH," on Friday evening next the 28th inst. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge have signified their intention of being present.

BAZAAR FOR THE MARINES' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.—On Thursday, the largest space of ground known as Lord's Cricket Ground, situate at St. John's Wood, was rendered extremely gay, and put to a most praiseworthy purpose. The Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Benevolent Society held their Grand Fancy Fair and Promenade in aid of the Funds of their institution; and in addition as an honour to the anniversary of the Queen's accession to the throne. The gates were opened at 12 o'clock, and soon after were a most animated spectacle was presented. The ground was occupied by numerous marquees and tents, arranged in a circle round the ground: in the centre of which were placed the bands of marines, which performed many popular airs during the Promenade. The articles arranged under the tents were costly and elegant; the stalls being presided over by some of the most titled and fashionable ladies of the land. Among these were Lady Aylmer, the Countess of Rosslyn, Lady Yarde Buller, Lady Stepney, Lady H. Garnier, Lady Seale, Lady Rodd, Lady Bingham, Lady Alice Peel, Lady Baillie, Lady Hastings, Duchess of Leeds, Lady Caroline Berkeley, Lady C. Talbot, Lady Wynn, Lady Dymoke, Lady Barrard Neale, Baroness de Calabrella, &c. The boys of the Chelsea Royal Military Asylum visited the Fair with their band, and the Not Life Guards' and Royal Mariners' Band were also in attendance. Some slight showers of rain fell between twelve and two o'clock which rather marred the gay scene; but the afternoon was delightfully pleasant, and the grass being short soon dried. The Marylebone Club kindly consented their match with Oxford University to allow the Fancy Fair to be held. The list of nobility who attended was very great.

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION, &C., AT CHELSEA.—At the bazaar held in aid of this building, at Chelsea, an account of which appeared in our paper of last week, among the fancy articles was a beautifully illuminated pamphlet, Mrs. Leeds, entitled " A Story of Old Chelsea," of which not less than 2000 copies have been sold. The story is well stated, and has evidently been very effective in its result.

SOCIETY OF DANCERS.—On Thursday afternoon a public meeting was held at the Western Literary and Scientific Institution, Leicester-square, Mr. Samuel Turner in the chair, to form a society for the relief of aged and decayed dancers, their widows, and orphans. It was stated that there were 2000 dancing masters in England, and that if they would contribute only 5s each, a fund in aid of the society would be soon raised. Mr. Beckett read a code of laws and regulations for the direction of the society, which were referred to a committee of 56 gentlemen for their approval. Messrs. Alfred, Oxberry, and others, having ably enforced the claims of the society, it was unanimously resolved to petition her Majesty to become its patroness.

The people of the Canton of Zurich have sent in a petition to their Grand Council, demanding the expulsion of the Jesuits.

Three candidates have already announced themselves for the expected vacancy in Portsoken Ward, viz.:—Messrs. Salomons, D. W. Harvey, and M. Scales.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

MONDAY

William Burton Newenham was indicted for a misdemeanour in having unlawfully taken a girl, under the age of 16, from the custody of her mother, and against her consent.—The jury returned a verdict of Guilty, and the prisoner was sentenced to two years imprisonment.

Edward Youngman Colton, 57, was indicted for stealing three gold seven shilling pieces, several seven shilling pieces, and the property of Edward Driver; and Henrietta Sharpe was charged with receiving a portion of the property, knowing it to have been stolen.—Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Bodkin conducted the prosecution.—The jury found Colton Guilty, and acquitted Sharpe.—The prisoner Colton was then indicted, with a man named Chandler, for stealing a quantity of plate, the property of his master.—In this case the jury returned a verdict of Guilty against the prisoner Colton, and Not Guilty as to Chandler, who arraigned upon a charge of having feloniously set fire to the house of the prosecutor; but upon this indictment no evidence was offered, and the jury therefore returned a verdict of Not Guilty.—The prisoner was sentenced Colton to be transported for fourteen years upon the first indictment, and seven for the second, and Chandler was sentenced to be transported for ten years.

TUESDAY.

(Before the Recorder.)

Daniel Dearlove, 35, was indicted for feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling-house of James Dearlove, and stealing two bank of England notes for £100, one of £10, and two of £5 notes, eight sovereigns, and other monies and securities of the value, as was stated, of nearly £2000, his property.—Mr. Wilkins prosecuted, and Messrs. Clarkson and Payne appeared for the prisoner.—From the evidence adduced it seems that the prisoner is the prosecutor's nephew, and was also in his employ, which afforded him the means of knowing where he kept his cash-box. On the day of the robbery the prisoner and his uncle went out together, and the prisoner made some excuse, and left the prosecutor. He was seen shortly afterwards to go into the house by himself, and in the course of the same night the robbery was discovered, and it was then found that the prisoner had absconded. Some of the property had been recovered. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty, and the prisoner was proved to have been before convicted of felony.—The Recorder inquired whether there was any disposition to lead to the recovery of any portion of the property ?—The officers said they believed not.—Mr. Payne suggested that if judgment was respited probably the prisoner might give some information upon the subject.—The Recorder said that the robbery was wanton and unadvisable, as the bonds and deeds were of great value to the prosecutor, while they were perfectly useless to the thief.—Mr. Payne then intreated the prisoner to give such information as would lead to Mr. Payne then intreated the prisoner to give such information as would lead to the recovery of the property.—The prisoner declared he knew no more about it than the table that stood before him.—Mr. Payne remarked that no one could believe what he said.—The prisoner was called up for judgment, and sentenced to be transported for fifteen years.

His Majesty the King of Saxony, attended by his suite, and accompanied by the Lord Mayor, Lord C. Wellesley, Baron Goldsmid, and Sir Moses Montefiore, visited the Court during the above trial, and sat for some time upon the bench, apparently a good deal interested in the proceedings.

ASSAULT ON THE HIGH SEAS.—Captain G. Donnal was indicted for assaulting Matthew Mitchell, by striking him divers blows on the head, on board the brig Richmond, on the high seas, within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, with intent to do him grievous bodily harm. There were other counts, the last of which charged a common assault.—Mr. Doane defended the prisoner, who surrendered to abide his trial; and Mr. Prendergast stated the case for the prosecution.—A number of witnesses were examined, and it would lead to much time to enter into the evidence given on both sides, which consisted chiefly in charging one by twice following me and tapping me on the shoulder to detain me in conversation; fourthly, with an unprovoked, wilful, and brutally violent and alarming assault, by a fierce and violent blow on the head, and by a fierce and violent kick on the left side of his coat and using threatening language; fourthly, with advancing irresistibly upon me and striking at me with both his fists and with all his strength, and with having in me in the right foot, thereby cutting the surface of the upper leather of my right boot; and seventhly, with seizing hold of the collars of my coat and waistcoat, and injuring the same, by rudely tearing open my waistcoat, and tearing off one button." The learned Alderman sentenced poor Rike to be bound over to appear at the sessions; when the sculptor expressed his resolution to prosecute him without any "mitigation."

THAMES POLICE.—ATTEMPT TO MURDER BY THROWING INTO THE RIVER.—Mr. James Cockburn Belaney, a surgeon, was brought before Mr. Broderip, at the Thames police-court, on a charge of poisoning his wife, Rachael Belaney. This was the second examination to be in no degree abated. A rumour was circulated that a second charge would be preferred against Mr. Belaney, and the report created a painful sensation in the neighbourhood. Mr. Christopher, Messrs. Coode and Brown, solicitors, appeared on this occasion for the prisoner. The Rev. Mr. Belaney, vicar of Arlington, in Sussex, a highly-respectable and much-esteemed minister of the Established church, and brother-in-law of the accused person, were present during the investigation. The prisoner, who is 33 years of age, but looks several years older, is a person of very gentlemanly appearance. He was much affected during the time the evidence was given in a great measure. Several medical witnesses having been examined, Mr. Broderip, after consulting with Mr. Symons, the chief clerk, said there were reasons why he should not proceed with the case further on that occasion, many witnesses were yet to be examined.—Mr. Clarkson : I shall not trouble you with any observations on the case. You are aware, sir, the coroner's inquest, relating to this very melancholy case, sat several till Monday next; by that time you will not send this unhappy gentleman for trial before the coroner's inquest is terminated. I will not be tempted to make any further observations beyond this, that on the part of my client, I shall not object to the most rigid inquiry into everything.—Mr. Broderip : I find it my duty to remand you (the prisoner at the bar) until this day week. It is my duty also to state that, since the last examination, I have received authentic information of the most important and interesting evidence, which will throw some light upon the present obscurity of this most painful case, and, perhaps, on another case against the prisoner.—Mr. Belaney was then removed in custody, and at the usual hour entered the Clerkenwell prison on the way. Inspector Haines of the detective police force, who was present during the examination, has received directions to proceed to the north, to make some inquiries about the property in pursuance of the charge, and for four years, and some extraordinary disclosures are expected at the next examination.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

NAVAL PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.—Promotions :—Lieutenants W. C. Aldham, 1832, of the Winchester, and E. B. Stewart, 1814, of the Black Eagle, to the rank of Commander. Mates : G. W. Preedy, 1835, of the Camperdown, and Lieutenant Isle of Beagle. Edwin T. Hall, 1836, late of Monarch; Lord C. W. Butler, 1840, of the Aigle; Hon. T. A. Pakenham, 1840, of the Warspite; Charles S. Compton, 1840, of the North Star; and P. W. Coverney, to be Lieutenant.—Appointments : Lieutenant Commander : W. C. Aldham to Winchester. Lieutenants: R. Fowke, 1816, to the Ocean; Edward Wylde, 1814, to the Holyhead Packet Station; F. H. Stevens, to the Medea. Mates : Beecheres; Thomas Bell Brenham, from Excellent, to the Medea. Master: G. Collier to the Cygnet, vice Burney. Second Master: W. Betts to the Collingwood. Assistant-Surgeons: Ernest Elliott to the Caledonia; Charles Findlay, late of the Illustrious, vice Gibbons, appointed to the Asia at the Havannah, vice Burthwaite, invalided; William Crofton to the Royal Sovereign, Pembroke; Thomas Tait, to the Fearless; J. L. Monteith to the Prometheus; Mate; R.A. Buchanan to the Caledonia. Midshipmen : Trevelyan Worth to the Excellent; A. Hodgkinson to the Collingwood. Naval Instructors: Mr. W. S. Harvey, late of Malabar, to the Agincourt; J. Richardson to the Excellent, to qualify. Naval Cadet: C. F. Cowper and C. Marsham to the Collingwood. Engineers: James Healy and W. J. M'Dowell to the Penelope.

LAUNCH AT DEPTFORD.—The Porcupine, a beautiful specimen of a little war steamer, the production of Mr. Oliver William Lang, was named by Miss Hill, daughter of Captain Superintendent Sir John Hill, Knt., and launched from her Majesty's Dockyard, Deptford, at half-past two o'clock, P.M., on Saturday last, in the presence of a large assemblage of the most respectable inhabitants of Deptford and its vicinity. The Porcupine was built expressly to fit the engines formerly used in the Black Eagle, before the latter vessel was lengthened, and Messrs. Maudslay, Sons, and Field, have supplied the engines. The workmen commenced laying the keel on December 18, 1843, and she was launched June 17, 1844. The Spitfire, a steamer about 100 tons burden larger, will be launched in connection with the same slip. The Terrible, a steamer of 800 horse power, is also being built.

NAVAL REVIEW.—We understand that, upon the occasion of his Majesty the King of the Belgians's visit to this country, which is now finally arranged for the first week in September, a grand naval review will take place in the presence of her Majesty the Queen and her august visitor. As the flag-ships of the Port-Admirals, and the experimental squadron, forming altogether sixteen or seventeen sail, will be cruising in the channel at this period, there will not be the least difficulty in accomplishing it. The ships which will then be at sea, will be the St. Vincent, 120, flag-ship, Admiral Sir Charles Rowley, Capt. R. Rowley; Caledonia, 120, flag-ship, Admiral Sir David Milne, Capt. A. Milne; Camperdown, 104, flag-ship, Vice-Admiral Sir J. G. White, Capt. F. Martin; Albion, 90, flag-ship, Rear-Admiral Sir H. Pigot, Capt. Nicholas Lockyer; Collingwood, 80, flag-ship, Rear-Admiral Sir George Seymour, Capt. H. Eden; Queen, 110, flag-ship, Rear-Admiral Sir George Seymour, Capt. H. Eden; Queen, 110, Sir Charles Sullivan; Fox, 42, Capt. Sir R. M. Blackwood; Amazon and Dædalus, frigates reared to corvettes; Flying Fish, Mutine, Daring, Osprey, and Espiegle, new class brigs of 12 guns; Cruizer, 16, Pantaloon, 10, Waterwitch, 10, and a number of steam vessels.

The six iron steam-boats, building by contract for the use of the Government as despatch-boats, are getting on very rapidly towards completion, and will be ready for launching in a few weeks.

Two line-of-battle ships will be commissioned in a few days, and, if completed in sufficient time, will join the experimental squadron. One of them is intended for the Illustrious, 72, flag-ship, Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Adam, Captain J. E. Erskine, which is to return to England, as the period of the gallant Admiral's command will expire in a few weeks. We hear that the Vanguard will be one of the vessels commissioned.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY.—The half-yearly examination of the gentleman cadets undergoing at this establishment, after a recess, took place on Tuesday, June 18, and at the conclusion the gentlemen cadets obtained the usual period of vacation, and will resume their studies on the 1st of August, 1844, and be joined by those candidates recently passed for admission as gentlemen cadets. The examinations were most satisfactory, and the following have passed for commissions in the Royal Regiment of Artillery, and in the Royal Engineers, on being approved by the Master-General :—Gentleman Cadet Archibald E. H. Anson, obtained a prize of a sword for general good conduct, and several others obtained prizes of books according to merit; Andrew Clarke, Francis Du Cane, Henry D. Kerr, John Y. Moggridge, Francis Roe, George Colclough, Thomas W. Milward, Henry L. Chermside, Alexander T. Blakely, Robert E. F. Craufurd, Frederick W. C. Ord, William C. L. Bisset, Walter Hughes, Matthew H. Foord, William T. Barnett, Archibald E. H. Anson, Samuel E. Gordon, William G. Stubbs, John G. Boothby, Charles N. Lovel. The following twenty gentlemen cadets also passed their examination for the practical class, and will commence their studies at the Royal Arsenal on the 1st of August, 1844 :—John G. Jervis, James F. E. Travers, Henry H. Tyler, John C. B. de Batts, Walter S. Stace, Hon. Edward T. Gage, Neville S. K. Boyle, George Baistow, George Leslie, Audley M. Archdall, Charles Wright, Cowasa S. Tilly, John R. Thring, Henry Jervis, William M. King, Henry L. F. Greville, Sidney E. B. Swinny, Edward Stanton, Hugh Bent, Francis R. Grenville.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

DISCOVERY OF A PASSAGE THROUGH BARRIER REEF AND TORRES STRAITS.—Copy of an extract of a letter forwarded to Lloyd's from the London East India and China Association :—" Her Majesty's ship Fly, Port Essington, July 23rd, 1843.—Sir,—I have to inform you that we have examined the Great Barrier Reef, from Lizard Island, lat. 14. 30., of Captain Cook, to Murray's Island, lat. 9. 54. S. of Flinders; and that along the whole of that extent of reef we have met with but one opening through which I could recommend for ships. This passage is in lat. 11. 35. S., and is four miles wide, a safe entrance for ships, having a regulated island marked on the chart as Direction Island, near the south side of which there is a good clear entrance; the best being, however, to the southern of it.—F. P. BLACKWOOD, Captain.—His Excellency Vice-Admiral Sir W. Parker, G.C.B., &c."

UNEXPECTED DESTRUCTION OF A VESSEL AND MURDERS BY THE CREW.—The intelligence received at Lloyd's, by the late arrival of the Britannia steamship, details the particulars of the loss of the Spanish ship Salamea, near Halifax, under circumstances of a most astounding character, it being too truly feared that the captain, Mr M'Kenzie, his wife and family, and several of his officers, have been murdered by the crew, in the act of plundering the vessel. The Salamea, it appears, was launched, 243 tons burden, and was built at Newcastle, in the year 1835. She sailed from Valparaiso on the 17th of February last for the port of London, having on board a quantity of guano, seventy tons of copper, and a very large amount of money in dollars. Nothing was heard of her until the morning of Monday, the 26th of May, when the schooner Billow, Mr. Coningham, master, bound for Antigonish, in nearing the country harbour, observed a vessel on shore, and, on making for her, discovered that she was a wreck, lying on the beach off Island Harbour, ninety miles distant from Halifax. In consequence of the remarkable conduct of the crew, he lost no time in making for the latter port, and from a communication which he made to the authorities, it was deemed necessary to send pilots to the wreck, who, in a few days, returned and reported the inquiries they had made of the crew, respecting the loss of the barque. The surveyors stated that the captain died on the 5th of April, the chief mate expired soon afterwards, and the second mate, with two of the seamen, by falling off one of the yards, said to have come on shore, not knowing the proper course to steer by, they unintentionally ran the vessel ashore. It was also ascertained that since the 14th of April no log had been kept, and that what had been written was evidently the invention of the master. They also maintained the strictest silence respecting the captain's wife, and it is supposed, from the furniture of the cabin, and other conveniences for the accommodation of the gentle sex, that she and some of her children were with him on the voyage. A likeness of her, and some children's clothing, were discovered. Since then, Admiralty writs have been issued to arrest all the parties belonging to the wreck, and take possession of the salvage of the cargo. Her Majesty's ship Fair Rosamond, at the direction of Vice-Admiral Sir C. Adam, being dispatched to protect the cargo and vessel, at the solicitation of the Hon. Michael Tobin, Lloyd's agent at Halifax. The above is the first intelligence received to several merchants in the city, are insured at Lloyd's to a heavy amount.

A despatch has been received at Lloyd's from the Admiralty, dated the 14th inst., enclosing the copy of a notice issued at Elsinore to the effect, that the hour of midday at Greenwich will be made known to the masters of vessels in the Sound by the firing of a gun from the battery at Kronborg.

In the Court of Exchequer on Tuesday, four causes connected with the Custom House frauds were summarily disposed of. The Attorney-General v. Morgan.—Verdict, for single value for £6000. Arrowsmith and Dean.—Verdict, by consent, for single value, £2000. Arrowsmith.—Verdict was taken for £4554. Making a total of £13,313.

In the case of the Attorney-General v. John Dean, for frauds on the Customs, a jury in the Court of Exchequer on Monday, found for the Crown, assessing the single value of the goods introduced at £7840, which renders defendant liable to three that amount of penalties.

POSTSCRIPT.

ETON, Thursday.—The ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the new buildings at Eton College, by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, which took place to-day, caused an immense influx of visitors, who continued to arrive at the College from various parts of the kingdom, from an early hour in the morning until past noon. The new buildings, which are to be in the Elizabethan style, will be erected on the site of the coach-houses and stables of the Provost and Fellows, and will be immediately contiguous to the Provost's Lodge. The building will be upwards of 120 feet in length. In addition to two extensive apartments—to be appropriated for the library of the school (to which George the Fourth was a liberal contributor) and also as examination rooms for the Newcastle Scholarship, and the prize given annually by Prince Albert for proficiency in Modern languages—there will be fifty-six rooms for the accommodation of their scholars of the boys on the foundation, a large dormitory for 20 of the younger boys, a supper-room for the 6th form, a suite of apartments for the two conducts, private apartments, &c. The expense of carrying the first improvements and addition to the College into effect will exceed £20,000, nearly the whole of which sum has been subscribed by old Etonians. Prince Albert having taken his station on the north side of the ancient cloisters, surrounded by his attendants, the dignitaries of the Church, the noblemen, and the other distinguished visitors, an appropriate prayer was offered up to the Almighty for the divine blessing upon the undertaking, by the Rev. the Provost. Drake, K.S., who afterwards addressed the school, then delivered a Latin oration, standing opposite to the Prince Consort. The usual ceremony of spreading the mortar on the stone, striking it with the mallet and placing the plate deposited by his Royal Highness, were then performed by the Provost.

THE IRISH MAGISTRACY.—The following magistracy have been superseded in consequence of being members of the Repeal Association :—Thomas Shine in consequence of being members of the Repeal Association :—Thomas Shine in consequence of being members of the Repeal Association :—Thomas Shine in consequence of being members of the Repeal Association :—Thomas Shine, Esq., Kerry; Thomas Donnelly, Esq., Cork; John T. Devitt, Esq., Limerick.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—FRIDAY.—This being the first seal after Trinity Term, the Courts of Chancery resumed their sittings at Lincoln's-inn. The Lord Chancellor, Vice Sir Lyon Sombre, to supersede the commission of lunacy issued against him, stood in the paper for argument to-day, but, by a private arrangement between parties on both sides, it was postponed until Monday.

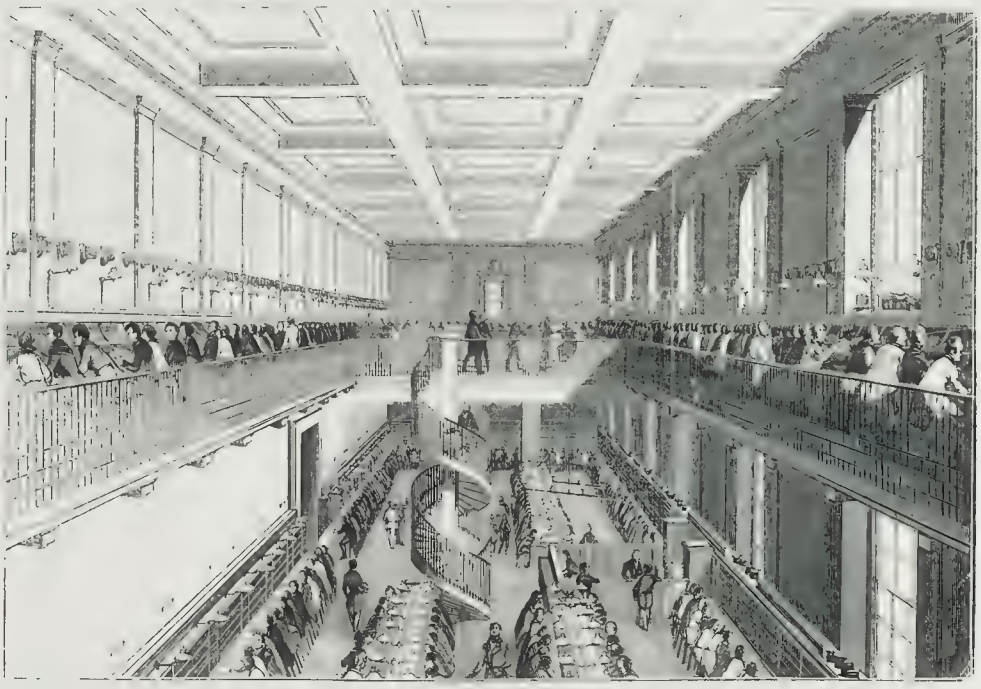
At a late hour on Wednesday night last an extensive fire broke out in the village of Woodford, in Essex, which consumed the whole of the extensive buildings attached to the White Hart Inn. The property consumed encompasses the extensive coaching, granary, tap (adjoining the inn), a cottage, and several small outbuildings.

On Thursday night a fire broke out in the workshops of Mr. Bell, pictureframe maker, Hatton-garden, Holborn-street, St. Luke's. Both dwelling-house and workshops were entirely destroyed.

IMPUDENT ROBBERY.—A most barefaced robbery was discovered on Thursday; on Friday the offender was arrested by Sergeant Thornton, of the detective force. Mr. Wilson, the proprietor of the Caledonian Hotel, who is also a wine merchant, in an extensive way of business, law vaults under Hungerford-market, which contain an immense stock, and on Wednesday it was discovered that a quantity of wine, valued at £100, had been abstracted from them. As no one else had access to the vaults, the book-keeper, whose name is William Fisher, was suspected, and the detective force being informed of the facts, immediately went to the house where he resides, and by means that he had procured the key of the vaults on Tuesday night, and engaged a man with a horse and cart to be in readiness to convey away a pipe of wine, which he said his master had wished to be removed. In this cart the removal was effected, and the wine taken away to a public-house, where it has since been found. Yesterday the book-keeper underwent a first examination, before Mr. Jardine, at the Bow-street police-court, when the facts were sufficiently proved against him to warrant a remand for a week, which was ordered by the magistrates.

SUPPOSED MURDER AT DOVER.—On Thursday considerable sensation was created at Dover by a report that a man had killed his wife on the preceding night. On inquiry we learned that the supposed murderer, an Irish tramp, was taken into custody, and that his wife, whom he had cruelly beaten, died in the morning. The way and manner in which the unfortunate woman met her death are variously reported.

THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE—(BY AUTHORITY.)



THE LETTER CARRIERS' OFFICE.

The great interest excited by the cases of "espionage" at the General Post-office, which have just been brought under the attention of both Houses of Parliament, suggests our continuation of the details of the economy of the great Postal Establishment, commenced in No. 54 of our journal. We there gave a description of the exterior of the General Post-office, and a brief outline of its origin and progress as a national establishment, second to none in importance, both to the social, commercial, and fiscal relations of this great country.

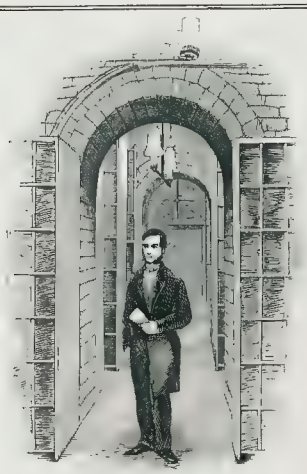
We propose, in pursuing the subject, to present to our readers the details of the duties of the department, and to give a full description of the internal working of the several branches of this extraordinary machine.

THE INLAND OFFICE.

The Inland-office of the General Post-office is situated northward of the vestibule, or entrance-hall, immediately behind the rooms appointed for the reception of letters intended for any place within the limits of the United Kingdom. Northward of this office lie the offices of the Superintending Presidents, upon the ground floor, which front the yard facing Aldersgate-street.

The inland sorters' room, which is tastefully finished and well ventilated, is about eighty feet long by forty feet wide, so that it forms a parallelogram; in height it is about seventy-eight feet. In the central portion of the roof is an extensive sky-light, which, with three sash-windows near the top of the walls at each end, are the only places where the light of day is admitted. At the southern end of this spacious room is placed a long table, transversely fixed, upon which the letters are thrown as they are from time to time received from the boxes or brought into the office from the different collecting carts employed for that purpose throughout the metropolis. Ranged in rows, diversely placed, are other tables used for the purposes of the duty—such as stamping, examining, and assorting letters. On the eastern or lobby side of the Inland-office, and level with the first floor, is a projecting latticed window, from which may be had a minute view of every corner of the spacious room, and of the different kinds of duty as they are simultaneously performed. In this office is a square table, usually denominated the "miscorted table," originally intended for the seats of those experienced officers who were most expert in making out illegible and vague addresses, and for the examination of the signatures of members of Parliament, when the franking privilege was permitted by legal enactment. But that privilege being abandoned by the Penny Postage Act; and the practice having of late years materially changed, the in-

THE INLAND LETTER OFFICE.



THE MONEY-ORDER VAULTS.

by number) assemble, and assort the letters into their respective walks. The gallery will hold 100 men; and the body, with auxiliaries, 370 more. A portion of the floor is parted off in the middle, where two clerks sit to rectify any mistake which may arise in charging the letters to the carriers. In the evening this room is used for sorting newspapers, to be next described as

THE NEWSPAPER OFFICE.

That part of the General Post-office used in the morning duty as the Letter-carriers' Office is devoted in the evening to the assorting and despatch of newspapers. The benches at which the carriers sit in the morning for the purpose of arranging their letters, are in the evening turned into sorting-tables by a simple mechanical contrivance. The business commences daily at half-past five P.M., except on Friday, Saturday, and Monday evenings, upon which days the men are assembled about an hour earlier to meet the pressure of the extra duty which is invariable on those nights.

The vast amount of newspapers intended for conveyance into different parts of the country through the Post-office, are collected in a variety of ways. From the principal news-vendors and publishers they are brought to St. Martin's-le-Grand in omnibuses specially employed for that purpose. Those posted at the several receiving-houses throughout the Metropolis are brought up in carts. A few of the bags are brought by hand, as there are some of the sub-offices which could not be reached in the routes of the mail-carts without loss of time. Others are given to the letter-carrier while ringing his bell: with these a fee or gratuity of one penny is given, as a perquisite to the carrier; and these fees form part of his salary. The remaining portion are posted at the window of the chief office in St. Martin's-le-Grand. As the box there is closed at six o'clock in the evening, the number posted within five minutes of that hour is incredibly great. On Saturday evening that number, at a moderate estimate, is not less than thirty thousand, the majority of which are brought in sacks from the establishments of the several newsvenders. From six o'clock to half-past seven all papers which are posted are charged one halfpenny as a "late" fee. The aggregate amount arising from these "halfpence," is not less than £1000 per annum: the several sums of which are now daily accounted for by the officers having the control of the Newspaper-office, by whom the amount is paid every evening, after the duty, to the President of the Inland-office, who carries it to the credit account of the revenue.

PACKING THE INDIAN MAIL.

The newspapers from the several vendors and publishers average from 15,000 to 20,000 per night. These are conveyed into the newspaper-office by the northern or letter-carriers' entrance. Those brought by the mail-carts from the branch offices of Charing-cross, Lombard-street, Old Cavendish-street, and the Borough, and from the various receiving houses in the metropolis, as well as by the bags of the letter-carriers, are taken in at the lobby, or eastern entrance, into the Inland-office: their number may be estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000, and the "too late" papers at between one and two thousand daily. The newspapers are sorted in the Inland-office, and, for this purpose, the square partition for the clerks is removed, and a platform placed in its stead; and on this platform is a large box, of strong iron net work with a wood frame, without bottom, and supported on four legs. The newspapers are brought in in large sacks, baskets, and hampers, and thrown promiscuously into this box, above which is suspended a crane, used for the purpose of emptying the sacks. A man mounts the heap of papers, attaches the crane to the bottom of the sack, which by means of ropes and pulleys is raised by other men, and thus disgorges its contents. See the engraving. The pressure and weight from above keep up a constant supply of papers on the platform, from whence they are carried to the sorters, who arrange them in districts; and from them they are again collected in trays, and carried to the road clerks, who subdivide them into their respective post towns. Each road clerk is furnished with bags for every post town, into which he throws his papers as he drives full. The large towns, such as Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, &c. &c., will frequently have as many as five or six sacks, each about five feet high, proportionate width, and weighing upwards of 2cwt. These, as they are filled, are tied, and sealed, and removed at once into the omnibuses, and forwarded to their respective railways.

The total number of newspapers passing through the General Post-office alone on Saturday night from the sources above enumerated, is not less than 100,000, and if the quantity despatched by the evening and morning mails and passing daily through London, as well as those delivered within its wide range are taken into the account, the weekly average may be fairly set down below 600,000, which number, if multiplied by 52, will give the astonishing aggregate of 31,200,000 newspapers annually.

This department is controlled by the Inspector of Letter-carriers, and his assistants.

FOREIGN AND SHIP LETTER DEPARTMENT.

Adjoining the Inland-office is the Foreign and Ship Letter Department, where all letters and papers for foreign and colonial parts are sorted, packed, and despatched. The India and other mails are made up on this room. The papers are packed in large strong white leather sacks, about six feet in length, and of proportionate width, the name, as "Smyrna," "Sydney," "Hong Kong," "Demerara," &c., painted upon them.

One engraving shows the interior of this office during the business of packing the Indian Mail. In this department, too, is a "hoist," for raising bags of letters into the Ship Letter-office above, as represented in the next illustration.

LETTER-BAG HOIST.

THE RAILWAY ROOM.

Contiguous to the Inland-office is the Railway Sorting-room. The duty in this important department consists in a separation of the letters after the first sorting has taken place into towns, bags for which are conveyed per rail. Nearly 200 bags are made up in this section of the service. Upon some of the long lines of railway the letters for the intermediate post-towns are sorted and "made up" during the journey, so that the delay of their transit to London and back again to their destination is thus avoided; time is saved to the public; and the office in St. Martin's-le-Grand is not burdened with an overcharge of duty arising from this source. It is probable that this branch of the service may be further extended as the new lines are opened throughout. Stationary post-offices are also being placed upon some of the railways, a desideratum which has not been lost sight of by the noble earl at the head of this gigantic establishment.

THE NEWSPAPER BIN.

There is a curious mode of communication opened between the Inland and Twopenny-post departments, by the medium of a tunnel passing underneath the floor of the vestibule or great hall. A kind of tram-way is laid, upon which waggons are drawn by means of a jointed chain worked by a simple crank in the London District Office. By this contrivance much time is saved, and errors in the assorting are quickly remedied by the officers of each department. Mr. Barrow was the inventor of this mode of transfer, but of late years several improvements have been made in its construction. By this means are sent from the London District, or "Twopenny" post department, all letters for the country which have been collected by the various branch offices in the district. They are packed in boxes: each box, when filled, weighs about 58.lb., and a train of 36 of these boxes is no unusual occurrence. The engraving shows this railway in operation.

THE MONEY-ORDER OFFICE.

This branch of the General Post-office, now so important to all classes in her Majesty's dominions, owes its origin to the private enterprise of Robert Watts, Esq., at present one of the senior clerks attached to the Inland-office, of which he is also one of the presidents. For many years the business was conducted by Mr. Watts and his clerks, as an individual speculation, under the auspices of successive Postmaster-Generals, who countenanced the project. The office was in Foster-lane, Cheapside. Some few years ago this office was attached to the establishment, and since then it has been coupled with its various branches, under the control of the Postmaster-General. W. Barth, Esq. is its president, and he has under him seventy four persons who are daily engaged in conducting the granting, paying, and checking money orders. Since the reduction of the rates of charge on these kind of payments, the business of the department has increased, at least, tenfold.

THE OFFICE LETTER RAILROAD.

All "money orders" granted are duly registered, as to amount, names of the sender and receiver, what office drawn upon, &c.; and a copy of this register, called an "extract," is sent to the office authorising payment. Then the advices, after having been paid, are collected and arranged, according to date, in a series of vanlts, devoted to that purpose; so that on any dispute arising, the original voucher may be had without loss of time. The large engraving represents the interior of this office; and the first engraving upon the next page, shows the vaults wherein the "advices" are deposited.

It has been stated in the morning papers that an apartment which is now partly used as "the Money Order-office," (at the south west corner of the main building), was, some years since, known as "the Espionage-office." "The system of espionage in the General Post-office, St. Martin's-in-Grand," adds the informant, "is comparatively unknown to the public. During the secretaryship of Sir Francis Freeling, the opening of letters posted in London for the continent, as well as those from the provinces passing through the Foreign-office, was carried on to a great extent, and we know to a certainty that there are now in the Post-office, more than one individual who, in carrying letters and packets which had been opened and resealed in the 'Espionage-office' to the Holland-offices, have found the wax on violated letters and packets sticking to their hands, from its not having had sufficient time to cool." We challenge contradiction to our statement.

On a future occasion, we shall detail the several "duties" of the offices, so as to complete our picture of this most important and interesting establishment.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The Lord Chancellor having taken his seat on the woolsack, the Earl of RADNOR moved for a return of the number of warrants which had been issued by the present Secretaries of State, for the detention and opening of letters at the General Post-office, specifying the dates and names of the parties to whom the forms of the warrants. The noble earl brought forward the case of MERLwhich was discussed by Mr. Duncombe, in the House of Commons, on Friday last, and also the case of Count Ostrowski, the Polish nobleman, who had been arrested for threatening the life of the Emperor Nicholas, and whose papers had been arbitrarily seized and retained by the police. The noble earl said it had been the general subject of pride on the part of Englishmen, and especially when travelling abroad, and observing the proceedings of continental Governments, that they were exempt from the liability to which foreigners were exposed of having their letters opened by the Government; but now it appeared that our Government also was resorting to the power of opening any letters they pleased, under the authority of an act of Parliament; and it was contended on the part of the Government that that power was not limited to the case of a special warrant for the examination of a particular letter, but that the Secretary of State might issue a general warrant under which all the letters of an individual to whom it applied might be opened, delayed, and read, for so long as the warrant was not withdrawn. And further, whereas such opened letters used formerly to be sent to the party, with the distinct statement written on the outside of them, "opened by authority," it now appeared that this fair dealing was not observed, but that when the letters so opened had been read by the authorities, and such use made of them as is thought necessary, they are sealed again with the utmost care, so as that it does not at all appear they had been opened, and so forwarded to the party without any intimation of what had taken place (hear, hear.) Such proceedings as these appeared to him to be utterly at variance with the principles of the British Constitution, and with the feelings of the British people (hear, hear.) The Duke of WELLINGTON refused the return, because he thought sufficient confidence should be reposed in the Secretaries of State for the due exercise of the power the law gave them of issuing their warrants for the opening of letters; and because, in the case of the Pole, his arrest had been in the usual course, and if any wrong was done him it was a matter for a court of justice, and not for their worships' house. With regard to opening letters, if the noble earl would look into the statute book, he would find that the power in question had been exercised by Secretaries of State ever since the reign of Queen Anne, under writs of an act passed in the Sovereign's reign, and latterly, at the time the Post-office underwent certain reforms, continued by an act passed in the first year of her present Majesty, in words as nearly as possible those of the former act.—Lord CAMPBELL said the noble duke was mistaken as to the nature of the power thus given by Parliament in the reign of Queen Anne. By the 65th section of that act, it was made misdemeanour to delay or open any Post-office letter; but then came a proviso, that this should not apply to the opening of letters which are refused by the parties to whom they are addressed, and then these words, "or to opening, detaining, or delaying any post letter, in obedience to an express warrant, in writing, under the hand or seal of one of the principal Secretaries of State." This was a sort of power to be construed strictly, for the plain distinct language of the provision was, that there should be a particular and express warrant for each letter so opened, under the hand and seal of one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State. He had no hesitation in saying, after a careful examination of the act of Parliament, that to open, detain, and delay letters, under a general warrant, would be unlawful. (Hear,)—Lord BROUGHAM said it appeared to him absolute nonsense for an act of Parliament to say that a Secretary of State, suspecting A. B. to be a traitor, has the means of knowing how many letters they receive next Monday (there the Post-Letters will come from, what post marks they will bear, in what hand-writing they will be, or what kind of paper; yet all these particulars will be necessary, ere he could issue a special delegate against that one particular, or special warrants against these two or three particular letters. (Hear, hear.) This would have been scarcining more acuteness and perspicacity to Secretaries of State than ever the most acute and perspicacious of them had possessed. The only possible way of achieving a knowledge of the treasonable correspondence of A. B. was by issuing a warrant to examine his correspondence generally, and this, he apprehended, would have been the only mode to be given by the various acts to the Secretary of State.—Lord DENMAN said if the construction put upon the act by his noble and learned friend who spoke last was the right one it only increased the horror of the practice, for nothing could be more revolting to the feelings than that any man might have all his letters opened in consequence of some information respecting him having been given to the Secretary of State, and that the contents of those letters were known, and, perhaps, might be made some use of for the purpose of proceeding against him in a court of justice? The letters of a man might be opened, and he might not have the slightest intimation that he was betrayed. Now, in such a state of things to be tolerated in a civilized country? He would say, without the slightest hesitation, that it ought not to be borne with for a single hour. If his noble friend's motion was rejected, he hoped that his noble friend would at once give notice of a measure, so that the practice might be altered or abolished.—After some further discussion, in which the Marquises of NORMANBY and CLANRICARDE (who also condemned the practice) took part, the subject dropped without a division.

Lord LYNDHURST said that he was anxious to lay on the table a bill for the regulation of Presbyterian marriages in Ireland, and he was happy to say that whatever difficulties might have existed in the way of the legislature to contend with, that the present bill had met with the approbation of all the parties interested. The bill was then read a first time.

On the motion of Lord BROUGHAM the Creditors and Debtors Bill was reported, and ordered to be read a third time on Friday.

Lord BROUGHAM's Insolvent Debtors' Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.

The Slave Trade Treaties Bill was then read a third time and passed, and their lordships adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

At four o'clock the house was literally full of members, and the strangers' gallery was filled to overflow immediately after being thrown open. The cause of this excitement was to be found in the rumours which prevailed at the clubs during the previous day that Sir Robert Peel had tendered his resignation to her Majesty, after the adverse division on the Sugar Duties, on Friday night, by which the Government was left in a minority of twenty, and that he intended making his ministerial statement as soon as the house assembled. It was true five o'clock before the right hon. baronet entered the house, and the presentation of petitions having concluded, he rose and moved that the house should go into committee on the Sugar Duties Bill.—Lord John Russell said he saw no objection to that course being adopted. The house then went into committee, and Sir R. PEEL rose amid profound silence. He commenced by sketching the policy which has been pursued by this country with regard to the abolition and the slavery, viewing it in the light of one of the greatest evils and curses of humanity. The chief onus of suppressing it had fallen on this country: for this we had made great sacrifices; and only last session we had passed, more stringently preventing the employment of British cap tal in the trade, and, therefore, showing what was the whole tenor of our policy. Men of the most opposite opinions concurred in considering that, with reference to slavery, sugar should be taken out of the ordinary principles of commercial legislation. Hitherto our efforts to suppress the slave trade between the coast of Africa and Cuba and Brazil, have been directed to open a free sugar trade between Great Britain and these countries would only aggravate the traffic, and defeat their efforts. But by giving encouragement to the free-labour sugars of the Manillas, Java, and perhaps China, we would strike a blow at the slave trade and ameliorate the condition of the slave, even if one consequence should be a slight stimulus to the production of slave-grown produce. The Government felt it necessary to decide during the present year on the course to which they should adopt with respect to sugar; our treaty with the Brazils expires on the 10th of November next; and the reasons by which they were actuated in bringing in their present measure, and deferring a more general consideration of the subject till next year, were three. First, the Income-tax expires next year, and the full operation of the tariff, which was imposed in conjunction with it, would not be distinctly ascertained till that time—as, for instance, the fall reduction in the timber duties did not take effect till October last. This fact is to be taken along with the general revival of trade and industry, which, however gratifying, might not be permanent; if it were, next year would give them positive assurance. Second, there was the great financial operation, the reduction in the 3s per Cents, of which it was of great importance to secure the success; and the third reason was, that if the Income-tax were renewed next year, a revision of the sugar duties would have been considered as one of the conditions of it. The indications of rising price, and the fear of a deficit supply, led the Government to introduce their present proposition; the sugar monopoly was the only one that remained [a voice—"Corn"]; and they considered that, without detriment to the revenue, or injury to the West Indies, their measure was calculated to be of great advantage to the community at large. They wished to ascertain before next year, if Parliament would sanction and establish the distinction between free labour and slave labour; and they adhered to their opinion that their own proposition was better than the one proposed by Mr. Miles. The distinction which he had drawn between muscovado and white clayed sugars was, of course, one which ought also to be introduced into the colonies. After mature consideration, they could not adopt the amendment with the view of escaping from their difficulties, because they were of opinion that while it would not benefit the consumer or the West India interest, it would be detrimental to the revenue. To prove this he entered into details, taking the effect of the reduction on the timber duties by way of illustration; and then, pointing out how the amendment would create a differential duty of 14s. on certain sugars, while the Government measure only gave 10s., emphatically repeated that they would not escape from their difficulties by giving increased protection to the West Indies. He then read extracts from letters which he had received that morning, from individuals largely engaged in the sugar trade, in which the writers pointed out that by adopting the higher duty on the white clayed sugars, the country would be losers to the extent of 1,000,000*l.* These sugar refineries established at Calcutta and in Demerara, which manufactured a refined sugar, which, while it would escape the duty on the white clayed, was largely augmenting in use. Believing to adopt

Escott, and Mr. Shaw took part, the house divided, and Mr. Hume's amendment was negatived by a majority of 63 to 75.—Mr. Hume then moved that the debate should be adjourned.—After some observations from Mr. M'Geachy and Lord Palmerston, Mr. S. O'Brien said as with a small majority he could not hope to overcome a systematic opposition, he would move the adjournment of the house.—The Speaker put the question on the motion of the adjournment of the house, which was carried by acclamation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at four o'clock.

Sir R. Peel moved the order for going into committee on the Sugar Duties Bill before the other orders of the day; the house having resolved itself into committee, Mr. Greene in the chair, Mr. Hume moved that the consideration of the clause be deferred. Considerable discussion ensued, during which, it was asked whether the Government considered the distinction it had drawn between slave sugar and free, as a permanent one?—Sir R. Peel in reply refused to pledge himself to the permanence of the present settlement of the question.—Mr. Hume finally withdrew his motion, stating that on bringing up the report, he should endeavour to obtain a clearer definition of what was considered slave sugar, and what was free. On the clause which requires with foreign sugar, imported, a certificate of origin, Mr. Labouchere condemned the whole system of certificates of growth, stating that they would be entirely inefficient for the prevention of fraud.—Mr. Gladstone entered into a long explanation of the operation of these certificates, which he said would have the effect they were intended to produce.—A long discussion ensued, which was terminated by Lord Palmerston dividing the committee, when the clause was carried by a majority of 84, the numbers being, for the clause 114, against it 30. The remaining clauses were agreed to after a short discussion on the construction to be placed on the clauses of the existing treaties with Denmark.—On the preamble being put, Mr. T. Duncombe gave rise to an animated discussion by moving, as an amendment, that the usual words in the preamble of a supply bill, "freely and voluntarily given," be omitted, as in the present case conveying a palpable untruth, inasmuch as the majority negativing the Government proposition, had been coerced by Sir Robert Peel into a majority affirming it.—Sir R. Peel replied, defending his having asked the house to re-consider its vote, by the example of Lord Althorp, who did the same on one occasion with regard to the Malt-tax. He explained some of the expressions that he had used, and which had been misrepresented; denied that he expected complete concurrence on all occasions with the measures of the Government, and expressed a hope that his supporters would remain united in spite of all the efforts to sow dissension among them. After a few remarks from Mr. Labouchere, congratulating the right hon. baronet on the more cheerful tone of his speech compared with that of Monday night, Mr. Duncombe withdrew his amendment, the bill passed through committee, and the report was ordered to be received on Friday.

The remaining business of the night was of a routine character, and the house adjourned at half-past one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

Their lordships assembled at five o'clock.

Several petitions were presented.

In answer to a question from the Earl of Clarendon, the Earl of Aberdeen said, that whatever part her Majesty's Government might take with respect to the marriage of the Queen of Spain, due attention would be paid to the honour and independence of that country. It was perfectly true that a noble lord had submitted to him (the Earl of Aberdeen) a letter from Don Carlos, in which his Royal Highness referred to the noble lord bearing the letter as being in possession of his (Don Carlos's) intentions, and of the sacrifices which he was inclined to make for the pacification of Spain. That noble lord stated that Don Carlos was ready to relinquish his claim to the Spanish throne upon his son's marriage with Queen Isabella. Whether the Queen was to marry his son as a subject, or as sovereign, he (the Earl of Aberdeen) could not say. Upon receiving the communication, he had immediately informed the Spanish Government of it, but he had not thought it his duty to press for an answer. He did not think it was expedient to produce the correspondence which had taken place.

Several petitions in favour of the legalization of Presbyterian mixed marriages were presented.

Lord Campbell postponed the discussion on the Law of Libel Bill until the third reading, in consequence of the absence of Lord Denman.—The report on the bill was then brought up.

Lord Brougham moved the third reading of the Debtors and Creditors Bill.

The Lord Chancellor said, that as both the bills of the noble lord, and that of Lord Cottenham, were before the house, it would be impossible then to come to a decision on them, and suggested that they should both be referred to a select committee.—Lord Brougham assented to the proposition, but Lord Cottenham refused to do so, expressing his conviction that the proposal was made for the purpose of defeating his bill, and divided the house on the question, when the reference to the committee was carried by 28 to 4.—The Select Committee is to begin its labours on Monday next, and to sit day by day till able to make its report, in order to get a measure on the subject passed during the present session.—Their lordships then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The Speaker took the chair at four o'clock.

The Lords' Amendments to the Chester and Holyhead Railway Bill were read and agreed to.

Mr. Greene brought up the report on the sugar duties.—Mr. Ewart said that, in the absence of the hon. member for Montrose, who, not being able to attend himself, had requested him to embody the motion of which he had given notice, he begged to move that slave and free labour sugar might be admitted into this country on the payment of equal duty. He called on the Government to adopt one of two alternatives—either to define on what terms they intended to admit foreign free-labour sugar, or at once to admit foreign slave-labour sugar. The question was not one of party, but strictly one of principle, and as such he entreated the house to consider it. He begged leave, therefore, to move "That slave and free-labour sugar be admitted upon the payment of equal duties."—Mr. James opposed the motion.—The house divided, and the numbers were—

For receiving the report	..	..	..	183
For Mr. Ewart's amendment	..	..	..	65
Majority for Ministers	..	..	..	—118

Lord John Russell wished to know when the right hon. baronet intended to proceed with the bill?—Sir R. Peel said in case there should be a disposition to enter into a lengthened discussion upon the bill on Monday, he proposed that the Bank Charter should have precedence on that day, and that the further consideration of the sugar duties should be postponed till Thursday. He would name Monday for the third reading of the bill with that understanding.—The report was then received, and the bill was ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time on Monday.

The house then went into Committee on the Dissenters Chapels' Bill, after some opposition from Mr. Plumptre. The clauses, after considerable discussion, were all agreed to, and the other orders of the day being disposed of, the house adjourned at half-past twelve.

ANALYSIS OF THE DIVISION LIST.

The following forty-nine members, who did not vote with the Ministry on the division of Friday, June 14, voted with Sir Robert Peel on Monday. Those four whose names are printed in italics voted on the previous occasion with Mr. Miles:—

Ackers, J	Fitzroy, Hon H	Knight, F W	Pagee, Lord W
Acland, T D	Gorsuch, Charles	Law, Hon C E	Palmer, G
Acton, Col	Grogan, E	Lawson, A	Pusey, Col
Antrobus, E	Hardy, J	Legh, G C	Price, R
Beggs, William	Hawkins, T	Logan, Sir H	Ryder, Hon G D
Bruges, Major	Hepburn, Sir T B	Lygon, Col	Sheppard, T
Buckley, E	Hotham, Lord	Mackinnon, W A	Smollett, A
Bunbury, T	Houldsworth, T	Marsham, Lord	Thompson, Alderman
Burrell, Sir C M	Irton, S	Masterman, J	Turner, Christopher
Chetwynd, Hon F	James, W	Maxwell, Hon J P	Verney, H
Douglas, Sir Howard	Jolliffe, Sir W G	Mildmay, H St J	Wellesley, Lord C
Easton, R J	Kemble, H	Newry, Lord	Wyndham, Col C
Estcourt, T G B

The following fifteen members, who supported the Ministry on Friday, did not vote on Monday:—

Blandford, Marquis of	Dick, F S W *	Hillsborough, Earl of	Pollington, Lord
Bright, J	Estcourt, T G B	James, Sir W C	Pringle, A
Cochrane, A	Greenall, P	Mitchell T A	Rolleston, Col
Cresswell, A	Heathcoat, J	Morgan, C

* The vote given by Mr. Dick on Friday against Mr. Miles's amendment has been stated by that gentleman to have been unintentional.

The following 38 members, who formed part of Mr. Miles's majority on Friday, did not vote on Monday, with the exception of the four whose names are printed in italics, who voted with Sir R. Peel:

Beggs, William	Entwisle, W	Muntz, G F	Rumbold, C E
Blewitt, R J	Fenton, W	O'Brien, A S	Shirley, E P
Bodkin, W H	Gisborne, T	Ossulston, Lord	Smith, A
Buller, C	Gorsuch, Charles	Paget, Lord A	Smythe, Hon G*
Christopher, R A	Heneage, J W	Peasnell, Hon Col	Taylor, E
Clements, Lord	Howard, Sir R	Philpotts, J	Trollope, Sir J
Copeland, Alderman	Lascelles, Hon W J	Pulsford, R	Turner, Christopher
Dashwood, G H	Mangles, R D	Rashleigh, W	Waddington, H S
Dick, Q	Marjoribanks, S	Repton, G W J	Wall, C B
Douglas, Sir Howard	Metcalfe, H

* A letter from Mr. George Smythe explains that the official list is incorrect in attributing to him a defection from Mr. Miles.

The following 29 members, who did not vote on the former occasion, voted on Monday with Mr. Miles:—

Ainsworth, P	Elliot, E	Macaulay, Rt Hon T B	Ponsonby, Hon C F A C
Berkeley, Hon G F	Fitzwilliam, Hon G	Matheson, J	Ramsbottom, J
Blake, M	Hall, Sir B	Morison, General	Rice, E R
Browne, R D	Heathcote, G J	Murphy, F S	Smith, R
Childers, J W	Hoskins, K	Murphy, A	Somers, J P
Clay, Sir W	Leader, J T	Pattison, J	Stock, Sergeant
Currie, R	Leveson, Lord	Pigot, Right Hon D	Turner, E
Disraeli, B

Lord Clements was paired in favour of Mr. Miles.

COUNTRY NEWS.

BRISTOL.—ALARMING AFFRAY.—On Saturday last a serious collision took place between a party of the 41st Regiment, who had marched into Bristol that day, and some of the police. It would appear that the disturbance originated with one of the soldiers and a member of the force, when blows were exchanged, and in a few minutes the fight became general between a number of each party. Nine of the soldiers were locked up, and one taken to the infirmary after receiving injuries of a very serious nature. The affair took place about twelve o'clock at night, and the city was in a state of complete uproar from a report that the soldiers had determined to rescue their comrades who were in durance.

GRAVESEND.—WILFUL MURDER.—On Monday afternoon Mr. Carttar, the Coroner for Kent, resumed and concluded an inquiry, which had twice been adjourned, at the Town Hall, High-street, Gravesend, on the body of Elizabeth Hartnell, aged 35, who died from the effects of violence used towards her by a man named Thomas Jury. The painful occurrence has occasioned a very great sensation throughout the town, and the Board-room of the Hall during the proceedings was much crowded, there being the Mayor and several of the Magistrates present also Mr. Horne, barrister, of the Home Circuit, attended to watch the case on the part of the accused. The evidence adduced was of a most voluminous character. The Coroner at length summed up the whole of the facts, and pointed out the most important features in the evidence for the consideration of the jury, and left them to say whether he (Jury) had caused the deceased's death or not; and after a lapse of nearly two hours, at half-past ten o'clock at night, they returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder against Thomas Jury." The Coroner then made out his warrant for the committal of the accused, and in the course of Tuesday morning he was removed to Maidstone Gaol, to await his trial at the next assizes. He is a married man, and 60 years of age; has wife and family have, however, long since left him, owing to his abandoned character, and live in much respectability at the west end of the Metropolis.

IRELAND.

In consequence of the rumour that the Peel administration was at an end all parties in Dublin were greatly excited during Sunday and Monday last. It is almost impossible to convey anything like an adequate idea of the consternation which the rumoured event created, and it is hardly necessary to say that it was attributed more to the state of Ireland and the imprisonment of O'Connell than to any defection in the Government ranks on the subject of the sugar duties. The repeal meeting on Monday was densely crowded, and the greater portion of the time occupied by the proceedings was taken up by the presentation of sums of money from various parts of the country, and the perusal of letters by which they were accompanied. Mr. Smith O'Brien handed in £5 from Mr. Morgan John O'Connell, the Liberator's nephew, who, he said, although always of extreme liberal politics, had never before given in his adhesion to the Repeal movement. The Repeal rent for the week amounted to upwards of £2200.

A commercial traveller a few days since dropped his pocket-book containing notes to the amount of £2000 in the coffee-room of the Railway Hotel, New Elms, Vauxhall. It was fortunately found by the waiter under the table, and restored on application. The waiter was presented with £5 and an order for a suit of clothes.

Public meetings have been held during the past week at Liverpool, Birmingham, Leicester, and Edinburgh, for the purpose of addressing the Queen to liberate Mr. O'Connell.

We regret to announce the death of Doctor Hope, who for nearly half a century filled the chair of chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. The learned doctor had nearly completed his 77th year.

St. Stephen, Walbrook.—On Thursday morning a meeting of the parishioners of St. Stephen, Walbrook, was held at the parish church of Walbrook, to take into consideration the present state of the church. The Rev. Dr. Croly, the rector, on taking the chair, stated, that, reluctant as he was to call a meeting in the present agitated state of the parish, yet circumstances compelled him to adopt that course. During the last few days the window of the church had fallen in, and had it not been for a most providential event, a shower of rain, several persons would to a certainty have been killed, and they would have then assembled under a deep and solemn responsibility. The rev. doctor then read a letter from Mr. Griffiths, the parish surveyor, in which it was stated that the church was in extreme danger. After some remarks from Mr. Roch and Mr. Howett, Mr. Williams proposed that Alderman Gibbs, Mr. Whittaker, the late churchwardens, Mr. Roch and Mr. Flight, the present churchwardens of St. Stephen, Walbrook, and Mr. Brandram and Mr. Butterfield, the churchwardens of St. Benet Sherehog, should be waited on by Mr. Crosby and Mr. Jones, the vestry clerks, to take measures for the repair of the church. This proposal was indignantly rejected by Mr. Howett on the part of the meeting, and Mr. Brandram declared he would not have anything to do with Alderman Gubbs even should the resolution be carried. The proposal was afterwards withdrawn, and after a long discussion it was resolved that on and after Sunday next the church should be closed until further notice. After some further discussion the vestry adjourned until a survey of the church shall be made.

PRINCE ALBERT AND THE ELEVENTH HUSSARS.

A short time since the Earl of Cardigan and officers of the 11th or Prince Albert's Own Hussars entertained at a splendid banquet, Sir Edward Blakeney, Lieutenant-General commanding the forces in Ireland, Major-General Wyndham, the officer commanding regiments at present in Dublin garrison, and a distinguished company of military men; when, for the first time, a most beautiful piece of workmanship, the gift of his Royal Highness Prince Albert to this gallant corps, was placed upon the mess-table, where it was the theme of universal and well-merited admiration. On a pedestal of polished black marble, with silver scroll mouldings, borders, and feet, stands an exquisitely designed figure of his Royal Highness in full uniform as Colonel of the 11th Hussars, mounted on his favourite Arab charger, in an attitude at once natural and graceful. The likeness of the Prince and the contour of his figure are most faithfully preserved, whilst the action of the horse is extremely fine and spirited. The tout ensemble is most striking; the gorgeous decorations of the uniform and horse trappings, and all the minutiæ of military equipment, are given in the solid silver with surprising accuracy and effect. The entire height is about two and a half feet.

On a silver plate, inserted into a side of the pedestal, is the simple inscription, "Presented to the 11th Hussars by their late Colonel, Prince Albert, February, 1844." Altogether, this elaborate work reflects the greatest credit on the designer, Mr. Cotterell, the eminent sculptor, and Mr. Garrard, of Panton-street, Haymarket, to whom the execution of the design was entrusted. Lord Cardigan, in addressing the company, after "The health of her Majesty," alluded to the circumstances under which the above beautiful gift was presented as a token of the Prince's esteem for his old corps. "The health of the Earl of Cardigan" was subsequently given by General Wyndham, and most heartily received. The festive party did not separate till an advanced hour.

Among the guests on this interesting occasion were Lieut.-General Sir E. Bakeney, attended by Lord Cosmo Russell, and the Hon. Captain St. George Foley, A.D.C., Major-General Wyndham, attended by Major Kaye, A.D.C.; Colonels Napier, Bainbridge, Forster, Speed, Lewis, Frith, Brown, Memco, Walcot, Higgins, Arthur, Sutherland, Wallace, Townsend, Airey, Maxwell, &c., &c.

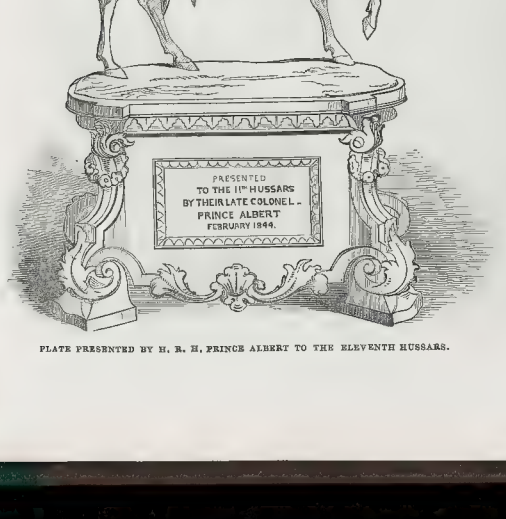

PLATE PRESENTED BY H. R. H. PRINCE ALBERT TO THE ELEVENTH HUSSARS.

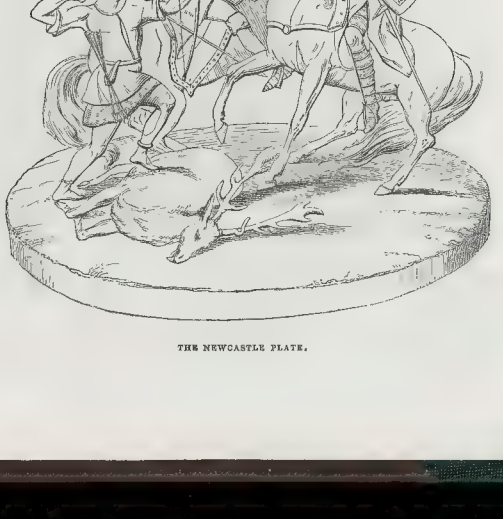
THE NEWCASTLE RACE PLATE.

The magnificent piece of plate which is to be run for at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, on Thursday next, has been executed by Messrs. Lister and Sons, of that town. The subject is from Froissart's "Chronicles," and the old "Ballad of Chevy Chase," which is deeply interesting to Northumbrians, the memorable battle occurring in that county. The main incident—the fall of the Douglas, who was slain by an arrow—is the one chosen by the modeller, Mr. Sharp, of London: the chief is seen at the moment when he is struck by the arrow which pierced him to the heart; the right foot of the archer is placed on the deer, and the Douglas wavering in his seat, his hand on the dart which is drawing his life's blood. The modelling is finely and faithfully executed: the picturesque armour of the fourteenth century has been accurately copied. Her Majesty and Prince Albert have honoured Mr. Lister, by inspecting the plate at Buckingham Palace since which it has been seen by a number of the most distinguished of the nobility—the value is one hundred and fifty pounds.



THE NEWCASTLE PLATE.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.—No. XX.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, ESQ., M.P.

The most remarkable speeches in the recent debates have been those of Mr. Disraeli, the Member for Shrewsbury. He has lately made himself more prominent in the sphere of literature and politics as the expounder of the views and opinions of that section of the Conservative party, which has received the name of "Young England." His opinions, however, are too peculiar, have too much individuality ever to become those of a party. We scarcely think "Young England" capable of holding as points of belief the startling paradoxes to which Mr. Disraeli occasionally gives utterance. His speeches abound with happily-turned sentences, in which a clever sarcasm is thrown into the antithetical form; they also contain a large amount of historical information, on which he draws almost as often as Macaulay himself. He rarely announces a positively new principle, but he often places old ones in a strange and startling light, and states the most extraordinary inconsistencies with an air of such perfect earnestness and conviction, that his auditors are sometimes puzzled whether to admire or laugh at him. But he is not one of those men who can be laughed at: we have seen him turn the laugh most sorely against those who thought themselves securely trenched behind form and precedent. He can hit hard, and none have suffered more from his sarcasm than the present Premier and the Home Secretary. He seems to mangle them with peculiar gusto, and deals with them as if he was annihilating the Tadpole or Taper of his own "Coningsby." His speeches have not much metaphor, nor does he indulge in rhetorical glitter and ornament; we cannot call him impassioned, nor say he is eloquent; but he interests, informs, and amuses. A speech from Disraeli is sure to command attention. His manner is not calculated to set off his matter to the best advantage. His delivery is heavy, and of action he has none whatever. He thrusts his hands deep into his side pockets, leans forward a little, or turns from side to side according to whom he may be addressing. But that is all. Though he sets the house cheering or laughing for minutes together, his countenance remains impassive; he says a good thing as if perfectly unconscious of it. He is the very antipodes of Shell, who is all action and passion, and for the time he is speaking is like one possessed.

MR. DISRAELI.

Mr. B. Disraeli is the son of J. Disraeli, of Bradenham House, Bucks, the author of the "Curiosities of Literature." Talent seems to have descended to his son, who is well known as the author of several novels—"Alroy," "Vivian Grey," "Contarini Fleming," "The Young Duke," and others. To his pen are also attributed the "Letters of Runnimede," published, we believe, about the time of the Reform agitation. He represented Maidstone in 1837, but now sits for Shrewsbury. When the Whigs were in office he gave much attention to the foreign diplomacy of the country; and by bringing forward motions on the subject, exposed himself to occasional severe treatment at the hands of Lord Palmerston. He has lately devoted himself more to home affairs, and mixes more in general debates than he was wont to do. He is about forty, rather above the middle height; he is pale, with deep black hair, and a countenance sufficiently indicative of Hebrew descent, even if his name were not so decisive.

SIGNOR MICHAEL COSTA.

This accomplished musician and most esteemed gentleman, on account of the urbanity of his manners to his brothers in the profession, of which he is a distinguished ornament, first made his appearance as a vocalist, unsuccessfully for himself in that character, but happily for the world of music for the disappointed singer not merged, but emerged into the maestro composer, in which new (his real) capacity he has segregated himself from the herd of a thousand pretenders to the inspiration of song. We do not think it is saying too much when we assert that Costa is the best colonel of an orchestral regiment in the world. His discipline is strict—his knowledge of its necessary tactics profound, and the motto of "follow our leader," was never more zealously adhered to than when under his "charge," the first instrumentalists of the world rush forward with all the fervour in which Beethoven's "Sinfonia Eroica" was conceived, and achieve a musical victory.

He has now conducted the first dramatic orchestra in Europe for upwards of a dozen years, during which he has won the good opinion of everybody by his ability, as a thorough musician, and his steady, upright conduct as a man. No conductor can enter more readily into a composer's meaning than Costa, or so quickly communicate it to every individual under his direction: if he be severe, he is just—and when he is pleased, it is a guarantee that "tout va bien" in the musical territory of which he is the strict but amiable autocrat.

SIGNOR COSTA.

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.

On Tuesday (the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo), Chantrey's equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington, in front of the new Royal Exchange, was thrown open to the public. Before we describe the inauguration, it may, however, be as well to glance at the merits of the statue as a work of art.

Placed in the midst of the open space left by the removal of Bank-buildings, the statue can easily be viewed on every side; and the further end of Cornhill, and the pavement by the Bank, afford capital points of sight: our artist has chosen the latter. The statue itself is 14 feet in height from the feet of the horse to the top of the head of the duke. The pedestal on which it stands is of Peterhead, or the red granite of Aberdeenshire, with the exception of the lower course, which is of grey granite. The pedestal is altogether 14 feet high, so that the total height is really 28 feet. The horse is in an attitude of rest. opinions differ as to the merits of the animal, but, to our eye, the chest and shoulders are disproportionately large, the head is too sharp, the neck too short, and the chamel too heavy. The portrait of the duke is more successful than the entire figure, which is ill-proportioned, whilst the position is objectionable. There remains a striking anomaly to be noticed: stirrups are omitted, as being a modern invention, whilst there is introduced an appendage to the bridle which is an addition of our own day. The duke wears a military cloak, so that the classic affectation is not extended to the costume. To the general we shall hereafter object, as disproportionately small for the statue, whilst its plainness ill accords with the highly embellished building which it fronts.

The cost of the statue and pedestal was £9000; the metal, having been given to the committee by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, is valued at £1500, in addition to that amount. The money was raised by a public subscription, after a meeting held at the Mansion-house. The contract with Sir Francis Chantrey was made in February, 1839, by the trustees—Sir Peter Laurie, Mr. John Masterman, Mr Arthur K. Barclay, and Mr. R. L. Jones; the work to be completed and fixed by 1843. Sir F. Chantrey, as his death, left the whole model complete, and also the head of the duke, the full size. The work has since been completed by his assistant (Mr. Weeks), under the direction of the executors

The circumstances of the inauguration of the statue, on Tuesday, were somewhat singular. The King of Saxony, after visiting several of the metropolitan institutions, proceeded to the Mansion House, to break fast with the Lord Mayor; when, during the repast, Mr. John Masterman, M.P. for the city of London, and Sir Peter Laurie waited, without any previous announcement, upon his Majesty and the Lord Mayor, as a deputation from the Royal Exchange and Gresham Trust Committee, to notify that they were about to open the statue of the Duke of Wellington, and to beg that his lordship would signify to his royal guest that they hoped his Majesty would honour them by witnessing the ceremony. His Majesty assented, and the Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayoress, and the ladies and gentlemen at the table proceeded immediately to the spot in which the statue of the Duke was to be unfolded to the public gaze.

At this moment the streets of the immediate neighbourhood were most densely crowded. The King walked arm-in-arm with the Lord Mayor through masses of people from the gates of the Mansion house to the entrance to the space assigned for the chairman and committee, and was most warmly received.

At one o'clock, the Royal Exchange and Gresham Trust Committee, several of the aldermen, the trustees for the statue of the Duke of Wellington, the executors of the late Sir Francis Chantrey (who commenced and executed the most important parts of the statue), and some gentlemen of high commercial eminence had assembled at the Guildhall, with the object of going in procession to perform the ceremony. They sat down to a very elegant déjeuner, and after having drunk "The Queen and the Prince," amidst great cheering, were addressed by Mr Richard Lambert Jones, the chairman, in a speech eulogistic of the extraordinary man in whose honour they were all assembled that day.

The chairman and committee, and the other gentlemen of whom the numerous company was formed, then proceeded from the Guildhall.

The Duke of Wellington's band struck up the national anthem as the King of Saxony and the Lord Mayor entered the space before the statue, and the committee received his Majesty with acclamations. The committee having walked twice round the statue, the covering of which was removed instantaneously, amidst cheers from all around.

Mr. R. L. Jones said he thought it necessary that he should state to his Majesty, on behalf of the trustees and committee, why they were assembled on that day on that spot. They had met to pay a grateful tribute to one of the greatest men ever produced by this or any other country. It was needless for him to say that he meant the Duke of Wellington. (Immense cheering.) It would ill become him to say one word about the transcendant merits of that great man, because those merits were known to, and acknowledged by, the whole civilised world. The citizens of London felt it peculiarly incumbent upon them to erect a statue to that illustrious person, by subscription, and with the aid of the Government, who had supplied the metal from the guns which Wellington himself had taken from the enemy, they had succeeded in thus proving their gratitude. (Great cheering.) This monument of a living warrior had been framed by the hands of a great artist now no more, and it was a gratifying fact that it was the first equestrian bronze statue which ever had been raised during the life of the person represented. Independently of the vast military renown of the Duke of Wellington the claim of his grace upon the gratitude of the citizens of London for advancing its interests by promoting the improvements and embellishments which the visitors to this great City looked at with wonder, was such that they were determined to give effect to that feeling in a way which posterity would be well able to appreciate, and would leave an example worthy of imitation. (Cheers.)

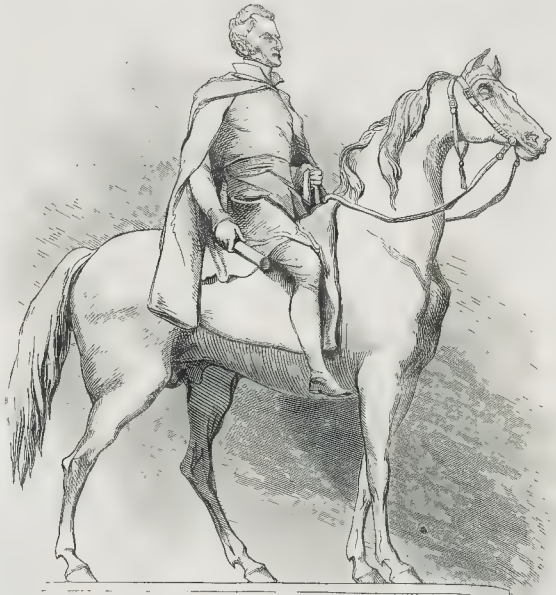
The King pulled off his hat, and joined as heartily as any one in the immense multitude

His Majesty next took a view of the interior of the Royal Exchange, over which his Majesty was shown by the Lord Mayor and Mr Tite, the architect.

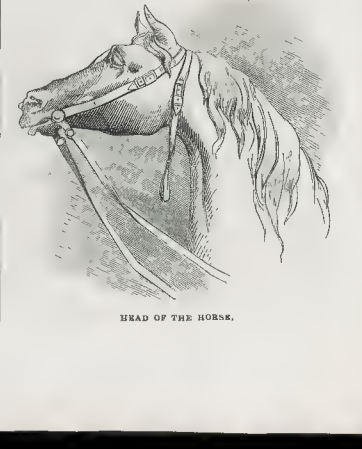
The illustrious party then returned to the Mansion-house, and, after remaining some time, the King entered his carriage, accompanied by the Lord Mayor, and attended by the Sheriffs in their state carriages, and drove to the Temple, where his Majesty and suite were received by Sir Frederick Thesiger, the Solicitor-General, who conducted the King over the Temple Church. After inspecting the sacred edifice his Majesty visited the halls of the Middle and Inner Temples.

His Majesty then took leave of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, and drove to the Gallery of the Society of Painters in Water Colours, in Pall Mall East, where his Majesty and suite alighted and viewed the exhibition.

The King then proceeded to the British Institution in Pall Mall, and after inspecting this collection of pictures, returned to Buckingham Palace.



THE CITY WELLINGTON STATUE.



HEAD OF THE HORSE.

HISTORY OF WOOD-ENGRAVING

(Continued from page 358.)

Though from the time of the first appearance of Bewick's "Quadrupeds," 1790, wood-engraving began to take higher ground than it had occupied for two centuries preceding, and to advance in public favour; yet, for about thirty years afterwards, its extension for the general purposes of pictorial illustration was comparatively slow. Other wood-engravers of talent, indeed, appeared; but though their number was but small, they did not meet with constant and regular employment. Charlton Nesbit, one of the best, did scarcely anything from 1815 to 1830; and in that period there were not more than three masters in London who had sufficient business to employ, even occasionally, an assistant, and to keep an apprentice or two. Wood-engraving was not then employed for the purpose of affording, at a cheap rate, instruction and amusement for the great body of the people; and the demand for its productions, by the more wealthy few, was insufficient to promote its rapid growth, or even to support it in a state of vigorous existence. From 1804, when the second volume of Bewick's "British Birds" appeared, to the time of his death, 1828, comparatively little was done by him and his few apprentices; and the income which he derived in this period from his business, as wood-engraver, must have been comparatively small; his greatest profits were derived from the previous exercise of his talents as an artist, which created a demand for successive reprints of his "British Birds and Quadrupeds."

The late William Hone used to take credit to himself, and deservedly, as a promoter of wood-engraving; for during the publication of his political satires, his edition of "Strutt's Sports and Pastimes," his "Every-day," "Table," and "Year Books," between 1826 and 1830, no other publisher in London gave so much employment to wood-engravers. The Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge having determined to avail themselves largely, in the "Penny Magazine," of the aid of wood-engraving as a means of conveying "useful notions," and of imparting innocent pleasure, by a direct appeal to the mind through the medium of the eye, the art received a new impulse, which was further augmented by the publication of other periodical works of a similar character. "Of the making of books there is no end,"—nor is it natural, when men have once discovered the art, that there should be:

WOOD-ENGRAVING—"THE DEATH OF THE CHILDREN OF NIOBE"—FROM THE PAINTING BY WILSON.

> Like leaves on trees the race of man is found,
> Now green in youth, now withering on the ground
> Another race the following spring supplies,
> They fall successive and successive rise
> So generations in their course decay
> So flourish these when those are past away.

Admitting the aptness of Homer's simile, with respect to the succession of the generations of man, which we have just quoted from Pope's elegant Anglification of the old Grecian—it is, nevertheless, to be observed that man leaves behind him the evidence of his active existence, in the works of his hands and in the record of his knowledge and feelings, which influence the actions of his successors; and form the foundation of new discoveries, new combinations, new feelings, and new thoughts. Hence the endless "making of books" in a civilised state, detailing and representing all that man sees, and imagines and feels, and does; for "the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing."

We believe that Mr. Charles Knight, the publisher, was the person who was chiefly instrumental in causing so many wood-cuts of interest and merit, to be given in the "Penny Magazine." In the work published by Mr. Knight on his own account, he has most extensively availed himself of wood-engraving as a means of illustration; and has been not only a great employer, but a liberal encourager of designers and engravers on wood. The cuts contained in Knight and Co.'s editions of the "Pictorial Bible," "Pictorial Prayer Book," the "Arabian Nights," and the "Works and Biography of Shakspere" are "beyond count." In the "Arabian Nights" and the "Shakspere" are contained some of the best wood-engravings of the day.

To attempt to establish a Weekly Newspaper illustrated with numerous wood cuts, chiefly reflecting the image of the passing times, and presenting to the eye a pictorial representation of the scenes and objects which at the moment might happen to occupy public attention, was a bold undertaking; and such a one could only have proved successful when carried out with the spirit with which it was made. It was necessary that the proprietors should not only have great confidence in themselves to obtain, through the active management of artists and engravers, an inexhaustible supply of interesting subjects, but also great confidence in the public for the reward of their efforts to furnish them with News, both typographically and pictorially. The attempt was first made in the establishment of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, in 1842; and the success which has attended it, whilst it has more than realised the happiest anticipations of the proprietors, has still further stimulated their exertions to deserve public favour.

For a proof of their exertions hitherto, they respectfully beg to refer to the multitude and variety of the subjects given in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS since its commencement, and to request those who may be inclined to favour them with a visit, to consider the circumstances under which they may have been produced; that the drawing, which might have been made at the distance of two or three hundred miles, may have have been sent to London, drawn on the block, pressed, printed, and printed in the same time that was required to travel the same distance about a hundred years ago. A consideration of the various contrivances of human ingenuity which must have been made available in order to produce such a cut, and to print it off in tens of thousands, in so short a time, would perhaps induce a person of charitable feelings and reflecting mind to excuse rather than to exaggerate any of its presumed defects. It is further to be observed that even in works of art, on which much time and labour have been spent, excellence is not always attained. As even Homer himself sometimes nodded, though he was not writing against time, but for all time, surely designers and engravers on wood may be excused for becoming occasionally drowsy, after having sat up for the greater part of the three preceding nights, anxiously labouring to produce cuts just in time to most seasonably gratify public curiosity. Those cuts, however, displaying passing scenes and events, though necessarily drowsy and engraved in haste, possess more than a merely ephemeral interest; they not only aid the mind at the present hour in realizing the written description of places and persons, but also form an interesting pictorial record for future times.

(To be continued.)

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE, Friday.—The returns for the week exhibit full average supplies of English wheat, while the small amount of samples of that grain on sale to-day was good. For all descriptions, the demand was in a very sluggish state, and Monday's prices were barely supported. In foreign wheat, of which upwards of 12,000 quarters have come from the hand since our last, next to nothing was doing and the rates had a downward tendency. The accounts from the country to-day are somewhat favourable, the demand for all spring corn was brisk, and prices were barely sustained. Superfine malt sold steadily; other kinds slowly at previous currencies.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 1,610; Barley 680; Oats, 7,110 quarters. Irish: Wheat, —. Barley, 100, Oats, 12,080 quarters. Foreign: Wheat, 12,430; Barley, 6510, Oats, 2,713 qrs. Flour, 5,430 sacks; Malt, 1,610 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 52s; ditto white, 54s to 62s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 42s to 48s; ditto white, 48s to 56s; rye, 32s to 36s; grinding barley, 24s to 26s; distilling ditto, 28s to 29s; malting ditto, 30s to 36s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s; brown ditto, 48s to 50s; Ringston and Ware, 60s to 63s; Chevalier, 56s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 22s to 25s; potato ditto, 23s to 25s; Youghal and Cork, black, 21s to 22s. dcto white, 23s to 25s; tick beans, 32s to 34s; harrow ditto, 31s to 32s; grey peas, 27s to 30s; maple, 31s to 33s; white ditto, 34s to 36s; boilers, 36s to 38s per quarter; flour, 50s to 53s; Suffolk, — to —; Stockton and Yorkshire, 35s to 40s, per 28 lbs.

Foreign.—Free wheat, 48s to 50s; Dantzic, red, 46s to 51s, white, 50s to 56s. In Bond.—Barley, 18s to 20s, oats, new, 12s to 14s; ditto fine, 15s; beans, 30s to 32s; grey peas, 23s to 25s per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 22s, Baltic, 21s to 23s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Linseed and canary seeds continue to meet a steady sale at prices quite equal to those obtained last week. In other seeds comparative quiet is doing.

The following are the present nominal currencies:—Linseed, 50s to 52s; Baltic crushing, 52s to 57s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 52s to 53s; hempseed, 28s to 35s per quarter; coriander, 15s to 20s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 12s to 16s; white ditto, 10s to 12s; tares, 4s to 6s 6d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, £25 to £27 per last of 10 quarters; Linseed cakes, English, £6 to £6 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £5 5s to £5 10s per ton; canary 25s to 26s per quarter.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8d to 8½d, of household ditto, 6d to 7d per 4lb loaf.

Imported Weekly Averages.—Wheat, 55s 9d; barley, 31s 10d; oats, 21s 6d; rye, 32s 6d; beans, 37s 11d; peas, 34s 1d.

Six Weeks' Averages (last) govern Duty.—Wheat, 55s 7d, barley, 31s 2d; oats, 21s 5d; rye, 32s 2d; beans, 36s 7d; peas, 33s 10d.

Duties on Foreign Grain.—Wheat, 12s; barley, 7s; oats, 6s; rye, 10s 6d; beans, 8s 6d; peas, 10s 6d.

TEA.—Notwithstanding the late large imports of tea, the demand for that article is steady at full prices. On Wednesday, 3530 packages were offered at auction, and nearly all sold—green at an advance on previous rates of from 1d to 2d per lb.

SUGAR.—In West India qualities a large business has been done this week, at full prices Privately, fine yellow has sold at 64s to 66s; good, 62s to 63s; low to middling, 58s to 59s; and low, 55s to 57s 6d, per cwt. Mauritius and Bengal sugars have moved off slowly The refined market is steady, standard lumps, at 76s, and brown lumps 73s per cwt.

COFFEE.—Only a moderate business has been done in this market, and prices have undergone no material change. The public sold ordinary Ceylon at 38s per cwt.

COCOA.—In this article very little is doing, and the rates are somewhat easier.

RICE.—Bengal is in demand, and 11s per cwt. has been obtained for fine. Carolina, higher. 1000 packets have sold at 13s for middling white.

PROVISIONS.—The Irish market continues very heavy, and prices are on the decline. Limericks may be quoted at 74s to 78s; and Waterfords, 75s to 78s per cwt. Foreign butter is equally dull, yet the rates are supported The best cured bacon is in demand, but other kinds are a dull sale. In other provisions little is doing.

OILS.—Linseed oil is a dull sale, and may be purchased on easier terms, transactions having taken place at 23s 3d to 23s 6d per cwt.

TALLOW.—This article is in active demand, at improving rates; those on the spot being 41s to 41s 3d, and for delivery, 41s 6d per cwt.

COALS.—Ord's Redheugh, 19s. Old Tanfield, 18s Tanfield Moor, 18s 6d., Towsler, 19s 6d West Wylam, 20s 6d., Hodge, — Hetton, — Stewart's, 22s 3d. Kepin. 19s 6d per ton

HOPS.—The supply of hops on offer still continues unusually small, yet the demand for them, arising from the improved plantation accounts, is inactive at late rates. In the duty no lasting has as yet taken place. Mid. Kents, pockets, £7 to £7 15s.; Weald of Kent, £6 12s to £7; Mid Kent do. £7 to £7 10, do bags, £7 to £8 10s, East Kent pockets, £7 to £9, choice do, £5 to £10.

WOOL.—Since the conclusion of the sales a fair business has been doing in most kinds of wool, at full currencies.

POTATOES.—New potatoes are selling readily at 8s to 15s per cwt. Very few old ones are now offer, and they produce from 5s to 15s per ton.

SMITHFIELD.—For the time of year, the supply of beasts on offer, in to-day's market was very limited, owing to which, and the large attendance of buyers, the beef trade was act ve at an advance on Monday's quotations of 2d per 8lbs. The fresh arrivals consisted of 60 Scots by sea, from Aberdeen; 20 Devons, only direct from Exeter; and 30 shorthorns, as for them was steady, at very full prices. Although the supply of lambs was good, the trade was depressed; beasts, and the primest Downs, were not obtainable under 6s per 8lbs. Calf business was dong, at an advance of 4d per 8lbs. Pigs moved off slowly, at late rates. Milch cows were quoted at from £16 to £20 each, and calvers at £14 to £18.

Per 8lbs.: to sink the offal —Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 8d to 3s 8d; second quality do, 3s 10d to 3s 8d, prime large oxen, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 10d to 4s 0d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; second quality ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime large ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime small ditto 3s 10d to 4s 0d; large hogs, 3s 2d to 3s 8d; neat small porkers, 3s 10d to 4s 2d. lambs, 4s 4d to 5s 4d. Suckling calves, 18s to 28s; and quarter old store pigs, 16s 6d to 20s each. Beasts, 374, cows, 163; sheep and lambs, 11,970; calves, 448; pigs 320

Newgate and Leadenhall.—We had a very moderate supply of each kind of meat on sale to-day, but the demand was steady, at full prices for fine, by the carcass:—Inferior beef, 2s 4d to 2s 6d; middling ditto, 2s 8d to 2s 10d, prime large ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 2d, second quality do, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; large pork, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; inferior mutton, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; middling ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d, prime ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; veal, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; small pork 3s 8d to 4s 2d; lamb, 4s 0d to —.

HENRY HANBURY.

COMMERCE AND MONEY.

On the Stock Exchange during the last two foreign post-days, the demand for foreign bills of exchange has considerably increased, and the large stocks of foreign agricultural produce having already been large, and still larger arrivals of the same description of food being yet expected, it is therefore necessary to remit supply in the shape of bullion in payment for these import stores, and hence arises this increased demand for foreign bills of exchange. If, however, the use of our paper trade be improving, it is satisfactory to observe, that there is a proportionate improvement in the value of our foreign exports, and the supply of bills on the Royal Exchange during this week has been fully equal to the demand for them, by which the rates of the foreign exchanges have been fairly supported. A further influx of the precious metals is therefore rendered still necessary, to the payment of the balances due to us on our foreign commerce. At the present moment it is more than doubtful whether, in the face of a doubtful grain crop at home, the can long continue.

In the Money Market the doubtful state of the crops is beginning to make an impression not particularly favourable to the British funds, for there is evidently an indisposition to invest money largely in any description of them, although Consols are 1 per cent. above our last quotations of them, occasioned by some trade purchases having been made, exactly for the account of public bodies Money, however, becomes scarcer, as bullion continues to be derived from it must from necessity become greater, and accordingly there has been a better demand since our last for the shares of the London Joint Stock Banking Associations of improving prices. Of the Union Bank of London few shares are now in the market for sale, and they cannot be purchased unless at higher prices. The same remark is applicable to those of the London and Westminster Bank. East India Stock has been purchased for the opening of the transfer books at higher prices, and Bank Stock fully maintains its late high value.

In the Share Market the usual amount of business has been again transacted, although it has not been very interesting to the public in general. Birmingham Stock is gradually reassuming its former high value, having realized again £270. York and North Midland, Manchester and Leeds, and Northern and Eastern, are also severally dearer than they were last week Some business has been done in the shares of the Newcastle and Darlington Junction, which was opened to the public a few days ago. In this channel a portion, at all events, of our surplus capital, continues to find profitable employment.

On the Foreign Stock Exchange purchases to a considerable amount have been again made in various descriptions of foreign securities, although no material improvement is observable in their prices The continental capitalists still continue to make investments in Dutch, Danish, and Russian Bonds, which cause them to support their late high prices, and for the securities of the new States of America there is likewise a fair demand amongst these Chilian and Brazilian Bonds are at present the favourites for investment Speculators have continued to amuse themselves by dealing in Mexican and in Spanish Bonds, but the strength of the Soho and Bears have been so equally balanced, that the transactions of this week have made very little impression on their prices.

BRITISH FUNDS.—London and Westminster Bank, 25¾ to —; London Joint Stock Bank, —; Commercial, —; Colonial, —; Union of Australia, —; Provincial, —; Provincial Bank Stock, 19¾; East India Stock, — to —; Union Bank of London, 12 Three per Cent. Consols, — to —; Three per Cent. Reduced, 99; Three and-a-Half per Cent. 103¾. — Three-and-a-Half per Cent. New, — Three-and-a-Half per Cent Reduced, 101¾ to 102. Five per Cents., — ; Long Annuities, 12 7 16 to — ; India Bonds, — ; Exchequer Bills, — Birmingham and Derby, 63 to 65; Scarborough Branch 25, Birmingham and Gloucester, 94 to 95; Bristol and Exeter, 80½ to —; Eastern Counties, registered, 13¾ to —; Great Western, 81 Glasgow, 66 to 67; Great North of England 106 to 101, Great Western, 121¾ to —; Hull and Selby, 99 to 99; London and Brighton, 62½; London and Blackwall, 7¾; Greenwich, 7¾; Croydon, 19 to —; London and Birmingham Stock, 218 to 220, Manchester and Leeds, 107; Manchester and Birmingham, 57 to —; South Western, 88 to —; Midland Counties, 99; North Midland, 95. Newcastle and Darlington Junction, — ; Northern and Eastern, 20 ; Paris and Rouen, 38½; Paris and Orleans, 38½; South Eastern and Dover, 2½; York and Norwich, —; Dublin and Cashel, —; Dublin and Drogheda Junction, —; Lancaster and Carlisle, 6⅝ to 5½; Chester and Holyhead, 6½; North British, 5½; Strasburg and Bale, —; Rouen and Havre 10¾ pm.; Caledonian, 4, Leeds and Bradford, —; Yarmouth and Norwich, 2½; Bristol and Gloucester, — to —; Liverpool and Manchester — ; Glasgow and Dumfries, — ; York and North Midland, 1..10 ; Guildford Junction — ; Norwich and Brandon, — ; Grand Junction, — Trent Valley, — , Caledonian, Dundrum, and Glasgow, par, — ; Newcastle and Darlington Junction, 44.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 18.

FOREIGN OFFICE, JUNE 17.—The QUEEN has been pleased to approve of Mr. Antonio Acosta as Consul-General in the United Kingdom for the republic of Bolivia. The Queen has also been pleased to appoint Mr. Charles Hope Consul at Port Elizabeth, in the Cape of Good Hope, for the Free Hanseatic City of Hamburgh.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, JUNE 18.—Royal Regiment of Artillery: Second Captain A. Gossett to be Captain, vice Knatchbull; First Lieut. G. D. Warburton to be Second Captain, vice Gossett, Second Lieut. the Hon. W. Kennedy to be First Lieutenant, vice Warburton.

WHITEHALL, APRIL 26.—The Lord Chancellor has appointed Jeutman Adcock, of Cambridge, Gent., and Joseph Dodds, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in the county of Stafford, Gent., to be Masters Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.—FREDERICK HEIGHINGTON WARD, Arbour-terrace Commercial-road, tallow-chandler.

BANKRUPTS.—JOHN HOLLAND, Buxted, Sussex, grocer. THOMAS LEAVER, Great Coxwell, Berkshire, grocer. WILLIAM ELWARD DRAY, Heathfield, Sussex, grocer HENRY and JOHN PEACOCK, Stockton-upon-Tees, Durham, grocers.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATION.—JAMES BRYSON, Bathgate, haberdasher.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21.

BANKRUPTS.—G. STENT, builder, Pleasington, Camberwell. J. SMITH, corn merchant, Southampton. W. MOWBRAY, butcher, Wheathampstead, Herfordshire. M. WHITLAND (baker, John-street, Finsbury-square. T. PUCKLE, cap-maker, Strutton-street Commercial road East. G. CRAVEN, maltster, Wansfield, Yorkshire. E. HERON, butcher, Hartlepool, Durham. G. HARWOOD, draper, Chester.

BIRTHS

At Toronto, Upper Canada, the lady of Foskett B. Reddome, Esq., of a daughter.—At his quinta, St. Thiago, Madeira, the lady of Sir George Newman Wilkie, Knight of Dannebrog, of a son.—At Aymestry Vicarage, Herefordshire, the lady of the Hon. and Rev. T. C Sheffington, of a daughter.—At the rectory, Houghton Conquest, the lady of the Rev H. J. Rose, of a daughter.—At No. 6, Upper Brunswick-place, Pimlico, the wife of John Hicks, Esq., of a daughter. The wife of Thomas Grubeye, Esq., of Grovehouse, Camberwell, of a daughter.—At Hatch Beauchamp, Somerset, the wife of Edmund Prewster, Esq., late of the Royal Regiment of Artillery.—In Welbeck street, the lady of Peregrine Birch, Esq., of a son.—At Kensington, the wife of Thomas Greenfield, of the 52nd Regiment of Foot, of a son.—At Gower street, the lady of Thomas W. Greene, Esq., of a son.—At Beckenham lodge, Kent, the lady of Hubert Wathen, Esq., of a daughter.—At Stamford hill, the lady of Charles Frederick Cox, Esq., of a daughter.—In Oxford street, the lady of Robert Wharton, Esq., of a daughter.—At Edinburgh, the lady of A. L. Ross, Esq., of a daughter.—At Berne, Switzerland, the lady of Frederick Colville, Esq., of a daughter.—At Westhorpe, Notts, the lady of Major Warrand, of a son.—At 26, Edwardes-square, Kensington, the lady of Cosmo Alexander Husburne, Esq., of a son.—At Middleton-hall, Carmarthenshire, the lady of Lieutenant-Colonel Williams, of a son.—At Clifton, the lady of Edward Wakefield, Esq., of a son, still born.

MARRIAGES

At Bushy-park, near Melbourne, Derby, Edward Barker, Esq., of Cape Schank, Port Phillip, and of Aylesbury, Bucks, to Madaline Charlotte Skene, eldest daughter of the late Alexander Scott, Esq., of Bryanston square, and niece to Lieut.-General Sir Miles Nightingall, Knight Wake Brown, Esq., of Monckton Farleigh house, Wilts, to Selina, second daughter of Sir J. E. Kardley Wilmot, Baronet, Governor of Van Diemen's Land.—At Chiswick Church, Alfred M. Fox, Esq., of Bow Lane, to Mary Ann, eldest daughter of Henry Christopher, Esq., of Chiswick, to Maria Frances Christopher, daughter of the late Thomas Christopher, Esq., of Hammersmith.—At Kensington, Lieutenant William Lee Lee Antonie, R.N., of Ipswich, to Catherine Elliott, second daughter of Lieutenant Alexander Webb, R.N., of Hackney.—At Richmond, Surrey, Edward Slaughter, of Lower-street, Richmond, Esq., to Frances, second daughter of the late Rev. Richard Jones, Rector of St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, John Jefferies Stone, Esq., late of Calcutta, to Miss Mary Mulvaney Locke, of Berners-street, W.—At Hyde Park Chapel, William Henry Wood, Esq., Sergeant Major, Coldstream Guards, to Helen, daughter of the late Rev. David Wilkie, minister of the parish of Dunnichen, Forfarshire.—At Bath, Edward Wilkins, Esq., late of the residence of the British Minister at Naples, Joseph Delafield, Esq., eldest son of the late Joseph Delafield, Esq., of Bryanston square, London, to Sloane, daughter of the Captain Brown, Esq., late of the 1st Regiment of Foot.—At Bath, Thomas Bell Salmon, Esq., of Bytown, son of the late John Wilkes Hill, Esq., of London, to Mary Anne, daughter of Samuel Bridges, Esq., late of Jamaica.—At Bath, Lieut.-Colonel Reynolds, John Paton, Esq., of Fernshiels and Grandhome, to Elsie Deborah, youngest daughter of Thomas Reynolds, Esq., of Aberdeen.—At Bath, Lieutenant Alexander Wilson, R.N., son, daughter of the Rev. J. Beatty, of St. Saviour's, Jersey.—At St. Peter's Church, Hammersmith, Charles Frederick, third son of R. B Polsard, Esq., of Sizmel House, Hammersmith, to Jane Elizabeth, only child of the late Captain Hutchinson, Royal Navy.—At St. John's Church, Adelaide, South Australia, Jacob Hagen, Esq., M.L.C., to Mary, second daughter of the late Rev. Charles Wade Breeksmith.—At Hanover-square-hall Chapel, John Christie, Esq., second son of Robert Christie, Esq., Claremont-crescent, Edinburgh, to Sarah Frances, youngest daughter of the late Nicholas Fitz Gerald, Esq., of Ballinc, county of Sligo, and of Holywell, county of Wexford, Ireland.—At St. Gyus, York, William Western, Esq., of Portland place, Islington, to Nancy Wells, only daughter of the late George Wells, of London.—At Lewisham Church, Mr. John Fiske to Miss Emma Priddy, both of Duck-head, Bermondsey.

DEATHS.

At Garscube House, Dumbartonshire, Lady Campbell, wife of Sir Archibald Campbell, of Succoth, Bart.—At Addison terrace Kensington, John Baird, Esq., of Newcastle upon Tyne, Senior Surgeon to the Royal Artillery.—At Wye, on the 14th inst., Mary Ann Kemp, Aged 18, Alice Chapman, youngest daughter of Charles Barry, Esq.—In the 28th year of her age Frederick, the youngest son of Thomas Rhodes, Esq., of Handsworth, Staffordshire.—At the vicarage, Ewelme, Oxon, Mrs. Wilks, the wife of the Rev. Samuel Wilks, M.A., and eldest daughter of Samuel Merriman, M.D., of Brook street, Grosvenor-square —At Bath, Mary Ann, the surviving twin of Mrs. Bayley, of Bayley-house, Old Ford, Middlesex, eldest son of George Megge, Esq., of Alverstoke, Hants.—At Leeds, in his 78th year, Frederic Peter eldest son of the late Rev. Peter Peter, Vicar of Wentworth-castle.—Colonel in the Forces, aged 71 years, of brain fever, Henri John Leigh eldest son; also, aged 8 years, George Alexander, brother of the above, and second and only son of Basil Henri Goldie, of Golden Leigh, near Dunstres, Ireland, Esq., and of Mary Anne, granddaughter of the late Lieutenant-General Thomas Goldie, of Goldie Leigh, near Dunstres —After a long illness, Mary Ann, the wife of Thomas Rhodes, Esq., and youngest daughter of the late John Cowley, Esq., of Guildford street, aged 32 —Emily, the wife of Phi..p Hughes, Esq., 24, Fitzroy-square.—In the 23rd year of her age, Elizabeth, sarah Ann, the eldest daughter of Mr. Lovelock, of Ely-terrace, Islington.—At Ramsgate, John Lamson, Esq., late Alderman of the Ward of Broad-street, aged 65.—At the Hotel de France Boulogne, Susanna, the wife of Mr. Ayrton, Secretary to the Admiralty, and Lady Dalla Compagny's Service.—At Holmsley Blackmoor, Yorkshire, George Fantoft, Esq., Paymaster and Purser in the Royal Navy.—At Blackheath, Charlotte Powell, the only daugh ge of J Rannister, Esq., of Coleshill-street, Eaton square.—At Oxford, Cecilia, wife of the Rev Richard Harrington, D.D., Principal of Brasenose.—At Blackheath-park, Rome, second daughter of the late Robert Bell, Esq.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements cannot be received after Seven o'clock on Thursday Evening.

THE EXHIBITION of the SOCIETY of BRITISH ARTISTS, Suffolk-street, Pall-Mall East, is NOW OPEN DAILY from Nine till Dusk. Admittance, 1s., Catalogues, 1s. EDWARD HASSELL, Secretary.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS The Tenth Annual Exhibition is now open, at their Gallery, 53 Pall Mall, next the British Institution.—Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d. From nine till dusk.

ROSHERVILLE GARDENS, near GRAVESEND.—These Delightful and Romantic GARDENS are DAILY OPEN to the Public ADMISSION, SIXPENCE each. A full Military and Quadrille Band is in constant attendance, and the Dancing is Public. Refreshments of every description, and of the best quality, both hot and cold, will be served under the direction of Mr. LITTLEBOY, of King William-street, London, at very moderate prices May 31, 1844.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The Seventh Concert will take place on MONDAY Evening, next, will be performed, Mozart's Symphony in C (No. 1), Haydn's in D (No. 8), Beethoven's in C minor (No. 5). Egmont, Selection from Spohr's Overture and Suite. Solo Performers: Pasquale, Dr. Mendelssohn Bartholdy; Violin Mr. B agrove, Violoncello, Signor Piatti, Vocalists, Madame A. Tholloz, Miss M. B. Hawes, and M. de Rovia.. Leader, Mr Loder. Conductor, Dr Mendelssohn Bartholdy.—Single Tickets, One Guinea, and Double Tickets, £1 10s., to be had of Messrs. CRAMER and Co. 201, Regent-street.

MR. LOVER'S IRISH MORNING, under distinguished patronage, Mr. LOVER begs to announce that he will give a MORNING PERFORMANCE on WEDNESDAY next, the 26th instant, at the Hanover Rooms, Hanover-square, when he will have the honour of presenting a selection of his original Irish stories, anecdote, and melody, in a selected entertainment, which will (by desire) comprise favourite anecdotes and music of both his evening entertainments and several new songs Mr. Lover will be assisted by Miss Cubitt and Miss Rolle Pattison. Tickets 3s. 6d. reserved seats, 5s., to be had of the principal music sellers.

GRAND POLKA BALL, under Royal and Distinguished PATRONAGE.—Mr. JAMES KAY, the universally popular Professor and DANCING MASTER, begs to announce that his GRAND FANCY and FULL DRESS POLKA BALL will take place at the HANOVER SQUARE ROOMS, on THURSDAY Next, the 27 h inst. Tickets Half a guinea each, to be had only of Mr. James Kay, No. 16, Manchester square, where the names of the Ladies Patronesses can be ascertained

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, EXETER HALL.—On FRIDAY Evening next, the 28th June, 1844, will be performed DR F MENDELSSOHN BARTHOLDY'S ORATORIO, ST. PAUL, to be conducted by the Composer. Principal Vocal Performers Madame Caradori Allan, Miss Dolby, Mr Hobbs, Mr. Novello, and Herr Staudigl. The Band and Chorus will consist of above Two Hundred Performers Tickets 3s. each; Gallery Reserved Seats, 5s., Area Reserved Seats, 6s. 6d., each. May be had of the principal Musicsellers, of Mr Bowley, 63, Charing-cross; Mr. Mitchell, 39, Charing cross; and of Mr. Rice, 107, Strand, opposite Exeter-hall. THOMAS BREWER, Hon Sec

MIDSUMMER HOLIDAYS.—ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—LONGBOTTOM'S PHYSIOSCOPE exhibits the human face, with its varied expressions, on a gigantic scale, curiously contrasted with the living man. The PANAUXIC PHYSIOSCOPE unfolds the hidden beauties of the WORKS of the FINE ARTS; also, casts of ANCIENT INSCRIPTIONS taken by Miss Wilson from the WALLS of the TOWER of LONDON, cut by Lord Cochrane's Daffodil, now in store Lectures on The DAILY POPULAR LECTURES abound in interesting experiments ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE. DIVING BELL and DIVER. NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS, &c., &c. The Music is conducted by Mr. T. Wallis, Mus. Doc.—Admission, One Shilling. Schools, Half price.

ROYAL DISPENSARY for DISEASES of the EAR, Dean-street, Soho-square.

Father—HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN

VICE PATRON—HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT, K.G.

A GRAND EVENING PERFORMANCE, FANCY DRESS MORNING CONCERT, under the patronage of her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, her Royal Highness the Princess of Cambridge, her Grace the Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Salisbury and Londonderry, the Countess De St. Aubaire, Viscountess Sydney, &c., &c., will be held on SATURDAY, the 29th inst., in Colonel Mure's Grounds, Regent's Park, in aid of the above Institution. The Concert will be on a large scale, and conducted by M. Benedict. Tickets, 5s. each, may be had at the Dispensary, and at the principal Musicsellers and Bookcellers.

HENRY S. SMITH Secretary

MR. C. E. HORN'S VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL CONCERT, on SATURDAY, JUNE the 29th, in the Great Lecture Room at the ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, No. 309, Regent-street. The First Part will consist of Illustrations of Shakspere, by Vocal and Instrumental Music, being No. 1 of a series devoted to the works of the Immortal Poet. The Words by George Soane, Esq., the Music entirely new, by C. E. Horn. Composed expressly for the occasion Introductory Music, expressive of the Seven Ages, as portrayed by Shakspeare. Then Mr. Horn Rimbault, concluded with The Apotheosis of the Spirit.—Second Part, consisting, by particular request, of Songs, Duets, Trios, and Glees, from different MSS and published compositions of C. E. Horn (first time of performing in public). Mr. C E Horn will preside at the Pianoforte, accompanied by a select orchestra Doors open at Half-past Seven, to commence at Eight o'Clock. Particulars will be duly announced Lower reserved seats, 5s. each. Tickets for upper seats 3s., to be had of Mr. Horn, No 79, Great Mussell-street, Bloomsbury, at the Polytechnic Institution, No. 309, Regent street, and principal Music Shops.

STOCKS CONTINUE TO ADVANCE IN DEMAND, SO DO THE PATENT ELASTIC OR ALBERT CRAVATS, the Fabric having found both judicious investments. The Cravat is not made of bristles, India rubber, whale bone, or spiral wires but of a beautiful light fabric, of the exact shape of the neck, so that there can be no pressure on the throat—a discovery never before obtained.—" No nervous reviews, proving beyond question the great value of the invention, to be had of F. HUGHES and Co., 59, Strand, and of all Hosiers. High Holborn.

CHOICE FLOWERS and PLANTS in POTS.—HUMPHREY'S SOLUBLE COMPOUND—A few grains occasionally dissolved in the water used with Plants, produce a vigorous growth and splendid flowers. If what is called a Liquid Guano is required, a superior article is prepared by Mr. Humphrey, and by dissolving half a bottle of the powder in a quart of water, and using a table spoonful to a gallon in watering flower pots, will produce the effect. Sold in Canada and Scotland. Agents, DAVY, MACKNURDO, and Co, 100, Upper Thames street, London.

DISSOLUTION of PARTNERSHIP.—(See Gazette of Friday, June 14, 1844)—COLEMAN and ANDREWS beg to announce, that in consequence of the above DISSOLUTION they are necessarily obliged to offer for immediate SALE the whole of their valuable Stock of Silks, Shawls, Dresses Linens, Ribbons, Lace, &c., &c., now on hand, and to whose terms any one having been re marked at a considerable reduction. Ladies will find a decided advantage by visiting this establishment, as some extra dinary bargains will be offered. The sale will not be proceeded beyond the 20th July. In future the business will be conducted by S. J. COLEMAN only 38, EDGWARE ROAD

WOLLASTON'S PATENT GELATINE, for immediately producing Calf's-foot Jelly.—Sir Hans Sloane was indebted for having native. It is of equal strength with the finest Russian Isinglass, and perfectly free from any unpleasant taste or smell, requiring less flavouring than any other preparation of Gelatine or Isinglass, being a perfectly pure, tasteless, and odourless article. Jellies it will not be found necessary to can sage, as passing through a flannel bag is sufficient. Invalids will find this a very important and valuable resource, as it may be kept in any locality and readiness with which it is used, and not being liable to become sour so soon as isinglass.—Manufactured and sold by the sole Proprietors, DOREY, and retailed by all respectable Druggists, Grocers and others, at 8s. per pound

PORTS, SHERRIES, and all other WINES of first-rate Shippers!—The following unprecedented terms for GENUINE WINES are quoted only for Cash on Delivery, when the Public will be sure to get under usual trade prices: Sherries, pale and brown, at 20s., 22s., 30s., 36s., 42s., 48s., 54s., Ports, from the wood, 20s., 30s., 36s.; Crusted, in bottle, from 36s. upwards; ditto, very choice and bottled from 5 to 10 years in bottle, 42s., 48s., 54s., 60s., 72s., 84s., 96s.; Champagne, sparkling and creaming, 42s., 63s., 72s., Hocks and Moselles, 48s., 58., 72s., 84s., Hermitage, 36s., 42s., 48s., all other Wines equally low in quantities not less than one dozen. Delivered free in London. All country orders accompanied with a remittance, or a reference to some person in London, will meet with attention from J. ROSENSTEIN and Co., 81, Berners-street London. Importers of German Seltzer Water, in quarts and pints

IMPORTANT to FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A considerable saving can be effected in the purchase of Furnishing Ironmongery, by visiting the PALISSIANDER IRON WORKS, 4, Leicester-square, Soho-square, where may be inspected the most extensive STOCK of IRONMONGERY GOODS in the Kingdom, consisting of stoves cooking utensils, German silver wares, drawing-room stoves, shower and vapour baths, fenders, fire irons, iron work, garden requisites, japanned water cans and tea trays, dish covers, table cutlery, &c. The whole of the goods bear the plain figures, at the lowest possible price, will fully convince purchasers at this establishment of the great advantage resulting from a personal inspection of the various articles of the very best manufacture. THORPE, FALLOWS, and CO., 48, Baker-street, Portman-square.—A liberal allowance to merchants and captains.

FRENCH WINES and BRANDIES.—Mr. GRANT begs to announce that Mr. Ingle leaves for the Continent, and that those who are fond of choice and delicate Wines, to his Depôt (Established 14 years), No. 34 Rue de Rieu, and Rue d'Arcole containing of superior Red Clarets, Burgundies, Sillery, Grêmant, and sparking Champagnes, fine old Brandy, red and white Hermitage, sparkling Burgundy, Hermitage, and St Peray; rich Muscat, Rouge de Clermont, Lunel and Frontignan Pale and Golden Sherry, Port, and Madeira, of the finest quality. A few hogsheads Sauterne de Martinon, Marcashino de Zara, Curacoa, &c. &c. The whole fit for immediate consumption. The greatest attention will be paid to orders from Families, &c., which are executed by the London agents, and forwarded, duty and charges paid to any part of the United Kingdom Orders for exportation to India, China, and the West India or other Colonies, carefully put up and packed for the climate to which they are destined. GRANT begs to state that MESSRS VERNAY and BAYARD, 1, London street, Mark-lane, London, or to Mr. WADE, Messrs. Hodgson's, Liverpool, are his only agents.

MOURNING—Court, Family, and Complimentary.—The Proprietors of the London General Mourning Warehouse, Nos. 247 and 249 Regent-street, beg respectfully to remind families whose bereavements compel them to adopt mourning attire, that every article of the very best description requisite for a complete outfit of mourning may be had at their establishment at a moment's notice. Widows' and Family Mourning is always punctually executed, and when immediate mourning required, will ensure everything necessary for the occasion, being sent (to town or country) immediately. Ladies requiring Silks—either Satins, Satin Turos, Watered or Plain Barages, and Widows Veils, are particularly invited to a trial of the new Apparel Silk introduced at the house, as they will be found not only more durable, but the colour will stand the test of the strongest sun, or even sea water. Black and Grey, and Fancy Mourning Prints, of the newest designs. The Show Rooms are on the first floor, and contain an extensive assortment of every article appertaining thereto, collars, collets, head dresses, bugle trimmings, &c. &c.—The London General Mourning Warehouse, Nos. 247 and 249, Regent street, near Oxford street.—W. C. JAY, sole Co.

TO LADIES.—ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, for the SKIN and COMPLEXION. This Royally Patronised and universally adopted Specific is composed chiefly of extracts from the most rare flowers and herbs of an eastern clime, and perfectly free from all mineral admixture. It exerts the most soothing, gentle, cooling, and purifying action on the skin, and most efficually removes Sallowness, Redness, Tan, Pimples, Blotches, Spots, Freckles, and other Cutaneous Visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the Cheek, and the softness and delicacy it induces on the Hands, Arms and Neck, render it indispensable to every toilet. It affords immediate relief in cases of Sunburn, Stings of Insects, or accidental Inflammation. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle. duty included

CAUTION.—Many Shopkeepers vend Spurious Compounds under the name of "Genuine" Kalydor, containing mineral astringents utterly ruinous to the complexion, and by their repellant action driving the disease to the vital parts. Genuine Kalydor is protected by the words "ROWLAND'S KALYDOR" are on the Wrapper, and A ROWLAND & SON, 20, Hatton-garden, engraved by Authority on the Government Stamp affixed on each bottle. . All others are Fraudulent Counterfeits

INVALID CARRIAGES.—To be DISPOSED OF, a number of out-door and in door WHEEL CHAIRS, constructed especially for the comfort of invalids, comprising the patent as well as the most expensive bathic, second hand as well as new. Reclining Wheel Chairs, by which any degree of exercise for the arms can be attained, suitable for the drawing-room or garden. Long Bed or Spinal Carriages for the very debil

A MIDSUMMER GIFT, and Sent Post Free.—W. S. LINCOLN'S Midsummer Catalogue of CHEAP BOOKS of all kinds, comprising also a few from the library of Southey, late Poet Laureate, will be ready on Monday next; and, as usual, sent gratis and post-free to any part of town or country to applicants for the same. 3, Christchurch place, Westminster-road.

CHAMBERS' EDINBURGH JOURNAL; the First Volume of the New Series, price 5s. Handsomely bound in Embossed Cloth, specially designed for the work. The Volume will contain about 250 distinct Articles of an entertaining and instructive kind, and will form a handsome and portable Library Volume every half-year.

London: Wm. S Orr and Co., Amen corner, Paternoster-row.

THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.—Three New SONGS, illustrative of "Faith," "Hope," and "Charity." Poetry by Rev. J. R. WREFORD and C. JEFFREYS. Music by STEPHEN GLOVER.

"These songs are excellent either in Poetry, Music, and Illustration; while the music as must be delighted with these pieces, every lover of music must feel the charm of their me office. 'Charity' is our especial favourite."—Musical World.—Post free, 2s. each, of JEFFREYS, 21, Soho-square

JULLIEN'S ORIGINAL POLKA.—The fifth edition of JULLIEN'S original POLKA is now published.—The immense success of this celebrated dance having induced many unprincipled persons to set to the public spurious imitations, M. Jullien has published the original Polka at his own office, 3, Maddox-street, Regent street, and, in order to secure the public against the possibility of purchasing the false copies published under so many disguised forms, he has attached his signature to each copy of his original Polka. None can therefore be relied on which have not his autograph. Correct copies of Jullien's original Polka to be had only of the respectable music sellers in the kingdom, by asking for Jullien's original Polka, signed by the author.

DR. CULVERWELL'S "GUIDE TO HEALTH AND LONG LIFE."

Elegant pocket edition, with Engravings, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 6d.

WHAT TO EAT—WHAT TO DRINK—HOW TO LIVE—WHAT TO AVOID, with Hints about Air, Exercise, and Regimen; and Suggestions for the General Conduct of Life; whereby Immunity from Disease may be secured, and a healthy and happy Old Age attained

"To take ripe fruits, thou drop,
Or be with ease gather'd, not harshly pluck'd."—MILTON.

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers'-hall-court; and the Author, 21, Arundel street, Strand.

Just published, price One Shilling, or forwarded to any part of the Country post-free on receipt of twenty-four postage stamps,

HOW TO DANCE THE POLKA, and all the QUADRILLES, GERMAN WALTZES, HIGHLAND REELS, &c., after the method of M. COULON.—London, Thomas Hodgson, 13, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 1s., or forwarded to any part of the country, on receiving a remittance of 1s. 6d., or directed to be left at the Railway Stations,

THE MYSTERIES OF LONDON. By PATHER NORTH.

London: Hugh Cunningham, 193, Strand.

THE WANDERING JEW. By EUGENE SUE. LE COURRIER DE L'EUROPE. Britain's French Newspaper, on SATURDAY, the 29th of JUNE, will commence the publication of "LE JUIF ERRANT" (by the author of "Les Mysteres de Paris), so impatiently expected by all European readers, and for the copyright of which 100,000 francs have been paid. "Le Courrier de l'Europe" contains all the news of the week; the best articles from all the Paris journals; and will be found to be a French library in itself. Subscriptions, 6s. 6d. per quarter, received at the Office, 10, Wellington street, Strand; by JOSEPH THOMAS, 1, Finch lane, Cornhill, London; and by all Booksellers and Newsmen.  Immediate orders should be given for "Le Courrier de l'Europe" in time to have the commencement of "Le Juif Errant," as the number printed is limited to the number of subscribers.

RAILWAY BELL and ADVERTISER. TIME TABLES of every Railway in the Kingdom will appear in the Stamped Edition of the RAILWAY BELL, published every SATURDAY commencing 29th June, containing an Epitome of the News of the Week.

Price 3½d., unstamped 2d.

Office, 1, Catherine street, Strand.

Orders received by all Newsmen, &c., in town and country.

IRRIGATION.—FIVE ORIGINAL COLOURED PLANS of IRRIGATED MEADOWS, ILLUSTRATIVE of Mr. J. HARDING'S SYSTEM of IRRIGATION, with Descriptions to each, appear in "The Farmer's Magazine" for June which contains upwards of thirty articles on Practical Farming and Grazing by the most experienced agriculturists of the day. A Highly finished Steel Engraving of PRINCE ALBERT, BY HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT, at the Smithfield Cattle Show, with Horticultural Calendar, and a Review of the Corn Trade, &c., &c.

The Agriculture of Mr. Colquhoun (from the United States) is continued, and embraces the following subjects:—English Capital, Appearance of the Country, Hedges and Enclosures, Iron and Sunken Fences, English Parks, Ornamental Shrubs and Flowers, Climate of England, Agricultural Population. Office, 34, Norfolk-street.

SUPERIOR SCHOOL BOOKS,

Sold by Simpkin and Co., Whittaker and Co., Longman and Co., Hamilton and Co., Darton and Harvey, and Houlston; H. Mozley, Derby; Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh—

BUTTER'S ETYMOLOGICAL SPELLING BOOK and EXPOSITOR; an Introduction to the Spelling, Pronunciation, and Derivation of the English Language; containing besides several other important improvements, above seven Thousand Words deduced from their Greek and Latin Roots, adapted to the use of Classical and Commercial Schools, and also of Adults and Young Persons. Seventy-fifth Edition. Price 1s. 6d. bound. "This is a very excellent little work. It is not, how many others of the same description, a mere modification or re-arrangement of those which have gone before it."—Edinburgh Evening Post.

BUTTER'S GRADUATIONS in READING and SPELLING, upon an entirely New and Original Plan; being a Series of Lessons in Words as Memory-helps; with numerous entertaining and instructive Reading Lessons in prose and verse. Twenty Seventh Edition. Price 1s. 6d. bound. "Mr. Butter has conferred no small favour upon the rising generation by this publication. Its great excellence is its gradual progression, by the most easy steps, from the alphabet to the simplest, and thence to the most difficult words in the language."—Spectator, Midsummer.

BUTTER'S GRADUAL PRIMER. With Engravings. Eighteenth Edition. Price 6d.

WORKS PUBLISHED BY W. S ORR AND CO.

GREECE, PICTORIAL, DESCRIPTIVE, AND HISTORICAL, by CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, Head Master, Harrow
Price 1 Guinea and a Half, cloth, lettered.

TRAITS and STORIES of THE IRISH PEASANTRY. By WILLIAM CARLETON. With Autobiographical Introduction, Illustrative Notes, and Graphic Illustrations on Wood and Steel. Now Complete in 2 vols., med. 8vo. Price 20s., cloth, lettered.

PICTORIAL HISTORY of FRANCE, From the Establishment of the Franks in Gaul to the period of the French Revolution, by G. M. BUSSEY and THOMAS GASPEY—enriched with 400 Designs on Wood, by JOHN DAVID. 2 vols super royal 8vo, price 30s.

THE ILLUSTRATED SHAKSPERE (TYAS'S). The text revised from the best authorities. A Memoir and Essay on Shakspere's Genius. By ROBERT CHARLES. Introductory Remarks on each Play by some distinguished writer with beautiful characteristic Designs on Wood, by Kenny Meadows. In 3 vols., imperial 8vo. Price £3 3s., cloth.

IRELAND BEFORE and AFTER THE UNION WITH GREAT BRITAIN. By R. MONTGOMERY MARTIN, Esq. Price 10s. 6d., cloth, lettered.

Ames Corner, Paternoster Row.

MR. COLMAN'S EUROPEAN AGRICULTURE
(Continued).

THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE, for JUNE, 1844, is embellished with—PLATE I., THREE PLOUGH, and BERKSHIRE PIGS, fed by and the property of FRANCIS ALEXAT. PLATE II. PLANS ILLUSTRATIVE OF MR HARDING'S SYSTEM OF IRRIGATION

CONTENTS:

On the Benefit of Irrigating Lands.—By J. Harding
On German Farming, and M. Von Thaer's System of Agriculture.—By Cuthbert Wm. Johnson, Esq., F.R.S.
Letters from Ireland.—By the Editor of the Farmer and Syra Editors of "Anglican on Rents and Tillages" Making Butter in Carlow, Ireland.
The Wrap Club.—Average Prices of Cattle and Sheep.
Farmers' Club-Houses.
The Third Annual Report of the St. Peter's Farmers' Club.
Northamptonsh re Agricultural Book Club.
Reviews :—"Farming for Ladies." "A Treatise on the Practical Drainage of Land."
Manufactured Manures.
Cattle Insurance.
Observations on the Management and Application of Manures.—By a Practical Farmer.
Oh ure of Potatoes for Seed.
Report of the Tithe Commissioners for England and Wales

New Drill-Dressing for Turnips.
Moss-troth, Farmers' Club.
A Memoir of Mathieu de Dombasle (a French Agriculturist).
Foreign Corn.
Lectures on Agriculture. By Professor Johnston.
On Manures, and the proper Application thereof.
Suggestions for Experiments in Agriculture
Agricultural Chemistry Association.
Leominster Farmers' Club.
Roya. Agricultural Society of England.
Agricultural Protection Society.
The Turnip Fly.
Previous against Thieves. By W. Rothwell.
Agriculture, Queries.
Answers to Agricultural Queries.
Agricultural Reports.
Calendar of Horticulture for June.
Review of the Corn Trade during the month of May.
Prices of Grass, Seeds, Hops, Potatoes, Provisions, Wool, Manures, &c. &c.
European Agriculture. By Henry Colman.

Office, 24, Norfolk-street, Strand; and may be had of all Booksellers.

INTERESTING TO LADIES.
To Messrs. Rowland and Son, 20, Hatton garden, London.

Ferrybridge, Landport Portsmouth, April 4th, 1844.

Gentlemen,—I think it but an act of justice to inform you of the benefit I have derived from the use of your admirable Macassar Oil. About six months ago I found my hair getting daily more weak and thin, and much discoloured from a practice I had adopted of wearing it continually, fearing that I should lose it entirely, and hearing of the efficacy of your Macassar Oil, I have now some time past constantly used it, and the result is, that my hair is now perfectly restored and much improved in appearance and colour, having become thick, dark and glossy, it also curls freely without the use of paper, which it never did before. To all my friends I have warmly recommended your Macassar Oil as an excellent restorative and preservative for the hair. As I have an objection to see my name in print, I beg you will not publish it, but you are at liberty to show this letter, or make any other use you please of it, and refer applicants to me, if necessary, in proof of the efficacy of your Macassar Oil.

Your obedient servant,
* * * * * *

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL preserves and reproduces the Hair; prevents it from falling off or turning Grey; changes Grey Hair to its Original Colour; frees it from Scurf and Dandruff and makes it beautifully soft and curly.

Ask for "ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL." All others are FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS

ECONOMY, CLEANLINESS, CONVENIENCE, AND DESPATCH.

THE GAS KETTLE, for BOILING WATER, WARMING MILK, and STEAMING EGGS in SIX MINUTES, at an EXPENSE of LESS than a FARTHING.—Nothing can be more valuable or useful than this instrument, especially during the Summer Season, when to light a fire for the purpose only of boiling water is exceedingly inconvenient, and very extravagant, with the GAS KETTLE sufficient water may be boiled for a large family in eight minutes, without smoke or smell at an expense of less than a farthing. It may be seen in constant action at LIGHT HOUSE, 201 STRAND and will be sent to any address on receipt of a Post-Office order, payable to JONES and Co. One quart, 7s.; Two quarts, 8s.; one gallon, 9s.

The Original and only Manufactory for the Best Instantaneous Lights, LIGHT HOUSE, 20, Strand.

WORTH NOTICE.—To be SOLD for £320, a LEASEHOLD ESTATE of FIVE HOUSES now Goswell street, producing £73 per annum, clear of the ground rent, term unexpired, 40 years. Some of the tenants have been in many years. Price, only £320.—Apply to Mr. DICK, 11, Red-lion, opposite the new Church, Goswell street, London.

REFORM your TAILORS' BILLS.—Fashionable DRESS COATS, 38s and 47s. 6d.; frock coats, silk facings, 42s. and 50s., new pattern summer TROUSERS, 10s. 6d., or three pair for 30s.; splendid summer waistcoats, 7s., or three for 20s.; rich silk ditto, 13s.; ladies' elegant riding habits, 63s. and 84s.—DOUDNEY and SON, 19, Lombard-street, (established 1784), celebrated for good and cheap boys' clothing.

NOTICE to INVENTORS.—Office for Patents of Inventions and Registration of Designs, 53, Chancery Lane.—The printed Instructions, gratis, and every information upon the subject of Protection for Inventions, either by Letters Patent or the Designs Act, may be had by applying personally, or by letter, pre-paid, to Mr. ALEX. PRINCE, at the Office, 14, Lincoln's Inn-fields

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer street, Golden square. Private Lessons at all hours to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, combining privacy and expedition. An Evening Academy on Mondays and Fridays. Lessons in the Polka and Valse à Deux Temps every day.—A card of terms may be had on application. The room may be engaged for private parties

MADDEN'S Registered PATENT KNIFE CLEANER meets with the most extensive and distinguished patronage, and is now established as an article of utility. Its cleanliness, simplicity, and efficacy, combined with the advantages of removing all the dirt and noise the saving of time, and the preservation of the knives cause universal favour. MADDEN'S KNIFE CLEANER, price 18s., may be seen and tried at the office, 14, George street, Adelphi.

SIX lbs. of good BLACK TEA for 17s Six lbs. of YOUNG HYSON for 18s., and Six lbs. of CEYLON COFFEE for 9s. The public should never lose sight of this important feature, viz.—that through weal and through woe, through evil and good report, the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY can supply excellent Tea at a fraction over 3s. per lb. the importation price, and they are determined to do it.—Offices, No. 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate street.

BLACK BORDERED ENVELOPES, 1s. per Hundred (of good paper).—Black bordered note paper, 3 quires for 2s.; the best satin 5os note paper, black-bordered, 10s. 6d. per reem. Both note, plain, 4s. per ream; superfine satin note, 6s. 3d. per reem, Queen's note, from 6d. the quarter ream, the very best satin envelopes, in the hundred, fineness of "ILE & DIF ERRANT" (by the quarter hundred, bubbles, 1s. 6d. each, prayer books, 1s. each; testaments, 6d. each, and in every part of plain and costly bindings, at BROOKS, BAZAAR, 87, New Bond street, corner of Oxford street

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, request the attention of purchasers to their stock of London-made PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which are manufactured by themselves in their own houses. In silver cases, with the detached escapement and jewelled, the prices are four and a half guineas each, and eight guineas each; or in gold cases, 13, 17, 21, and 26 guineas each. The very large stock offered for selection includes every description, enabling a customer to select that which is more particularly adapted to his own use.

NEW PATENTS.—BROCKEDON'S IMPROVED STOPPERS.—This important invention, a Substitute for Corks and Bungs, has, by new and Great Improvements, become a pure, impenetrable, and perfect means of preserving, for any length of time, Wine, Beer, Spirits, &c. They are chea per to be applied, and the appearance which they now have of fine Cork has removed the prejudice against their former dark colour. Also, DECANTER STOPPERS, to keep Wine which is to easily use in perfect condition.—C. MACINTOSH and Co., 19, Walbrook, London, and 72, York-street, Manchester.

WORTHY OF NOTICE.—2s. for a Card Plate Engraved to any Pattern, and in the best manner; handsome Blotting-cases, in each, ditto, with case in 6d., best Sealing-wax, ten sticks, 1s.; Note paper, from 2d. per quire; Letter paper, 6d.; Post Office Envelopes, 1s. per hundred; Marking Ink, 6d. per bottle, 2d. per dozen, with holder; 100 Cards printed from Plate, 2s.; Fancy Wafers, 3d. per box; Mottos Wafers, 2d., packet of 100, every other article lower than any house in the trade.—Mr. JAMES, 21, ARNOLD'S, 21, Piccadilly. Goods sent any distance.—Please observe, 21.

SUPERIOR FRENCH BEDDING.—HEAL and SON'S Illustrated Bedding Warerooms, containing every article of Bedding and Bedsteads that are made in Paris, and they having been the original introducers of French Mattresses, have had great attention to their manufactory; and Spring Mattresses, combining the utmost elasticity with the greatest durability, are now made in their own workshops, on a plan known exclusively for the manufacture and sale of bedding (no bedstead or other furniture being kept), they are enabled to offer to every purchaser in that trade on the very best terms.—HEAL and SON'S Bedding Factory, 196, Tottenham-court-road, opposite the Chapel.

THE Established TEA-MARKET upon Ludgate-hill, No. 8. SIDNEY and HALL, Proprietors.—A further FALL of TWOPENCE in FOUR PENCE per Pound upon TEA and COFFEE.—We have this day lowered the Coffees Twopence to Fourpence per pound, in consequence of the reduced duties upon Foreign Coffees coming into operation. In the sale of the finest qualities of Coffee we have long stood pre-eminent as the largest purchasers in the port of London. We are now enabled to quote the very choicest quality at a price 4d. per pound below the present rates. We have this day lowered all Black Teas we have lowered the prices Twopence per pound, and on the finest qualities Fourpence.—The Tea Market, Ludgate-hill, No. 8. Sidney and Hall, Proprietors

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, No. 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank of England.—The most wrought silver, fiddle pattern, 7s. 6d. per ounce; the new Vine pattern, Queen's Pattern, 7s. 6d. per ounce. The following are the weights recommended, but the articles may be had lighter or heavier, at the same price per ounce:—

	oz.	s.	d.		oz.	s.	d.
1. Tea Spoons, per dozen	12	4	10	7. Dessert Forks	24	14	4
2. Dessert ditto	20	7	0	8. Dessert Spoons	24	14	4
12 Table Forks	30	7	2	9. Table Forks	40	14	4
12 Dessert ditto	20	7	2	10. Dessert Forks	26	7	4
13. Gravy Spoons	16	7	2	11. Gravy Spoons	16	7	4
14. Soup Ladle	10	7	2	12. Soup Ladle	12	7	4
15. Sauce ditto	10	7	2	13. Sauce ditto	12	7	4
16. Salt Spoons (gilt)	1	0	0	14. Salt Spoons (gilt)	2	2	0
17. Egg Spoons	2	0	0	15. Fish Slice	12	5	0
18. Tea Spoons	10	3	6	16. Tea Spoons	11	7	0
19. Fish Soup Ladle	10	7	6	17. Fish Soup Ladle	12	7	0

N. B. A price current, stamped as a newspaper, illustrated by drawings, and containing every information relative to the purchase of silver or Sheffield plate, may be had on application, or will be forwarded to the country, free of postage, on answer to a paid letter.

A SYLUM FOREIGN and DOMESTIC LIFE OFFICE, 76, Cornhill, and 5, Waterloo-place, London, established in 1824

DIRECTORS.

The Hon. W. Ellam Strutt, Chairman

Major General Sir James Law Lushington, G.C.S., Deputy Chairman.
J. Harvey Ascell, Esq.
J. Clermont Whiteman, Esq.
George Palmer, Jun., Esq.
W. Edmund Parsons, Esq.
C. W. Rickford, Esq.
Foster Reynolds, Esq.
Thomas Tyler, Esq.
G. Farren, Esq., Resident Director.

MEDICAL OFFICER IN LONDON.

R. Ferguson, M.D., 9, Queen street, May-fair.
J. Forbes, M.D., F.R.S., 12, Old Burlington-street.
T. Calvert, Esq., Finsbury-circus.

Persons suffering from Chronic Disease or irregularity of form, in pregnancy, or old age, are insured at proportionate rates, the capital being the Company which originally (in 1824) extended the benefits of life assurance to classes

RENEWABLE TERM INSURANCES FOR HEALTHY LIVES.

The advantages of a whole life Policy are secured by the comparatively trifling outlay in the first instance,—the contract being continued year by year, whatever the future health of the assured (after the primary examination), at a slightly increased rate of premium, little exceeding the price of an ordinary term insurance, up to the age of 70, when the rate remains stationary

Extracts from RENEWABLE TERM rates for select lives.

AGE.	1st yr	2d yr.	3d yr.	4th yr.	5th yr.	6th yr.	7th yr
30	1 6 4	1 7 1	1 7 11	1 8 9	1 9 7	1 10 4	1 11 4

Extracts from the EVEN RATES for select lives.

AGE.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
Prem.	1 11 9	2 2 0	2 2 1	2 2 3	2 2 6	2 10 9	2 10 8 5	1 9 1 8

ALTERNATIVE.

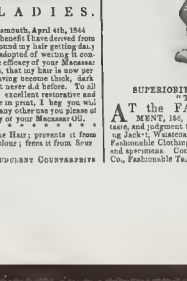
Two thirds, only, of the even rates, whether for select or diseased lives, or for the risks of foreign climates, may be paid down, and the balance, with interest at 5 per cent. deducted from sum assured.

FOREIGN AND MILITARY AND NAVAL INSURANCE

Distinct classifications of places, according to salubrity of climate; a specific price for any particular place or for a voyage or voyages.

Offices whose destinations are not known, covered to all parts of the world at a small but fixed extra rate of premium

GEO FARREN, RESIDENT DIRECTOR.



SUPERIORITY AND ECONOMY IN YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S DRESS.

AT the FASHIONABLE CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, 156, Fleet-street, Young Gentlemen's Clothes are made with greater ease, taste, and judgment than are usually bestowed upon them. Superfine Cloth Suits, including Jacket, Waistcoat, and Trousers, all in, and every description of Boys' and Youths' Fashionable Clothing upon equally moderate terms. Families waited Upon with patterns and specimens. Country residents can be fitted by sending an old suit.—RODGERS and Co., Fashionable Tailors, 156, Fleet street, London (next the Fortune Hotel).

INCOME WITHOUT RISK.—The LONDON GENUINE TEA COMPANY, Established November 5, 1818, at 23, Ludgate hill, are now filling up their list of Agents, and persons desirous of such an appointment in which many have derived considerable incomes, without risk, during the last twenty six years, are requested to apply to the Company, at their Warehouse, 2, Laurence Poultney-hill, London

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price at once sets aside all trashy makers of the Swiss manufacturers or any other house.—Read Jones's Sketch of Watchwork, sent free for a 2d. stamp.

CHASTON'S PATENT INDIA RUBBER ELASTIC CORN PLAISTERS are generally admitted to be the most unique and best in existence curefor Hard or Soft CORNS from their elastic quality, they can be worn with perfect ease, however tight the boot or shoe fits the foot. Invented and sold by R. CHASTON, Chemist, Watton, Norfolk. N.B.—On receipt of thirteen postage stamps free), a box will be forwarded (also free) to any part of the Kingdom.

NECESSARY PRECAUTION.—CONSUMERS of BRANDY are respectfully informed that J. T. BETTS, Inn., and Co. will not be responsible for any bottled Brandy that is not protected against fraudulent substitution by the Patent Metallic Capsules, embossed with the words "Betts's Patent Brandy, 7, Smithfield Bars." Sold by the most respectable Wine and Spirit Merchants in town and country at 42s. 6d. per bottle, the bottle included.

EAU de COLOGNE, 10s. per case of six, or 2s. singly, which, since its first presentation, has maintained an undisturbed supremacy over all imitations, can be had genuine, as prepared from the original recipe, by appointment to H. BRESDENBACH, 83, Park-street, Grosvenor-square, and manufacturer at Cologne. This Eau de Cologne is an spurious imitation of Farina's, but the genuine article itself, and as such defies all competition

DENTAL SURGERY, 32, Haymarket, St. James's.—MESSRS. MORELY, Surgeon Dentists (by appointment to his Majesty the King of Hanover), may be consulted daily, at nine, 32, Haymarket. Their Patented Artificial Teeth fixed without springs or wires, fastening the adjoining teeth, and guaranteed to restore their coral or during the life of the patient. Teeth filled with gold, however far decayed; Decayed Teeth rendered without pain; children's teeth regulated, and every operation relating to dental surgery.—Observe, 32, Haymarket, St. James's.

EMPLOYMENT.—Persons having a little time to spare, are requested to call upon Agents for the Sale of their celebrated TEAS (Offices, 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate street), They are picked in the showy leaden canisters, from an assortment in a ground, with the prices and weights marked on each packet, and but little trouble is occasioned by the sale; the license is on y 1 s. per annum, and many, during the last quarter, have realized considerable incomes by the Agency, without 1s. 6d. or less Application to be made (if by letter, post paid) as above

"LA SYLPHIDE" PARASOL can be closed instantaneously, without moving either hand. W. and J. SANGSTER beg to inform the public that they have obtained Her Majesty's Letters Patent for the above invention, which from its utility and simplicity is expected to be generally accepted in preference to the inconvenient method hitherto in use. The extensive orders already received for "La Sylphide," have enabled the patentees to submit it to the public without any additional charge.—W and J. SANGSTER, Patentees, 140, Regent street.

CUSTARDS WITHOUT TROUBLE.—Neither Sugar nor Eggs required. ALEXANDER'S PATENT ARROWROOT, the addition of boiling Milk is suffic ent to produce Custards of the most delicious flavour, far more wholesome and economical than those prepared by the old process, and not to be surpassed in richness A more perfect article is unpossible. Prepared by ORRIDGE, Chemist to the Queen, Broadway, Deptford, in boxes, 1s., 2s., and 5s. each; sold also by EDWARDS, 67, St. Paul's Churchyard and all Chem sts.

CORNS and BUNIONS.—PAUL'S EVERY MAN'S FRIEND is a speedy and sure cure for those painful annoyances, without cutting or pain. It is a luxury to the tenderest feet, acting on the Corn with the most gentle pressure, giving instant relief, and entirely eradicating both Corns and Bunions. Prepared by JOHN FOX, in boxes, at 1s. 1½d., or, three in one, for 2s. 9d., and to be had of C. KING, No. 7, Regent-street, East, Hoxton, and all wholesale and retail medicine vendors in town and country. The genuine has the name of John Fox on the Government Stamp. A 2s. 9d. box cures the most obdurate Corns.—Ask for Paul's Every Man's Friend.

DINNER SERVICES, TABLE-GLASS, &c.—SANDER BROTHERS and CO., 219 and 220, Piccadilly, (corner of Southampton Buildings, and opposite Gray's-inn-gate), have constantly on view the largest stock in London of Table glass, plain and engraved cut, Dinner, Dessert, Breakfast and Tea Services and Toilet Sets in China, Brenstone, and Earthenware: Ornamental China, Papier Maché and Iron Tea Trays, Chandeliers, Lustres, Argands, Solar, and Vesta Lamps; Hall Lanterns, enamel or plain, Kitchen Utensils, Ranges, Stoves, &c. Parties favouring the first establishment with a visit, will obtain every information relative to prices, and will not be importuned to make purchases. Goods delivered in town and at the Railway Stations free.

FOR STOPPING DECAYED TEETH.—Price 4s. 6d. Patronised by her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. Mr. THOMAS'S SUCCEDANEUM, for Stopping Decayed Teeth, Stops them for ever. Facts in proof of this assertion, and pamphlets, may be had gratis. It is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and will remain firm in the tooth for many years, rendering extraction unnecessary, and arresting further progress of decay. Persons can use Mr. Thomas's Succedaneum themselves with ease, as full directions are enclosed.—Prepared only by Mr. THOMAS, Operative Dentist, 64, Berners street, Oxford street. Price 4s. 6d., and can be sent by post. Mr. THOMAS continues to supply the Loss of Teeth on his new system of Self-adhesion, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any Teeth or roots, or any painful operation whatever. At home from Eleven till Four.

METCALFE'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH BRUSH and SMYRNA SPONGES.—The Tooth Brush has the important advantage of searching the teeth, between the divisions of the teeth and cleaning them in the most effectual manner, and extraordinary demand and increasing sale is the best proof of its being coming loose, &c. An improved Clothes Brush, that cleans in a third part of the usual time, and incapable of injuring the finest nap. Improved Shaving Brushes, with the durable unbleached Russian bristle, which does not soften like common hair. Flesh Brushes, of improved graduated and powerful friction. Velvet Brushes, 2s. 6d. and upwards. The finest and softest Smyrna Sponges. The genuine Smyrna Sponge, with its preserved valuable properties of absorption, vitality, and durability, by means of direct importations, dispensing with all intermediate parties, profits, and charges, and is sold at the lowest remunerating price. A genuine Smyrna Sponge.—Only at METCALFE'S sole establishment, 130 B, Oxford-street, one door from Hollies street.—Observe the name of the warehouse.—from METCALFE'S, adopted by some houses.

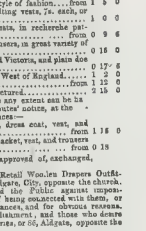
FOREIGN WINES greatly REDUCED in Price, for Cash, on delivery.

Sherry (pale or brown)	at 24s, 30s, 32s, 36s, and 40s per dozen.
Port (from the wood)	24s, 30s, 36s, and 42s per dozen.
Ditto (crusted)	30s, 36s, 38s, and 46s do.
Madeira	24s, 30s, 36s, and 42s do.
Claret	30s, 40s, 50s, and 60s do.
Champagne (in pints, 2s extra)	40s, 54s, and 70s do.

Bucellas, 27s. Vidonia, 34s.; Lisbon (dry or sweet), 24s.; Mountain, 34s.; Cape, 18s per doz. Bottles, 1s 6d per dozen, the price of old ones. Hampers at the rate of 9d per dozen, in which quantities and 2 dozen and upwards. The Wines are warranted genuine in quality and flavour, and those at only one price the finest imported, any not approved of exchanged, or the money returned. Orders per post must be accompanied by a remittance. Counting-house to offer Wines on cash terms only, we submit the attention of those who may fear to purchase through an advertisement to the fact that, in a most extensive sale in town and country, not in one instance during twelve months (and these in the lowest priced wines) have we been required to make an exchange.—Samples can be tasted at the Office.—CORN-WALL and CO., 14, Walbrook, City

SELF MEASUREMENT.

Country residents will duly estimate the convenience of the following plan, by which they may secure a perfect fit. Orders executed with dispatch and exactness



DIRECTIONS FOR COAT.

From 1 to 2 and on to 3 for full length; from 4 to 5 for elbow point, and to 6 for sleeve length; round the arm at 5, and wrist at 6, round the breast at 7, under the coat; and waist at 9, under the coat.

VESTS.

From 1 over the shoulder to vest length as front, with 2 Breast and Waist measure as instanced in coat measurement.

TROUSERS.

Full length from top at the hip to B; from A to B for length between the legs; round the waist, and round the bottom at B, as marked, giving 2 inches will ensure a correct fit.

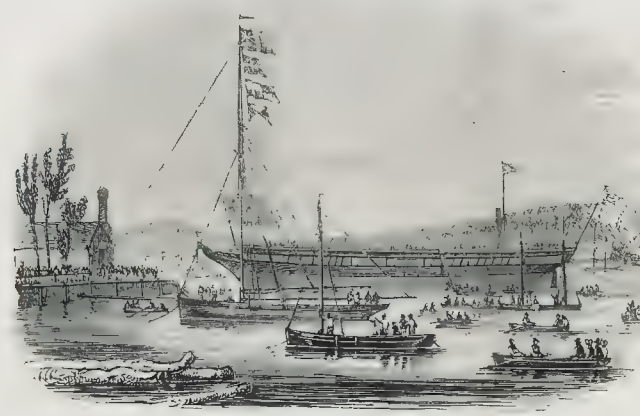
READY-MADE.	£	s	d	MADE TO MEASURE	£	s	d
Tweed Tagliones	from 0	8	6	Tweed coats, trimmed with silk, made in any shape, waterproofed	from 0	18	0
Ditto, superior quality, with silk collars, cuffs, and facings	0	16	0	Cashmere, fine Saxony, and other light summer materials, made in a variety of the first style of fashion	from 1	5	0
Cashmere coats in a variety of shapes, handsomely trimmed	1	0	0	Figured quilting vests, 7s. each, or three for	1	0	0
An immense stock of Holland and pea jackets	from 0	3	6	Cashmere vests, in recherche patterns	from	0	9	6
Splendid summer vests	from	0	2	6	Summer trousers, in great variety of patterns	from	0	16	0
An endless variety of cashmere and Persian vests, splendid patterns	3s. to	8	6	Single milled Victoria, and plain doe	from	17	6
Washing satin vests, warranted	0	6	0	Best quality West of England	1	2	0
Cloth trousers	from	0	9	0	Dress coats	from	1	13	0
Single milled doe	from	0	11	6	Best mans facture	1	15	0
A great variety of summer trousers	from	0	7	0	Mourning to any extent can be had at five minutes' notice, at the following prices:—
Dress coats edged	from	1	0	0	Morning coats, dress coat, vest, and trousers	from	1	16	0
Frock ditto	1	4	0	Boy's ditto, jacket, vest, and trousers	from	0	18

IMPORTANT.—Any article purchased, or ordered, if not approved of, exchanged, money returned.

Observe.—E. MOSES and SON, Tailors, Wholesale and Retail Woollen Drapers Outfitters and General Warehousemen, 154 Minories, and 86, Aldgate, City, opposite the church.

CAUTION.—E. Moses and Son are advised to guard the Public against imposition, having learned that the unredeemable like falsehood of being connected with them, or it's the same concern, has been resorted to in many instances, and for obvious reasons. They have no connexion whatever with any other Establishment, and those who desire genuine Cheap Clothing, should call or send to 154, Minories, or 86, Aldgate, opposite the church to prevent disappointment, &c.

N B. No Business transacted at this Establishment from Friday at sunset until sunset on Saturday, when Business is resumed until twelve o'clock.



LAUNCH OF "THE WATERWITCH," AT COWES.

LAUNCH OF "THE WATERWITCH."

It is well known to our nautical readers, that Cowes, in the Isle of Wight, has of late made considerable advances in naval architecture, whilst it has long been famed for the superior sailing qualities and beauty of the models constructed within its port. The perfect symmetry of the Waterwitch has often been the theme of admiration; and during the present session of Parliament has called forth many encomiums as to her superior sailing qualities, from members of the House of Commons, officers of the British Navy. Among the speeches we quote the following from two gallant members:—

"The finest and fastest brig he (Capt. Rous) had seen in our navy was the Waterwitch, which was built by Mr. Joseph White, and was purchased into the service eight or nine years ago. She was five years on the Coast of Africa, and the last year the Admiralty required from the Portsmouth Dockyard, an estimate of the expense of putting her into a complete state of repair. The surveyor reported that her repairs would cost about £5,000, and that she was in the worst possible condition. It was supposed that the Admiralty would have ordered her to be broken up; but Mr. White, of Cowes, the builder, having heard of the circumstance, informed the Admiralty that he would take the contract on his hands, and complete the repairs for one half the estimate given by the surveyor at Portsmouth. He mentioned this fact, to show that little dependence could be placed upon reports from the Dockyard authorities respecting vessels not built by themselves."

Sir Charles Napier said:—"Look at the case of the Waterwitch; at first the Admiralty refused to buy her, at length they did purchase her, and sent her to the coast of Africa, where she remained five years, and returned with all her sails, masts, and rigging, as equipped by a private builder, Mr. White, of Cowes, perfect. The services she had performed were almost beyond belief; and the number of slavers she captured, pursuant to the treaties effected by the noble lord, the member for Tiverton, showed the necessity of sending out vessels of the class of the Waterwitch to the African coast."

We have made these extracts from the speeches of two gallant members, to show the character and position which this vessel enjoyed in the navy, of which she was then so distinguished an ornament, also in consequence of the opinion entertained of her by the Lords of the Admiralty, which has induced them to cause five new experimental twelve-gun brigs to be built in her Majesty's dockyards, four of which by their own naval architects, and the other by the builder of the Waterwitch.

Tuesday last was the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, also of the first launching of the Waterwitch in 1832; and, as fate would have it, it was the day on which this brig was again to be restored to the navy, after having undergone a thorough overhaul and repair. So great has been her fame, that since she was hauled up for repair, she has been visited almost daily by every resident and nautical person in the vicinity; and on the day fixed for her launching, all the scientific men of the neighbourhood were attracted to Cowes. On this occasion, the spectators were numerous, the day auspiciously fine, and the river covered with boats full of company. The flag-staffs on both shores of the Medina, as well as the several yachts and vessels were gaily dressed with their flags, and all appeared as if, as in fact she was, the public's own vessel. At noon, every preparation having been made, she was let loose; there was no coyness with her ladyship, for she rushed along the inclined plane of nearly 400 feet, ere she touched ocean's brine, as if she knew it was her own, and that she had no equal on it, the waters received her as their queen, and she now sits on the water like a sea-bird, floats like a thing of air, and will in a few days be ready to contest for superiority with the others. The following are her dimensions:—Length of gun-deck, 90 feet 1 inch; extreme breadth, 29 feet 4 inches. We observed on board several of her former shipmates, her boatswain, her pilot, and many shipwrights who had worked on her when she was first constructed. The "Corkers" and all Cowes pilots say neither of the new guns will be able to hold a candle to her, and they have a pretty good idea of what the water likes.

It is a singular coincidence that the Pantaloon, built by Sir Wm. Symonds, was taken into her Majesty's Basin at Portsmouth on the anniversary of the launching of the Waterwitch.

The Waterwitch, on leaving her cradle, was taken in tow by her Majesty's steam-tug Echo, and proceeded out of the harbour, when she glided along without even disturbing the smooth surface of the water, or causing a ripple to be seen, the weight alone of her hawsers apparently causing her to go a-head; and, notwithstanding the steamer had full power on her, she could not at any time bring the tow-ropes taut.

Among the distinguished company present was Joseph Weld, Esq., of the Royal Yacht Squadron's cutter Alarm. It was his spirited professional abilities led Lord Belfast, the noble Vice-Commodore of the Royal Yacht Squadron, to build the Waterwitch.

FESTIVITIES AT WORSLEY.—MAJORITY OF GEORGE EGERTON, ESQ.

On Saturday last, George Grinville Francis Egerton, Esq., eldest son of Lord and Lady Francis Egerton, attained his majority; and the day was celebrated with festivities which will perpetuate its remembrance in the minds of the youngest inhabitants of this generation the oldest living inhabitants of a future day. It was the desire of Lord Francis, that the occasion should be made one of popular enjoyment, in and out of doors, through the medium of old English fare and hospitality, and old English sports and pastimes, to the thousands of tenants, dependants, workpeople, including the officers of the various coalpits in the estates, the numerous body of men employed on the Bridgewater Canal, and those also engaged in mountaining the navigation or keeping up the traffic along the Mersey and Irwell navigation. These, with the inhabitants generally of Worsley, Ellenbrook, Dean, Walladen Moor, &c., at each of which places there are Sunday and infant schools, mainly established and supported by Lady Francis Egerton, poured forth by all sorts of conveyances towards the park of Worsley—the scene of the principal festivities of the day; and by noon, when the sports commenced, there must have been from 8000 to 9000 persons assembled in the park of Worsley.

In what is called the Worsley Yard, near the Bridgewater Canal and warehouses, stood a spacious pavilion or marquee, capable of containing between 3000 and 4000 persons, gaily decorated with union jacks, British ensigns, and other flags; similar flags, colours, streamers, &c., might be seen waving from every high building in the neighbourhood, including the old and the new halls, the brick hall, the site of the new church, the Bridgewater warehouses, the collieries, the houses of the principal agents, superintendents, &c., in Worsley, and from many a tall tree for miles around. On an eminence in the New Hall Park were placed four brass cannon, six-pounders, belonging to Lord Francis Egerton's yacht, the Menai; and throughout the day, at intervals, these cannon with their "brazen throats" continued to Rattle the welkin's ear, and mock the deep-mouth'd thunder.

Between 500 and 600 pounds of gunpowder were expended, and it was necessary to procure a large supply of coarse blasting powder from the collieries, in order to maintain this noisy revelry till night-fall.

In commemoration of these natal festivities, Lord Francis Egerton had a very handsome medal executed, by Messrs. Hammond, Turner, and Sons, of Manchester and Birmingham. Of these about 4000 were struck in white metal, besides a few in silver and bronze for the family and friends; and some in each metal were deposited in the foundation-stone of the new church of St. Mark's. Throughout the day, almost every person wore one of these medals suspended by a piece of white ribbon, from a button-hole of the coat or at the breast.

The first public proceeding, in which Lord and Lady Francis Egerton, their family and guests, were engaged, was the laying the stone of a new church on the Worsley estate, which is to be erected, furnished, and we believe endowed, at the sole cost of Lord Francis Egerton, who also gives the site, an eminence in the Cross Field. The church will be an elegant stone edifice, in the decorated style, of the 13th and 14th centuries: it is to be named St. Mark's, and will afford accommodation to between 500 and 600 persons. The architects are Messrs. Scott and Moffatt, of London. The impressive ceremony of laying the stone was performed by Mr. George Egerton, with the due forms, in the presence of a large assemblage of persons.

The out-door sports and pastimes were then commenced in a large field behind the Bridgewater Hotel, Worsley: they included competition for prizes in old English games, as quoiting, putting the stone, hutch and kick, pole-climbing, Lancashire hornpipe dancing, &c.

These sports being terminated, a procession was formed to the Dinner Pavilion, erected in the Worsley yard, adjoining the warehouses and canal. Its dimensions were about 180 feet by 120 feet; and the height in the centre was about 44 feet. The outer covering was of canvas, and this was lined throughout with blue, pink, and white calico, in alternate stripes. Upwards of 10,000 yards of calico were used in the erection. The roof was supported by colonnades of five pillars each, festooned with ivy and other evergreens.

The general arrangement of the vast area is shown in our engraving. There were 192 tables, besides those on the dais, seating, on an average, 15 persons at each, so that upwards of 3000 persons were present. The provisions consisted of 3800lb. of roast beef and mutton, besides three barons of beef, weighing 400lbs. each; three whole sheep, weighing about 100lb. each; 120 substantial meat pies, and 4000lb. of bread. There were also 180 plum-puddings, weighing altogether about 17 cwt., which were wheeled into the pavilion in barrows. The liquors consisted of 300 gallons of porter, 1296 gallons of ale, 54 gallons of ginger-beer, and 36 gallons of lemonade.

The chair was most ably filled during the dinner by Mr. Loch, M.P.; and was then taken by Lord Francis Egerton, whose health, together with prosperity to Mr. George Egerton, and the health of Lady Francis Egerton, were drunk with great enthusiasm. The company then quitted the pavilion, which was speedily cleared of the remains of the dinner; and in their stead were placed the tea equipages for the wives and daughters of the workmen, &c., nearly 2000 in number.

Meanwhile, the sports were resumed in the field behind the Bridgewater Hotel, and kept up with great spirit till between eight and nine o'clock; and the day's festivities concluded with a splendid display of fireworks. There were also similar rejoicings at Runcorn and Warrington.

We have abridged the preceding details of this truly old English celebration from the Manchester Guardian.

LORD EGERTON'S FETE.—THE PAVILION AT WORSLEY.

JUNE.

A TRIPLE SONNET.

I.

Fair Season! sacred to the blushing flow'r,
Whose leaves were stain'd by Venus' wounded feet
When her Adonis she would save—most meet
For ev'ry bird too, in both grove and bow'r,
To send its minstrelsy forth, loud and sweet,—
Thee, with as fond but meaner music's pow'r,
We welcome, and thy gen'rous advent greet!
Thou bring'st with Thee an Ambrosial mist strange
Compounded of the sweetest things on earth—
Through the wide round of vast creation's range,
Or cruising dance of its eternal change,
No Month like Thee, produces such a birth
Such fruits and flowers—melody and joy,—
Which, it would seem no Winter might destroy!

II.

And yet—amidst thy garland of delights,
'Tis sad to find some hurtling poison there—
Thy nightingales may sweetly sing o' nights
By day thy humblest flow'rs may seem most fair;—
But in some secret place we may espy
The deadly nightshade* crawling o'er thy bloom!
As an unhappy, melancholy sigh,
Will ev'n amidst the gayest revelry,
Upheave the heart with sad foreboding gloom,
And tell it that its time is near to die!
Thus, o'er the brightest sun will come eclipse—
Sorrow's a weed will nestle amid flow'rs
And while we fancy sweets are on our lips,
'Tis then, perhaps, we taste Life's sharpest sours!

III.

Besides, fair June! thou'rt hardly present here
Before thou sing'st the cadence of the year!
Thou'rt like a verdurous mountain top, which won,
By many a joyous step, on further side
Presents a prospect, and a dreary one
Contrasted with the path we'd upward plied!
Full soon will day beyond thy crowning height
Begin to fade before the length'ning night!
And though thou promisest the golden field,
And all the fruit that Autumn ripe can yield,—
Still 'tis a sad'ning to the gloomy time
When the brown year will wear December's snow!
Sad emblem that when Man doth reach his prime,
Down—down the Hill of Life his steps must go! W.

* The Belia Donna flowers in June.

THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA AND SIR ROBERT PEEL.—During the imperial visit to Windsor, the Emperor had a long conference with Sir R. Peel. The subject discussed was one apparently of great interest. The Emperor spoke first, and at considerable length—he grew more animated, and before he concluded gesticulated with great energy. Sir Robert Peel listened with calm and almost placid attention till his Imperial Majesty concluded. The reply of the Premier was long and earnest; as he concluded, he grew very animated, and in the heat of his argument seemed almost to lose sight of that deferential manner so peculiarly his characteristic when addressing persons of very exalted rank, and before he concluded he used as much action as he generally does in a debate in the House of Commons. We leave to others to guess the subject of their conversation. France, Spain, India, Poland, Ireland, or Turkey, each or all. One thing is certain, that it was no trifling matter that could thus have excited two such characters as the Emperor of Russia and the Prime Minister of Great Britain.—Cheltenham Looker-on WATERLOO DAY.—The various regiments of the Household Brigade mounted guard on Tuesday morning with laurel in their hats, and the colours were surmounted with a large bunch of the same. St. James's Park was crowded with spectators, who followed the Coldstream Foot Guards to St. James's Palace.

A WEST INDIAMAN.—Considerable curiosity was excited on Tuesday at the St. Katherine's Docks, in consequence of the arrival of a vessel from Bermuda, of only 41 tons burthen, manned entirely by men of colour, and having a cargo consisting almost entirely of arrow root, which has accomplished the voyage in the incredibly short space of 21 days. This Lilliputian vessel has only one mast, her sides are not more than 12 to 15 inches from the deck, having a hand-rail raised above the same, of about the same height; the stern is quite even with the deck, open and unprotected; and altogether she has more the appearance of a yacht, than a vessel capable of journeying a voyage across the Atlantic. Though so small, she is evidently of great strength, and has not a vestige of paint or ornament about her.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 113, Vol. IV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1844. [Sixpence.

EXILES IN ENGLAND.

INCE it seems a thing settled and agreed that our Government is to descend to be the assistant spy of foreign states, it may be proper to consider a little what is the duty of a free country like England towards those who seek a refuge in it from persecution at home.

We, of course, are not bound to protect criminals who fly their country to escape the punishment due to offences against society; they are not so much exiles as felons.

But those who, in attempting to assert the common rights of men to freedom of speech and thought, have committed no crime, and only suffer from the misfortune of having been the weaker party—these, if they reach our shores, should be entitled to protection; their persons are safe; the difficulty they will find in living if they have left, as in too many cases they are obliged to do, their means of living behind them, might gratify even the vengeance of their oppressors; but we have no right to add to their difficulties. Having escaped the espionage of an Emperor, whether Russian or Austrian, they ought not to be suffered to fall into the snares of a Secretary of State, or to find the bureau of the secret police of Vienna in full work in St. Martin's-le-Grand!

This unfortunate question having been again opened by the discussions of Monday and Tuesday last, we are induced to recur to it, but on more general grounds than before; it involves the consideration of that duty towards our neighbours which the people of England, we are happy to say, have long understood and practised, but which the Home Office has yet to learn.

What compels men to become exiles? There are many descriptions of them, with as many shades of distinction as those which Sterne gives to his travellers. But the two grand divisions may be said to be the voluntary and the involuntary. With the first we have less to do; they choose their course, and are among us for some prospect of advantage either by way of profit or pleasure. They may quit us and go back, taking themselves quite out of the category. But the involuntary exile is to be pitied; he left his own country unwillingly and stays in ours against his inclination. He treads a strange soil, for which he has no love, and which can only be recommended by its giving him personal safety and the hope of freedom of intercourse with others. Now, a compelled exile is a misfortune great enough of itself, even when not linked with want and poverty, and the least a great country can do, is to afford the stranger the advantages which made him select it for his asylum. If compelled to appeal to our benevolence, we may bestow our charity as a favour; but when he asks safety and protection, he only demands that which is his right. It is this right which the Government is, and has for some time been violating.

It should be remembered that the extreme despotism of the Italian States, subjected to the power of Austria and the temporal sway of the Pope, has on more than one occasion driven the people to revolt; and on all these occasions the parties opposed to tyrannical government have comprised in their ranks the men of the highest intellect and endowments, and of the best moral character—men who could not be bad subjects or bad citizens, if the Government was either rationally honest, or commonly just. It is precisely the best men that despotism disgusts and alienates; the weak and cowardly submit to oppression; those who possess cunning along with cowardice become its ready tools, and make their profit of the system, that, while it crushes others, debases themselves; but they pocket their pay, or hang their orders on their breasts, and, glorying in their shame, ostentatiously parade their ignoble distinctions. The good and the wise combine against them; and as we fear the last are in a minority in most countries, the old scenes are acted over again, the executions and Military Commissions of Bologna in 1844 being but the repetition of what threw Silvio Pellico and his companions into the dungeons of Spilsberg, in the reign of Ferdinand.

With our representative system, the struggles of improvement against abuses terminate more quietly. Parties which are the representatives of principles rise and fall; but the success of one does not here involve the personal ruin, flight, or massacre of the other. This is the calamity of nations backward in civilization; in Spain the rise of every set of men has been attended by bloodshed; Espartero only escaped a military execution by becoming an exile. Two centuries ago it was much the same in England. The Roundheads shot and banished the Cavaliers, and when the Cavaliers were restored to power, they hung the Roundheads—years of exile had not slaked the thirst of revenge. During the Commonwealth the Court-Aristocracy of England were refugees in France. When the Revolution in that country set the guillotine at work with such terrible celerity, England gave an asylum to the French nobility. But certainly, the Government of Mr. Pitt never opened the letters of the refugees, to oblige the Republic with information against them. Let us bear in mind that to fail in a movement against the abuses of a despotic Government leaves no alternative but death, imprisonment, or flight; that this opposition is not only no crime, but frequently a duty, and we shall then better estimate how much of sympathy and protection we owe to those who have the worst of the too unequal contest. To aid the strong against the weak requires neither courage nor skill, and to assist the oppressors of mankind is to be a sharer of their guilt. It is the last part we should wish to see our country fill in the History of Nations.

The readiness our Executive has shown to aid a continental power in a bad cause, by the worst of means, forms the darkest feature of the present transaction. Practices soon become habit, and habits and customs soon glide into the political system in the shape of laws. For our own sakes we are bound to resist the first symptoms of deterioration; and our own interest becomes involved in the proper discharge of the duties of protection to those who, deprived of their own country, have made ours the land of their adoption.

SECRET-OFFICE, AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE.

THE SECRET OFFICE, AT THE GENERAL POST OFFICE.

The sensation produced by the recent cases of letters being opened at the General Post-office, by the authority of the Secretary of State for the Home Department, has induced us to engrave, for the gratification of our readers, the identical apartment in which this extraordinary power is exercised. It is also used as the Money-Order Office, and is situated on the right of the principal entrance, facing into the great area. A portion of the room is partitioned off, along with the windows, for the payment and granting of post-office orders. The ordinary business transacted in the room, is the keeping of the accounts connected with the order department, and the franking, &c., of official communications. From one corner of the room is an elegant spiral staircase, which leads to the other offices connected with this division; and beneath the staircase, is a door which communicates by a flight of steps, with the vaults beneath. A door at the side of the room opens into the private office of the principal, Mr. Barth, whose name is signed to all the official documents passing through the office.

Few persons are aware how letters are opened and re-sealed by the Post-office. Wafers are opened by the application of moisture, and sealed letters are opened thus:—The letter is laid on an anvil with the seal up, upon the seal is laid a square piece of pure lead, and upon this lead descends a hammer with considerable velocity. The sudden impact converts the lead into a seal as faithful as an electrotype, and accordingly is used to re-seal the letter, which is now opened by destroying the wax bit by bit. For all letters similarly sealed the lead-seal will do. A blunderer in the management must have recently led to suspicion. In small country towns, curious postmistresses keep by them an assortment of seals, with impressions of hearts, darts, &c., for the purpose of enabling them to get at little secrets.

THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE.

(Continued from page 402.)

MORNING DUTY OF THE INLAND-OFFICE.—DELIVERY OF LETTERS.

Before the bell of St. Paul's tolls six of the clock A.M., the bustle in the Post-office-yard in St. Martin's-le-Grand, indicates that business has commenced. Rattling over the stones come the mail coaches—those reliques of departed days—with their foaming steeds chewing their bits, and snorting as if in defiance of the power of steam. The horn of the guard, whose spirit-stirring note had tingled the ear and roused to action the village swain from the earliest dawn of his infancy, is gradually silenced by the opening of successive lines of railway. Regularly, however, as of old, the few remaining coaches come. Lumbering omnibuses also arrive with railroad precision, bringing their heaps of bags from the termini of the several railways, attended by guards paid by the newly-adopted "elder's scale" of salary. Somehow or other, these officers have lost much of the sprightliness of their original character; they seem to be dejectedly brooding over the innovation made upon privileges long vested, but now matters of history; to wit, the right they once enjoyed of soliciting compensation in the shape of fees from passengers. We strongly suspect that to those hardy servants of the public, a fixed salary is a "fixed injustice."

We forgot, by the way, that we were in the yard of the General Post-office, at one of its busiest moments; for while we have been musing, the several conveyances have been emptied of their valuable contents. As we have been duly authorised, we will step inside, and note the proceedings during the progress of the morning duty.

The "Tick-room" is nearly full; and the clerk at the dingy desk is checking the receipt of the bags, as the labels representing the post towns whence they were dispatched, are called over by the shrill-voiced letter-carrier in uniform, who throws them into bins fixed round the Tick-room. These bins are lettered, so as to correspond with the reverse side of the brass label attached to each bag, and the table in the Inland-office, at which the bags are opened. Now several of the letter-carriers clear the bin, shouldering the bags or dropping them off with desperate perseverance. We have passed the folding-doors leading from the Tick-room into the Inland-office, and as there appears to be a good-natured sort of letter-carrier now going along the Inland-office with several of the bags brought by the Brighton mail, we will follow him, and note the whole process. He has put the bags into one of the little waggons, which is now drawn out at the end of the table, called the "opening table." Now the clerk, appointed as "opener," cuts the "sacred fastening, and out come the letters upon the table as they were tied in bundles by the country post-master. The bill is now checked and ticked off as "right," and the money letter in it is safely deposited in the drawer until the collector of the registered letters comes round to collect it, for entry in the money-book. The opener now lays the letters in long rows before the examiner, or elder clerk, who occupies the seat at the centre of the table, the end places being filled by the openers. Now and then a letter is taken out of the mass by this clerk, who in the course of his examination of them, finds odd ones improperly taxed. These he tries by the scales: they are overweight or informally charged: he, therefore, places them in that little box before him after he has retaxed them and affixed his initials to the altered rate. They are then stamped by the messenger "more to pay," and charged accordingly. The badge of letters having thus undergone the ordeal of examination, are put on the further side of the table to be stamped by the person appointed for that purpose. He has laid the letters in a long row before him. At his right hand lies a pad saturated with a mixture of red lead ground in oil. With his left hand he draws the letters under the stamp, while he impresses each one of them with the handstamp marked "paid," which he holds in his right hand. There, he has finished that long row; by the tally he has thrown out there are more than two hundred of them, yet he has not been more than two minutes accomplishing his task. Now he has completed them he must refund him blanks from to the sorters, who occupy those long lines of table stretching in a double line nearly the whole length of the Inland-office. We will notice this process by-and-by, as it is very different to the sorting in the evening. We observe that the stamp is now using another kind of stamp; mark the difference; the "paid" stamp was impressed upon the front of the letter with red ink; this is stamped upon the back of the letter, and is marked in black. These are the inward letters, the postage upon which is not paid, whether inland, ship, or foreign: by the Hong Kong stamp upon some of these we perceive they have passed through the newly-appointed post-office in that colony of Anglo-China. Upon all these letters the amount of postage is charged in large black ink figures over the addresses.

STAMP FOR THE OFFICIAL LETTERS.

There is another row of letters laid left and right of the openers, which the clerk at the table does not trouble himself to examine, nor that stamper to stamp. We must find out what they are. A messenger has just now taken them away to the seats allotted to the "Inspectors of Official Letters." They are the "State's," or letters belonging to the official representatives of Government. That row is directed to "The Poor Law Commissioners, Somerset House;" these to the "First Lord of his Majesty's Treasury;" those to "The Secretary of State for the Home Department;" and these to the "Chairman of the Committee on Railways." They are all stamped with a stamp marked "paid," but it is surmounted with a crown, to distinguish it from the common stamp.

This description of correspondence is assorted and made up in bags bearing the label of each department, and sent down to the various offices, as soon as the duty is complete, by a special mail.

Now we must notice the mode of sorting for the morning delivery. At those long tables there are upwards of eighty sorters now employed, or subsorters, as they are officially designated, for, strictly speaking, the clerks alone are entitled "sorters of letters." There are two rows of these men to each table; on each side the duty is differently performed. We will attempt to describe both kinds of duty. The table is furnished with a shelf. Before each of the men on this side, upon the bottom and top rows of the bench are labels numerically marked, from one to nine inclusive, on the first row, and from ten to fifteen inclusive on the second. Now the principle is this:—This vast metropolis is divided into fifteen parts or "divisions." One, two, three, and four represent or embrace the western part; five, and six, the northern; seven, eight, nine, and ten, the centre; then, the eastern part, beyond Aldgate Church; twelve, the whole of the Borough. To thirteen, the official letters above noticed are assorted after they have been stamped; fifteen embraces the outside of the western walks not included in the four first divisions; while the whole of the suburban districts of town beyond the delivery of letters by the General Post letter-carriers, belong to the suburban walk of the Twopenny, or, as it is now more appositely called, the "London District Post."

As the letters are thus assorted, they are conveyed to the sorters upon the opposite side of the table, and each sorter has allotted to him or her "walks." Hence it is that in the case the first sorters must have a correct knowledge of the streets, alleys, squares, lanes, and public places throughout this vast metropolis, as well as of the several firms whose letters come to town directed "London" only; while the second sorters must be most minutely acquainted with each letter-carrier's delivery. The letters, after being thus assorted, are collected in trays made for the purpose, and taken from the Inland-office to the wards of the men who have to deliver them, which are in the adjoining or "Newspaper-office."

This is the practice with reference to paid letters. With those unpaid there is much more delay. They are sorted in the same manner separately from the paid letters; but as the price of the transit postage has not at present been paid upon them, it is essential the office should debit the letter-carrier with the charge marked upon them before they reach his hands. As they are sorted into walks, therefore, they are told—that is, the amount is added up and entered in the check-book, by hang-clerk, who makes out a separate and small docket, upon which the name of the walk is printed against which the charge is made. This docket is then given to the check-clerk, who sits at an elevated desk. The letters thus "sold" are put into boxes representing the walks. The letter-carrier then adds up the sum, and reports his telling to the check-clerk. If the sum made by the carrier agrees with the amount marked upon the docket, the check-clerk calls out "Right;" if not, "Wrong." If the letter-carrier cannot make it right after again trying, the matter is referred to the President, Vice-President, or senior clerk on duty to retell, to decide between the original teller on the part of the office and the letter-carrier, which of the two is in error. The carrier then initials the docket, and he from that time becomes responsible for the amount so charged. The payments of the carriers must be made three times a week.

Thus concludes the "morning duty" of the Inland-office.

Before we leave this interesting department, however, we must not forget to notice the business of the letter-carrier in the office; for it would be an error to suppose that the letter-carriers of the General Post-office are like those of the London District Department, merely letter deliverers. Indeed, this fact constitutes the difference between them; and is, in reality, one of the grand obstacles to the consolidation of the two bodies.

When the men receive their letters they have them to examine and arrange. If any mis-sorting has taken place, they must rectify it; and in all cases of removal, or alteration of the addresses of parties who once used to reside on a given walk, the transfer is entrusted to the letter-carrier holding the original address. These men have also to attend to the instructions of the inspectors on a variety of miscellaneous business connected with so large and important an adjunct to the Inland-office, as is the letter-carriers department of the General Post-office; in which are kept by the men some hundreds of accounts with the public for early delivery, &c. The whole of the letter-carriers and sub-sorters are under the control of Frederick Kelly, Esq., and seven assistant inspectors of letter-carriers.

The forty thousand letters which the several inland, ship, and foreign mails have brought into London being now tied up in bundles, arranged in streets and numbers, to save time in the delivery, and put into the bags of the letter-carriers, the department bell is rung, and the men issue forth from the northern outlet of the establishment, facing Aldersgate-street. The "City" men pass along on foot to their walks; but the more distant deliveries are commenced nearly as early by the conveyance of the letter-carriers in accelerators, from which they drop as they reach their walks. Thus it is that the "written ideas" of a nation, and the intelligence despatched by the eager hand of business, or in the affectionate haste of friendship from foreign climes, is concentered and again distributed to shed its gratifying pleasure, or its sombre gloom, over the hearths of the prince and the peasant, the poor and the rich, whom habit, inclination, business, pleasure, or necessity have congregated within the limits of the first city in the world, which, as Dickens has beautifully observed of it, is so like eternity, that "no one knows where it begins nor where it ends."

EVENING DUTY OF THE INLAND OFFICE.

The evening duty of the Inland-office consists officially of the following parts:—Collecting, taxing, stamping and obliterating, corresponding with the assistants, first assorting, taking to the roads, second assorting, tying, making up the bags, and putting them into the road-sacks of the several guards, where the responsibility of the in-door duty officer ends.

We give in detail a description of each of the above duties as they follow in the official routine:—

Collecting.—This process consists in gathering the letters in carts from the various receiving-houses in the metropolis, and from the "boxes" or drawers —which, more correctly speaking, they are—into which the chief office letters are posted by the public through its various apertures in the vestibule of the establishment in St. Martin's-le-Grand.

Facing.—This operation consists in so placing the letters that the whole of the addresses "face" the persons so employed. This part of the duty is purely preliminary, and performed for the purpose of facilitating the subsequent parts of the process.

Stamping.—This is one of the most important parts of the business, from the fact of the several stamps forming the key either in cases of delay, mis-delivery, mis-sending, or, indeed, mistake of any kind, whilst the letters are in transitu. We consequently furnish engravings of the several stamps fig 1.

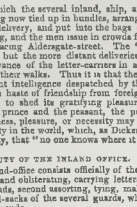

fig 2

Fig. 1, Is the unpaid letter or date stamp. The same impression is stamped upon all labelled letters going outwards, in black ink.

Fig. 2, Represents the obliterating mark of the Inland-office for outward letters.

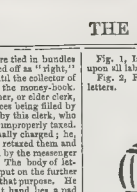

fig 3.

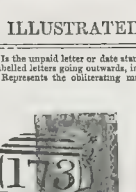

fig 4

Fig. 3, Is the Chatham post obliterating stamp, impressed at that office, on letters for delivery in London.

Fig. 4, Is the metropolitan paid stamp on all letters, coin with which has been paid, as postage, either inward or outward.

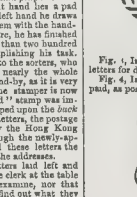

fig 5.

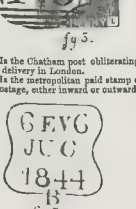

fig 6.

Fig. 5, Is the delivery stamp of the London district department, shewing the most recent improvement or initial check-letter in the base: the hour, "6 Evening," shows when the letter ought to have been delivered.

Fig. 6, Is the obliterating mark of the receiving-houses and chief office belonging to the district post. It is, of course, struck upon the frank when used.

Carrying the Letters to the Assorters.—From the stamping tables the letters are carried to the assorting benches for purposes as hereinafter enumerated.

First Assorting.—The first sorting of the mass of correspondence is a work of considerable difficulty, and requires—before it can be quickly and accurately performed—a most extensive knowledge of the relative locality of the United Kingdom, as well as some acquaintance with foreign countries. When the letters are laid before the sorters they are, of course, miscellaneously mixed. For instance: The sorter takes up a handful; first, he must know whether the town is situate in Great Britain, and if so, he places it to the road representing the mail which conveys the bag to that town. Probably, the address gives the name of a village only in a certain county. In this case, he must be aware in what post-town delivery such a village may be officially fixed, for mere geographical knowledge will not assist him. To obtain this knowledge of the practice not only of the locale of 960 post-towns in England alone, requires much application and experience; but when this fact is associated with another, namely, that to these 960 post-towns there are associated ten times the number of small places, the work becomes arduous and rapid sorting becomes one of no ordinary kind. When a letter is directed either to Ireland or Scotland, the detail is abandoned in the Metropolitan-office, at least, in a great degree, as the majority of the letters are conveyed en masse to the cities of Dublin and Edinburgh, where they are hereafter disposed of.

Taking the Letters to the Roads.—As the letters are undergoing the process of first assorting, they are cleared away and taken to the roads, or several divisions around the Inland-office.

Second Assorting.—When the letters are thus "brought over" they undergo the process of "second assorting," that is, are actually putting down into the boxes representing the post-towns for which they are destined. Here any mistakes made by the first assorters are corrected, and the "blind letters" thrown out to be re-sorted.

Tying.—The letters being thus put into the boxes are gradually, as they accumulate, tied into bundles, so that no delay may take place at the latest moment prior to the despatch.

"Making up" the Bags.—The last letter having passed through the several stages we have enumerated, the final operation in the Inland-office is to "make up" the bags, a work necessarily performed throughout the whole office. It consists in putting into the leather receptacles the bundles of letters, with the odd, or straggling ones, which, by accident, mis-sorting, or illegibility of address, have been delayed until this the latest moment. After the registered letters, upon which a fee of one shilling has been paid—all of which have been previously entered in the "money-letter book," and again upon the slip of the Post-master—are delivered to the sub-sorter, and put carefully in; then the neck of the bag is tied firmly with string, sealing wax plentifully distributed over the tie, and the official impress bearing the name of the post-town to which it is sent is stamped thereon. This completes any put into the road-sack of the guard in his presence, and from that moment he becomes responsible for their safe delivery.

Thus ends the evening duty of the Inland-office.

Notwithstanding the multiplicity of duty abovenamed it will scarcely be believed that upwards of eighty thousand letters pass through the whole of the stages every evening in the year, previous to the despatch of nine-sorting, forms of which return daily to the General Post-office, it is proved that the errors are not more in ratio than one in ten thousand! Practised stampers will stamp distinctly one hundred and thirty letters per minute, and twenty letters sorted in the same period by each officer employed. The efficient manner in which the whole of the Inland-office duty is performed reflects the greatest credit upon the Superintending-President, William Bokenham, Esq., and his colleagues, the Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the Inland-office, and the whole of the officers under their charge.

THE LONDON DISTRICT (LATE TWOPENNY POST) OFFICE.

It was about the close of the Protectorate that the establishment of a post for the delivery of letters in and around London originated. William Dockwra, a private individual, was the originator. In the year 1709, the Postmasters-general reported to the Lord High Treasurer, that in consequence of the penny post carried on by William Dockwra "being thought to interfere with the power granted by Parliament to them," a suit was commenced against him by the order of James, then Duke of York; whereupon there was a trial at the King's Bench bar, and a verdict given against him and damages found. This was nine years after the penny-post was taken possession of by the Government. Subsequently to the Revolution, however, a pension was granted to Dockwra, who lived in the enjoyment of it for several years afterward.

Until A.D. 1765, parcels and packets were conveyed by post, to the weight of which no limit seems to have been assigned. It was required, however, that they should not be above the size of ten pounds; "from which it may be inferred," remark the Commissioners of Post-office Inquiry (9th Report) "that the office was held responsible to that amount for their safe delivery." By the 5th Geo. III., cap. 25, it was enacted, "that no packet, exceeding the weight of four ounces, should be carried by the penny post, unless it had first passed, or was intended afterwards to pass, the general post."

It would be unnecessary to trace the different establishment of this post, the postage was paid in advance; so that compulsory pre-payment will be seen to be no novelty. In the year 1794, however, the act 34 Geo. III, was passed; in the 17th cap. of which it was enacted, "that an additional rate of one penny should be charged upon all letters conveyed from places beyond the cities of London and Westminster and the Borough of Southwark, in like manner as letters conveyed to these places by the 5th Geo. II. is and were charged one penny;" and farther, "that persons sending letters should pay the postage on putting them in, or not, as they thought proper." Here then we note the foundation of the optional mode of payment for the postage of penny-post letters.

By the 41 Geo. III., cap. 7, passed in the year 1801, an additional rate of one penny was levied on all letters delivered, by the heretofore penny-post, within the cities of London and Westminster, the Borough of Southwark, and the suburban districts of the metropolis, thus constituting the "Twopenny-post."

Beyond the aforesaid limits threepence was charged, by an act passed in the year 1805 (45 Geo. III., cap. 17). No other alterations took place until 1814, when the limits of the Twopenny-post delivery were extended to include, under that rate, all places within three miles of the General Post-office. The recent abolition of the above charges, and the substitution of an uniform rate of one penny on all inland correspondence under the weight of half-an-ounce, projected by Rowland Hill, Esq., is fresh in the memory of all our readers.

The Twopenny Post-office as at present constituted is an establishment in itself. Robert Smith, Esq., is its Superintending President. Under him there are one chief clerk, four assistant-clerks, one surveyor, one remittance clerk, two presidents, three vice-presidents, two windowmen, twelve clerks of divisions, fourteen assistant clerks, eighteen sorters, nineteen subsorters, one inspector of letter-carriers, two assistant-inspectors, five junior assistants, fourteen stampers, and about four hundred letter-carriers.

The duties of stamping, assorting, despatch, and delivery are similar in principle to that practised in the Inland-office, the only difference is in the detail, which is altered so as to suit the exigencies of the branch of duty.

For the convenience of the letter-carriers and expediting the delivery of letters, branch offices are established in different parts of town, where the second assortment, or arrangement of the letters for delivery on the immediate walks of division, takes place. It is at these offices that the majority of the assistant-inspectors of letter-carriers are employed.

There are, up to the latest alterations just included, ten deliveries daily of London local letters. The first delivery takes place at 8 A.M.; the second at 10; the third at 12; the fourth at 1 P.M.; the fifth at 2; the sixth at 3; the seventh at 4; the eighth at 5; the ninth at 6; and the tenth at 8 in the evening. Collections are made at the same hours throughout the day.

In the practice of the Twopenny-post there are some anomalies: for instance the rigid rule that all letters, wherever they may be posted, must pass through the chief office in St. Martin's-le-Grand before they are delivered. This produces both vexation and delay. Improvements, however, have, in many instances, been made; and there can be no question that the sus hactus introduced into the establishment by the new principle of Mr. Hill, will eventually lead to the removal of prejudices to which a long and uninterrupted flow of official practice has given a character of unalienable sacredness; and with which it has been considered almost impious to interfere.

CONCLUSION.

Having thus minutely explained the duties of the executive branches of this truly national establishment, we have merely to make a few miscellaneous observations. Of the remaining departments we have not space now to write. Besides the already detailed, there are other branches of the service of considerable importance in themselves, and equally valuable with the rest in completing the vast arrangements necessary to so large a concern. There is the Secretary's Office, the grand depôt of complaints, and the controlling office of all the subordinate departments; the Surveyor's Office, in which the arrangements for the appointment of post-offices, both metropolitan and provincial, are made; the Mail-coach Department, embracing an establishment in itself of inspectors and mail-guards; the Solicitor's Office, where all the legal business incident to so great an affair is conducted; the Receiver and Accountant-General's Offices, where the money is paid and accounted for from thousands of officers daily; the Ship and Foreign Offices, through which the correspondence of thousands far distant from our fertile shores is continually passing; and, finally, the Dead and Returned Letter Offices, where twenty-one officers are employed daily in opening letters which, "for the causes thereon assigned cannot be delivered,"—which letters, if the addresses of the writers are inscribed therein, are returned to them. Though last, "not least," there is the "Window," where the letters are called for by those merchants and others who pay for the accommodation of having their letters as early as the despatch of the letter-carriers is announced.

The number of letters passing through the Post-offices of the United Kingdom is upwards of 210 millions per annum; the gross revenue is about £1,600,000; the cost of management nearly a million, and the net revenue of 1843 was given at no less a sum than £600,000, the cost of the packet service being, as it ought to be, placed to the account of the Admiralty.

Notwithstanding the liberal additions recently made in the several branches of this interesting department, in consequence of the enormous increase in the number of letters arising from a reduction in the foreign and ship rates, and the application of the uniform penny-post system to letters under half an ounce in weight, posted for delivery in the United Kingdom, we are informed, upon unquestionable authority, that other, and still greater alterations are at this moment in contemplation. Large as it is, the Inland-office is found too small for the duty. Preparations are making for enlarging it, as well as the Newspaper-office, by raising other floors, if the surveyor deems such a step compatible with the safety of the gigantic building in St. Martin's-le-Grand. To maintain the hourly deliveries recently introduced in the local office, as well as to pave the way for a still further extension of the principle, it is probable that several other appointments will shortly be made both in the Inland, the Letter-carriers', and the London district offices.

Mr. R. Wallace, M.P. for Greenock, recently moved for a return of the names, rank, and date of appointment of the Postmasters-General, from the earliest period up to the present time. We find that the following noblemen and gentlemen are included amongst the list of Postmasters-General in England appointed between the years 1670 (in the reign of Charles II.) and the year 1841, viz., Sir R. Cotton, Sir John Evelyn, Lord Cornwallis, Lord Lovel (afterwards the Earl of Leicester), the Earl of Beeborough, 1719; Hon. R. Hampden, 1765; the Earl of Egmont, 1768; Lord Bradshaw, 1766; Lord Hillsborough, 1766; Earl of Candwick, 1768; Lord Hyde, 1768; Lord Le Despencer, 1768; Viscount Barrington, 1782; the Earl of Tankerville, 1783; Lord Foley, 1784; the Earl of Clarendon, 1786; the Earl of Westmoreland, 1786; the Earl of Chesterfield, 1794; Lord Auckland, 1799; Lord Gower, 1801; Lord C. Spencer, 1804; the Duke of Montrose, 1806; the Earl of Buckinghamshire, 1806; Lord Carysfort, 1807; the Earl of Chichester, 1814; the Duke of Clarence, 1816; the Marquis of Salisbury, 1823; Lord F. Montague, 1827; the Duke of Manchester, 18.7. the Duke of Richmond, 1830; the Marquis of Conyngham, 1834; Lord Maryborough, 1834—; the Marquis of Conyngham again, 1835; the Earl of Lichfield, 1835; and the present noble Postmaster-General, Viscount Lowther, who was sworn in on the 14th of September, 1841.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The LORD CHANCELLOR having taken his seat on the woolsack, the County Rate Bill and the Coroners Bill were brought up from the Commons, and read a first time.

In answer to a question from Lord Beaumont, the Earl of RIPON said it was not the intention of the Government to recommend that a new inquiry should be instituted into the circumstances attending the deposition of the Rajah of Sattara. The case had undergone revision more than once, and by different administrations, and all were satisfied that there was no ground for instituting any further proceedings.

The Earl of WINCHILSEA gave notice that on Friday he would present some petitions respecting agriculture, and would take that opportunity of drawing the attention of their lordships to the propriety of establishing public national standards.

After some discussion the bill for the union of the sees of St. Asaph and Bangor went through committee without any amendment.

Some bills on the table were then forwarded a stage, and their lordships adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. MONDAY.

On the motion of Lord ELIOT, the Dublin and Cashel Railway Bill was read a third time, and ordered to be committed.

Mr. THOMAS DUNCOMBE presented a petition from a Polish refugee, named Stolzman, complaining that his letters had been opened at the General Post-office. He took occasion, not merely to go into the details of the present case, but also to examine into the practice of opening letters, and thus to put on record the subject of the violation of correspondence, which, he affirmed, and said he could prove, had been carried on to a very great extent during the last two years, charging the Government with possessing a secret letter-opening machinery, and accusing the Government with not only conniving at it, in order to make a political use of the information thus surreptitiously obtained, but with sometimes having the power of authorising it. He moved that the petition be referred to a select committee, in order not only to inquire into its allegations, but into the system.—Dr. BOWRING seconded the motion, with a few observations.—Sir J. GRAHAM considered the want of courtesy manifested in his not being fully apprised of the whole circumstances of the case, including the name of the petitioner, before it was brought under the consideration of the house. He had been merely informed that another petition was to be presented. No man respected public opinion more than he did, or wished more to stand well with his fellow-countrymen; but, occupying a high official situation, he would not allow regard for his private character to overcome his sense of what was due to the public security and service. He would, therefore, stand on the fact that the case stood much in the position of a criminal one. Any person opening letters in the Post-office, without authority, was liable to indictment for a misdemeanour; the Home Secretary was open to prosecution, if he had exceeded his powers; and, denying that he had done any such thing, he deemed it an inquiry, either by the House of Commons or by a select committee.—Mr. MACAULAY thought that Sir James Graham did not seem to be aware of the grave nature of the question he was discussing. Now that their attention had been thus called to it, this was a power which could no longer be suffered to exist, without great modification. A letter in the Post-office ought to be as sacred as one preserved in a desk; it was equally subject to government of the Queen's servants, and certainly was not intended for the purposes of a secret police. The letters of Wilkes were taken out of his desk, and he recovered a thousand pounds damages against the Secretary of State. No reason could be alleged for the defence of this letter-opening practice, which could not also be urged in defence of the spy system in the worst of times; and it would be better that, occasionally, even a guilty man should be acquitted, than that such a practice, grounded in secrecy, should be suffered to exist, and all private correspondence be placed at the mercy of a vague suspicion on the part of an official, or to gratify a commercial desire. Such a power as had been made use of this morning the late Government; and though, from a sense of public duty, the Home Secretary had felt it necessary to refuse explanation, he had in no degree exceeded what had been the practice under Mr. Fox and Lord Grenville, or that of the late Government. Subsequently, J. RUSSELL did not think that Sir R. Peel had uttered the complexion of the case. Sir JAMES GRAHAM might have imitated the conduct of Sir Robert Walpole in the case of Bishop Atterbury, and refused, on the comments upon this subject. He gave some explanation of what had occurred in the case of Count Ostrowski, and defended Sir James Graham, who acted on a law which had existed since the reign of Queen Anne, and which had been properly renewed by the late Government; and though, from a sense of public duty, the Home Secretary had felt it necessary to refuse explanation, he had in no degree exceeded what had been the practice under Mr. Fox and Lord Grenville, or that of the late Government. Subsequently, J. RUSSELL did not think that Sir R. Peel had uttered the complexion of the case. Sir JAMES GRAHAM might have imitated the conduct of Sir Robert Walpole in the case of Bishop Atterbury, and refused, on the ground that the power was necessary for the public safety, with respect to internal dangers, have given some general indication of the principle on which he acted, without entering on details. It would be a most unjustifiable use of this power if it were exercised to oblige foreign Governments; and it would be no derogation of the position or dignity of Sir James Graham if he were to submit to an inquiry. The Home Secretary might be even more to blame than Lord Melbourne was in the case of Coffey; but responsibility was at an end if a minister refused all explanation, and sheltered himself behind a majority.—Mr. MOCKTON MILNES regretted that Sir James Graham had not felt it consistent with his duty to state whether or not it was for the use of foreign Governments the information was sought. It was, however, a question of confidence.—Mr. SHEIL thought that enough had come out even from the admissions of the Government, to justify investigation. Why should Sir James Graham stand on his sic volo sic jubeo? It had been boasted, four months ago, in the Augsburg Gazette, that Mazzini was under the surveillance of the London police. The charge against them was, that they had resorted to the un-English practice of violating the correspondence of an exile, who had taken refuge amongst them, and this in order to gratify a foreign Government; and the English community revolted at the idea that the privacy of the affections and affections should be open to the inspection of the Home-office. - Mr. STUART WORTLEY defended the Government. — Mr. WAKLEY thought that the two right honourable baronets were not a very happy pair on this occasion. The post of Prime Minister was not always a very agreeable one, and though Sir R. Peel might think it a part of his duty to defend Sir J. Graham, he evinced that he had anything but a good case in hand. It had been complained that the particular names, in the case before the house, had not been previously communicated. Was it not a fair inference from this, that the practice was a common, every-day one? Worse than employing spies was the odious practice of prying into people's letters, at the end or back of somebody else. But Sir Graham refused all explanation, and retired on responsibility. But responsibility was accountability; and how could they make the Home Secretary accountable without an inquiry? The petitioners only asked to find out the wheels and machinery which Sir James Graham; the independence of the house—if it had any left—was at stake; and Sir James Graham, who was one of the loudest of the ironclad cheerers when Mr. Fergus O'Connor demurred to the sealing of a house, had himself "demurred" to it, and was therefore embarked with the members for Knaresborough in the same sinking boat.—Lord HOWICK asked if the Executive was to become the spy and tool of foreign states? The petitioners refused now, would be precedent hereafter; and any Secretary of State might abuse the power with safety. The security of the country did not rest either on the power of opening letters at the Post-office or of employing spies. Did the act of Parliament sanction the re-sealing of opened letters? He protested against the doctrine and principle which the Government had laid down.—Lord STANLEY said that was precisely one of those cases in which the Opposition could enlist popular sympathy, while the Government, fettered by the responsibilities of office, could not contradict in detail the unfounded assumptions on which the allegations proceeded. No evidence was supplied by the petitioner in support of the charge that his letters were opened, and if the house were to sanction this course, they would be called upon every day to investigate the vague allegations of mere suspicion. He admitted the political importance of the subject; Sir James Graham refused inquiry on the same principle that Lord John Russell would refuse to indicate how he, when in office, had exercised the power, which was one, like the application of the secret service money, which must be exercised on the personal honour of the Minister, bound by his oath of office, and secured by the unquestioned confidence of the House of Commons. — Sir GEORGE GREY remarked, that though Lord Stanley, with his usual courage, had rushed to the rescue of his colleagues, he had not mended the case. The charge was, that the power had been exercised, not with a view of detecting some plot against "our Sovereign lady the Queen," or against the safety of the country, but at the bidding of a foreign Government, for its own purposes, thus compromising the honour and honour of this country. To rescue us from these imputations, he would cheerfully give his support to the motion. He had not contested the matter as one of confidence in the Government, in the exercise of an important part of their executive authority.—Mr. WYSE stated that having seen the letters of Mr. Mazzini, he had no moral doubt of their having been opened in the Post-office.—Mr. THOMAS DUNCOMBE justified his not having supplied Mr. James Graham with the name of the petitioner in the present case, because he considered that the Home Secretary had taken an undue advantage of the early information given in the case of Mazzini and his co-petitioners. He had made out a prima facie case for inquiry; and the country would come to the conclusion that, in using a tyrannical majority to shelter himself, Sir M. Graham the matter would not stand investigation.—On a division, there appeared—

For the committee of inquiry...	..	..	..	162
Against it ...	..	..	..	118
Majority ...	..	..	..	44

The third reading of the Sugar Duties Bill was postponed until Thursday.

On the motion for going into committee on the Bank Charter Act, several suggestions were made by Mr. Alderman Thompson, Mr. Williams, and Mr. Masterman, after which. Mr. MOSPRY moved that the bill should be committed that day to four months; an amendment which was negatived by a large majority, and opposed by Sir R. PEEL, who stated the modifications which the Government were prepared to assent to in the committee.—After some observations from Mr. HUME respecting the bank-restriction clause, which Sir R. PEEL said it was the intention of the Government to continue, a discussion ensued, in which Mr. Wallace, Mr. Barnard, General Johnson, Colonel Sibthorp, and other hon. members took part.—The house then divided, and the amendment of Mr. Muntz was negatived by a majority of 205 to 18. The house then went into committee, and a long discussion ensued on clauses 3 and 4, which were ultimately agreed to, and the house resumed, when the Chairman reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again on Thursday.

The Salmon Fish-ry (Scotland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Education Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be committed on Thursday.

The other orders of the day were disposed of, and the house adjourned at one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The house having met at five o'clock, the Earl of RADNOR again brought forward the subject of the opening of letters by the Post-office authorities, and moved for a return of the number of warrants which had been issued by the Secretary of State.—The Duke of WELLINGTON having denied all knowledge of the matters complained of, called on their lordships, unless convinced by some evidence laid before them proving an abuse of that power which is vested by law to the discretion of the Secretary of State, to resist the production of any such return.—Lord of TANNERVILLE said he had in his possession a warrant issued by Charles J. Fox, directing the letters addressed to the Foreign Ministers to be opened. He also had a warrant authorising the opening of Lord George Gordon's correspondence.—The Earl of HADDINGTON and Lord BROUGHAM opposed the motion, on the ground that no public inconvenience had been adduced for the production of the documents.—Lords CAMPBELL and DENMAN contended that, at least, there ought to be some inquiry into the law of these warrants, and a limitation put to the power claimed and exercised by secretaries of State.—Lord RADNOR withdrew his motion with the intimation that he should bring it forward again in some other shape.

Lord WHARNCLIFFE moved the second reading of the Charitable Bequests (Ireland) Bill, the object of which was, he said, to reconstitute the commission on charitable bequests in Ireland, to remedy the defects which, in the opinion of the Roman Catholics of that country, and to provide that any person wishing to make a provision, by bequest of land or other property, for the Roman Catholic clergy, might constitute the commissioners trustees of such property, for the benefit of the individuals to whom it applied.—The Bishop of EXETER, the Earl of Wicklow, Lord Monteagle, the Earl of Haddington, Lord Hatherton, and the Marquis of Clanricarde, supported the bill, which, Lord WHARNCLIFFE, in his reply, stated to be independent of the general measures relative to Ireland, and to the condition of the Irish clergy, which engaged the attention of Government —The bill was read a second time; and several other bills having been advanced a stage, their lordships adjourned at half-past seven o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

In answer to a question from Lord J. RUSSELL, Sir R. PEEL said that the French Government had communicated the nature of the propositions which had been given to the Prince de Joinville, and to the commander of their military force, in the contemplated operations against Morocco; but in the present state of affairs between the two powers, and the French Government having declined stating the nature of those instructions. The cause of quarrel was the shelter and aid which Abd-el-Kader received in and from Morocco in his longcontinued contest with the French power, and the French Government, having made certain demands, which they intend to enforce, if not complied with. But it is hoped that hostilities will yet be averted, the recent occurrences appearing to be accidental, arising from the unpreparedness of the Moors, unaccustomed to the restraints of modern warfare.

Sir R. PEEL asked Mr. Wyse to postpone his motion on the Irish state trials, which stands for next Tuesday, seeing that the writ of error was fixed for Tuesday in the House of Lords, and the law officers of the Crown, especially the Irish Attorney-General, would be inconvenienced by having their attention withdrawn from it by a debate in the Commons.—Mr. WYSE said his motion was related to a question of fact rather than of law, and as he had already postponed it, he was unwilling to risk any further delay.—Sir R. PEEL professed his willingness to give up a Government night, if necessary, for the discussion of the motion, after the writ of error had been decided.—Mr. WYSE then said he would postpone the motion, if he received a distinct assurance of aid in bringing it on afterwards.

Mr. VILLIERS then brought forward his motion for a repeal of the corn laws, in a speech of more than three hours' duration. The hon. member concluded by moving—"That the house be resolved itself into a committee for the purpose of considering the following resolutions:—That it appears by a recent census that the people of this country are rapidly increasing in number. That it is in evidence before this house, that a large proportion of her Majesty's subjects are insufficiently provided with the first necessaries of life. That, nevertheless, a corn law is in force which restricts the supply of food, and thereby lessens its abundance. That any such restrictions are hurtful for its object to impede the free purchase of an article upon which depends the subsistence of the community, is indefensible in principle, injurious in operation, and ought to be abolished. That it is therefore expedient to repeal the 6 Geo. c. 14, shall be repealed forthwith."—Mr. FERRAND moved as an amendment, "That the house do resolve itself into a committee for the purpose of considering the following resolutions:—That it appears by a recent census that the people of this country are rapidly increasing in number. That it is in evidence before this house, that a large proportion of her Majesty's subjects are insufficiently provided with the means of purchasing the first necessaries of life. That although a corn law is in force, which protects the supply of food produced by British capital and industry, and thereby increases its abundance, whilst it lessens competition in the market of labour, nevertheless every hon. or every hon. or every hon. or

THE LATE MASSACRE AT WAIRAU, NEW ZEALAND.

By the courtesy of a subscriber we are enabled to present to our readers the annexed portraits of the two chiefs who took the most prominent part in the late Massacre at Wairau. They bear the names of Rauparaha and Rangihaeata; the former one of the most influential, the latter one of the most ferocious of the chiefs of New Zealand. Rauparaha is a Kafia chief; his eyes are very bright, and are expressive of great cunning: he, and not Rangihaeata, wears the peacock's feather in his hair, this being an overnight of the engraver of the illustration. Rangihaeata is termed by our obliging correspondent "Rauparaha's fighting general." Both portraits have been copied from drawings forwarded by Mr. J. Greaves, of Nelson, New Zealand.

RAUPARAHA KAFIA CHIEF.

The horrible details of the Massacre have already been quoted in our journal. Of the principal actors in the tragedy we annex a few particulars from the New Zealand Gazette, appended to a letter addressed to the Right Hon. the Earl of Devon, by Mr. R. Stokes, of Wellington, New Zealand just published:—

"Both chiefs signed the treaty of Waitangi, by which their sovereign rights were surrendered to the Queen of Great Britain. Their tribe has resided latterly at Porirua, and the neighbourhood about twelve miles N.W. of Wellington. There they have resisted all attempts of the settlers to occupy the land professed to have been purchased of the natives by the New Zealand Company, and have occasionally made aggressions upon the settlers on the Hutt, and driven them from their clearings.

"Upwards of a year ago, Rangihaeata attacked some settlers who rented land near Porirua, destroyed their houses, and drove them off. Applications were made to the police-magistrate at Wellington, who refused to interfere. At the subsequent assizes an indictment was found against Rangihaeata for the offence, and a bench-warrant for his apprehension applied for. This the Chief Justice refused, alleging that it lay in the discretion of the Court. Whether, after an indictment found, the granting of a bench-warrant is discretionary with the Court, or a matter of right on the part of the prosecutor, we shall not stop to inquire. Rangihaeata remained at large, and the next thing heard of him is the part he took in the massacre at Wairau. It is the common opinion that if the first aggressions had been met with firmness, and punished with a reasonable and lawful severity, they would not have been repeated. The natives reasonably avoided evidence, the broad defence shown to them by the authorities, and the impunity extended to all their criminal acts, have encouraged them in the belief that the Government is either unwilling or unable to control them, and has led them on to the commission of excesses which have nearly ruined the settlers, and terminated in the massacre. From the temper they have manifested since that event, it is to be feared that harsh measures must be resorted to, before they will pay obedience to the law.

RANGIHAEATA—"FIGHTING GENERAL."

"In addition to the lands claimed by Rauparaha and his tribe in the Northern Island, they laid claim also to a portion of the Southern Island, extending inward from Cloudy Bay, and including the Wairau plains. These plains had been professedly purchased by the New Zealand Company, and were being surveyed as a part of the Nelson Settlement by its surveyors. Rauparaha and Rangihaeata had, some time since, threatened to prevent their occupation, and an arrangement had been made by them to meet one of the land commissioners (Mr. Spain) upon the spot, nominally with the view to the adjustment of the matter. Before the time appointed (as it is said) they went over from Porirua to Cloudy Bay in a schooner belonging to Mr. Toms of the former place, who himself accompanied them."

The Prince de Joinville has done Captain W. H. Hall, of her Majesty's yacht Victoria and Albert, the honour to address to him a very highly complimentary, wherein he has expressed the high gratification he has received from the perusal of his book, the "Voyages, &c., of the Nemesis" and much extols her various exploits in China; he concludes with requesting Captain Hall's acceptance (as a small token of his esteem) of a brace of pistols. The pistols are of a most elaborate manufacture, and most highly finished twelve-inch barrels, half-stocked with ebony inlaid with silver, and were contained in a most superb rosewood case inlaid with silver. The value is said to be £100.

Her Majesty's ship Queen, 110, Captain Sir Charles Sullivan, Bart., arrived on Tuesday at Spithead, from Lisbon, after a long passage of twelve days. When she left, a French brig of 16 guns was the only man of war of any nation in the Tagus. The Queen has brought home a large quantity of the Xanthus marbles. She will be paid off, all standing, to be ready for being re-commissioned.

THE THAMES REGATTA.

THAMES GRAND REGATTA.

The matches of Thursday, the first of the "three glorious days," were reported in our journal of last week.

Friday morning opened propitiously, giving promise of a most delightful day: the sun shone resplendently, and all was bustle and animation at Putney. At as early an hour as two o'clock the various steamers, omnibuses, and other conveyances, began to discharge their passengers, and at the period the racing commenced everything which could be termed a boat was seen floating towards the scene of action. The Lord Mayor and several Aldermen of London, with the Navigation Committee, were aboard the City state barge, the Maria Wood; and other large boats with awnings, decorated with a liberal supply of streamers, had been moored on the Middlesex side of the river. Lord Castlereagh, the President of the Thames Regatta, and other noblemen and gentlemen, with several ladies, were on board the Queen Victoria, which had been put in requisition for the umpires and the committee. The Bishop of London had given permission to admit respectable company into his extensive and beautiful grounds on the Fulham shore; whilst the Vice-Chancellor of England entertained a numerous and distinguished party, who could command an admirable view of the matches.

At the usual hour the races commenced. The first race, the Amateur Pair Oars, for two silver cups, was won by Messrs. Julius and Dalgleish. The Fifty Sovereigns Prize, for four-oared boats, was won by the Newcastle crew. The Watermen's Sculls, for 50 sovereigns, was won by Newell. The Gold Challenge Cup, eight-oared match, was contested by the Oxford University, Leander, and Cambridge University Clubs, and won by the first-named. The Chelsea crew won the Landsmen Sweepstakes.

Saturday, the third and last day's matches were attended by a very numerous assemblage of persons, amongst whom were many of rank and fashion: after the two or three first heats, the towing-path was almost impassable, and the river was so covered with pleasure-boats and other craft, that the police found much difficulty in keeping the course clear. The first match, the Amateur Four-oared race for the Silver Challenge Cup, first heat, was won by the Leander, by a length and a half; the second heat by the Guys; and the grand heat by the Leander.

The Champion Prize of 100 sovs. First heat was won by the London crew; second heat by the Newcastle crew; and the grand heat by the London crew. Both the leading crews were cheered vociferously on their way and after the race, and the committee presented the Claspers with £20, as second boat, independently of the £50 won by them on the previous day. The Double Sculls Match, by watermen plying above Battersea-bridge, for a prize wherry, was won by Kelly and Powell, of Fulham.

Our engravings represent two picturesque scenes, sketched during the contest.

THAMES REGATTA—PUTNEY BRIDGE

A meeting of the Jockey Club was held on Saturday last, pursuant to adjournment. Present:—Right Hon. G. S. Byng, the Earl of Stradbroke, Stewards; Hon. Colonel Anson, Colonel Peel, Earl of Chesterfield, Earl of Rosslyn, C. C. Greville, Esq., J. V. Shelley, Esq., General Grosvenor, W. S. Stanley, Esq., T. Houldsworth, Esq., J. R. Udney, Esq. This meeting having assembled to consider the question of the horse Leander, and having heard evidence, are fully satisfied that Leander was four years old when he ran for the Derby. They therefore resolve:—1. That Messrs. Litchwald, the owners of Leander, shall be fined 5 sovereigns for entering or running any horse in their own name, or in the name of any other person, at any race where the rules and regulations of the Jockey Club are recognised. 2. That Mr. Ley, whose horse ran second for a Two-yrs-old Stake at Ascot, in 1843, when Leander came in first, is entitled to those stakes. Several of the members who were present at the above meeting attended again on Monday, the 24th, when it was resolved that the evidence should be printed, and that no opinion should at present be expressed as to the trainer in the matter.

ACCIDENT ON THE EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.—On Monday afternoon, an accident occurred on the part of the Eastern Counties Railway, situate near Carlisle-street, Bethnal-green. Some of the luggage trucks were being lowered down an inclined plane, when the chain of the last one broke, and it rolled down and burst through the fence into the roadway. A Mrs. Mullarty, living in Carlisle-street, who happened to be passing at that moment, was knocked down and lacerated by part of the broken fence, which struck her, and being taken to Dr. Pearce, she was found to be rather seriously but not dangerously injured.

LOSS OF LIFE IN THE RIVER LEA.—On Tuesday evening three inquests were holden at the sign of the Five Bells, Bow, Middlesex, before Mr. Baker, the coroner, on the remains of three youths, who were drowned in the river Lea, close to the Eastern Counties Railway. The first case entered on was that of Henry Waldock, a fine youth, of seventeen years of age, and from the evidence adduced it appeared that about eight o'clock on Sunday evening the deceased and his brother went to bathe in the river Lea. The part at which they got in being much deeper than the deceased calculated on, he got out of his depth and was drowned. The next two cases were of a more melancholy character. It appeared that on Monday evening George Samuel Shaw, aged twelve years, and Alfred Fear, aged eleven, the sons of respectable tradesmen in Whitechapel and a third lad, their companion, went out for a walk towards the river Lea, and remained for some time on the banks looking at some fishermen. When about to return home young Shaw slid down the bank to wash his boots, and on leaning forward to reach the water with his hand he overbalanced himself, and fell into the river. His companion (Fear), observing him struggle in the water, courageously jumped to his assistance. Each grasped the other, and clung so fast together, that they perished in each other's arms. The third youth hastened to the Five Bells public-house for assistance, where the drags were procured, but it was an hour and a half before the bodies were found, so that life was quite extinct when they were taken on shore. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death" in each case, but at the same time requested the Coroner would write to the Lea River Company to request they would put up boards to caution youths from going into the water at certain parts, at which they consider dangerous.

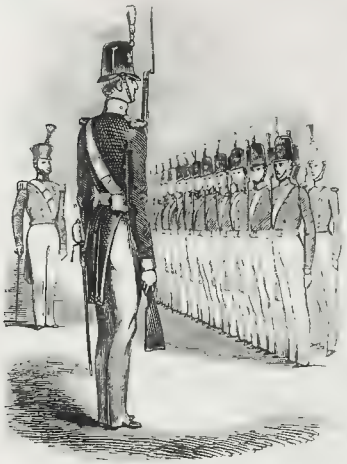
THE ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, WOOLWICH.

Tuesday, the 18th of June, the twenty-ninth anniversary of the most brilliant and decisive victory ever gained by British valour, was appropriately fixed for the half-yearly examination of the Gentlemen Cadets studying at the above National Establishment.

These fine lads, amounting to about one hundred and eighty in number, commanded by Captain R. B. Burnaby, attended the morning parade in front of their Barracks and Halls of Study, in their new appointments, including the Infantry Cap lately introduced, having leather peaks both in front and rear; an improved set of cross and waist-belts, and each Cadet armed with a beautiful and highly finished carbine, weighing less by two pounds and a half those now in progress of supply to the Royal Regiment of Artillery. These miniature muskets are equal, in appearance and careful construction, to the most expensive fowling-piece ever put forth from the establishment of the far-famed Joe Manton.

Our artist has sketched one of the Gentleman Cadets, in his full military costume, in which the whole body appeared on the morning in question. A portion of these are introduced in the back ground of the illustration. How long the present head covering will supersede the chaco, remains to be proved.

Precisely at ten o'clock, the following distinguished officers, including in their number the Board appointed for the examination, appeared on the ground: Lieut.-Gen. Sir F. W. Mulcaster, K.C.H., Inspector General of Fortifications; Major-Gen. Sir G. Whitmore, K.C.H., Lieutenant-Governor of the Academy; Major-General Sir H. D. Ross, Deputy-Adjutant-General of the Royal Artillery; Colonels Cockburn, Paterson, and Lacey, Royal Artillery; Colonel Sir George Hoste, C.B., Royal Engineers; Lieut.-Cols. Dundas, C.B., and Jones; Brigade-Major Cuppage, Royal Artillery; Brigade-Major Sandham, Royal Engineers, Captains Crawford, Stace, Townsend, Savage, and Taylor.



CADETS, IN THE NEW APPOINTMENTS.

Sir Frederick Mulcaster, on approaching the line, was received with due military honours, the salute being executed by the Cadets with a precision worthy of veteran troops. They then marched past the General and his suite in ordinary time, re-formed in line, and went through the manual and platoon exercise in a most soldier-like manner.

PARADE OF CADETS, IN THE STONE COURT.

The officers present being aware that the new carbines had only within a very recent period been brought into use, expressed their astonishment at the perfect manner in which the firing was executed.

Breaking again into column the Cadets marched past in quick time, and on re-forming, General Mulcaster was pleased to express to Captain Burnaby his entire approbation of the various manœuvres the young gentlemen, under his able command and tuition, had performed.

The upper engraving depicts the exterior of the Gothic Dining Hall, with its elegant colonnade. The Cadets are formed in column, Captain Burnaby, attended by a Bugler, occupies the centre, and a group of the General and Staff Officers already enumerated fill the left corner.

Before we proceed to give an account of the most important feature of the day, the Examination, we cannot refrain from remarking the singular bad taste exhibited by Mr. Wyatt in his design and execution of the Royal Military Academy. Long before it was completed, Mr. Hamerhaben, then one of the Professors of Fortification, aptly satirized the outré mixture of a species of Elizabethan building, the towers in the centre of which are crowned with Dutch cupe, by flanking an old-fashioned crust-stand of four castors with two long flat salt-cellars.

It is, however, our pleasing duty to acknowledge that the Dining Hall is a beautiful exception to the misshapen pile in front of it. This noble room is appropriated to the various Examinations that take place, and we have much pleasure in exhibiting to our readers the peculiar appearance it assumed on the important 18th. Before we describe the various details of our engraving, let us speak of the business of the day.

The Mathematical Examination commenced with Analytical Geometry, and was carried as far as Integration; the several questions in the Differential and Integral Calculus were ably answered by those candidates for commissions to whom they were put. The questions in Trigonometry, the theory of Projectiles the properties of Conic Sections, were replied to in the most creditable manner always into due consideration the nervous situation in which the respondents are placed.

Although pure Geometry is certainly of paramount importance in the education of those intended for the Artillery or Engineer services, it so happened that the subject was never touched on.

The Examination in Fortification followed. The Professor of this noble and interesting branch of military science began by questioning upon general principles, and led his pupils by degrees to the highest point. The different systems of fortification, both ancient (if we may apply such a word to those of Vauban, &c.) and modern, including those by Aster, and Chasseloupe de Lanbat, at Alessandria, carried into operation under the immediate superintendence of Napoleon, were descanted on with great judgment and ability. The Attack and Defence of places and posts next followed, succeeded by the different constructions of mines, both offensive and defensive.

The proficiency attained by the candidates in German and French, history and geography, was next ascertained, and this terminated the long and searching investigation, the result being the selection of the following twenty young gentlemen for the honour of commissions in the Royal Regiment of Artillery, and Corps of Royal Engineers, subject, of course, to the approval of the Right Hon. Sir George Murray, G.C.B. and K.C.H., Master General of the Ordnance:

1 A. Cator	6 G. Tidelouth	11. F. W. C. Ord	16. A. E. H. Anson
2. D. L. Lane	7 T. W. Nixon	12. W. F. L. Blosse	17. S. E. Gordon
3 R. D. Kerr	8 H. L. Oxenden	13. W. Hughes	18. W. G. Stubbs
4. J. Y. Meggridge	9. A. T. Blakeney	14. M. B. Forde	19. J. G. Nuthby
5. F. Roe	10. R. E. F. Crauford	15. W. T. Barnett	20. C. N. Lowe.

"The Practical Class" consisting of the young gentlemen named as follows—

1. J. G. Jervois	6. Hon. E. T. Gage	11. C. Wright	16. H. L. F. Greville
2. J. F. L. Travers	7. N. A. Maury	12. G. S. Ivy	17. S. H. P. Seaury
3. H. H. Tyler	8. G. Barstow	13. J. E. Thring	18. R. Stanton
4. J. C. B. De Butts	9. G. Leslie	14. H. Jervis	19. H. Bent
5. Walter S. Stace	10. A. M. Archdall	15. W. M. King	20. F. R. Glanville were next examined by the heads of the different departments, and, with one or two slight exceptions, went through their ordeal most creditably.

The awarding of the well-merited prizes followed next. Mr. Archibald E

THE EXAMINATION IN THE DINING-HALL.

H. Anson, whom we have undoubted authority for stating is a highly accomplished and most finished gentleman, received the sword of honour, in token of his having invariably conducted himself with strict propriety. Mr. St. John, the prize for mathematics in the first class; although only eighteen months a student at the Royal Military Academy, he has at each examination since his arrival, gained a similar distinction. Messrs. Tyler and De Molayne were awarded prizes, for their perfect knowledge of fortification. Mr. Greville, for his proficiency in the French and German languages. Mr. Chesney, for his application to the study of chemistry. Mr. Porter, for the accuracy and finish of his plan drawings. Mr. King, for his correct and beautiful sketches. Some other prizes, in various branches of the pictorial art, were exhibited, Mr. Sweeney proving himself to be a most accomplished artist.

We have wished that the distribution of the various rewards had been rendered somewhat more imposing. The President of the Board dispensed the prizes without an observation as to the good conduct, or application to study, that had entitled the recipient to such a mark of distinction.

The volumes given were generally clothed in showy bindings, but on examining one or two of the sets, afterwards offered for our inspection, the paper and type were of a character bearing a strong resemblance to works furnished by contract.

With the presentation of the last prize the labours of the Board terminated, and the Gentlemen Cadets commenced their vacation, which will terminate upon the 1st of August, when the vacancies, occasioned by the gaining of commissions, will be filled up by the young gentlemen whose names we subjoin :—John Charles Weir, Constantine Lawrence Yeoman, Sidney Reynolds Farrell, Richard Hugh Stothard, Richard Warren, Dudley Thomas Barnard, William Francis Lambert, Charles William Barry, Francis Cornwallis Maude, Reginald Onslow Farmer, Francis Pace, Patrick John Campbell, John De Lotterell Saunderson, Edmund Southey, Spencer Philip John Childers, Charles Augustus Rice, Augustus Jonathan Clerke, George Montagu Stopford, George Milner Etienne Stephen, William Wodeham Augustus Lake, Sandford Fleming Walker Grimston, Charles Edward Oldershaw, William John Mountjoy Hastings, John Morris Savage, John Peel, Charles Henry James, Octavius Yorke Cooke ; they having undergone the necessary examinations as to their qualifications, and afterwards the sanction of the Master-General to commence their studies at the Royal Military Academy.

The next engraving represents the Interior of the Diorama Hall. The walls of this spacious apartment are covered with the drawings already enumerated, and with large black boards used for the impromptu exhibition of any geometrical problem, or diagram, illustrative of the system of fortification, projectiles, &c. &c. The Gentlemen Cadets are seated upon raised benches at each corner. The particular class under examination surround the table the Professor with a wand pointing to the subject under consideration, be it ramped, ditch, screen-way, bastion, curtain, glacis, or whatever he wishes, to ascertain the extent of knowledge on the part of his pupils

SPLENDID ENGRAVING
FOR THE SUBSCRIBERS
TO THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

COMPANION PRINT TO THE COLOSSEUM VIEW OF "LONDON IN 1842."

The Proprietors of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS have great pleasure in announcing the forward preparation of a most Superb Engraving, as a companion to their celebrated large Print, entitled "London in 1842."

In selecting this engraving, they are convinced that the subject chosen, from its paramount interest and attraction, will meet with universal approbation. It will represent a Magnificent

PANORAMA
OF
THE RIVER THAMES,

showing at one view "the Royal towered Thame;" its "Forests of Masts," its crowded Docks and Port; its Fleet of Steamers; its

NOBLE BRIDGES, UNEQUALLED IN THE WORLD;

its busy Wharfs and Quays; and the various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate banks, including

GREENWICH, AND ITS SUPERB PALACE-HOSPITAL;

and exhibiting the winding of the "Silver Thames" through the mighty mass of buildings that form the metropolis of the Commercial World.

Showing as distinctly as in a Map, yet with beautifully picturesque effect, the several

STREETS OF THE METROPOLIS,

with the many hundred Churches, Palaces, Columns, and Arches; Government Offices, and Public Institutions; Club Houses, Noble Mansions, and Palatial Homes; embellished Street Architecture, Terraces, and Villas; Tunnels, Railways; Parks and Public Walks; Factories and Warehouses; and, in short, a perfect Picture of the Vast Extent, Architectural Character, and Most Recent Improvement, of the BANKS OF THIS NOBLE RIVER.

To be Engraved in the

FIRST STYLE OF THE ART,

From a most Elaborate Drawing made expressly for the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS;

And which has occupied the Artists for several months, so that the strictest reliance may be placed on its accuracy.

The entire length of the PRINT will be

UPWARDS OF EIGHT FEET!

but it is impossible to enumerate one tenth of the objects.

The interest of the subject cannot be surpassed, and the highest talent is employed in its execution.

☞ Further announcements of this Magnificent Print will be duly given.

195, STRAND, April 18, 1844.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 30.—Fourth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, July 1.—Battle of the Boyne, 1690.
TUESDAY, 2.—Visitation B. V. Mary.
WEDNESDAY, 3.—Dog Days begin.
THURSDAY, 4.—Trans. St. Martin.
FRIDAY, 5.—Sovereigns first issued, 1817.
SATURDAY, 6.—Old Midsummer Day.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending July 6.

Monday		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M. h.	A. h.	M. h.	A. h.	M. h.	A. h.	M. h.	A. h.	M. h.	A. h.	M. h.	A. h.
3 24	3 51	4 14	4 39	5 1	5 25	5 46	6 5	6 28	6 49	7 6	7 31

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The Correspondent who sends us the account of the murder of a wife by her husband, at Gresford, in North Wales should have also sent us the names of the parties. This, to newspaper readers, is a very important ingredient in the narrative.

"Tar!" Our correspondent overlooks the great cause of complaint—that the privilege was used not to attack a point against the State, or any design against the Government, but to aid and assist a foreign power. The right to open letters exists for our own protection, not to assist other States, in whose disputes with their subjects we are not involved. The other case put by our correspondent—that of detecting a felony by opening a letter—would be admitted as a practice without the most imminent danger. The general shock it would give to public confidence would be a greater evil than the advantage of detecting individual cases of crime would be a good.

"B. B.;" Boscastle, should consult some experienced Chancery lawyer.

"I. L."—The title of "Esquire" to these lines is a matter of courtesy; formerly it was applied to persons possessed of £300 a-year, and landed property.

"P. and W.," Downpatrick.—The interval depends upon circumstances. Address "House of Commons."

"W. R. H.," Macclesfield.—In each case the player counts.

"Three Inquirers."—A normal school is an establishment for teaching or training instructors.

"R. D.," Settle.—Carriers cannot legally convey passengers, unless duly licensed.

"J. W. G. C." should apply to the Clerk of the Peace for the County of Salop, and the Overseers for the Boroughs.

Φιλομαθης.—The authoress of the Haymarket Prize Comedy is Mrs. Gore, the novelist.

"E. B.," Kidderminster.—Declined.

"A Constant Reader," Belper.—Vince's Astronomical Tables.

"T. T."—The house will only be assessed as a place for business purposes, and will be exempt from many taxes.

"Juvenis W."—The first No. of Vol. V. of our journal will be published on July 6. The price of Vols. II., III., and IV. is 18s.; Vol. I., one guinea.

"A Regular Reader and Subscriber."—The subjects are on hand.

"C. D. K."—"Why is this?"

"W. B."—Dewlish, should send his name, or we cannot forward the paper. A quarter must be paid in advance.

"J. H.," Leicester, will be entitled to the print.

"E. M." Kirby, can claim the property.

"A Subscriber," Congleton.—See future announcements.

"Mejornus," Reading.—The apparatus may be purchased at toy-shops or philosophical instrument makers.

"Elias," Milford Haven," should write to Messrs. Fisher and Co. as to the completion of the work in question.

"American." Yes.

"T. G.," Cheltenham, should apply to any news-agent in that town.

"J. P.," Swaffham.—The plan will not suit.

"T. and W. P.," Hull.—We have not room.

"A Subscriber from the First," Dublin.—Mr. Miles's motion on the Sugar Duties was to lower the duty on West India sugar, which would have the effect of increasing the protection of colonial produce.

"F. H.," Gosport, will be entitled to the new print. The Print of London in 1842 may still be had.

The report of the Tailors' Anniversary reached us too late.

"Omega," East Retford.—Rabbits are not game.

"E. R.," a Liverpool Subscriber.—The Index to Vol. IV. will be published next week. We do not understand your correspondent's first question.

"An Admirer and Subscriber," should visit the Metropolis in the season—from February to August.

We have not room for "The Coachman's Lament!" and "The Venerable to his College Cap and Gown."

Several correspondents not answered this week will be replied to in our next.

"Constans Amator."—The bishop must be placed on a white square.

"An Indian Subscriber."—We shall be glad to accept the solutions to the problems received.

 Next week we shall present to our readers A SUPPLEMENT, Gratis.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1844.

THE storm raised by the Secretary of State, in the affair of the letter opening, is one not likely to subside very soon; it has been revived this week in both Houses of Parliament, and even now we question if the Government has heard the last of it. On Monday Mr. Duncombe came before the House with a petition from another subject of the espionage of the Home-office—a Captain Stolzman, one of the correspondents of M. Mazzini; and at the same time that he presented the petition he moved for a committee of inquiry into the transaction, in order to arrive at some knowledge of what the intention of the Home-office could be; but the mystery of iniquity it appeared to be hunting after, remains a mystery still, and the plot—if there is one—is not the "plot discovered." What Sir J. Graham was seeking, and what he found, are alike unknown, and all explanation is decidedly, even obstinately refused. Questions are useless, and though the Right Hon. Baronet expresses "a keen desire to stand well in the opinion of his fellow countrymen," he does not seem disposed to purchase that opinion by stating any of the facts that might justify him, and tend to remove the stains that are sinking deep into his official character. He shrouds himself in his "official responsibility," a veil that the public can never penetrate, and which has ere now concealed official crimes of darker die even than the breaking of seals and rifling letters. But, however the Government may persist in refusing any explanation, the public will come to its conclusions just the same, and the general opinion seems to be settled, that the power, if used at all, should be reserved for extraordinary occasions; that our domestic affairs did not require any such violation of public faith; and that such a power should have been used for the advantage of a foreign state, gives the last and worst stamp to the whole transaction. What can be more humiliating than to hear extracts from the Milan Gazette quoted in the House of Commons, which are neither more nor less than the congratulations of the Italian Government on the fact, that, though the English police, a vigilant eye is kept on those who are beyond the reach of fine and imprisonment for opinion? The whole thing has a meanness and trickery about it that make it contemptible; unfortunately the dangerous nature of the practice makes it impossible to pass it over in that silence by which the feeling of contempt is most emphatically expressed. The House of Commons on Monday pronounced a very strong opinion on the matter, after a debate of damaging effect on the Government; in a very numerous House, the majority that pulled the Home Secretary through the difficulty was only 44, and the immense minority, whose vote was virtually one of censure, presents a mass of opinion—the very reverse of flattering—that demands no ordinary degree of courage to stand against. But Sir James Graham is a bold man; we belive that no one but himself would dare provoke such an amount of obloquy in the first place, or venture to carry it out afterwards.

The House of Lords had the subject brought before them on Tuesday, by Earl Radnor. The facts and arguments adduced were of course much the same as in the Commons, with this difference, that the members of the Government in the Upper House threw the whole blame on Sir J. Graham, stating that they had had nothing whatever to do with it. The Duke of Wellington "had no knowledge whatever on the subject," and the Earl of Haddington "knew just as little of the matter as the noble lord who raised the question." They both asserted that the Home Secretary has the power (which no one denies), and that probably he had reasons for what he did (which no one doubts); but the question is, what reasons? This is precisely the dark point that wants a little light thrown on it; but the Government will in no way assist in the illumination.

Their lordships did not divide; had they done so, they would, in all probability, have committed themselves to a recorded defence of Sir James Graham; they ought to be obliged to Earl Radnor for saving them the reproach by withdrawing his motion. Indeed, the discussion itself was sufficient; there never was a debate, the tone of which was so strongly condemnatory.

There is that in the following language of Lord Denman which every English heart will respond to, and with it we leave the question, hoping that even the boldness in ill-doing possessed by Sir J. Graham will not, in the face of the language used in both Houses of Parliament, very soon venture on a repetition of the act, visited by such words as these :—

> The power appeared to exist without the slightest responsibility, and in such a manner, that he did not think the King in Parliament or the English people would any longer endure. He did not consider this a question of expediency or inexpediency, but a question of right and wrong. He should no more believe it necessary to show that it was wrong for this power to exist in the person of one individual than he should think it necessary to contend that it was wrong to pick a pocket. Formerly, there was an inconsistency in human nature, which prevented people who did possess and exercise hateful powers, acting consistently with themselves upon other occasions; and a high and dignified character of integrity became a cloaking a power to the extent to which it was now supposed to have been abused. But undoubtedly it never could be exercised without great pain to any honourable mind called upon to exercise it. But, then, beyond the possession of it, the acting upon it, and the using of it, there were circumstances of concealment, and something very like forgery. These things had a tendency to demoralise the public mind. It was well known that many of the subordinate officers and servants of the Post-office unfortunately were too much in the habit of overlooking the obligations which honesty ought to impose upon them; and he could not think that the knowledge that the great heads of that department, and persons of superior positions, used such a power, would be any check upon the improper and dishonest desires of such persons when letters were intrusted to their care.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

On Sunday, the Queen and Prince Albert, the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Royal suite and the Household, attended divine service in the Chapel Royal, Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated.

The Queen and Prince Albert walked on Monday morning in the Royal gardens. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness took an airing in a carriage in the afternoon. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Sir Edward Bowater, visited the old chapel in the Savoy, near the Strand. After inspecting the sacred edifice, the Prince took his departure, and returned to Buckingham Palace at two o'clock. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice, were taken an airing in the parks during the day, in an open carriage and four. The Royal dinner party, at Buckingham Palace, in the evening, included the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, the Duke and Duchess of Buckingham, the Earl of Ripon, Lord Brougham, Lord and Lady Colville, and Mr. Hallam.

On Tuesday, his Royal Highness Prince Albert presided at a meeting of the Commission for promoting and encouraging the fine arts in the rebuilding the Palace of Westminster. The Commissioners present were the Duke of Sutherland, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Lord Colborne, Mr. Henry Gally Knight, Mr. C. Hawes, M.P., Mr. Henry Hallam, Mr. Thomas Wyse, Lord Mahon, and the Right Hon. T. B. Macaulay. The meeting broke up at four o'clock. Prince Albert afterwards proceeded to Westminster-hall, accompanied by the other Commissioners, to inspect the sculptures and fresco paintings. The following had the honour of dining with the Queen on Tuesday evening, at Buckingham Palace :—The Duke of Richmond and the Lady Caroline Gordon Lennox, Viscount Melbourne, the Bishop of Norwich, Viscount and Viscountess Mahon, Lord and Lady Bloomfield, Lord and Lady Seaforth, and Mr. Rogers.

On Wednesday forenoon, the Queen and Prince Albert walked in the Royal gardens at Buckingham Palace. His Royal Highness afterwards went to the Mint of the Royal Family of Cornwall, in Somerset House. The Royal dinner party at Buckingham Palace, in the evening, included the Portuguese Minister and the Baroness de Moncorvo, the Duke and Duchess of Argyll, the Marquis of Lorne, the Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl and Countess of Rosebery, Lord John Russell, and Mr. Fraser Tytler.

The Queen and Prince Albert walked, in the forenoon on Thursday, in the gardens of Buckingham Palace. The Prince, attended by Mr. Anson and Sir E. Bowater, left the Palace at half-past two, in a landau and four, for Wanstead, to honour with his presence the anniversary of the Infant Orphan Asylum. On leaving Wanstead, the Prince proceeded to the new Royal Exchange, where his Royal Highness alighted, and inspected the interior of the building. The Prince also viewed the equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington. His Royal Highness returned to the Palace at half-past six.

THE MARQUIS AND MARCHIONESS OF LONDONDERRY'S GRAND PARTY.—The Marquis of Londonderry gave a princely banquet at Holderness House, Park-lane, on Monday last, to the officers of the 2nd Regiment of Life Guards, of which regiment the noble marquis is colonel, an entertainment which was succeeded by an assembly held by the marchioness. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, who honoured the noble and gallant host by his company at dinner, arrived shortly before eight o'clock, at which hour all the guests invited to the banquet had arrived. Covers were laid for 50 personages. A splendid service of silver was used on the occasion, and for the dessert a costly service of foreign porcelain graced the festive board of the noble marquis and marchioness. At half-past ten the circle broke up, and the marchioness afterwards held an assembly, at which upwards of 1000 personages of rank and distinction were present.

A Cabinet Council was held at two o'clock on Monday afternoon, at the Foreign-office. It was attended by Sir R. Peel, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Wharncliffe, the Duke of Buccleuch, Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Stanley, Sir J. Graham, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Earl of Haddington, Earl of Ripon, Mr. Gladstone, Sir E. Knatchbull, and Lord G. Somerset. The Council sat two hours.

ANNIVERSARY OF HER MAJESTY'S CORONATION.—Yesterday (Friday) being the sixth anniversary of the coronation of her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, it was observed as a holiday at the Stamp-office, Excise, Custom-house, the St. Katherine's, London, West, and East India Docks; and at the different Government dock-yards of Deptford, Woolwich, Chatham, Sheerness, Portsmouth, Plymouth, and Pembroke. The morning, as usual, was ushered in by the ringing of a merry peal at the various metropolitan churches; the royal standard was hoisted at the Tower, the Monument, Somerset-house, the Italian Opera, St. Martin's, St. Giles's, St. Margaret's, and the customary public edifices; and at one o'clock a royal salute was fired in St. James's-park, the Tower, Woolwich, Tilbury-fort, &c.

THE KING OF SAXONY.

On Saturday last the King of Saxony, accompanied by his Excellency the Baron Canitz-and-Dallwitz, and suite, passed through Derby by railway to Chesterfield, by the one o'clock train, on a tour of a few days in the northern part of the county. They were received at the station by William Lesper Newton, Esq., one of the directors of the Midland Railway Company. On arriving at Chesterfield, the party partook of refreshment at the Angel Inn, and immediately proceeded on to Hardwicke Hall, which they inspected, and then returned to Chesterfield, and on to the Rutland Arms Inn, Bakewell, where they remained the night.

On Sunday the King and his suite attended service at the Earl of Newburgh's chapel, and afterwards visited Chatsworth, spending seven hours in an inspection of the Duke of Devonshire's celebrated conservatory. They then proceeded to Haddon Hall, and, having viewed that beautiful and unique structure, an engraving of which will be found in No. 13 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, returned to the Rutland Arms, at Bakewell, where they passed the night.

On Monday the King of Saxony visited Buxton and afterwards Castleton, and went through the Caverns, and minutely inspected the wonders of that extraordinary locality. He afterwards, with his suite, returned to Bakewell, which he passed through about half-past six o'clock in the evening, and proceeded on to Matlock, stopping at the Old Bath Hotel.

On Tuesday the King visited the Museums at Matlock Bath. His Majesty and suite arrived at the Royal Old Bath Hotel for dinner, and remained during the night.

On Wednesday morning his Majesty took an early walk to inspect the beauties of this romantic valley, which he greatly admired, then paid a visit to the old Museum. Here the inlaid tables, or "Pietra dura," generally attracted attention, as well as the spars, the peculiar production of this county. At nine o'clock precisely his Majesty took his departure for Derby, on his general tour.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL.—The annual entertainment in aid of the funds of this excellent institution was celebrated on Wednesday at the Freemason's Tavern, when a numerous party of the friends and supporters of the institution sat down to a well-served and well-cooked dinner. The chair was taken by Lord Sandon, who was supported by Dr. Lonsdale, the Bishop of Oxford, and upwards of one hundred gentlemen who are connected with the King's College Hospital.

THE PAVING OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—On Tuesday a Court of Sewers was held at Guildhall, Mr. Alderman Gibbs in the chair, when, after a long discussion, it was carried by a large majority, that the entire space from the end of Cornhill to the east end of the Royal Exchange, including the open space facing the west end, taking in the Wellington statue, should be paved with flag-stones. £1700 was immediately voted out of the consolidated fund for that purpose, and that the pavement should be laid down under the joint superintendence of Mr. Smith and Mr. Kelsey, the surveyors of the commissioners.

COUNSEL TO THE IRISH GOVERNMENT.—The office of Counsel in London to the Irish Government has recently become vacant, in consequence of the secession of Mr. O'Hanlon, its late possessor, who was killed by swallowing a fish bone at dinner. The Government has declared its intention of conferring the situation upon an Irishman, called to the English bar, and resident in London. We understand that this limitation has considerably diminished the number of candidates for the vacant appointment; and that out of this number Mr. Perceval Banks, of Gray's Inn, who in 1838 published a very able pamphlet on the subject of controverted elections, and who is well known in the republic of letters, is considered to stand the best chance of success. Though decidedly a Tory in politics, he has had the good fortune to conciliate the friendly feelings of his political opponents; and no appointment as better calculated to please all parties in Ireland than that of an individual who, like Mr. Banks, never allows his political feelings to interfere with his duties as a courteous gentleman. We are glad to perceive that the London daily papers concur in extolling Mr. Banks's nomination.

NEW INFANT ORPHAN ASYLUM.—On Thursday the anniversary of opening a New Infant Orphan Asylum took place at Wanstead, where the building is situated. The institution is founded for the reception of fatherless children from all parts of the empire, especially such as are respectably descended. It will receive the orphan from the earliest period of infancy, and maintains it to the completion of its eighth year, when it is sent to such an asylum as Christ's Hospital, or the London Orphan Asylum. Infants only six weeks old, both fatherless and motherless, have been received into the Asylum, which has now amongst its inmates the orphans of Admirals, Generals in the army and navy, members of the medical profession, &c. There are now 200 children in the establishment, and there is ample space for 200 more. Much interest was excited in consequence of his Royal Highness Prince Albert having expressed his intention to be present on the occasion. The Prince kept his promise and much delighted a brilliant company, by arriving about two o'clock with Colonel Anson and Sir George Berkeley, Equerry. The proceedings of the day commenced by an inspection of the building; after which, an examination of the elder children took place. The company then paraded the grounds; and his Royal Highness inspected every part of the property, expressing himself highly delighted at the extreme comfort, cleanliness, and order displayed, and the healthy, salubrious position of the establishment. His Royal Highness was loudly cheered on his departure. The arrival and departure of company was much facilitated by the kindness of the Directors of the Northern and Eastern Railway, who arranged that all the trains running that day should stop at the Lea Bridge station, both to and from London. A large party partook of a splendid dejeuner, provided by Messrs. Staples, of the Albion Hotel. Prince Albert left solid proofs of his regard for the Institution, and consented to become its Patron.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE DUKEDOM OF SUSSEX.—Their lordships sat on Tuesday in a Committee for Privileges, for the purpose of further considering the claim of Sir Augustus D'Este to the Dukedom of Sussex. The Judges were also in attendance. Counsel being called in, Sir T. Wilde proceeded to call the following witnesses :—Augusta Emma Lyle, the sister of the claimant, proved the death of her mother, and the finding of various correspondence, after that event, between the Duke of Sussex and her mother. She also proved and produced the prayer-book by which Mr. Gunn married her mother to the Prince. The marriage took p ace at Rome.—Lady Virginia Murray: Was the daughter of the Earl of Dunmore, and sister of the mother of the last witness. His late Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex visited their family when at Rome, and paid great attention to her sister. Heard of their marriage at Florence. Recollects her sister being confined in Lower Berkeley-street. The present claimant was the child that was then born. The late Duke of Sussex and Lady Augusta lived together as man and wife. The claimant was called the little Prince, or Prince Augustus, and the claimant's sister was called the Princess Augusta.—The Right Hon. Dr. Lushington was then called, and stated that he was very well acquainted with the late Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex. He constantly conversed with witness on matters upon which he took a deep interest, and several times on the subject of his marriage. The particular period at which he conversed was when his Royal Highness was at Falconne, about 1825, 1826, or 1827. His Royal Highness took witness into his private apartments, and detailed the facts of his marriage. The conversation lasted four hours.—Mr. Erle: Did he state the name of his wife?—Lord Campbell objected to the evidence altogether, on the ground that there might be some in mobia.—Their lordships, after some discussion, decided on rejecting the evidence, and Dr. Lushington stated that as Sir Robert Inglis had called that reverend gentleman, he would be considered in that country as valid, the children legitimate, and any property they might have would descend to their children; and such marriage would not be subject to ecclesiastical censure. The witness then proceeded at considerable length to state the effect of the Council of Trent with respect to marriages in the Holy See, in the course of which he referred to several eminent text writers, which caused some discussion as to what the witness could refer to them in evidence; or, in fact, whether his evidence could be further proceeded with.—Sir T. Wilde and Mr. Erle submitted that the witness was a competent one.—After examining Dr. Wiseman as to what his jurisdiction was as cardinal archbishop in this country, the Attorney-General then addressed their lordships, and the committee decided in favour of the admissibility of the evidence.—The examination of the witness was then resumed: If the marriage was brought before any of the Roman tribunals the marriage would be considered legal, and the children would inherit. It is the opinion of theologians and lawyers that where Protestants had married according to their own form, even where the Council of Trent has been promulgated, are married. Pope Benedict XIV. issued a bull declaring the validity of such marriages, and stating his reasons for declaring that such marriages had always been legal.—Has anything been done to convince the clergy of the contrary since the decree?—Witness: There has not.—The Solicitor-General: Have you ever known a case where the validity of a marriage between two Protestants, before solemnized in this country,

HENLEY REGATTA—EIGHT-OAR'D MATCH.

HENLEY REGATTA.—TUESDAY.

Of all the towns in England there is not one to which, as regards a flourishing regatta, Henley ought to yield the palm of pre-eminence. Placed in the midst of scenery the most delightful, with a beautiful reach of water, admirably calculated for such sport, and with a population of whom the majority are almost daily indulging in the manly and scientific exercise of rowing, it can form no matter of surprise that this annual event should constitute one of the chief attractions of the season.

"The Diamond Sculls," and the other scullers' contests were, as an encouragement to rowing, open to all grades within five miles of Henley, the award of victory being a coat and silver badge. These, with the four-oared race for the Silver Challenge Cup, formed the amusements of the day.

The morning was fine, and about the time the sports commenced, the bridge was covered with handsome equipages, and hundreds of fashionably dressed persons had congregated on the stands erected for visitors on the towing-path, and in the meadows on the Berks shore. In the grand stand we observed Lord Camoys, the Earl of Falmouth, Sir George and Lady Napier, Lady Dungarvon, Lady Caroline Pechell, Sir E. C. East, Sir H Lambert, Major and Miss Cowper, W. S. Freeman, Esq., J. Pane, Esq., and others of the nobility and gentry.

The races commenced at half-past two, each contest being from the island, against the stream, up to Henley-bridge, a distance of about a mile and a third.

The Diamond Sculls, a Presentation Prize for Gentlemen Amateurs only.

First Heat.

Mr. Conant, St. John's College, Oxford	Purple	1
Mr. E. S Kennedy, Sculers' Club, London	Green	2

Won by two or three lengths.

Second Heat.

Mr. T. B. Bumpstead, the Leander Club	Pink	1
Mr. E. G. Peacock, the Scullers' Club	Green	2

Won by five or six lengths.

Third Heat.

Mr. A. A. Julius, the Leander Club	Green	1
Mr. J. Innes Pocock, Oxford Aquatic Club ..	Purple	2

It was a very hollow race. Mr. Julius drew ahead and kept it, winning easily.

Fourth Heat.

Mr. Morgan, Christchurch, Oxford	Purple	1
Mr. A. Ive, Dreadnought Club, Henley	Green	2

Won with the most perfect ease.

The Stewards' Challenge Club.

Open to gentlemen's crews established at least a twelvemonth previous to the time of entry.

The Royal Academy boat, which had been entered for this race, was withdrawn. The St. George's Boat Club, who are the holders, of course, did not contend in the trial heat.

Oxford University Boat Club—	Oxford Subscription Rooms, London—
Purple.	White.

The University boat was the favourite at some odds, and the race was anxiously looked for. They made a very excellent start, and were oar and oar for a few seconds, when the University boat gradually shot away, and although their opponents rowed in a very plucky manner, they were unable to overtake them. The University won by three lengths.

WEDNESDAY.

The racing on Wednesday was of a very superior description, indeed it surpassed that of former years. The attendance, too, was first-rate, including the nobility and gentry residing in the district, with hundreds from various towns in the neighbourhood. The proprietor of Phyllis Court and Gardens had handsomely given permission to the stewards to issue tickets for company on his grounds, and a brilliant assemblage, consisting chiefly of ladies, availed themselves of the polite offer, while the shore on the other side and the bridge could boast of many handsome equipages. The sports commenced with,

The Town Challenge Cup.

The Aquatic Boat Club, Henley, Light Blue.

The Albion Boat Club, Henley.

A gallant race succeeded a fine start The Albion, who had the Berks shore, appeared to lead by a trifle for a few seconds when they became oar and oar. The Aquatic then drew slowly away from their opponents, but were again pressed hard by the Albion, who kept them at great labour the whole way and shortened the trifling distance between them at coming in. The Aquatic won by a length only amidst the most vociferous cheering.

The Diamond Sculls.—A Presentation Prize for Gentlemen Amateurs.

In the trial heats of the preceding day, there were four races, and necessarily a corresponding number of winners. Mr. Julius, of the Scullers' Club, who had defeated Mr. J. J. Pocock, of the Oxford Aquatic Club, however declined the contest, and the race was left to the other three gentlemen.

Mr. T. B. Bumpstead, Leander Club	Pink	1
Mr. Morgan, Christchurch, Oxford	Green	2
Mr. Conant, St. John's, Oxford	Purple	3

This was the greatest sculling contest that has been witnessed for a great length of time. Mr. Morgan had the Berks shore, and on the signal being given, the whole three started away at the instant. Mr. Morgan then had a trifling lead, but Mr. Bumpstead was soon alongside of him, and for a few strokes they were again abreast of each other. Mr. Morgan again drew a trifle in advance, but his opponent was in a moment abreast of him, and then led slightly. Alternately the gentlemen led, until both became exhausted, and Mr. Morgan fouling his skul as he neared the bridge, did not appear to have power enough to replace it, and Mr. Bumpstead, who was almost level with him, by a last effort contrived to run into the first place, and won by three quarters of a length only. It is almost unnecessary to add that both were much distressed.

The Stewards' Challenge Cup, for Gentlemen in Four-oared Boats.

The University Boat Club—	The St. George's Boat Club—
Purple.	White with Red Cross.

The St. George's Club were the holders, but despite the most plucky effort were unable to retain possession of the honorary distinction; for a few strokes only the crews were together, but the pulling on either hand was beautiful. The University boat gradually then went in advance, and won by nearly two lengths.

The District Challenge Cup.

The Windsor and Eton Boat Club—Light Blue.

The Britannia Club, Reading—Pink and White.

Throughout this was a closely contested race, in which it was difficult to determine which was the better crew. After rowing half the distance oar and oar, the Windsor men contrived to get the lead, and won by a length.

The Grand Challenge Cup for eight oared boats, Gentlemen Amateurs.

The Oxford University, as the winners of last year, were the holders of the cup on the present occasion, but their claims were withdrawn, as we understand there were many gentlemen rowing in the Eton boat, which belonged to the other Oxford crew, added to which the period fixed for this regatta, we believe, was somewhat inconvenient to many of the Oxonians who wished to leave town.

The Etona, Oxford—Light Blue.

The Caius College, Oxford—Blue and White.

The Etona Club, Oxford, won by a length and a half only.

The grand heat of the Henley Coat and Badge was then rowed, and won with the most perfect ease by William Stone, purple.

GRAND REVIEW, PHŒNIX PARK, DUBLIN.

GRAND REVIEW IN THE PHŒNIX PARK, DUBLIN.

On the 18th instant, a review of the troops composing the garrison of Dublin took place in the Fifteen Acres, Phœnix-park. The following regiments were in the field, the number of men being about 4000 or 5000:—Royal Artillery, 3d Dragoon Guards, 1st Royals, 11th Hussars, Royal Sappers and Miners, and the 5th, 10th, 24th, 34th, and 36th Regiments of Foot.

His Excellency Earl de Grey, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was to have been present, but was prevented from the recent death of the brother of the Countess de Grey. The troops were commanded by the Right Honourable Sir E. Blakeney, commander-in-chief of the forces in Ireland, who arrived on the ground with his staff at about half-past two P.M. The troops first marched past, and the cavalry at a trot and gallop, after which various evolutions were performed.

The accompanying sketch is taken at the moment when the infantry have formed an "echelon of squares," for a supposed attack of the enemy's cavalry, the artillery being in action on the right and left; thus bringing to the recollection of the lookers on, the numerous instances in which this mode of defence was adopted by the British army against the attacks of the French cavalry, on the memorable field of Waterloo. Notwithstanding that the day was showery and rather unfavourable, thousands of spectators were present.

HISTORY OF WOOD-ENGRAVING.

(Continued from page 405.)

Before concluding this portion of our paper it may not be unnecessary to add a few remarks on the state of wood-engraving in other countries. In France, Papillon, who died in 1776, left no successor of talent to advance wood-engraving beyond the state in which he left it; and the art remained neglected in that country for many years after the works of Bewick and others had recalled attention to it in England. Within the last twelve years however, wood-engraving has advanced greatly in public estimation, and has been very extensively and successfully cultivated in France, though when the principal of the French works illustrated with wood-cuts were commenced, the Parisian publishers were obliged to avail themselves of the skill of English engravers to execute them. The number of French wood-engravers, however, who have since attained to a very high degree of skill in their profession, have rendered the French publishers comparatively independent of English aid, though a considerable number of wood-cuts from the designs of French artists and for French works are still executed in this country. The best of the cuts, whether executed by French wood-engravers, or by English wood-engravers on French account, are to be found in the large octavo editions of, "Paul and Virginia" and "Fontaine's Fables."

Many of those cuts are excellent, both in design and execution; but in many more a great deal of labour has been wasted in the execution of minute cross-hatchings, which, so far from improving the subject, either in contributing to give effect, or in expressing character, have made the cut look like a piece of net-work. It would, indeed, seem that some of the best of the French designers on wood have got an idea that a cut was excellent in proportion to the quantity of work it contained.

SPECIMEN OF WOOD-ENGRAVING—THE PROPHET JEREMIAH, FROM THE PAINTING BY MICHAEL ANGELO, IN THE SISTINE CHAPEL, AT ROME.

About the time of Papillon's death, wood-engraving was in a more depressed state in Germany than in France. Almost the only German wood-engraver of the time was a person named Ungher, who appears to have been chiefly employed in engraving tasteless ornaments for books. He, however, appears to have paid some attention to the history and former practice of the art, for in 1779 he published a tract, illustrated with five cuts, in which he discusses the question "whether Albert Durer engraved on wood," and gives his own conclusion in the negative. In the same year his son, who was also a wood-engraver, published a dissertation, illustrated with cuts, on the progress of wood-engraving in Brandenburg. The Ungers, father and son, also executed several chiaro-scuros on wood. About five-and-thirty years ago a German wood-engraver, of the name of Gubitz, executed several cuts, of considerable merit; some of them are very effective in point of colour; and others, of a smaller size, are engraved with great clearness and delicacy. Wood-engraving is making rapid progress in Germany, and more especially in Bavaria. The head pieces for each month, in the "Munich Almanack" for 1841, from the designs of William Kaulbach—an artist of high reputation—are excellently engraved, and no less excellently printed. Should the German designers and engravers on wood continue to advance in this manner, the reputation which the art formerly enjoyed in Germany will speedily be restored.

Wood-engraving is at present making considerable progress in the United States, and numerous American books and periodical publications are now illustrated with wood-cuts. Adams, the best of the American wood-engravers, is at present employed in engraving the cuts for an "Illuminated and New Pictorial Bible," at present in course of publication, in parts, by Harper and Brothers, New York. The work when completed will contain fourteen hundred cuts, a great number of which will be from original designs by J. G. Chapman, an American artist. The ornamental title-page, printed in black and red, contained in the first part, the only one which has yet come under our notice, is a beautiful specimen of wood-engraving and printing. Several of the large cuts are copied from illustrations of the Bible published by Churton, London, 1833. We do not consider that they are improved by the fanciful borders with which they have been ornamented by Mr. Chapman. There is too much frame—and that not always appropriate in its ornaments—for the picture. An American artist, with the talents of Bewick, who should apply himself to the representation of the scenery and natural objects of his own country, with graphic traits of the character and manners of the people, could not fail of securing for himself as high a reputation as that of "the genius who dwelt on the banks of the Tyne."

(To be continued.)

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, June 25.

SPAIN.

I have received Madrid letters of as late a date as the 19th. They contain a report that the Ministers had succeeded in negotiating a loan, but on most disgraceful terms, the Ministers, it appears, retain in stock for every 36 reals advanced by the lender. The conversation in the British Houses of Parliament relative to the marriage between the eldest son of Don Carlos and the Queen of Spain is much commented on by the Madrid press, and there is an unanimous opinion in, that not only is it impossible, but could it be effected it would be disastrous to the best interests of Spain. I am decidedly of that opinion, and my reasons will be found in my correspondence of the 11th. I am now enabled to send you the conditions on which Don Carlos would consent to the marriage, and which, I am sure, are to be published in different French journals. Don Carlos demands the re-establishment of the Salic law in favour of the elder branch, of which he is the head, with remainder to the younger branch; the reservation of the title of King, pledging himself not to claim the exercise of his rights. The eldest son of Don Carlos, as Prince of the Asturias, to participate in the exercise with his father, and to marry the Infanta Isabella, who is to hold the title of Queen by courtesy. The marriage to be solemnised by procuration, and the Prince not to enter Spain till 1846 or 1847. The second son of Don Carlos to be entitled Prince of the Asturias. Don Carlos consents that a Cortes par estamento be immediately convoked for the re-establishment of the ancient constitution—that an amnesty be granted for all political offences committed since the death of his brother Ferdinand VII., with the exception of the traitor Marotto and twelve of his satellites, who are to be banished for ever from Spain. Don Carlos insists that all ranks, dignities, orders and pensions conferred by him, shall be confirmed. These are the conditions on which Don Carlos consents—not to abdicate, as certain of his friends wish to circulate—but to a marriage. How men possessing one grain of common sense could ever imagine such a visionary scheme could for a moment be entertained by the liberals of Spain must astonish every one, but those who are convinced that it is the work of the same men, who thought they were furthering the interests of Don Carlos in supporting Marotto to the day he betrayed his royal master.

The heat was so great at Madrid on the 18th, that a number of persons quitted the capital for a cooler residence. In six days upwards of 600 passports had been delivered for the provinces and foreign countries.

Letters from Barcelona, to the 17th, give us positive that General Narvaez and Mr. Bulwer were negotiating a treaty of commerce between Spain and England. The Queen continued to derive great benefit from bathing and the change of air.

ITALY.

The Bishop of Rimini has been called to Rome, to answer before the tribunal of Bishops to the serious charges laid against him by his diocesan. A disturbance, not political, occurred on the 13th, at Ramini, between some drunken sailors and the guard on the Quay, several shots were fired, and several persons wounded. Many of the sailors have been arrested, and are to be tried by the Court Martial which is permanently sitting.

The Tiber suddenly rose on the 4th to a considerable height, owing to the rains which fell on the previous day. Three men, employed in collecting timber brought down by the current, were drowned at Ostia.

The fire at Cluses (Savoy), on the 13th, was most disastrous; the whole of the town, with the exception of six houses and the church, were destroyed.

GERMANY.

A serious disturbance took place, on the 17th, at Ingelstadt, in Bavaria, caused by the arrest of a refractory workman by the Police; the mob attacked the houses of several brewers, bakers, and butchers, and did considerable damage. The ringleaders are in the hands of the police.

The British Chargé d' Affaires at Munich was walking, about the middle of the month, with a lady on his arm (his mistress), when, he was met by a rich Englishman, a resident of the town, who reproached him sharply for appearing in public with the lady. The Chargé d'Affaires immediately addressed himself to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and he to the Minister of the Interior. Orders were given to expel the foreigner from the kingdom. As he offered resistance, he was conducted by a brigade of gendarmerie in civil costume to the frontier. It is said that this affair will be taken before the tribunals of London. (This paragraph is extracted from the Gazette de Cologne. The contents of a letter from Munich, of the 17th.

The Augsburg Gazette says that the Duke de Bordeaux has notified the death of the Duke d' Angoulême to all the Courts of Europe, and accompanied the notification with a new protest against the change made in the order of succession to the throne of France: adding, however, that he is very far from contemplating any step which could embroil Europe. The Duchess of Berri has left Ghent, he says, to the course of events. The same journal adds that the Duke d' Angoulême bequeathed his income to his widow for life; the capital in left—to which to the Duke de Bordeaux has succeeded—to his children. The Augsburg Gazette, in another article, gives the following letter from Vienna, dated the 18th:—"The Emperor sent his second aide-de-camp, Baron de Moll, to convey to the Duchess of Angoulême his compliments of condolence on the Duke's death. It is said that his Majesty has left the Duchess at full liberty to choose her residence in his whole kingdom. The English Ambassador, Sir R. Gordon, has, it is reported, thought it necessary to make a similar communication, published by the Duke de Bordeaux on the death of the late Duke, on account of some expressions in it alluding to the present state of things in France." The Duchess of Angoulême has gone to the town of Goritz, on the occasion of the funeral of the late Duke, a considerable sum of money to found a lunatic asylum.

The hereditary Prince of Reuss-Greitz died at Griets on the 14th, aged four months and three days.

The King of Prussia returned to Berlin on the 16th., after taking leave of the Emperor of Russia at Stettin.

FRANCE.

Notwithstanding the mediation of England, and the great desire of Louis Philippe to preserve peace, I am afraid we shall have a war with Morocco. The Emperor, I am informed, is desirous of continuing on friendly terms with France, but Abd-el-Kader has so worked on the feelings of the people, that the Government has no longer any control over the subjects. The following is a copy of a telegraphic despatch received by the Minister of War from the Governor-General of Algeria, dated Lalla Magnia, June 16th:—"Yesterday, in the middle of a conference with the Chief of the Army of Morocco, his troops to the number of 5000 horsemen, fired upon us, and wounded an officer and two soldiers, without our replying to the fire. The conference was broken up, and General Lamoricere and Bedeau were attacked by the Morocco troops. On my arrival I assumed the offensive, and killed from 300 to 400 of the enemy, who remained in our hands. I took from him some horses, and 300 to 400 stand of arms. Never was chastisement better merited. We had six men killed, and about twenty wounded."

The Prince de Joinville sailed from Toulon Roads on the 23rd for Oran. Two ships of his squadron took their departure on the preceding day, and the other ships that are to be under his command will join his flag without delay. The squadron will be composed of the Suffren, Jemmapes, and Triton, of the line; the Belle Poule 60 gun frigate, the Gomer frigate, and the steam sloop of war Pluton, and the Phare and Rubis of minor force. Orders for the embarkation of troops reached Toulon on the 21st, and were carried into execution on the morning of the 23rd. These troops amount to 1200 men, consisting of a company of engineers from the land army, two companies of artillery, and one company of the infantry of the marine army.

A great agitation reigned on Saturday last in consequence of an amendment on the Railroad Bill, to have the rails laid down by the Government alone, having been adopted by a majority of one, the numbers being 138 to 137. The Government Bill proposed to commit the laying down of the rails to the financial companies. The members regard the carrying of this amendment as very serious, for it not only sets aside the leading principle of the general law upon railroads, but establishes a new principle, which will be followed to any extent, and if adopted all the finance al combinations that have been made with a view of re-establishing the equilibrium of the budget. On this subject, the Journal des Debats says, "If the vote of Saturday stands it is, without being altered directly or indirectly, there will be no new railroads this year."

A great sensation has been caused, particularly in the Legitimist saloons, in consequence of the police having captured the young vaute to the Duke d'Escars and the Prince de Montmorency, and seizing all their papers. The papers of M. de Lepeny were also seized, and this gentleman escorted to the prison of the Prefecture. It is said that the Government is in possession of some important information relating to a Legitimist rising in Brittany.

A new French settlement has been established at Grand Bassam, on the western coast of Africa. The Minister of Finance has decided that it shall enjoy all the commercial advantages granted to Assinia and Gabor by the Ordonnance of 16th November last.

Mr. A. Aumont has sold his two-year old filly, by Mr. Wagg, out of Destiny by Centaur, out of Pawn Junior by Waxy-Pawn (sister to Penelope), engaged in the French Derby, 1845, to the Count de Morny, for £1000. Prices like this hold out good encouragement to the turf of blood stock.

GREECE.

ATHENS, June 10.—The elections have begun, and are being carried on with great secrecy. The Opposition give out that the Ministry wish to introduce a reformation in the Greek Church, and assimilate it to the doctrines of Calvin; but there is no reason to believe which is only a pretext to work on the nation against the Ministers.

On the occasion of the King's birthday, on the 1st of June, the King was pleased to confer the distinction of Grand Cross of the Order of the Redeemer on Mr. Piscatory and Sir Edmund Lyons, as well as on Mr. Prokesch, the Austrian Ambassador.

H. M. Steamer Vengeo, Com. Otway, whilst on her return to this place from Candia, met with an accident in her machinery at sea, when off Cape Colonna, and was obliged to continue her voyage by sails. She has since been repaired, and steamed off yesterday with despatches to Constantinople, where she will remain for the present.

AMERICA.

New York papers of the 1st of June, being one day later than those received by the last steamer, have come to hand by the New York packet-ship Cambridge, Captain Barstow. There is not much news.

Mr. Tyler has accepted the nomination for the Presidency, conferred on him by the Tyler Convention at Baltimore. Mr. Dallas has also accepted the nomination as Vice-President of the Democratic Convention.

The Houston Telegraph contains an account of an affray at a place called Corpus Christi, between a party of Mexicans and Texians, in which about eight of the former were killed, and as many taken prisoners—a retort for a similar onslaught which, a short time before, a party of Mexicans had made upon a small number of Texans. It was generally believed in Texas that their treaty with the United States was hors de combat.

In railroads, trust companies, and all other securities, whether possessing value or not, the brokers have been speculating to an unprecedented degree. Stocks without value have been suddenly resuscitated, and prices have advanced as if by magic. This shows a speculative spirit, which, we fear, will end disastrously.

OVERFLOW OF THE MISSISSIPPI.—The St. Louis Reporter of the 22nd inst. says:—"The river rose yesterday about six inches, and is still rising. It has already entered many stores on the wharf, and from present appearances the first floor of but few of them will escape inundation. Illinestown is scarcely visible. The American bottom is covered with water to the bluffs, except in a few spots of ridges." On the morning of Wednesday (22nd inst.) the water had reached within thirteen inches of the first floor of the old warehouses of the American Fur Company, which is the most elevated building on the Levee. Along the Arkansas river the damage done to the crops, and the loss of stock, &c., must amount to from 80,000 to 100,000 dollars.

When the Cambridge left New York, the packet-ship Roscoe, which left Liverpool on the 1st of April, had not arrived. She was spoken off Newburyfort on the 28th ult., with loss of foremast and topsail-yard, and mainstop-gallantmast.

WEST INDIES.

The Royal Mail Company's steam-ship Avon, Captain Strutt, arrived at Southampton on Sunday morning, at twelve o'clock, bringing all the West India Islands mails.

At Jacmel were eight men-of-war belonging to the Haytiens. Hayti, when the Avon touched there, was in a dreadful state. An extract given below, from the Jamaica Dispatch, will give full particulars.

The Jamaica papers are very barren of information. Rain had fallen in partial showers in many parts of the island, which had the effect of improving vegetat on.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt in Spanish Town, on Tuesday evening, the 21st May, a few minutes after eight o'clock, and on the 23rd, at 4 o'clock, to three A.M., a very severe shock was felt. Two shocks were also experienced in Jamaica.

The dreadful state of affairs in Hayti will be taken notice of; revolution has been followed by general anarchy; the successor of Boyer has been superseded by Guerrier, an old general of Christophe. A general, named Acaau, has fell indignant at his services not having been duly considered, and has issued a counter proclamation; he is in possession of Cayes; his followers are represented to be about 500 ragged wretches, badly armed, but perfectly under his control; he had flogged many of the prisoners in the fort Boyer unmercifully, and had others shot. With his own hand he is represented to have shot six, and is said to be one of the greatest monsters that ever existed, and his natural ferocity is said to be increased by an immoderate use of rum. He has been seen frequently so drunk as to knock down his aides-de camp, tear their swords from them, and they only escaped with their lives by running away. The schooner Palma, from Wilmington, N.C., was obliged to slip, and proceeded to Cuba, for fear of being seized by Acaau, as the Joseph Asking had been before, both vessels consigned to Blanchard and Co.

The sanctions of England and France are actively employed in protecting the interests of their respective countries; but we do not hear of the Americans being at their posts, which, considering the great value of property belonging to American citizens, is reprehensible. It does not appear that British subjects have been maltreated or threatened.

From St. Domingo we hear that Acaau is still determined on resistance, and appears to uphold his authority entirely by severity and bloodshed. The temporary prisons formed by him are full of prisoners, principally coloured people. A remonstrance made by the officers of the Griffon was of no avail. Acaau also imagines those whom he thinks he can frighten into ransom. Poor Calyo, Antoine, who came here in a fine schooner, and brought some refugees, was cast into prison, and after a few days shot, and his schooner taken into the service of Acaau.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

PROMOTIONS.—Mate: Charles J. Austen (1840), of the Agincourt, to the rank of Lieutenant. Assistant-Surgeon: Hugh T. S. Beveridge, M.D. (1839), of the Lightning, steam-tender, late attendant on the Emperor of Russia, to the rank of Surgeon.

APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Lieutenant Patrick Johnson, to the Camperdown. Assistant-Surgeon: David Russel. (1-44), of the St. Vincent, to the Fearless, steam-vessel.

RECOLLECTIONS.—It is, perhaps, no less essential to be known by commanding officers and the military service in what cases officers are not entitled, under the existing regulations, to "Passages at the public expense," as it is to them to know to what extent and in what cases they are entitled to such. Thirdly—"Officers are not entitled to passages at the public expense, if returning home on resignation, or to consequence of removal for misconduct, or of dismissal by the sentence of a Court Martial, or by the authority of the Foreign station, may, however, where a necessity arising from the inability of the officer to provide his own passage shall be made apparent to him, use his discretion in ordering a passage to be provided at the public expense for any officer removed for misconduct, or dismissed the service; but in all cases he will be required to report to the Secretary at War, or to the Master-General of the Ordnance, as the case may be, the circumstances under which he may have thought fit to order at the public expense. Secondly—If exchanging with other officers for their mutual convenience, if coming home on their private affairs, or if returning to their stations on the expiration of their leave of absence, they will be considered to have no claim of detainment, will be required to obtain authorization, but will not be maintained while on board at the public expense; and an officer who shall have been ordered to do duty, and who shall have actually done duty with the army in the presence of the enemy, will be considered entitled to rejoin his regiment abroad, he recommended by the Commander-in-Chief for a passage at the public expense, including the allowances for his messing."

ROYAL MARINES.—Lieutenant Ward, employed by the Commissioners of the Admiralty to be held on First Lieutenant Frederick John White, of the Woolwich division, after a protracted sitting, has been dissolved, the Court having found the prisoner not guilty. Lieutenant White, although comparatively a young officer, has seen much service, having been engaged with the Royal Marines employed in the warfare with the Carlists in Spain, from 1836 to 1837, in April, 1838, and was present at the capture of Morella, Forcadell, Tarrida, and Irun; and during that period was eleven months a prisoner of war, in the hands of the Carlists, closely confined, and several times sentenced to be shot. In February, 1840, he was appointed to the Cornwallis, 72, flag-ship, engaged in the expedition to China, and was present in the following actions, being employed chiefly on shore, viz., assault and capture of the batteries of Chuen-Pee, where he was wounded; attack on the Bogue forts, (Forts Tigris), when three strong forts were carried in succession; present on the first advance on Canton, including the destruction of Hoquas Fort and several other river defences; at the attack on the Canton forts, and while on shore was entrusted with the command of a strong detachment of Royal Marines, when the enemy were driven from their guns, and the fortifications captured: at the second capture of Chusan; at the occupation of the citadel, and walled city of Chinhae; at the capture of Sykee, and of the heights of Segoan; at the attack on the hill defences, and capture of the city of Chapoo; at the capture of the batteries and city of Woosung and the entrance of the Yangtsekiang, which led to the capture of the city of Chin-Kiang-foo, and the operations at Nankin. Lieut. White is a very clever artist, and like many other young men of genius has proved his enterprising character by many escapades, which, however unable to check, to bring him often into trouble, from which he has hitherto escaped under many circumstances, which must have created great uneasiness until the results have been made known, and proved satisfactory to himself and his friends.

LOSS OF THE MANCHESTER STEAMER.—On Monday morning, intelligence was received of the total loss of this vessel, and every soul on board. The melancholy intelligence has been reported on Saturday, and was hailed by many with a sigh of relief when the arrival of the General Steam Navigation Company's ship Caledonia, Captain Phillips, on Monday morning, off the Tower, with the Hamburgh mail. It appears that the Caledonia made the mouth of the Elbe at noon on Sunday week, at which time the gale had somewhat subsided, but still it was blowing very heavily from the N.W., with a great sea. On passing the Vogel Sande, nothing was observed to attract attention. It was, however, very dark and hazy to the northward, which must have prevented the Manchester being seen, for it has since been satisfactorily ascertained that at that period she must have been going to pieces. The Caledonia continued on her passage to Hamburgh, and as she had not seen the ill-fated steamer, an alarm was created that she was lost. On Monday a steamer called the Elbe was sent in search of her by the directors of the Hamburgh and Altona Steam Company, to which she belonged, and on her return on Wednesday she brought the intelligence of the wreck of the Manchester on the Marie Sande, and the supposed loss of all hands. The Elbe whilst cruising off the coast, in the hopes of seeing something washed ashore, recovered a quantity of cotton print, a black board bearing the word "Manchester" in gilt letters, the hatches of the cabin, 26 feet long, 10 pieces of velvet, and a portion of the hatch-way, on which was painted No. 2; five bales of different goods, and a quadrant case, with the name of the Manchester's mate in full length (Heetman). After making these discoveries, the Elbe returned to Cuxhaven, and concluded that the total loss of the Manchester with all hands naturally produced the deepest sensation. In the meanwhile, the directors of the company made inquiries of Captain Mowle, of the Leeds, which arrived on Sunday from Hull, as to the way the passengers on board the missing vessel. The exact number could not be ascertained, but it was known that amongst the chief cabin passengers were a lady and her daughter from Dreghicda, of the name of Smith, who were about to proceed on a tour to Graffenburgh, in Silesia, for the benefit of their health; Mr. Frederick B. Phillips, from Birmingham; Mr. James Richmond, of Paisley; and Mr. Rothery, a wool merchant, of Leeds. There were many others, to the number, it was reported, of from 25 to 30. The crew of the Manchester, besides Captain Dudley, who was about 40 years of age, and a single man, consisted of Jonas Wilson, chief engineer; Thomas Macauly, second engineer; Heetman (foreigner), chief mate; four stokers, and 12 seamen, thereby showing that the loss of life is far more serious than we at first apprehended.

THE CASE OF SUSPECTED POISONING.

On Wednesday, Mr. Belaney, the surgeon, who stands charged with having poisoned his wife, was again brought before Mr. Broderip, at the Thames Police-office, for further examination.

Mr. Clarkson, the barrister, and Messrs. Coode and Brown, solicitors, appeared for the prisoner. A number of persons from North Sunderland, in which neighbourhood Mr. Belaney's family resided for many years, were present, and appeared most interested in the proceedings.

The first witness called was Mr. John Haines, an inspector of the Detective Force of the A Metropolitan Police, who had been employed in this case by order of the Home Secretary. He stated that in accordance with the directions he received he went to North Sunderland, and on Friday last he received certain letters which he had numbered from Mr. Gray Bell, the prisoner's clerk. He then put in five letters written by the prisoner in London, and directed to Mr. Bell, which were identified by Mr. Bell, who was in attendance.

Letter No. 1 merely contained an account of their arrival in London, complaining of fatigue, and some directions with regard to his future address. The letter No. 2 was as follows:—

London, June 8th, 1844.

Dear Mr. Bell—I have little else to write to the North about at present than to give you, who I know are all interested in it, a very unhappy account of Rachael's state. I have had her removed from the hotel to private lodgings, where, with two medical attendants, she remains dangerously ill. Symptoms of premature labour came on a few days ago, but, what is still worse, one of the medical men pronounces the heart to be diseased. Of this I have had some evidence myself. This will alter my plans greatly, but I shall be spared that will be every mercy. Hoping you are all well, I must, in haste, conclude—Yours, sincere.y, J. C. BELANEY. No letters have yet arrived.

Mr. Broderip—It is in evidence Mrs. Belaney died on the day this letter bears date.

Mr. Symons—That is so, Sir—on the morning of the 8th.

Letter No. 3 was to the following effect:—

London, June 9, 1844.

Dear Mr. Bell—The worst that could be desired has come to pass. Rachel is no more. You shall know all. Put the mea.s of work at the new house. As such could not be done at the party and time were without great exertion on the partner's p. I shall not desire the same there. I am acidly able to sit up, but hope to be able to write to-morrow more particulars. In the death has occurred entirely unexpected, strangers, and we sudden, as cannot be held. This has been mentioned to me; of course, I do not object to it.—Yours sincerely, J. C. BELANEY.

Mr. Bell was recalled, and said he received the last two letters on Wednesday, the 12th of June. Both were posted on the same day, the 10th of June.

The fourth letter read by Mr. Symons bore no date, and was addressed to Mr. Bell. In this letter the prisoner intended to write an account of what happened to Mrs. Belaney, but he was unable to do so at present, and that her death had come upon him like a thunderbolt. He knew well that Mr. Bell could account for his absence, and the prisoner could never forgive himself for not having given the full particulars of Mrs. Belaney's death in the first instance. He entreated of Mr. Bell to wait on various persons, and request them to come to London on his behalf. No address was given was 17, King-street, Cheapside, the residence of Mr. Clarke, where the prisoner was apprehended. The post-mark was June 13, and it was received by Mr. Bell on the 14th.

The fifth letter, also addressed to Mr. Bell, commenced as follows:—"London, June, 1844. Dear Mr. Bell,—By the time this arrives, you will find, by Mr. Hall's letter, the awful consequences of my loss. Oh, God! how like a thunderbolt it came upon me. Alas! all my summer arrangements are gone with dear Rachael." The remainder of the letter related to business matters, and entreated of the witness to send up as many friends as he could to London, and concluded with the following words:—"Oh, God! I know not what I am doing and saying."

A letter, No. 6, of great importance, was next put in. It was from Mr. Clarke to Mr. Bell, and dated June 15, 1844, and stated that he was directed by Mr. Belaney, who was then in custody, and had been examined before the magistrate, to state that he wished the business to go on as usual, and that Mr. Belaney's solicitors had advised that some of the property should be seen, and to allow no one to see any of his private papers, of whatever nature they might be. The writer also requested that all letters for Mr. Belaney should be sent under cover to him (Mr. Clarke), at 17, King-street, Stepney, to prevent their being seen or published.

Mr. Bell proved the receipt of this letter.

Mr. William Drewe Clarke was sworn, and said the prisoner authorised him to write the letter just read.

A letter, No. 7, commencing "London, June, 1844," with no date, the Post-office bearing the 17th, and "June 14," was next read. It was written by the prisoner, and addressed to Mr. Richard Hall, Sea-house, Belford, North Sunderland. It began:—

Oh, I am distracted. I cannot write or do anything. I have lost my dear Rachael; what makes it worse, it was through my own negligence, in leaving a tumbler containing prussic acid at the further end of the room. She had taken some salts, and had gone to the tumbler and poured water upon it, and as the acid was as clear as the glass, she had drank it off. My dear Rachael is gone for ever, for ever from me. I had gone out for a moment to fetch another bottle, and she got out of bed and wished to take some water, and unthinkingly poured water on to it. I heard her call, and went to her assistance. I ran in a state of frenzy for assistance, but it was too late. Oh, God! the distraction I am in when taken place in a situation where I am a stranger; the law has a right to suspect me. I have not a creature forward—nothing to prove anything as to my character.

The letter, which was written in a trembling hand, and was in some parts scarcely legible, was of considerable length, and the prisoner earnestly entreated of Mr. Hall to do all he could for him, and wait upon his friends and Mrs. Stobbs, the aunt of the deceased, and send them to London. It concluded with these words:—"I must now stop; I am quite bewildered, as if in an unconscious dream."

At this examination having terminated, Mr. Clarkson said he would ask him no questions.

Alexander Wilson, sworn: I have been a labourer in the employ of the prisoner at North Sunderland, where I me works are carried on. Mr. and Mrs. Belaney left North Sunderland on the 1st inst. I saw them the evening before, and they required me to sign my name as witness to the prisoner called them wills. I signed two wills, each bearing date May 31, 1844, were put into Wilson's hands, and he said his signature was affixed to them. Mr. Symons read the first one, which was to the following effect:—

"I, Richard Watson Belaney, do hereby will and bequeath all my property, real and personal, and other estates and hereditaments, with the rights and tules thereto belonging, unto my husband, Henry Belaney, my lawful wife, to her and his heirs for ever as she thinks fit."

The witness continued—The prisoner said if any thing happened to Mrs. Belaney, any effects that belonged to her it was left for him to do as he choose, and Mrs. Belaney said if anything happened to him, he had left her to do as she choose. I signed both papers.

The second paper was read. It was an exact copy of the first, except that the name of the deceased was substituted for her husband's. Mr. Symons said they were not both in the same handwriting. There was an erasure in the second paper; "her," had been erased, and "him" written over it. The "s" in she was also erased to make it he.

Ralph Moore, a shoemaker living at North Sunderland, gave similar evidence. He was called upon by the prisoner to sign the papers as an attesting witness, and he did so.

Several other documents were then put in by Inspector Haines.

Margaret Ronald, sworn—I have been living as servant with the prisoner and his late wife. Mrs. Belaney's relations were in the habit of visiting them, and sometimes they were asked in, and sometimes they were not. I am not aware that any particular directions were given to that effect. Mrs. Belaney was ill on the 31st. Mr. Belaney told me of it one night between 11 and seven o'clock. He said it had happened during the night. I was not called during the night.

Mr. Broderip.—Was any medical gentleman called in when your mistress suffered a miscarriage?

Witness.—No, sir, there was not.

William Beckett Shaw, police sergeant, No. 2 K, produced a letter written by the prisoner in the station-house, which he intercepted. It was addressed to Mr. Embleton, of Alnwick, Northumberland, and gave a similar account of the melancholy event to those given in the letters to Mr. Bell and Mr. Hobson and Clarke. The letter was very similar in its language to the one addressed to Mr. Hall.

This closed the case for the prosecution, and Mr. Broderip addressed the prisoner, and asked him if he had any statement to make? If he had, it would be a voluntary one.

Mr. Clarkson—No, sir, he will not say any thing.

Mr. Broderip (to the prisoner.)—Then you stand remanded until Saturday next for the wilful murder of Rachael Belaney, and if there is no more evidence, then you will be committed for trial at the Central Criminal Court.

The prisoner, who looked much paler than he did on the last examination, and who had remained in one unvarying attitude with his eyes directed towards the ground, was then removed from the dock.

The Rev. Mr. Belaney, of Arlington, in Sussex, was present during the whole investigation, and seemed much distressed at the painful and degrading situation in which his brother is placed.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.—The Judges appointed to proceed on this circuit, the Right Hon. Lord Denman, Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, and Mr. Justice Coltman, have fixed the assizes for this county, at Northampton, July 15th; Rutlandshire, at Oakham, July 19th; Lincolnshire, at Lincoln, July 20th; Lincoln (City of), at Guildhall, same day; Nottinghamshire, at Nottingham, same day; Town of Nottingham, same day; Derbyshire, at Derby, July 29th; Leicestershire, at Leicester, August 1st; Leicester (Borough of), same day; Warwickshire—Coventry division, at Coventry, August 5th; Warwick division, at Warwick, August 7th.

THE MIDDLE TEMPLE.—On Wednesday evening a splendid banquet was given by the benchers of this honourable society to the benchers of the Inner Temple. In accordance with the custom of this society, a biennial meeting takes place between the heads of the two learned societies of the Temple, in the hall of the Middle Temple, shortly after the expiration of Trinity term, for the same purpose, perhaps, as that of many other learned societies—namely, the union of friendship, and the discussion of their social interests, blended with the gratification of ministering to the wants of the "inward man." Every delicacy of the season graced the festive board on the present occasion. The usual toasts were proposed and drunk with due honours by the learned and hon urable body; and from all we can learn, the "feast of reason" and the "flow of soul" reigned triumphant. The party assembled numbered about thirty, amongst whom were Mr. Erle and Mr. Leake, treasurers of the Inner and Middle Temple; the Right Hon. Lord Kenyon; Sir Frederick Thesiger, M.P.; Sir Robert Comyn; Sir Gregory Lewin; Sir William Owen; Mr. Rochuck, M.P.; John Jervis, Esq., M.P.; John Wrath, Esq., the "father" of the bar, a barrister of 54 years' standing.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

Lablache and Mario being restored to their vocal health, the opera of "Don Carlos" was repeated with increased effect on Tuesday last. It is a noble composition, full of the sweetest melody, floating fairy-like upon a deep and harmonic tide of harmony. Perhaps, as we hinted before, there is a little too much of this latter element; but we cannot object to its presence in the monks' Gregorian hymn with which the opera opens. The recitative in the first act (indeed throughout) was beautiful as given by Mario, and his first duet with Fornasari—

"Ah! tu sai che a me promesso Fu quel' angel di candore!"

was touchingly effective.

In the second scene the Madrigalian chorus of ladies was delicious, and the first melancholy strain of Isabella, "sung to tears" by Grisi, shows that Costa has as much heart-feeling as head-contrivance, which latter quality or genius was eminently manifest in the chorus that accompanies the Queen's lament. The next fine thing in the opera is the duo between Isabella and Carlos—

"Se d'un puro eterno amore."

The second act opens with rather a noisy chorus, but shortly afterwards a magnificent trio "Ei ti nega," was wonderfully executed by Mario, Fornasari, and Lablache. The accusation of Philip, and the protestation of innocence on the part of Isabella, forms one of the most vigorous musical conceptions in the opera. Grisi's dramatic eloquence in the utterance of

"Ah! rivoca i detto orrendo," was worthy of the tragic muse herself. The conflicting sentiments of the parties who form the quatuor and chorus that follow at the close of the act, are, if we may be allowed the expression, wonderfully harmonised by the skill of the composer. In the prison scene, with which the third act opens, Mario was himself again, and beautifully sang the aria and other music omitted on Saturday last. The chorus of inquisitors, with the King's communication of his wife's infidelity and son's treachery, afforded a fine opportunity to the composer's musically-pictorial powers, and a fine tableau he has made of it. The remainder of the scene will be found described in another column of our journal. En partant we felicitate Signor Costa on the production of such a magnificent work in that art over which he so well presides, and hope that it may not be long before we have some fresh inspiration of his muse!

A much talked-about ballet, which excited a deal of expectation, entitled "Zelia, or, La Nymphe de Diane," was produced on Tuesday last, and fairly was "damn'd by faint praise." The scenic constructiveness of Perrot is as apparent as ever—the music of Pugni as expressive; the scenery, by Grieve, as beautiful as anything lately produced by his graphic pencil, or rather brush; but there was evidently something wanting to interest the spectators, for one half of them quitted the theatre before the ballet was half over. Cerito and St. Leon danced beautifully; but with the story of the ballet the lookers-on had not an imperfect sympathy, for something seemed to have been interpolated into mythology, a kind of private anecdote, of which they had never known anything before, and in which they felt such little interest that "curiosity went home to bed" tired and disappointed.

On Tuesday evening, for the benefit of M. Perrot, as the bills announced, but much more for that of the public, at least for that portion of it which has a taste for vocal excellence, Signor Moriani appeared for the first time before an English audience, in the part of Edgardo, in Donnezti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," and was fairly welcomed, in spite of old attachments, as the greatest singer who has appeared in the memory of all lovers of Italian song. He is not only a singer, but an actor of extraordinary power, somewhat in the school of Duprez,—his voice is of extended register, seldom using the falsetto; he pours forth at pleasure, strength, or sweetness, or both combined. Our space will not allow us to enter into further detail at present, but we shall resume the subject.

PRINCESS'S.

On Saturday last the English version of Donnezti's lively opera "L'Elisir d'Amore," introduced another fair vocalist to an auditory of her native country, in the part of Adina. Miss Austin, who has not adopted any foreign title, and perhaps for that very said reason did not create the feverish excitement of curiosity which has attended the rentrée of her accomplished rival songstresses. Miss Austin possesses a mezzo soprano voice of considerable extent and power, but her timidity in a great measure militated against its full development. Her acting was admirable, and we hope a little more acquaintance with her audience will enable her to substantiate the fame which has preceded her from the sunny south. Allen sang the version of the charming "Una furtiva lagrima" most delightfully, and the whole opera was most creditably got up—indeed splendidly. The Princess's Theatre is one of the best and most liberally conducted dramatic establishments in the metropolis.

LYCEUM.

The dew drama, "The Momentous Question," suggested by Miss Setchell's clever picture of the same name, increases in popularity on each new representation. Both the picture and drama are founded upon one of Crabbe's "Tales of the Hall," and possess a painfully tragic interest not often to be found in the more elevated compositions for the stage. Still there is something revolting in the idea of a girl going to the prison where her lover is under the apprehension of being sentenced to death, and proposing to him a release from his dreadful situation on condition that he will voluntarily forego her hand, and allow her to wed another. The picture, nevertheless, is full of truth and feeling; the beautiful but agonised face of Rachel Ryland "pausing for a reply" to the "momentous question" put to the prisoner Shelley, is replete with deep interest. Miss Fortescue's performance of Rachel was an exquisite impersonation, and Mr. Diddear and Mr. F. Vining were most admirable as the rival poachers. The drama altogether abounds with intense interest.

MUSIC.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERTS.

The seventh concert of this society was given at the Hanover-square Rooms, on Monday evening last, and presented an unusual variety of starring and novel procedure in its programme. The orchestra was conducted for a short time by Mr. Lucas (who was succeeded by Dr. Mendelssohn) and led by Mr. Loder. The performance commenced with Mozart's sinfonia in C (No. 1), not number one in that great composer's catalogue! This was followed by "La Serenata" put to Gondola," an aria from Rossini's last work, "Les Soirées," which was impassionately sung by M. De Revial, a tenor of considerable reputation at the Opera Comique, Paris. Then came on that grand treat, Beethoven's concerto for the piano-forte, in G, which was faultlessly performed by Mendelssohn. Miss Hawes was very felicitous in "Ere Infancy's Bud," a charming air from Mahul's "Joseph," and Signor Ravini, once more astonished old amazement of the violoncello, by his wonderful dexterity, grace, and expression. Sebastian Bach's "Overture and Suite" is a clear and well-imagined composition, but, for want of orchestral remplissage, seemed meagre, when contrasted with the more florid partitions of modern days. The second part opened with Haydn's noblest symphony (No. 9) in B flat. The charming Anna Thillon then sang Adam's aria, C'est un caprice, most delightfully; but is it not somewhat of a monotonous caprice to sing this air eternally, wherever she goes? Molique's adagio and rondo were beautifully executed by Mr. Blagrove, an English violinist, who can take his stand by the side of any importation. M. De Revial's performance of Schubert's "La Religeuse," was not, from the nature of the subject, very effective. Beethoven's wonderful overture "Egmont," closed the performance; and it was a pity to see this immortal work consigned to the last place in the programme, when the disinclination of most people to hear the concluding notes of a concert begets a corresponding neglect on the part of the orchestra. Who can play with the same attention,

When noisy silks are rustling home?

as when their occupants steal silently in at the commencement of a concert, chiefly to secure a good place, and partly to be thought musical.

A new theatre was inaugurated at Dresden, on the 29th of last month. M. Koll has written an opera, called "The Corsicans," for the Munich Theatre. The Theatre of San Carlos of Naples is closed, being under repair. A new opera-buffa, by Laura Rossi, has met with great success at Milan. An opera-seria, called "Giovanna de Napoli," has been produced at Genoa, and received with enthusiasm.

FASHIONS FOR JULY.

FASHIONS FOR JULY.

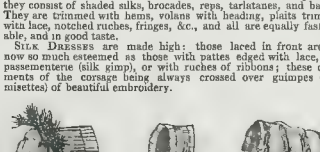
DESCRIPTION OF THE FIGURES.

No. 1. A Promenade Costume. A Crape Hat, with tulle veil.
A Barège Dress, trimmed with quillings of the same material.
No. 2. A Hair Coiffure.
A Ball Dress of Tartatane (transparent muslin), ornamented round the sleeves and skirts with tucks headed with brocaded India trimming.
No. 3. A Crape Hat. A Cameleon (shot silk) Dress. A Lace Cloak.
No. 4. A Satin Hat. A Satin Cloak trimmed with lace. A Cameleon Silk Dress.
A Lace and Ribbon Capote. A Tulle and Ribbon Cap.
A Crape Hat, ornamented with lace and wheat-ears.

MODES PARISIENNES.—It is at the Bois de Boulogne, at the Champs-Elysées, at the Exposition de l'Industrie, that the newest Promenade Dresses are now to be seen; and at the Opera, when Taglioni appears, and the boxes are crowded with the élite of Paris, that dresses for full toilette are seen in the greatest variety.

Toilettes de Promenade were never more varied than at present: they consist of shaded silks, brocades, reps, tartanes, and barège. They are trimmed with hems, volans with heading, plaits trimmed with lace, notched ruches, fringes, &c., and all are equally fashionable, and in good taste.

SILK DRESSES are made high: those laced in front are not now so much esteemed as those with pattes edged with lace, with passementerie (silk gimp), or with ruches of ribbons; these ornaments of the corsage being always crossed over guimpes (chemisettes) of beautiful embroidery.



BONNETS AND CAPS.

Coloured LENE DRESSES, with volans bordered with lace, are very fashionable for evening wear; these dresses have the corsages very low, and the sleeves short and bouillonée; and some have the skirt ornamented with five bouillons, through which a coloured ribbon is passed, each row terminating with a bow forming a row up each side the front.

BAREGE DRESSES are almost universally adopted for the toilette de campagne; the material being soft and inchiffonable.

CRAPE MANTELETS are an aristocratic novelty just introduced; we observed them first at a matinée musicale given by M. Le Prince de M——.

HATS continue to be worn of the same shape and size as before; the only change being in the accessories.

CRAPE HATS and CAPOTES, in all colours, are ornamented with transparent tulle and satin ribbons; flowers are seldom placed inside these hats, tulle, blond, and ribbons, having the preference.

CAPOTES are frequently composed of a mixture of crape, tulle, silk, and straw.

CAPS are mostly very simple and small; they are rounded at the temples, the crowns are composed of a plain tulle or net, and they are frequently formed of bouillons of white and coloured tulle, placed alternately.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The direction of the Opera House has issued a monstre bill for Thursday for the benefit of Madame Grisi. We doubt whether so rich an union of vocal splendour and choreographic excellence has before appeared on the stage of any European theatre. The opera is Rossini's "Otello," supported by Mario, Fornasari, Lablache, and Grisi. This great work might stand alone and unsupported in its beauty and its power. The tragic might exhibited by Lablache as the father, with the celebrated malediction of the second act, and the exquisite vocalisation and Siddonian conception of Grisi in Desdemona, are matters that have achieved for them an historical fame. But there is also the novelty of Mario as the jealous Moor: his success at Paris in the character was such that we anticipate largely, from his increased dramatic energy and charming voice. Then we are to have Moriani, the first tenor of Italy, in the "Lucia," with Persiani. And in the ballet there is the ideal Elssler, and the real Cerito, the fascinating interpreters of the two great schools.

THE FRUIT TRADE.

Beyond the number of those more immediately engaged in the chief departments of the traffic in foreign fruit, there are but few persons who ever gave one thought as to its nature and extent, the numerous individuals required for its cultivation, gathering, sorting, and packing; the many vessels necessary for its transport into England; the hands (generally good seamen) employed in those crafts; the unloading, and every other matter connected with the trade, down to the distribution amongst retail dealers. The term fruit is distinguished by classification into dry and green. The dry fruit comprises figs, raisins, currants, prunes, dates, nuts, almonds, chesnuts, walnuts, &c., &c.; and the green fruit consists of oranges, lemons, grapes, pomegranates, pine apples, &c.; and though not exactly classed under this head, yet vast quantities of onions are imported by the same traders. The dry fruits come principally from Turkey, the Morea, the Greek Isles, Italy, Spain, and France, and a portion from the northern parts of Africa.

FIGS are chiefly the produce of Turkey, but they will ripen in all warm climates; and some have been known to do so in the open air in England. When they are sufficiently ripe they are gathered and dried in ovens, after which they are closely packed and pressed together in mat baskets and jars for exportation. The Smyrna fig is considered very fine, but that from Kalamata, in the Morea, is esteemed to be the most luscious. The importation for the year ending 5th January, 1844, amounted to 33,450 cwt., which, upon an average of 20 figs to the pound, will give 76,329,400 of the fruit taken singly, and if the whole were sold by retail at 6d. per pound, would realise £90,860 in value. The duty for the last year was £23,556.

RAISINS.—There are many sorts of this fruit designated by different names, such as Malaga, Muscatels, Valencia, Savanna. They are cured for market by two methods. Those called raisins of the sun have the stalks of the grape-bunch cut about half through, and they are left to dry slowly in the solar beams, which candies them as they hang. The other mode is gathering them when full ripe, and laying them for a short time in a ley made from the ashes of the burnt tendrils; they are then exposed to the sun, or dried in ovens, and packed in cases, barrels, or jars, the finest generally in the latter, but even this is going out of practice, and barrels are now the most in use. The importation for the year ending as above dated (Jan. 5, 1844), was 237,474 cwt., or 26,597,088 pounds, which, suppose all retailed at 6d. per pound, would produce £664,927, and the gross duty received was £186,920.

CURRANTS.—This fruit is a small species of grape, extensively cultivated in the Greek Isles, where it constitutes a staple produce. Zante, Cephalonia, and Ithaca produce vast quantities, and several ports of the Morea and Patras. After the plants first set, six or seven years must elapse before the fruit is fit for market, and as the plant is extremely tender and delicate, it is very liable to be destroyed by storms, &c. When ripe they are dried in the sun, and packed in casks. These used to be a very heavy duty of 20s per cwt. upon this article, which was a most grievous tax upon the poor—it has within these few years been reduced, but still falls heavily. The return for the year ending 5th January, 1844, was 254,744 cwt., or 28,531,328 pounds, which, retailed at 7d. per pound, would yield £832,163; the gross amount of duty received on this return was £296,461.

PRUNES.—These are dried plums, of different varieties: the best quality come from the South of France. The importation averages about 7,000 cwt. annually.

DATES.—These grow on a magnificent tree—the palm in Persia, Arabia, Egypt, and Barbary, where, pressed and made into a cake, they form a principal portion of the food of the people; the chief qualification of a cook rests upon the various modes in which he can dress this fruit. The best dates come from Tunis. The importation into this country is not very extensive.

NUTS are brought chiefly from Spain. The Barcelona are esteemed the best. The importation amounts to many millions of pounds in weight annually.

ALMONDS grow spontaneously in all warm climates. The Malaga are the best brought to England: the Valentia are reckoned to be the sweetest; the bitter almonds come from Mogadore; of the latter the importation is about 3,000 cwt., of the sweet about 10,000 cwt.

CHESNUTS and WALNUTS.—About 22,000 bushels of the former are imported annually from the South of France and Spain, and the same quantity of the latter.

We now come to what is called the green fruit, and we commence with ORANGES. Of these there are several sorts, but they are chiefly distinguished as the sweet kind, most commonly in use, and the bitter, or Seville orange. This fruit was originally a native of China, and the Portuguese have the credit of transplanting it into other countries. The annual importation into England is enormous. The trees require but little attention or cultivation, but nothing can be more delightful than the fragrance of the orange grounds, particularly at night, when the flower is refreshed by the dews; and in the daytime the sun draws forth its perfume to gratify the scent, whilst the yellow fruit, hanging in thick profusion amongst the bright green foliage, is beautiful to the eye, blending together the richest of colours—green and gold. Oranges grow in all warm climates, and they have been brought to considerable perfection in the hothouses of England, but nothing except the glorious rays of the sun can give this fruit the delicious flavour which renders it so universal a favourite, and so sweetly refreshing, in every part of the world, but, perhaps, in none more so than in England. When faint and thirsty in summer, one penny, at the corner of almost any street in the metropolis, expended with the itinerant vendors who travel with the basket, will, in the heat of summer, revive and invigorate the system, without doing the slightest injury to the digestive organs; and in winter it is the principal fruit at our table-desserts, a never-failing delicacy at Christmas, and a "pretty present" for little boys and girls from aunts, uncles, grandpapas, and grandmothers. The orange unites in its qualities those which rarely form a connexion—it is delicious, in its taste, may be freely indulged in, and yet perfectly innocent. If the returns of importation for home consumption are correct (and we have no reason to doubt them), there cannot be less than 250,000,000 of oranges annually brought into this country! 250,000,000! The question demands serious answer; where do they all come from? We answer, those chiefly consumed in this country are the produce of Portugal, shipped at Lisbon, the Western Islands, St. Michael's, Terceira, Fayal; also from Oporto, from Faro, from Seville, Malaga, Messina, and various parts of Spain. The West and East Indies, Africa, the Brazils, the southern states of Yankeeland, all produce the orange in much perfection, but the time occupied in the voyage precludes the possibility of getting them to England before they decay. Even in the countries from which we receive them they are gathered when just upon the turn from green to yellow, and the utmost precaution is taken to have them perfectly dry. Each orange is carefully done up in the leaf of the Indian corn, or in paper, when they are packed, so that no part of the rind of one may touch another. They are, in fact, perfectly China in this particular. They are put into chests, averaging about 1000 in each, and upon which a duty of 7s. 6d. is paid; boxes that contain from 400 to 500 paying a duty of 3s. 9d.; and small boxes of 300, that pay 2s. 6d. The number of these imported (including lemons) by the regular trade in the year ending as before noticed, was 273,950, producing a duty of £69,570. Let everybody who eats an orange remember that he is paying the taxes, and the annual consumption of oranges and lemons in the united kingdom, taking an average of one penny for each orange, involves an expense of nearly a million and a quarter in money yearly. The best oranges come from the Azores rocky islands with an iron-bound coast, but with interiors grand in picturesque scenery, and blessed with the utmost fertility.

LEMONS were originally natives of Assyria and Persia, and brought in later times to Greece, Italy and Spain, till they had spread over tropical climes; the Spanish, however, are considered the finest for juiciness and flavour. They are gathered and packed much the same as oranges, and the importation cannot be less than 50,000,000 annually. There is a smaller species of lemon called a lime, of a most delicious flavour; the acid has a pleasant amalgamation of sweetness; but there are not many brought to this country. Oh! ye punch-drinkers, think that 50,000,000 of lemons are imported, the principal portion of which you consume; yet praise be to punch—it is a delicious beverage, especially when made with whisky and green tea properly dulcified.

GRAPES.—Very few individuals would believe that such immense quantities of dried and ripe grapes are imported as there really are, especially of the latter, in barrels and jars, to the amount of nearly half a million of pounds in weight annually, that are landed in very high preservation, and may be purchased at the fruiterers and grocers in London, at from 9d. to 1s. 4d. per pound.

PINE APPLES are extensively grown in England, but rarely to be found in the neighbourhood of the metropolis, although the tan-yards afford a great facility for cultivation. Some thousand dozen, however, are imported every year; and as steam communication is daily increasing the rapidity of transit, we may expect that every kind of fruit will become common to the palates of Englishmen.

The number of vessels employed in the dry and green trade cannot be less than from 200 to 300 fine ocha-oners, having about twelve seamen in each, so these alone will give between 2000 and 3000 men in such employ; and taking the whole engaged, from first to last, there cannot be less than 3 000 000 of people occupied in this traffic alone. The schooners average from 100 to 150 tons, and we have given a portrait of the Isabel, of 157 tons, off Gibral ar, on her voyage for the Med.terranean. She belongs to Messrs. Adams, of Pudd ng-lane (who own several others of a similar description), the principal brokers and merchants in the metropolis for oranges and lemons. They are splendid craft, sail well, dashing through all, carry a heavy press of canvass, and no fires are allowed on board, except occasionally, for the purpose of cooking, lest the heat should affect the cargo. The week before last there were no less than thirteen of these fine vessels laying at Fresh Wharf, near London-bridge, ten of which were discharging at one time. Amongst them were some of the handsomest and the best sailers. The Prospero, the King Alfred, the Torch, the Earl Spencer, the Little Wonder, the Ratinka, the Susan, &c. &c.; and the number of oranges landed in five or six days could not be far short of six millions.

FRUIT SCHOONER.

LOSS OF THE SALADIN—SUSPECTED PIRACY.

The above vessel, 343 tons, commanded by Captain Mackenzie, bound from Valparaiso to London, was lost on the 21st of last May, near Ireland harbour, Nova Scotia. Since then, circumstances have transpired which lead to a very strong impression that a horrible act of piracy and murder was committed previous to her destruction, which has engaged the attention of the naval and civil authorities of Halifax since the time of her loss, and, although nothing at present of a positive character has transpired to fix the crime upon a portion of the ship's crew, there is much reason to fear that, if not guilty of the more serious crime, they are not quite blameless as regards the lesser one. So strong was this impression entertained by the authorities at Halifax, that the crew had been taken into custody, and had undergone an examination, and from the evidence collected, in the words of the writer of a letter received at Lloyd's, "There can be but one opinion as to the fate of the officers." From the particulars furnished by Lloyd's agent, it appears that this vessel was bound from Valparaiso to London with a cargo of 70 tons of copper, guano, and 8 500 dollars in specie, and some bars of silver; that she left the former port on the 17th February last; that Captain Mackenzie, her commander, died about the middle of April, and the mate about three days after; the second mate and two men were subsequently lost from the foreyard; that no log had been kept after the 15th of Apr., about the time the captain died, or any notice of sickness on board up to that date (circumstances, it will be perceived, of a very suspicious nature), and that the complement of men when the vessel was lost was six. She went on shore, however, during a thick fog, which certainly gives some reason to suppose that she may have been lost accidentally; but, at the same time, it does not do away with the impression that such an opportunity may not have been waited for.

The Admiralty Court at Halifax had taken possession of the cargo saved from the wreck to ascertain if any symptom of piracy. All the letters on board which were supposed to contain invoices, bills of exchange, or bills of lading, are said to have been torn open by the crew, and that many were missing as also, about one thousand dollars. The articles saved from the wreck consisted of 720 pigs of copper seven bags containing about 7 554 do lars, thirteen large and one small bars of silver, two chronometers, one gold, and one silver watch, with all the material, &c. The most suspicious indications of one of the most revolting crimes to civilized nations having been committed is the sudden death of the captain, for sudden it would imply to have been the case from the fact of no mention of sickness having been made in the log book at any period of the voyage previous to his death. The next suspicious circumstance is the death of the mate upon whom, by the decease of her commander, devolved the charge of the vessel, &c., and subsequently that of the death of the next officer in authority on board, which, though it is alleged to have occurred, together with that of two of the crew from falling off the foreyard, when all things are taken into consideration, affords some grounds for supposing it to have been anything but an accident, and this appears to have been the view taken at Halifax upon the subject.

The Saladin belonged to Messrs. Johnson and Carrgil, of Newcastle.

"THE SALADIN."

VANDALISM IN GREENWICH PARK.

(From a Correspondent.)

Freshly painted boards have just been placed over all the gates of Greenwich Park, threatening "prosecutions according to law" against all persons who dare to "walk across the lawns." It is well, doubtless, to be "zealously afforded in a good cause;" but there are some people whose zeal outruns their discretion, and, in our opinion, they would do better, as the propounders of right, themselves to set an example of the very stringent precepts they feel it to be their duty to preach. But this has not been done in Greenwich Park. The jealous guardians of its "pleached alleys" and verdant lawns, "care nothing for the poor;" Judas-like they "bear the bag," and are intent only on their own official aggrandisement—or, as we shall see—the gratification of their personal convenience. Within the memory of our fathers, some fifty acres, or more, on the southern side, were ruled off, for the private accommodation of the deer. How very considerate! Fifty acres of beautifully wooded park land, the property of the public, stolen for the use of not more than thirty head of fallow deer—who by the way, have very seldom honoured this sylvan privacy with their presence, choosing rather to roam in the public walks—the regions of bun and biscuit—in the neighbourhood. It was, nevertheless, a most considerate act; yes, but it was not for "the deer." Fie upon such hypocrisy. It was for the pasturage of the good milch cows of sundry grand officials the robbery was committed. Again, these privileged spirits—these "brief authority" men—the Sydney Herberts of this much abused locality, needed "gravel," forsooth, "for their gardens"—and gravel they must have, and gratis, too, torn from the bowels of Greenwich Park. A pit was opened at the back of the Observatory, and a fair hill side permanently disfigured. But these are small faults compared with more recent acts of spoliation. Some years since, when the "flat burglary" of the cow walks was forgotten, twenty acres or more were wanted for the gardens of the Prince of Wales and the Princess Sophia; and as public land was plentiful, and public opinion weak, the great northern angle of the park was at once most unceremoniously "grabbed," and enclosed for royal use for ever. An acre or two was afterwards impounded for the park-keepers' use; and in due time—the decencies of chronological succession being most scrupulously observed—a few more acres were quietly "walked off," for the special comforts of the hospital authorities. Impunity in crime begets confirmation in its course. The Greenwich people had meekly borne this century of snubbing, and it was supposed their successors were in like manner to be trampled on, and their best privileges defied. Accordingly, on one of the fine mornings of the present season, the "lawn keepers" were observed to be busily engaged in marking out a line, which ran rom the eastern angle the park across the great holiday lawn through the groves which skirt the Observatory up the northern hill, terminating in the barrow field. What were they about? Were they going to stake off the upper side of the park in order to guard the obnoxious from invasion? The inquiries were numerous; the surmises frightful. At length it came out, that a monstrous tank was to be formed on the great north-eastern lawn, for the supply of Greenwich Hospital agua pacifica; and that the line of section of the new excavation across the park a trench was to be formed, and a huge main sunk for its conveyance. This was terrible news. The lawn in question stands on the summit of a beautiful eminence, whose foot, before the embankment of the Thames, was washed by the tranquil waters of the Pool. There the Britons in the fifth century, allured by the bold beauty of the spot, opened a vast burial field. There they interred their illustrious dead, and marked these venerated sites by those most durable of all memorials, plain circles of raised earth—rude symbols of their untutored hope in an endless and happy existence. These ground memorials of our brave, our social, our religious ancestors, have dwelt in the present time in undisturbed security. No hand through ages of violence and misrule, dared touch them. Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, who enclosed the park, was careful to keep it even with its boundary. James I., who built the present wall, used the same care. Evelyn and Le Notre, when, in the reign of Charles II., they planted the park, surrounded the British tombs—the "barrows" as they are popularly called—with a quadrangular grove of trees leaving them in the centre, as a precious bequest to the perpetual guardianship of posterity. The nation has respected the trust, and held the barrows sacred. But that which "ages and generations" have decreed it an honour to possess, some pert authorities at the Admiralty have felt it right to sacrifice to the utilitarian spirit of the age. Ten days ago, while a public meeting, of which these and authorities had due and respectful notice, was being held for the purpose of taking the sense of the public on the threatened trespass and desecration, a set of world's-end wretches were let loose on the barrows and in a few short hours, three fourths of them were actually—and IN SPITE—clean y and smoothly shaven from the face of the ancient sward. This was to add insult to oppression. The historic affections of the people were not only wounded, but their rights as Englishmen—as land ex parte-owners—were defied. The thing was not to be borne. Meeting after meeting was held, remonstrances were urged; consequences threatened; and at length the Admiralty navigators have been withdrawn from the Park, and the works are at a stand still. The reasons for this suspension of hostilities may be found in the following considerations.—

1. That the site of the Park and the adjoining heath being the property of the ancient Britons, and used by them as a vast burial plain, became by that circumstance the public and inalienable property of their successors.

2. That when the Park was originally formed, it was found necessary to turn the old Roman road from Dover to London from its direct and easy course through the site of the Park, and to carry it by its present route across the heath and down the steep and dangerous declivity of Blackheath hill, and that to compensate the public for this abiding nuisance, the Park was made an open one, to be used as a free promenade and breathing place.

3. That King William and Queen Mary constructed the walks, seats, and public conveniences, for the perpetual accommodation of the brave old tars, and that such provisions were made on the faith of the Park being public property.

4. The site of this proposed encroachment is clearly within the origina boundaries.

Here the matter for the present rests. We fear, however, that the snake is only "scotched not killed," and that, unless the subject is strongly taken up in Parliament, the beautiful Park will be exposed to still further injury.

The only plea for the removal of the barrows which has yet been made is, that they are not barrows, but merely circular eminences produced by the growth of trees once growing on the spot. In answer to this ignorance, we subjoin Douglas's account of his examination of them, published in his great work, "Nenia Britannica."

"On the 22nd Jan., 1784," he says, "under favour of the Surveyor-General of the Royal Domains, I employed labourers to open some barrows in Greenwich Park, to the amount of about fifty, and which the Kentish historians have affixed to the sepulchres of the Danes. By their conic structure and circular trench at their base I was inclined to class them with those which, with their contents have been the subject of the foregoing sheets, ('British Tumuli'), and I therefore began the research with an eye to ascertain this fact.

BARROWS IN GREENWICH PARK.

No. 1. A large central barrow. The trench in which the body was laid appeared to be just deep enough to admit of it; not more than a foot and a half deep to the native gravel, beneath the surface of the circumjacent plain. Several oxidised lumps of iron were found in it, and some uncommon thick and broad-headed nails, two or more inches in length, with decayed wood adhering to them. By the quantity of fine mould apparently produced by the decayed wood, I conjectured this body had been interred in a very thick coffin.

2. A similar barrow of middling size, the cist at its base sheeted with fine mould; small fragments of iron, with decayed wood, and an iron spear-head, ten inches long.

3. An iron knife; converted to an entire oxide. Seven inches long near the centre of the grave, and towards one end a quantity of human hair.

4. Human hair near the head.

5. Hair near the head.

6. Almost in the centre of the cluster, seemed to have been the largest—in this grave, not more than one and a half foot deep, in the native unremoved gravel, was found one of the largest iron spear-heads ever discovered; 15 inches long, 2 broad at the socket, which was not more than 2½ from the blade. The spear near the head; towards the centre a knife of iron, and fragments of an umbo of a shield of the same metal. No remains of bones, but on a line where the body seemed to have been laid, a considerable quantity of fine black vegetable mould, probably the decomposed particles of some wooden case, in which the corpse had been deposited.

7. As usual, the cist not deep in the native soil, which proves that the barrow had been raised from a circular excavation near the cluster. In this grave was a considerable quantity of woollen cloth, sheeting the whole extent of it; black and chiefly decomposed, but very observable from the distinct appearance of the warp and woof.

8. A large barrow; hair and woollen cloth, as 7.

All the others opened (about 12) contained hair and cloth.

In one barrow was found a very fine braid of auburn hair, two beads of transparent dark blue-green glass, one of white opaque glass, and one of brown-red opaque glass.

The cloth consisted of woollen of the herring-bone woof, and a finer texture of linen.

In another grave were three beads of transparent blue-green glass, and one of Naples yellow opaque glass.

It may not be unreasonable to conclude these graves to have contained female bodies, as in all probability some others did, where military weapons were not found. The inference might therefore be naturally drawn, that this place of interment was peculiar to persons who had not fallen in battle; and with no great colour of probability should it seem to have been appropriated to the repulsion of the Danes under Swein.

The soil on which these tumuli are situated, is gravel, and in some places extremely compact. The incision for the body in some of them, about a foot and a half, or less, below the surface, in the native soil; the barrow, or the conic mound of earth raised above it, most probably collected from the trench which encircles it, and from a spot of ground excavated on the east side of the range of tumuli. This excavation is annually filled up with the dead leaves collected and thrown into it."

Mr. Douglas, judging from the compressed appearance of the apex of the mounds, that they had been previously opened, found on inquiry that about 70 years previously a park-keeper of the name of Hearne had dug there and found several valuable relics.

Mr. D. concludes these barrows to be of the lower British period from their appearance, and because the beads are similar to others found in various barrows along with coins of the fifth and beginning of the sixth centuries.

Our view shows the group of the barrows which have been spared by the authorities.

SLOTH AT THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, REGENT'S PARK.

THE SLOTH AT THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

The collection of the Zoological Society in the Regent's Park has lately been enriched by the aquisition of a new wonder of the animal creation. This rarity, which has so fortunately arrived just in time to gratify the holiday-makers' craving appetite for novelty, is a living specimen of the three-toed sloth (Bradypus tridactylus), the first that has ever reached this country alive. Although every child of ordinary intelligence has imbibed some vague notion of a sloth from the descriptions in books of natural history, men of science were for a long time very much in the dark concerning its true economy, as but few persons have had an opportunity of studying it in the wilds of Guiana, of which it is a native. This lack of personal observation had led to the propagation of the most fanciful theories about the animal. Among others, of Buffon's celebrated eloquent but altogether fallacious dissertation, in which he bewails the fate of the poor sloth, as a bungled and misshapen monster, quite unfitted for any enjoyment of life, and destined from the first moment of his existence to continual misery and pain. But more careful observers have shown that this apparently incongruous animal is as beautifully adapted for the sphere Nature intended it to occupy as any other of her myriads of creatures, and that, although his progress on the level ground is so slow and painful that he has come to be looked upon as the arch-type of indolence, yet when in his natural locality, among the thick-clustering trees of a tropical forest, he is quite sprightly and active, as his necessities require him to be. The fact is, that the Sloth passes his whole life suspended, feet upwards, from the branches of trees, feeding upon their leaves, and only changing his quarters, as the Indians remark, "when the wind blows," as then the bows become so intertwined that he can pass from one tree to another without descending to the ground at all. In habits and anatomy, he differs in most respects from all other created beings, and at a casual glance appears entirely deformed and out of proportion. The fore-legs, or rather arms, are much longer than the hind legs, and are so formed and jointed to the body, as utterly to incapacitate them from supporting it on the earth; but with the aid of the long, sharp, and inseparable claws, are admirably adapted to sustain it when clinging to a branch. He has no cutting teeth, no soles to his feet, and only one inferior aperture, as in birds. He has four stomachs, and forty-six ribs, while the Elephant has only forty. The sound he emits when in distress, is so plaintive, that it is said the fierce Jaguar is touched by it, and refrains from attacking him.

The specimen in the gardens, seemingly about half grown, is nearly as large as a common cat. The hair is long, coarse, and of an ashy-grey colour, resembling rank grass withered by heat. On each side of the back is a blotch of yellow hair, shorter than the rest, which looks exactly as if it had been scorched by the pressure of a hot iron. He remains always coiled up under a large stick which has been put up in the cage for his accommodation. He has been for since his capture on sopped bread and hard biscuit, with an occasional desert of hawthorn leaves. This remarkable specimen offers an extremely valuable opportunity to the Naturalist, of adding to his stock of information, respecting a very obscure genus of quadrupeds, and must be regarded with interest by even the most careless visitor. The young giraffe is thriving famously; and the gardens are just now in the finest order.

SCENE FROM COSTA'S OPERA OF "DON CARLOS,"

SIGNOR COSTA'S NEW OPERA, DON CARLOS.

We have already written of the plot and music of this fine production of Costa's genius; we will now proceed to give an instance of its dramatic effect, by picturing, through the aid of the pencil, its tragic denouement, which is supposed to take place in the Huerta Reale, or royal garden, at midnight. After singing a parting duet of exquisite tenderness, the guilty lovers, Carlos and Isabella, are surprised by the enraged monarch, Philip, attended by the brothers of the Holy Inquisition, and a crowd of guards. Escape is hopeless—to after outpourings with passionate fervor a story of his wrongs to the King, Carlos snatches a dagger from Philip's side and plunges it in his own. The consternation, produced by this tragic deed, is, of course, immense, and the effect very imposing. The guilty and wretched Isabella, having indulged for some time in a paroxysm of musical sorrow, is rudely laid of and borne away to either death or that lingering life which the tender mercies of the sacred fraternity might provide for her, in some convent cell or dungeon. We are not over fond of a general clearance of dramatis personæ (as in "Hamlet," for instance,) by mutual destruction, but it would have made a more imposing picture, if after uttering the words—

Colla palma del martirio
Volero d'innanzi a Dio!

Isabella had swooned or died upon the scene. A doubtful fate of even criminal characters leaves a painful anxiety in the mind, witness the last scene in the "Stranger." We recollect the time—romantic time—when we would have given anything to have known the ultimate fate of poor erring Adelaide! Dove son quei trasporti soave? Alas! where?

HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS.

MR. W. STERNDALE BENNETT. — This distinguished artiste's Grand Morning Concert took place on Tuesday last, and notwithstanding the very unfavourable state of the weather, was most numerously and fashionably attended. But this, however, was not to be wondered at, for, independent of having a large circle of friends and ardent admirers of his genius, the beneficiaire put forth on the occasion a more than usually attractive programme. His own beautiful concerto in A minor, his concert Stück, and his duet with Mendelssohn would have been sufficiently alluring musical gems; but then in addition we had a new (MS.) overture (Bennett), Mendelssohn's grand symphony, in A minor, and his celebrated motette for female voices, composed for the Trinite di Monte Convent at Rome, in which the great composer unites all the contrapuntal learning of a Palestrina with the grace of modern melodists. The vocalists were Madame Castellan (who is gaining rapidly in public favour), Miss Dolby, and Miss Marshall; Signor Brizzi, Mr. J Bennett, Mr. Machin, and Herr Staudigl. It was quite delightful throughout the concert to remark the brotherly feeling that existed between the great German composer (pianist also) and our countryman Bennett. True geniuses are never envious of each other.

DURHAM REGATTA.

This aquatic entertainment, on the 17th and 18th instant, was well attended. The first race was for a purse of 10 sovereigns, by six four-oared boats, and was won by the John Bell. The second race for a set of silver cups, by gentlemen, in four-oared boats, was won by the Ariel. There were, also, on this day, two skiff races; besides a gold medal for gentlemen scullers, contested by nine, and won by Lalla Rookh; and the Challenge Cup, University four-oared race, won by St. George.

On the second day there was a handicap sweepstakes for four-oared boats, gentlemen rowers, won by the Caroline; besides a skiff race for a silver medal, won by Lalla Rookh; minor handicap sweepstakes, &c.

Our engraving of the spirited scene has been obligingly sketched by a correspondent: it shows the picturesque banks of the winding Wear—a strikingly beautiful locality.

THE DURHAM REGATTA.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

Rear-Admiral Sir Hugh Pigot, Commander in Chief at Cork, is ordered to place at the disposal of the Earl of Devon, and the Landlord and Tenant Commission for Ireland, one of the steam-vessels under his command.

The Princess Alice, government steamer, is under orders to be at Calais, en route to London on board at that port on the morning of the 3d of July, her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta of Mecklenburg Strelitz, who comes to England on a visit to the Queen and royal family.

Sir Richard Dobson, Inspector of Fleets and Hospitals, has retired from Greenwich Hospital, after 50 consecutive years of arduous and honourable service. Sir Richard was created a knight by his late Majesty King William the Fourth, at the recommendation of Sir James Graham, when First Lord of the Admiralty.

According to the Vienna journals, the population of that capital amounts to 3?,?34 souls, being an increase of 12?,?14 since ?820.

Messrs. Brostet and Company of the Tyne, arrived in town on Saturday from Portsmouth, with the consignment of specie silver received from China per her Majesty's ship Wanderer. This remittance consists of 250 boxes, said to contain 1,000,000 dollars, and is the third installment of the money agreed to be paid to this country by the Chinese government for the ransom of Canton.

The extensive and valuable collection of books, contained in the late Duke of Sussex's library, at Kensington Palace, is about to be submitted to public auction by Messrs. Evans, of Pall-mall. Government having declined to purchase the same for the British Museum within the period prescribed by his late Royal Highness's will.

The exhibitions of works sent in, pursuant to notice issued by her Majesty's Commissioners of Fine Arts, in May and July, 1843, with a view to assist them in the selection of persons to be employed in the decoration of portions of the New Houses of Parliament, will be thrown open to the public on Monday next, at Westminster Hall.

A private letter from New York, dated 27th May, of the veracity of which we have no doubt, states that the negotiations for a treaty of commerce between the United States and the Customs Union may be considered as broken off, and that it is not probable that they will be resumed.

Admiral Sir Baldwin Walker, K C B (Yanar Pasha), who distinguished himself at the capture of St. Jean d'Acre, in 1840, arrived at the Burlington Hotel, Cork-street, on Saturday last, from Constantinople. The gallant admiral has been for some years commander in chief in the Black Sea.

A large vessel arrived in the Mersey, on Sunday, with a cargo of ice from Boston. This unusual importation will prove very acceptable if the weather continues as hot as it has been for some few days past. An ice house, built on the American plan, has been constructed for its reception

We have reason to believe that the appointment of Lord Heytesbury as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has been all but definitively settled

Coin of the Realm.—Mint Office, June 25, 1844.—Sovereigns, 5?,?00?. Spanish, 2?,?00?. Silver, 1?,?00?.

A very important alteration took place on the 1st inst., under the Stamp Act, in respect of agreements, which, under the act 55 Geo. III., c. 184, were chargeable with a duty of 4?l, and which is now reduced to 2?. ?l., as set forth in the schedule. Another important alteration is that an agreement may be stamped within 14 days without any penalty, and if required to be stamped at the expiration of that period a penalty of 4?l to be paid.

The Duke de Bordeaux has notified to all the Courts of Europe the death of the Duke d'Angouleme. To this notification is annexed another protest of the Duke against the unlawful order of succession. The Duke adds that far from wishing to adopt any step calculated to disturb the peace that prevails, he intends to leave all to circumstances and futurity. The Duke has himself styled Monseigneur and not your Majesty.

By the return of the Mayor to Brighton on Wednesday morning, we learn that the King of the French was expected to arrive on Thursday at Ville d'Eu. His Majesty's carriages and horses had arrived at the chateau. Prince Soltikoff, from Russia, arrived by the Magnet and landed on the chain pier.

On Wednesday, at the auction rooms of Mr. Evans, Pall-mall, all the remaining copies of the descriptive catalogue of the Royal Highness the late Duke of Sussex's library, illustrated with copious notes, historical, literary, and biographical, of the extraordinary collection of bibles, accompanied with facsimiles, were disposed of. Among the lots offered for sale was a curious autograph letter of Sir Walter Scott, addressed to J. M. Reid, Esq., informing him of his having determined to be the author of the Waverley novels, which was disposed of for two guineas and a half.

The Commissioners of Customs have issued an order, directing that the amount of fines imposed on officers, clerks, and day-pay officers, in London, for irregular attendance during the last year, together with the balances of former years, be reserved for disposal of the Board, in benevolent grants to the widows and children of deceased officers.

According to the new Customs Act, vinegar, or acetous acid, is to be in future tried by an instrument, and charged with duty according to strength, (proof being such strength of acetous acid, that one-hundred parts of the liquor, by weight, will saturate or neutralise fourteen and a half parts by weight of chrystalised sub-carbonate of soda), all above being charged with duty.

THE MARKETS.

Mark-lane—Friday.—The returns for the present week show a fair average arrival of English wheat, viz. 4?83 quarters, and a very limited supply of that article can offer to day. Owing to the late fine showers, the genera. demand for grain was in a very depressed state. However, the finest parcels of both new and old produce were quite as dear, but other sizes ought have been purchased on lower terms. From Scotland we have received 5?00 quarters of wheat, duty on which has been paid on 15?. quarters. Both free and bonded qualities were very dull, and the turn of wheat, barley, beans, and peas, were, in some instances, is per quarter lower.

Arrivals—English by sea, 4?7? barley, 6?0; oats, 9?8; malt, ——; barley, 150; oats, 13,250. Foreign wheat, 8?00; barley, ?7?0, oats, 4?60 qrs. Flour, ?1? sacks; malt, 6?69 qrs.

English Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 38s to 42s; ditto white, 44s to 52s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 40s to 44s; ditto white, 46s to 50s; rye, 28s to 30s; grinding barley, 2?s to 2?s; distilling ditto, 30s to 2?s; malting ditto, 1s to 36s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 60s to 62s; Lincolnshire feed oats, 22s to 23s; potato ditto, 22s to 2?s; Yorkshire and Cheshire, 24s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 22s to 23s; potatoe ditto, 22s to 2?s; Youghal and Cork, black, 21s to 22s; ditto white, 2?s to 2?s; Scotch ditto, 2?s to 24s; harrow ditt., 21s to 2?s; grey peas, 31s to 33s; maple ditto, 31s to 32s; white, 32s to 34s; boilers, 35s to 36s per quarter. Town made flour, 37s to 39s; Suffolk ditto, 30s to 32s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 28s to 29s, per 2?8 lbs. Foreign.—Free wheat, 43s to 50s; Dantzig, red, 40s to 41s; white, 46s to 48s; Konigsberg, 41s to 42s; oats, new, 12s to 16s; ditto old, 18s to 20s; feed ditto, 15s to 19s; peas, 34s to 36s per quarter. Flour, American, 31s to 32s per barrel

Seed Market.—For linseed, rapeseed, and canary, we have had a fair inquiry, at fully the late advance in the currencies. All other kinds of seeds are very dull.

The following are the present rates:—linseed, English sowing, 50s to 52s; Baltic crushing, 52s to 53s. Mediterranean and Odessa, 47s to 48s; hempseed, 37s per quarter; coriander, 18s to 20s per cwt.; rapeseed, English new, 2?l 10s to 2?l 15s; foreign, 45s to 46s per last of 10 quarters; caraway seed, 42s to 44s per cwt.; linseed cakes, 6l to 6l 2s per 1?00 English, 5l 15s to 5l 17s 6d per 1?00 foreign, 4?7 6s to 4?7 10s; rapeseed 4?8 5s to 4?8 10s per ton; canary 38s to 40s per quarter

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8d to 8½d; of household ditto, 6d to 7½d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average of Grain.—Wheat, 38s 8d; barley, 32s 8d; oats, 22s 6d; rye, —— 2d; beans, 37s 10d; peas, 37s 4d.

Six Weeks' Average of Grain Duties.—Wheat, 15s 8d; barley, 13s 4d; oats, 21s 10d; rye, 21s 10d; beans, 23s 4d; peas, 23s 6d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 12s; barley, 7s; oats, 6s; rye, 12s 6d; beans, 7s 6d; peas, 9s 6d

Tea.—In this article rather more business is doing, and prices are firm. Common congou is selling at 11½d to 1s, and ordinary twankay, 1s. Wood, 6 Gt. Pulteney-street.

Sugar.—In all descriptions of sugar a good business has been done since our last report, and the rates have undergone an upward change. Standard loaves are now selling at 3?s 6d per cwt.; grocery, 37s 6d to 39s per cwt. The stock in warehouse to which some large additions have been lately made is in very good

Coffee.—Although the markets is well supplied with all kinds of coffee, the demand is comparatively steady, yet the rates are not supported—most of the importers evincing a disposition to meet the buyers on easier terms.

Rice.—This article is steady at late rates. Good to fullest middling white Bengal has sold at 11s to 11s. 3d. inferior, 10s 6d to 10s 9d per cwt.

Oils.—For most kinds of oils the demand is rather slow, yet we can notice no material alteration in figures.

Tallow.—There is rather less doing in this market, yet prices are steadily supported P. Y. C. on the spot is quoted at 41s to 41s 6d, and for forward delivery, the value is 41s 6d per cwt.

Provisions.—During the last few days of last week the demand for butter was quite limited, and prices gave way 2s per cwt. Since Monday last the inquiry has been very moderate, and we have no alteration to notice in the value of any description. The imports into London last week were 1?,?00 casks and ?,?00 firkins. Bacon sells slowly, at late rates. The supply of lambs being extensive, that description of stock was a dull sale, and the turn lower. Mutton and veal ruling rates. The general inquiry has been the case on the whole during the last two months, yet the commercial trade has been quite as good. Pigs were a dull inquiry, at late rates, which can be supported.

Per 8 lbs., to sink the offal:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; second quality do., 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large oxen, 3s 10d to 4s; prime Scots, 4s; 2s 10d to 4s 0d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; second quality do., 4s to 4s 2d; prime coarse woolled sheep, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime Southdown, 4s 8d to 5s; large calves, 4s 4d to 4s 8d; small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s; second quality do., 4s 2d to 4s 4d; inferior ditto, 3s 8d to 4s; porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 6d; lambs, 4s 8d to 5s 4d. Suckling calves, 18s to 24s each. Quarter-old store pigs, 16s 0d to 20s each. Beasts, ?,?; cows, ?7? sheep and lambs, 13,?50; calves, 530; pigs, 3?0.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—We had a steady demand for each kind of meat, the value of which was supported.—Per 8lbs by the carcass:—Coarse and inferior beef, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; middling ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large ditto, 3s 10d to 4s; prime small ditto, 4s to 4s 2d; large pork, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; inferior mutton, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; middling ditto, 3s 10d to 4s; prime ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; veal, 3s 6d to 4s 2d; and lamb, 4s 6d to 5s 6d.

KENT, HASSARD.

COMMERCE AND MONEY.

In the money market, during the week, few transactions have occurred in any way interesting to the public. On the English Stock Exchange little buoyancy and animation in any description of the funded debt, but, on the contrary, the inclination on the part of capitalists to invest money in British national securities is rather less this week than it was during the course of the last. Still, the quantity of floating stock now in the market for sale is not sure, that the prices are well maintained by investments of trust money, however small they may be. Consols for the settlement, therefore, remain at the high price of 9?, less the half year's dividend, and all other descriptions of the British funded debt bear proportionably high prices. Money, notwithstanding the assistance to embark it in public securities, continues to be in great abundance in the market, and in acts favourably on the value of the shares of the principal joint stock associations. It is the general opinion amongst the monied interest, that the recovery of the credit of England Charter must eventually be to render money scarcer, and consequently more valuable, and accordingly the few shares in the London joint stock banking associations, which are brought forward for sale, are eagerly purchased at rather improving prices. Union Bank of London shares, and those of the London and Westminster, and of the London Joint Stock Banks, are in demand, particularly the former, and to obtain any large amount of them, the proprietors must be tempted by higher prices than the quotations of them at the present moment are. To the Railway railway securities the attention of the public is also directed, and a great deal of business has been again done in various descriptions of them, since our last publication. York and North Midland shares have been purchased rather extensively, at 15?, and an advance of 4?. on each share of Birmingham Stock must be submitted to, if purchasers are to obtain the investment. Great Western are likewise a little dearer than they were last week. The same remark is applicable to the shares of the Grand Junction line, and those of the Glasgow and Ayr line have reached the high figure of 68. This is the great Irish route by the way of Portpatrick, and one shows a wanting still to improve the value of those shares. On the whole these great joint stock banks, and other public associations, are apparently becoming greater favourites with the public daily, for the safe and profitable investment of money

The large quantities of foreign grown produce, which are now weekly arriving in this country, and the still larger quantities which are expected to be imported here during the remainder of this year, continue to increase, on the Royal Exchange, the demand for bills drawn on foreign nations, but as our exports from our trade is still in a very healthy condition, the supply of bills, last post day, was little inferior to the demand, and in the rates of the Foreign Exchange, no little alteration can be noticed.

On the Foreign Stock Exchange, the only variations in the value of foreign securities during the week have been in Dutch 2½ per Cents., which have advanced to 63¾, in Brazilian, which are also one per cent higher, and in Spanish Passives, which have undergone a fluctuation, which as advance, to the same amount, must be noted. Speculators continue to amuse themselves freely with Mexican bonds, and their operations regulate their prices, and not their intrinsic worth. Mexican bonds have been placed much in the same position by similar causes. Every fluctuation which may occur of money changes hands in these speculative transactions, but whether the Bulls or the Bears gain the victory is of little public importance.

British Funds.—London and Westminster Bank, 26½ to —; London Joint Stock Bank, 14¼ Commercial Bank of London, —; National Provincial Bank of England, —; Bank Stock, 19?½ to —; Reduced, 9?¾ to 9?; Consols, Bank of London, 13¼ to 13; Three per Cent. Consols, —; to —; Three per Cent. Reduced, 99½; Three and a Half per Cents., 101¾; New Three and a Half per Cent. New, —; Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Reduced, 102¾ to —; Five per Cents., —; Long Annuities, 13 7-16 to —; India Bonds, 4 prem.; Exchequer Bills, ?6 prem.; Consols for the Settlement, —; to —; ex. div.; National Bank of Ireland, —; South Sea Stock, 99¾; South Sea Stock, —; Ditto for Account, —; South Sea Old Annuities, —; Union of Australasia, —; Provincial Bank of Ireland, —; Colonial Bank, —; Bengal Bank, —; North American Bank, —.

Foreign Bonds and Shares.—Belgian, 104 to —; Buenos Ayres, 86 to 87; Colombian Bonds, 19¾ to 14; Venezuela, 41 to —; Greek Bonds, 14 to 15; Mexicans, 26 to —; Portuguese Converted, 4?½ to —; Ditto 5 per Cents., —; Spanish Passives, 23¾ to —; Spanish 3 per Cents, 21¾ ½ to —; Dutch 2½ per Cents, 63¾ to —; Dutch 4 per Cents, 100¾; Russians 1?8? to —; Austrian, 115 to 116; Danish, 99 to 99½; Brazilian, 81 to 82; Chilian, 104; Cuba 6 per Cents., —; Neapolitan, 102 to 104; Dutch 4 per Cents, —.

Prices of Shares.—Birmingham and Derby, 85 to —; Scarborough Branch 22½; Birmingham and Gloucester, 97 to —; Bristol and Exeter, —; Eastern Counties, New, 13¾ to —; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 45 to 47; Great North of England, 127 to —; Great Western, 75¾ to 76; Hull and York, 17 to —; London and Brighton, 15¾; London and Maidstone, —; Liverpool, Crosby, and Northern, —; London and Southampton, —; Manchester and Leeds, 1?5, Manchester and Birmingham, 97 to —; North Western, 86 to —; North Midland, 98¾ to —; Newcastle and Darlington, —; Northern and Eastern, 98; Paris and Rouen, 93; Paris and Orleans, 89; South Eastern and Dover, 36; York and Norwich, —; Dublin and Cashel, 6; Guildford Junction, —; Lancaster and Carlisle, 64 to —; Stockton and Holyhead, 8½ to 8½; North British, —; Stranraer and Bale, —; Rouen and Havre, —; Caledonian, —; Leith and Hartlepool, —; Yarmouth and Norwich, 29½, Rental and Gloucester, — to —; Liverpool and Manchester —; Glasgow and Ayr, 67½; North British Rental, 12¾ to —; Guildford Junction; Norwich and Brandon, —; Grand Junction, —; Trent Valley, —; Caledonian, —; Dundrum, and Glasgow and Paisley, —; Dublin and Drogheda Junction, —; Glasgow and Ayr, 67 to 68; Edinburgh and Berwick, 2? to 3.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, June 25.

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN THIS PRESENT PARLIAMENT.

CROWN-OFFICE, June 25.—Borough of Evesham.—The Hon. Henry Arthur Coke, of Florence-court, in the county of Fermanagh, in the county of Ireland, vice Henry Coke, who has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds.

WAR-OFFICE, June 25.—Grenadier Guards: Capt. the Hon. W. E. FitzMaurice to be Captain, vice Lord T. C. F. Clinton; Lieut. Sir C. W. Kent, Bart., to be Captain, vice Fitzmaurice, Cornet and Sub-Lieut. Gore appointed to the Coldstream Regiment of Foot Guards; Cornet F. Graham to be Cornet and Sub Lieutenant, vice Lord Glenna. Royal Regt. of Horse Guards: Lieut. E. Clive to be Captain, vice Sir C. Dyvenor; 2nd Royal Regt. of Foot: G. Lennox to be Lieutenant, vice Oliver; Lieut. Montgomery to be Captain, vice Lord A. G. Lennox.

11th Light Dragoons. Capt. C. J. Colville to be Captain, vice Wemyss.

1st Foot: T. E. Bagnold to be Ensign, vice Fleming; Assist.-Surg. W. M'Carthy, M.D., to be Assistant Surgeon, vice Cadell. 3d Foot: Capt. Hon. Robert Boyle to be Major, vice Charleton 9th: Lieut. F. J. Field to be Captain, vice Edmonds; Ensign E. Morton to be Lieutenant, vice Field; Ensign H. J. Wright to be Lieutenant, vice Morton; Cadet R. Thornhill to be Ensign, vice Wallack. 10th: Capt. R. Tennant, from half-pay 98th, to be Captain, vice R. Hobson to be Captain, vice Tennison; Ensign S. C. C. Galloway to be Lieutenant, vice Hobson; Ensign R. Gore to be Lieutenant, vice Galloway. 13th: Lieut. H. P. Barnston to be Lieutenant, vice Neville. 32nd: Lieut. J. E. Thackwell to be Adjutant, vice Kay; Ensign T. Andrews to be Lieutenant, vice Barnston. 38th: Surg. of the Second Class J. Stewart to be Surgeon, vice Bell. 56th: Capt. T. M. L. Wegram to be Major, vice Dongall. 61st: Lieut. Hon. A. Gore to be Lieutenant, vice Maunsell. 82nd: Ensign R. N. Pelley to be Lieutenant, vice F. Carden; Ensign W. Fellowes to be Lieutenant, vice Boyle. 89th: Lieut. H. Holbech to be Captain, vice Thomas; Second Lieut. G. Rhodes to be First Lieutenant, vice Holbech; Cadet W. Eustace to be Second Lieutenant, vice Rhodes. Lieut. H. Reany to be Captain, vice Perry. Ensign C. J. Skerry to be Lieutenant, vice Reany. Cadet G. D. E. Bowen to be Ensign, 86th: Cadet F. J. King to be Ensign, vice Porter. 87th: Lieut. J. A. Cruickshank to be Lieutenant, vice Shadforth; Ensign W. Shadforth to be Lieutenant, vice Crookshank. 94th: H. H. Pratt to be Ensign, vice Fraser. 98th: Lieut. R. Hobson, from the 10th Foot, to be Captain, vice Tennant; Ensign G. Eddington to be Lieutenant, vice Thompson; Ensign L. Fraser to be Ensign, vice Eddington, 2nd West India Regiment: Lieut. Hon. Charles Patterson, from 97th: Capt. H. Kean to be Captain, vice H. Rosse.; Lieut. W. Garforth to be Captain, vice Kean; Ensign S. C. Jackson to be Lieutenant, vice Garforth.

3rd West India Regiment—C. W. Rancroft to be Ensign, vice M'Taggart.

Ceylon Rifle Regiment.—Second Lieut. A. F. Colley to be First Lieutenant, vice Du Vernet; R. Mullen to be Second Lieutenant, vice Colley.

Royal Canadian Rifle Regiment.—Capt. P. L. M'Dougall to be Captain, vice Colville; H. Wilmot to be Lieutenant, vice Hospital Staff.—Assist. Staff-Surg. J. C. Cameron, M.D., to be Staff Surgeon of the Second Class, vice Bennett; Assist.-Surg. G. G. Robertson, M.D., to be Staff Surgeon of the Second Class, vice Nugent.

Brevet.—Capt. B. Tennison to be Major in the Army; Capt. H. Kean to be Major in the Army, Capt. the Hon. Robert Boyle to be Major in the Army.

Commissariat.—Commissariat Clerk R. C. Major to be Deputy-Assistant Commissary General.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, June 24.—Corps of Royal Engineers—Gentlemen Cadets to be Second Lieutenants:—Arthur Clarke, vice Gray, Francis Da Cane, vice Gossett. Robert Dundas Kerr, vice Luyseer. John Frederick Lewis, vice Hamilton. Edward Bell Ramsay, vice Second Captain John Isaac Hope to be Captain, William Cameron Forbes to be Captain, vice William, First Lieut. Augustus Frederick Lefroy to be Second Captain, vice Forbes, Second Lieut. James Robert Mann to be First Lieutenant, vice Yorke.

Royal Regiment of Artillery.—Gentlemen to be Second Lieutenants.—George Colclough, vice Hill; Thomas Walter Milward, vice Lawson; Henry Alexander Hamilton Alexander Pitcairn Blakely, vice Green; Robert Nicholas Faraskerley Crauford, vice Williams; Frederick William Lloyd, vice Patton; Wilmot Gonville Inglis Bruce, vice Morris; Walter Scott Hughes, vice Mackay; Matthew High Forbes, vice Grant; Hilary Townsend Baker, vice Lewis; Edward Bell Ramsay, vice Anderson; Alexander Johnson, Samuel Enderby Gordon, vice Connell; William Glascott Stubbs, vice Forrest; Charles Wyndham Ridout, vice Elgee.

BANKRUPTS.—W. R. READ, Winchester-street, Pentonville, builder—J. HODGE, Ashburnham-place, Guy, victualler.—J. F. WOOD, Oxford, surgeon.—C. F. OPPENHEIM, George-street, Mansion-house, merchant.—Thomas Bagshaw, Sandbach, Cheshire, cotton manufacturer.—C. BOND, Manchester, brickmaker.—S. ASKHAM, Bradford, Yorkshire, commission agent.—J. WILKINSON, Leeds, Yorkshire, flax spinner.—John Graham, Lancaster, cotton spinner.—J. HOWARTH, Rochdale, Lancashire, woollen manufacturer.

Friday, June 28.

WAR-OFFICE, June 28.—2nd Dragoons. E. Amphlett to be Cornet, vice Graham.

4th Regiment of Foot: Lieut. J. R. Shortt to be Adjutant, vice Rumsey; Ensign H. B. Ramsbottom to be Lieutenant, vice Shortt; Sergeant C. R. Wollaston to be Quartermaster, vice Ramsbottom 9th: Ensign Augustus Lee to be Quartermaster, vice G. W. Hafferty. 22nd: Gent. Cadet G. F. B. Morrison to be Ensign, vice Keogh. 24th: Ensign F. G. Steward to be Lieutenant, vice Edwardes; T. W. R. Coventry to be Ensign, vice Keogh. 32nd: Quartermaster-Sergeant J. Hall to be Quartermaster, vice T. Healey. 57th: J. J. Hourcheer to be Ensign, vice M'Nair. 63rd: Capt. F. Mitchell to be Captain, vice Lovell. T. H. Sandham to be Captain, vice Mitchell; Ensign F. G. Steward to be Lieutenant, vice Bathurst; Ensign A. B. Hardenge to be Ensign, vice Steward. Capt. R. Low to be Paymaster, vice F. Farley. 69th: Ensign G. A. Samarajee to be Lieutenant, vice Denwille, H. M. Walmsley to be Ensign, vice Samarajee. Gent. Cadet Serg. J. Carrol, to be Quartermaster, vice J. Patterson. 97th: T. Venables to be Ensign, vice Jackson. 98th: Lieut. E. Grantham to be Adjutant, vice Wade.

1st West India Regiment. J. W. Johnston, M.D., to be Assistant Surgeon, vice Holmes.

Cape Mounted Rifemen: Ensign R. Shortt to be Lieutenant, vice Pearce.

Royal Military College.—Capt. J. W. Dalgety to be Captain of a Company of Gentlemen Cadets, vice Brevet Lieut.-Col. G. Wright.

Brevet.—Capt. F. Mitchell to be Major in the Army.

BANKRUPTS.—R. HOWLAND, auctioneer, Tiverton, Oxfordshire. J. WETENHALL, stone and share broker, Liverpool.—J. HOLDSWORTH, Sheffield, cutlery manufacturer, Sheffield. E. PRITCHARD, wine and spirit merchant, Liverpool. J. FLETCHER, colour manufacturer, Liverpool. R. HETHERINGTON, tanner, Ellen-grove, Cumberland.

BIRTHS.

At Bromley Manor, the Honourable Mrs. Newton Lane, of a daughter.—On Thursday, the 27th, at 6, Upper Wimpole-street, the wife of Thomas Butler, Esq., of a son.—In Great Britain-street, Dublin, the lady of Commander John Patten Nunn, R.N., of a daughter.—At Brighton, the lady of J. C. Chaplin, Esq., of Birmingham, of a son.—At Caversham, Oxon, the lady of Edward Vines, Esq., of a son.—In Kensington square, the wife of the Rev. Archer Thompson, rector of Ashby cum-Fenby, Lincolnshire, of a son.—At Aldenham-lodge, Herts, the lady of the Rev John Marsh, of a son, which survived but a few hours.—At Liverpool, the lady of Captain R. G. Fanshawe, R.N., of a son.—At Ulcombe place, Kent, Lady Frances Fletcher, of a son.—At Rome, the lady of Dr. James Arnott, of a son.—In Harley-street, the lady of Frederick Hayden, vicar of Harringworth, of a son.—At the Cadet Barracks, Woolwich, the lady of Lieut. H. P. Christie, Royal Artillery, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

At the Abbey Church, Lanercost, George Alfred Carne, Esq., to Frances, eldest daughter of George Shadforth, Esq., Orchard House, Cumberland.—At Paris, the Count de Bethune, nephew of his Highness the Prince de Bethune, to Caroline, fifth daughter of the Rev. Dr. Dorsey, Esq., of Xeres and of London.—At Rotherham, Anthony Trollope, Esq., of the General Post-office, Ireland, to Rose, daughter of Edward Heseltine, Esq., of Rotherham.—At Stanton Harcourt, Oxfordshire, H. W. Chilton, Esq., of Brussels, to Harriette, daughter of Percival Wyatt Lake, Esq., of Stanton Harcourt.—At St. Pancras Church, Captain H. Anderton, of the 32nd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, to Eliza, second daughter of the late Rev. Josiah C. Rose, rector of St. Mary Somer Church, B. Bradley Hewitt, Esq., to Letitia Catherine, only daughter of the late Major Colin Campbell, of Scrancur, Argyleshire.

At Acton, Cheshire, Wilbraham Spencer Tollemache, Esq., to Anne, daughter of the late Rev. James Tomline, of Dorfield.—At St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Nicholas Tyacke, Esq., M.D., of Chichester, to Frances Anne, eldest daughter of J. B. Freeland, Esq., at St. Mary's Church, Westminster, Robert Russell, Esq., Post Captain in Her Majesty's navy, to Miss Hester Lushington, the eldest daughter of the Right Hon. Stephen Lushington.—At the parish church of St. Cuthbert, Wells, the Rev. Wilson Fielder, M.A., Vice Principal of the Theological College, to Mary, daughter of the late J. W. Tucwey, Esq., of the Liberty, Wells.—At Oxford, William F. Donkin, Esq., Savilian Professor of Astronomy, to Harriet, third daughter of the Rev. John Hawtrey incumbent of St. James's Church, Guernsey.—At St. George's, Bloomsbury, J. A. Fleuring, Esq., Associate of the Royal Academy of Music, to France, eldest daughter of Mr. J. Prewer.—At Stamford-hill Chapel, Upper Clapton, the Rev Henry Robbins, M.A., of Wadham College, Oxford, to Agnes, third daughter of the late John Gooton, Esq., formerly of Worksop Notts.—At St. George's Church, Hanover-square, the Rev. Augustus Berkeley, a first son of William Berkeley, Esq., of Park Villas, Notting-hill, and late of Coopersale Hall, in the county of Essex, to Harriet Elizabeth, third daughter of J. F. Nicholl, Esq., of the Chancellor's Hammersmith.—At Stamford hill Chapel, Upper Clapton, the Rev. Henry Robins, M.A., late of Wadham College, Oxford, to Agnes, third daughter of the late John Garton, Esq., formerly of Worksop, Notts.

DEATHS

In Carlisle, Mr. Peter Nicholson, the celebrated architect.—At Jerusalem, the infant son of Sir Cecil Bishopp, Bart.—After a lingering illness, John M'Ilis, Esq., formerly of Brandreton Hall, Suffolk.—At Harrogate, Miss Elizabeth Mary Anne Lloyd, only surviving daughter of the late William Lloyd, Esq., Master in the 34th year of her age.—At Bamegate, in her 6?th year, Marianne, wife of Samuel Sharwood, Esq.—At Chester-place, Kennington, Harriet Elizabeth, third daughter of the Rev. Thomas Dunn.—At his seat, the Lodge, Hillingdon, near Uxbridge, Thomas Hankey, Esq., Commissary-General, aged 69.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements cannot be received after Seven o'clock on Thursday Evening.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS. The Tenth Annual Exhibition is now open, at their Gallery, 53 Pall Mall, next the British Institution.—Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d. From nine till dark

JAMES FAHEY, Secretary

GENERAL TOM THUMB.—RE-OPENED FOR THE MIDSUMMER HOLIDAYS.—Owing to numerous requests of Parents and others whose Children will visit London during the Holidays, the GENERAL has returned to GATLIN'S EGYPTIAN HALL, and will remain a short period longer, exhibiting in the daytime only, from Eleven to One, and from Half-past Two to Five, representing Roman Statues, Napoleon Musing, Songs, Dances, &c. The elegant presents from her Majesty the Queen Dowager, the Duke of Devonshire, and others, may be seen in the Hall. The General will give Grand Concerts at the Adelaide Gallery each evening of this week from Eleven to Five, and Eight to Ten.

MIDSUMMER HOLIDAYS.—ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—LONGBOTTOM'S PHYSIOSCOPE exhibits the human face, with its varied expressions, on a gigantic scale, curiously contrasted with the living man. The ORGANIC MICROSCOPE magnifies effectively. A succession of WORKS of the FINE ARTS, also, casts of INSCRIPTIONS taken by Miss Wilson from the WALLS of the TOWER of LONDON, cast by Lord Gu.ford Dudley, and other State Prisoners. Arrangements have been made for the ENTIRE RYAN OF VARIED LECTURES on the EVENINGS of MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAYS, and Professor BACHHOFFNER on the alternate Evenings. These Lectures, on Popular Subjects, as well as the Morning Lectures, will abound in interesting Experiments. ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE. DIVING BELL and DIVING DRESS. NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS, &c. The Music is conducted by T. Wallis, Mus. Doc.—Admission, One Shilling Schools, Half price.

THE TREMENDOUS SUCCESS of the EQUESTRIAN WONDERS and GREAT OF LANTERN'S Military Drama at Astley's Royal Amphitheatre. Proprietor and Manager Mr. W. BATTY. On MONDAY, July 1, and during the week, the Grand Military and Naval Spectacle of the CHINESE WAR, OR, THE CONQUEST OF AMOY, with the Brilliant FEASTS OF 250 LANTERNS. Other splendid effects. New Scenes in the Circle by Signor Louis Tourniai, Scenic Artist to the Theatre. Mr. R. Smith, the Author, has added new pieces of THE ROYAL COTILLION OF FRANCIS I. Concluding with (first time) an after spectacle, entitled, THE GREAT PURPLE GRAPE, OR, ENGLAND HARVEST HOME, introducing old English Sports and Steeple Chases on the Stage and in the Circle, by Six Real Horses, with other sporting incidents. Acting and Stage Manager Mr. W. D Broadfoot. Box Office open from ten till four. Daily Lessons in the Art of Riding by Mr R. Smith.

THE ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, under the patronage of Her Majesty the Queen, his Royal Highness the Queen Dowager, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, his Royal Highness Prince Albert of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, K.G., and his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, K.G., is incorporated by Royal Charter, for the promotion of Botany in all its branches, and for the formation of extensive Botanical and Ornamental Gardens within the metropolitan district.

The Society's last Exhibition of Plants and Flowers during this season, will take place in the Gardens of the Society, Regent's Park, on Tuesday, July 2. An Exhibition of Microscopes, to illustrate the structure of Plants, is added to the attractions.

Tickets can be had only by orders from Fellows. Price before the day of exhibition, 5s. each; and, on the day of exhibition, 7s. 6d. each.

Offices for the Sale of Tickets, at the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, and next week at 26, Regent-street.

Fellows and Members are admitted without Tickets, upon signing their names in the Gardener's book at the Gardens.

Should the weather prove wet, a new gate, connected with the Tents, will be opened to admit the company to view the plants without being exposed to the rain.

J. D. C. SOWERBY, Secretary.

TEAS at Wholesale Prices, 2. Bucklersbury, Cheapside.

Fouchong 2s. 8d., 2s. 10d.	do.
Congou 2s. 2d., 2s. 4d.	do.
Souchong 2s., 2s. 2d.	do.
Twankay 2s. 4d.	do.
Young Hyson 3s., 3s. 4d., 4s. 4d., 5s., 5s. 6d.
Hyson 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s., 6s.
Gunpowder 4s. 4d., 5s., 6s., and 7s.

MANSELL and Co., 2, Bucklersbury, Cheapside. Six pounds of the above forwarded free of carriage to any part of the Kingdom.

IMPORTANT to FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A considerable saving can be effected in purchasing Ironmongery, by visiting the PANKLEHORN IRON WORKS, 38, Baker-street, Portman-square, where may be inspected the most extensive STOCK of IRONMONGERY GOODS in the Kingdom, consisting of kitchen cooking utensils, fenders, stoves, chimney-piece stoves, shower and vapour baths, ornamental iron work, garden implements, japanned water cans and toilette pails, best bedsteads, bird cages, fire irons, dog irons, tea trays, tea urns, ornamental wire work, flower-stands, table cutlery, &c. Every article being marked in plain figures, at the lowest possible price, will fully convince purchasers of the great advantage and advantage resulting from cash payments, as the Proprietors warrant every article of the very best description, with a saving of at least 30 per cent.—THORPE FALLOWS, and CO., 38, Baker-street, Portman-square.—A liberal allowance to Shippers and Merchants.

MIND COMPLAINTS or NERVOUSNESS.—Clergymen, Noblemen, and all who suffer from groundless fear, suspicion, inquietude, &c., confusion, forgetfulness, incapacity, timidity, blushing, headache, vertigo, loss of memory, delusion, inquisitive for society, study, or business; blood to the head, restlessness, wretchedness, dislike of mankind, &c., can now not only be relieved, but tranquillised, made happy, and cured. The Rev. T. HARTWELL HORNE, Rectory of St. Edmund, after reading these sufferings fourteen years, discovered their causes, and, and a perfect cure, and for the public's part, Dr. Hunter, the present son of the author of the famous Curative Surgery, Gentleman, Noblemen, &c., and of 10,000 applicants knows not twenty uncured who have followed his advice. Numerous testimonials from the highest authority. Must be met well in six weeks.—Means of cure sent to all parts. Apply or write. At home from Eleven to Three.—5, Charlotte street, Bloomsbury.

MECHALFE'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH BRUSH and SMYRNA SPONGES.—The Tooth Brush has the important advantage of searching thoroughly into the divisions of the teeth and cleaning them in the most effectual and expeditious manner, and is famous for not losing the hairs nor coming loose, in. An improved Clothes Brush, drawn in a third part of the usual size, incapable of injuring the finest nap. Penetrating Hair Brushes, with the durable unbleached Russian bristle, which does not become soft, and therefore always remains firm and expelling the dust. Improved Flesh Brushes, which are recommended and used by the Faculty, for the

THE FOURTH VOLUME of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—SUBSCRIBERS to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, by sending their Numbers to M. C. HOUND, General Bookbinder, 198, Fenchurch-street, may have them Bound in the same Elegant Style, and uniform with the previous volumes of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, for Five Shillings.—N.B. Bound or deficient numbers supplied to complete sets.

DUBLIN.—GEORGE YOUNG, Bookseller and Newsagent, 9, Suffolk-street, Dublin, respectfully announces that he has always on hand a large supply of the back numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Volumes can at any time be completed and bound in the Publisher's very handsome binding. Subscribers may rely on having the Illustrated News, and all the London Papers sent by the same despatch as from London. Catalogues of all the Periodicals and Stamped Newspapers may be had as 9, Suffolk-street (gratis).

SYLVESTER SOUND, THE SOMNAMBULIST.—A Humorous Companion to "Valentine Vox." By H. COCKTON, Esq.; with Four Illustrations by CRUIKSHANK. Part II. price 1s.
Published by W. M. CLARK, Warwick lane, and sold by all Booksellers.

Just published, price One Shilling,
THE LACON OF LIBERTY, A TEXT-BOOK FOR ALL CLASSES OF REFORMERS. Containing quotations, selected from nearly a Thousand Authorities, in behalf of the great principles of CIVIL and RELIGIOUS FREEDOM. The whole methodically arranged, and accompanied by a copious Biographical Index.
London: REYNGHAM WILSON, 18, Bishopsgate-street, and all Booksellers.

KNIGHTS WEEKLY VOLUME.
This Day,
WILLIAM CAXTON. A BIOGRAPHY. By CHARLES KNIGHT.
Or SATURDAY, July 6th, MIND AMONGST THE SPINDLES.
London: CHARLES KNIGHT and Co., 22, Ludgate-street.

Just out, price 5s. 6d., with Coloured Plates,
A SAFE and EFFICACIOUS MODE of TREATING CONSUMPTION, Asthma, Bronchitis, Chronic Cough, and Diseases of the Heart By Dr MADDOCK, of the Dispensary, 30, Judd-street. "I should be read by everybody concerned in the treatment, or in fear of disease of the lungs or heart, either for themselves or their friends."—ED. "Full of consoling and important facts."—Gazette. SIMPKIN and MARSHALL.—Gratuitous advice to persons in humble circumstances, as above, or at their own homes.

THE LIBRARY OF TRAVEL.
Part III., containing 100 pages of Letter-press, and 40 Woodcuts, price 1s. 6d.
THE LIBRARY OF TRAVEL; being a Popular Description of Foreign Countries, with Notices of Scenery, National Characteristics, Incidents of Warfare and Sojourn, Personal Adventure, Sketches, Anecdotes, &c. Abundantly Illustrated with Wood Engravings. Edited by WALTER K. KELLY. SYRIA and the HOLY LAND will form the First Volume.—London: CHAPMAN and HALL, 186, Strand.

THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.—Three New SONGS, illustrative of "Faith," "Hope," and "Charity." Poetry by Rev. J. S. WORTHY and C. JEFFERYS. Music by STEPHEN GLOVER.
"These songs are excellent alike in Poetry, Music, and Illustration; while the musician must be delighted with their harmony, every lover of music must feel the charm of their melodies "Charity" is our especial favourite."—MUSICAL World.—Post-free, 2s. each, of JEFFERYS, 21, Soho-square.

Just Published, Part V., to be continued every alternate month,
THE BARONIAL HALLS, PICTURESQUE EDIFICES, AND ANCIENT CHURCHES OF ENGLAND. Iron Drawings made expressly for the Work, by J. D. HARDING, G. CATTERMOLE, R. PROUT, F. MACKENZIE, J. MULLER, &c. Executed in Litho-Tint. With Descriptive Letter-press, by S. C. HALL, F.S.A. Contents: Shottesbrooke Church—Montacute—the Great Chamber, Ingestrie Hall. Price, Prints, uniperial quarto, 5s.; Proofs, colombier quarto, 7s. 6d.; India paper, imperial folio, 12s.—CHAPMAN and HALL, 186, Strand.

HOOD'S MAGAZINE for JULY, price 2s. 6d., contains some numerous designs, and rather with the Fifth Chapter of "Our Family," the new domestic novel, by the Editor; and contributions by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie, author of "Tasso;" D. O. Madden, author of "Ireland Its Rulers;" R. Monckton Milnes, M.P.; R. Browning; W. Thackeray, Andrew Winter; "Sidney Cuttle," Giddeon Shaddox, Mrs. Lawrance, and F. O. Ward. The Proprietors of this Magazine have much satisfaction in announcing the promise of contributions from Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, Bart, and G. P. R. James, Esq.—London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

Just published, 12mo. Price 1s.
CONSTIPATION (costiveness) DESTROYED, or EXPOSITION of a NATURAL, SIMPLE, AGREEABLE, and INFALLIBLE MEANS, not only of OVERCOMING, but also of completely destroying habitual Constipation, without using either purgatives or any remedies whatever, (discovered by a gentleman now in France, by M. Warton), followed by numerous certificates from eminent Physicians, and other persons of Distinction. Free by the post, 1s. 6d. Sold by J. and C. TOYNBEE, and by Tea dealers, 45, Ludgate-hill, London, and by all Booksellers in the United Kingdom.

YOUNG ENGLAND. By F. J. Fox, Esq.—A Lecture delivered this week at the National Hall, is given in the Apprentice and Trades Weekly Magazine, published every Saturday, 1d., which also contains—Notes on Architecture, Building, the Steam Engine &c., accounts of all new patents of interest, and the news of the week in arts and science. Order of any Bookseller or Newsvender.
THE ARTIZAN for July contains the Atmospheric Railway, Cotton Manufacture of France, Experimental 12 gun Rugs, Articles on Carpentry, Earthenwares, Bar Harbours, Rotatory Engines, &c., and the marvels of the day in the scientific world.—SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, & Co.

FRASER'S MAGAZINE for JULY, Price 2s. 6d., contains:—1. The Emperor Nicholas.—2 The Battle of Waterloo.—3. Secrets of the Lecture room. A Surgeon's Story.—4. On the State of the Peruvian Empire Previous to the Arrival of the Spaniards. By Gerard W. Adler.—5 Dinner. Dessert, Tea, Supper, and Liquors. The Classics of the Table.—6. Footing in the Seventh Year of our Lady Queen Victoria's Triumphs; or, the New Generation. By Benjamin Disraeli, M.P.—7. Sir Robert Peel.—8. The Music Seat.—9. Southey's Sale and Southey's Poems.—10. The Lock of Barry Lyndon, a Romance of the Last Century. By FIT-BOODLE.—11. The Modern Troubadours.—12. The State of Parties.
G. W. NICKISSON, 215, Regent street, London.

THE WANDERING JEW. By EUGENE SUE.—LE JUIF ERRANT DE L'ETOILE, ou il arrivera ce qui arrivera, will be published on the 29th of JUNE, will commence the Textual Reprint of "LE JUIF ERRANT" (by the author of "Les Mysteres de Paris), so impatiently expected by all European readers, and for the copyright of which 10,000 francs were paid. The work will be published in Parts all the news of the week, the best articles from all the Paris journals, and will be found to be a French library in itself. Subscriptions, 6s. 6d. per quarter, received at the Office, 10, Wellington street, Strand; by JOSEPH THOMAS, 1, Finch lane, Cornhill, London, and by all Booksellers and Newsmen. Any Bookseller or Newsman may, by order for "Le Courrier de l'Europe" by those who desire to have the commencement of "Le Juif Errant," as the number printed is limited to the number of subscribers.

TO the BUILDING WORLD.—In No. 73 of THE BUILDER, published This Day, price 3d., and in Nos. 71, 72, and 74, will be found, besides numerous Scientific Illustrated Articles upon Architecture, a NEW COMMENTARY ON THE AMENDED BUILDINGS BILL. Most of the suggestions made in A Barristerial Architect, Esq., F.S.A., which appeared in Nos. 58 and 59 of THE BUILDER (which are now out of print), have been followed in the Amended Bill. The Monthly Part for June, published this day, price 1s. 3d., contains, in addition to the articles above named, [illegible] upon the practice and policy of Building. The Workman, the Tradesman, the Architect, the Antiquary, the Gentleman, the Clergyman, and the Proprietor, will make find this to be the soundest in its principles, the most exact, and the most useful of the scientific publications of the day. Office, 2, York-street, Covent-garden.

BY COMMAND
UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT.
THE SPORTING REVIEW for JUNE, 1844, is beautifully Embellished with Two splend.d Steel Engravings, viz.,
PLATE I.—BY HOOK AND BY CROOK. Engraved by HACKER, from a Sketch by Topham.
PLATE II.—HAWKING PARTY RETURNING HOME. Engraved by E. HACKER, from a Painting by H. SILOS.

CONTENTS:

Hyde Marston; or Recollections of a Sportsman's Life. By the Editor. Chap. xii.	Public Amusements of the Metropolis.] Month's Miscellany.
The Law of Agobay. By Lord WILLIAM LENNOX.	Epsom Races. By CRAVEN.
Notitia Venatica. By R. T. VYNE, Esq.	State of the Game Laws.
Rail v Road; or Ancient and Modern Travel. By Winkwave.	Coursing Calendar:—Streatham—Lanerkshire and Renfrewshire—The Caledonian (open)—Brixton (Depôted Inn)—Lytham (open)—Cyfeadale — Altear — Union, Bonnyrigg — Cyfeadale — Fleetwood — Cockney and Bristol Union—Newmarket — Altear—Lanarkshire and Renfrewshire —Waterloo (Liverpool)—Lytham (open) Ardrossan—Altear—Mid-Lothian—Caledonians.
The Keeper's Lodge. By Charles Willoughby.
The Steeple-chase. By Castor.
Spanish Bull-fight. By a Member of St. James's.
The Chester Cup-race. By CRAVEN

LONDON SPORTING REVIEW OFFICE, 34, NORFOLK-STREET, STRAND.
May be had of all Booksellers.

AMUSEMENT BLENDED WITH INSTRUCTION
BUTTER'S TRIANGLE ARITHMETIC and GEOMETRY FOR CHILDREN; an easy and effectual method of teaching Addition, Subtraction, &c., and Fractions; also, the Formation of Squares, Cubes, Prisms, Pyramids, Cylinders, and an endless variety of Ruddings; with numerous Illustrative Cuts; adpurably adapted for Preparatory Schools and Families. Second Edition, revised and improved. Price 1s; or, with a box of 95 Cubes, 3s with 144 dotto, 6s. 6d.; or with 105 larger mahogany Cubes, 10s. 6d. "A very ingenious and amusing manual, worthy the attention of all who are engaged in domestic or infantile education."—Weekly Methodist Magazine. "It is perhaps the best means of imparting the first principles of those subjects. The method it developes for teaching fractions is admirable."—Bent's Literary Advertiser. Sold by all Booksellers, Stationers, and Toymen.
Agents: J. REMNEY, 11, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn; SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, & Co., Upper Gower-street; PAYNE and SON, 15 and 17, High Holborn, T. ELLIS, 37, New Bond-street, London.

NOW PUBLISHING,
RAILWAY BELL and ADVERTISER, containing TIME TABLES of every Railway in the Kingdom, ROUTE LIST, PLEASURE and AMUSEMENT GUIDE, RAILWAY READINGS for all the Lines, together with a Summary of the News of the Week.
Office, 1, Catherine-street, Strand.

THE ONLY ENGLISH EDITION AUTHORISED BY M. EUGENE SUE.
Part I., comprising the first five weekly numbers, price 2s. 6d., a new and splendid edition of the MYSTERIES OF PARIS, adapted to the English Reader. Illustrated with upwards of 700 Engravings on Wood of all the Characters, Scenes, Costumes, and Localities described in this extraordinary work, executed expressly for this edition by the first Artists in Paris. Under the superintendence of Mr. CHARLES HEATH.
Published by J. DICKS, 313, Strand.
NEW NOVEL BY M. EUGENE SUE.
THE WANDERING JEW.—Messrs. Chapman and Hall announce that they have made arrangements which will enable them to issue a translation of the work in Weekly Numbers, concurrently with its publication in Paris. The first number will appear on Saturday next, 29th, Friday June Orders.

THE ILLUMINATED MAGAZINE, for JULY, edited by DOUGLAS JERROLD, is printed with a beautiful new type, and the contents are more than usually interesting, illustrated with a variety of engravings by the best artists and a steel, etching by Leech.

CONTENTS:

THE CHRONICLES OF CLOVERNOOK. By the Author of "Visit of the Cham of Knootland to the Kingdom of Sirloin
The Coffee Houses of London. By Angus B. Reach.	A Chapter from the Life of a Lady-Killer.
Illustrations of a Literary Life of the Last Century. By John Saunders.	The Last Hour of a Suicide. By Angus B. Reach.
Lines on the Suicide of a Wife. By Caroline White	Elfina. A Fairy Fancy, in various Flights" By Miss Pardoe.
An Autumn Evening's Reverie.	Peddlers' Grove. By James Smith.
The Adventures of a Lawyer. An Autobiographer. By George Augustus Delaboue Haggis.	The Advent of Steam.
The Ticket Plague; or the War of the Prices.	Ballad.
Zoological Gardens; or at Home and Abroad. By Mrs. Fostans.	A Yankee Sparking Frolic. By Theodorie Brown.
	The Architect. By Laber.
	New Books.—Sums, by Barry Cornwall; Poems, by Coventry Patmore, &c. &c.

Published monthly, price 1s. 6d. The Second Volume, elegantly bound, is now ready, price 9s. 6d. London: 73, Crane-court, London; FRASER, Edinburgh; MACRIE, Dublin; and sold by all booksellers

IMPORTANT DISTINCTION in BRANDIES.—The pure and wholesome Spirit, of which we are sole Proprietors, is BRETT'S IMPROVED BRITISH COGNAC, warranted NOT PUTRID; whereas, that sent to us from abroad as "Patent Brandy," is it certainly NOT IMPROVED! An Imperial Gallon of the only sort which needs no dilution, we be forwarded to order for £1 10s. Sample hamper for a Sovereign. Genuine samples may be had, or freely tasted, at our counting-house.
HENRY BRETT and Co., Old Furnival's Inn, Holborn.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style, by Mr WELLS, 41, Sussex-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons at all hours to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. Lessons in the Polka and Valse à Deux Temps every day.—Terms may be had on application as above.

GOOD BLACK TEAS in Chests, or smaller quantities, at 2s. to 2s. 10d.; fine per lb. 3s., 3s. 4d., 3s. 8d., 4s., 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s.; Hyson and Gunpowder, 2s. 10d., 3s. 4d., 3s. 8d., 4s.; Rounds Coffee, 1s., 1s. 2d., 1s. 4d., 1s. 8d. Letters enclosing Post-office orders punctually attended to. Messrs. W. WOOD and Co., original Commission Tea Company, 94, Cannon-street, City

REFORM your TAILORS' BILLS.—Fashionable DRESS COATS, 28s. and 47s. 6d.; frock coats, silk facings, 42s. and 50s.; new pattern summer trousers, 10s. 6d., or three pair for 30s.; splendid summer waistcoats, 7s., or three for 20s.; suits of fleecy, 63s.; ladies' elegant riding habits, 63s. and 85s.—DOUDNEY and SON, 19, Lombard-street (established 1751), celebrated for cheap and choice ready clothing.

STRAW BONNETS.—S. B. SHEPHERD, from Hopton's, takes this opportunity of announcing to the Nobility and Gentry, that in consequence of the advanced state of the season, she is DISPOSING of her remaining STOCK OF STRAW AND MILLINERY BONNETS, comprising all the newest shapes in straws, at Reduced Prices. Country orders attended to with care and punctuality.—37, Old Bond street, nearly opposite the Western Exchange.—Mayman as Premises.

GOOD TEAS, in 6lb. bags, or small chests of 35lb., at 2s. 10d., 3s. 6d., and 3s. 10d. per lb. Young Hyson 3s. By the change of wind millions of pounds of tea have arrived, and the merchants, consequently, accept lower prices The above strong trade quotations, families will find they can consumately obtain next year's supply of tea by constantly dealing with the East India Tea Company.—Offices, 9, Great St. Helen's Church yard, Bishopsgate street

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT to the QUEEN and H. R. H. PRINCE ALBERT.—Gold, Silver, White, and common tune bird Pneumats; every description of Lute Game for stock; a great variety of Ornaments. Water Fowl, including Rising Herons, Seventeen kinds and sizes of Parrots, Parrokets, Birds, &c. at BAKER'S PHEASANTRY, Bethnal-house, King's road, and 3, Half Moon passage, Gracechurch street.—Some pure China Pigs

COFFEE!—All who prize a delicious Cup of really fine COFFEE are respectfully solicited to sample the Choice of Teas in his new system of Self-admission, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any other painful operation. Apply at the Establishment, from Eleven till Seven.

WILLIAM'S PATENT GELATINE, for immediately making Jellies or Blanc-mange, being quickly dissolved in boiling water. It is of equal strength with the finest Russian Isinglass, and perfectly free from any unpleasant taste or smell, being a very superior and cheap preparation of Gelatine for making Jellies, Isinglass, being a perfectly pure, colourless, and soluble substance. For Jellies it will not be found necessary to use eggs, as passing through a Sieve a Sixpenny bag is sufficient. Besides what is the most nutritious and valuable restorative, from the great family and readiness with which it is used, and not being liable to become sour so soon as isinglass.—Manufactured and sold by WILLIAM'S Patent Gelatine Depot, Dover, and retailed by all respectable Druggists, Grocers, and others, at 8s. per pound.

THE HAIR.—Of the numerous compounds constantly announced, for promoting the growth or reproduction of the Hair, there is none, in such a very limited perusal, whilst ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, with a reputation unparalleled, is still on the increase in public estimation. The singular virtues of this unrivalled Preparation for Restoring, Preserving, and Beautifying the Human Hair, are too well known and appreciated to need comment. The very facts of the high and distinguished patronage it has received, and the numerous, imitations, together with the universally received in its favour, are authorities which stamp its superior excellence and title over all attempts of a similar nature. Being universally preferred, otherwise than by the ignorant and credulous, it is only necessary to observe, that the genuine article is wholly synonous trash as the "MACASSAR" Macassar Oil, whereas, the genuine article is wholly the vegetable production of the Author, and the combination of the most rare and costly vegetable materials (nearly imported by them) renders abortive any attempt to discover its component parts—thus proving the impossibility of all counterfeits being the "ONLY GENUINE." Sold by the proprietors, 20, Hatton-garden, and 93, Wardour-street, Soho, and by all the trade. Ask for the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL engraved in two lines on the Wrapper, and on the back of the wrapper nearly 1800 times, containing 22,000 letters.—Price 3s., 6s., 9s., 12s., 24s. Family bottles (equal to four small), 42s. and double that size, 21s. per bottle."—" All others are FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS.

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, No. 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank of England.—The best wrought SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, Fiddle pattern, 7s. 5d. per ounce, Queen's Pattern, 7s. 6d. per ounce. The following are the weights recommended, but the articles may be had lighter or heavier, at the same price per ounce:—

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Fiddle Pattern. oz.	s.	d.	Queen's Pattern. oz.	s.	d.
12 Table Spoons	30	7	12 Table Spoons	31	6
12 Dessert ditto	26	7	12 Dessert ditto	26	7
12 Table Forks	30	7	12 Table Forks	31	6
12 Dessert ditto	26	7	12 Dessert ditto	26	7
2 Gravy Spoons	5	7	2 Gravy Spoons	5	7
1 Soup Ladle	11	8	1 Soup Ladle	12	0
4 Sauce ditto	10	7	4 Sauce ditto	10	7
4 Salt Spoons (gilt strong)	3	0	4 Salt Spoons	3	0
1 Fish Slice	9	10	1 Fish Slice	9	10
12 Tea Spoons	10	7	12 Tea Spoons	9	9
1 Pair Sugar Tongs	4	0	1 Pair Sugar Tongs	4	0

N. B. A price current, stamped as a newspaper, illustrated by drawings, and containing every information relative to the purchase of silver or Electro-Plate, may be had on application, or will be sent into the country free of postage, in answer to a paid letter

CROMER, NORFOLK.—TUCKER'S HOTEL.—Mr. BOULTER begs to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, Tourist, and Traveller, that the whole of the premises have undergone a thorough reparation and embellishment, together with the addition of several new rooms, fronting the sea, and commanding splendid Views of the German Ocean, in the extensive range of the whole part of Norfolk Coast. The Hotel possesses the pleasant situation of being close to the sea-ring from the sea, and setting in the same. On the inland side the Rides and Drives cannot be surpassed in picturesque beauty, combining the finest variety of Arable and &c.," woodland and heath, shrubs and wild flowers, mansion and extensive domain, cottage and peasantry. Fishing, Game Preserves, Archery Ground, Hunting, Harriers, Waterand Blacking—seats of noble and wealthy proprietors, associated with historical reminiscences—are a within the compass of an easy drive, and cannot fail to endear to the tourist the most simple gratification. The Hotel presents the appearance of a Nobleman's mansion, and is the means of short or extended promenades, with all the advantages of an atmosphere of the finest quality, and which has been pronounced by the highest medical authorities conducive to the Restoration and Preservation of Health in a degree equal, if not superior, to that of any locality in Norway. The VIANDS are of the choicest kind—the WINES (a great variety) select—and both have elicited the warmest commendations of those who have been the Proprietor the honour to partake of them.
Post horses and carriages of every description, for airings and drives, with careful attendants.
STEAM Vessels to and from all parts of the United Kingdom are passing and repassing daily, and Boats are in constant attendance to land pass-gers and visitors.
The London, Cambridge, Birmingham, Leicester, and Norwich Coaches are running daily to and from CROMER.

SUPERIORITY AND ECONOMY IN YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S DRESS.
"That only is cheap which is exce.lent."—Atheneum.
AT the FASHIONABLE CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, 189, Fleet-street, Young Gentlemen's Clothes are made with greater care, taste, and judgment than are usually bestowed upon them. Superfine Cloth Suits, including Jacket, Waistcoat, and Trousers, 56s., and every description of Boys' and Youths' Fashionable Clothing upon equally moderate terms. Families waited upon with patterns and specimens. Country residents can be fitted by sending an old suit.—HODGKIN and Co., Fashionable Tailors, 189, Fleet-street, London (next the Portugal Hotel),

A CHOP or STEAK COOKED in FIVE MINUTES without TROUBLE or EXPENCE! or a DINNER COOKED WITHOUT LIGHTING a FIRE.—Gentlemen going abroad, Captains, Emigrants, Families living in apartments, Bachelors, and Pic-nic Parties, should visit the LIGHT HOUSE, 201, Strand, where may be seen the greatest variety of cumious and portable Apparatus for Cooking, and every domestic purpose, &c. &c. The original and only Manufactory for the best and cheapest lights. JONES'S and Co., LIGHT HOUSE, 201, STRAND.

HERNE BAY.—Two Ladies, sisters, residing in this admired bath-ng-place, desire to receive TWO YOUNG LADIES, whose health requires sea air, to EDUCATE, for which they are fully equal, or one Lady as a Boarder.
Letters, post paid, to H. B., Post-office, Herne Bay, Kent.

NECESSARY PRECAUTION.—CONSUMERS of BRANDY are respectfully informed that J. T. BETTS, Jun., and Co. will not be responsible for any bottled Brandy that is not Bottled against the Stamp Authorisation by the Patent Metal or Capsules, embossed with the words "Betts's Patent Brandy, 7, Smithfield Bars." Sold by the most respectable Wine and Spirit Merchants in town and country at 8s. 6d. per bottle, the bottle included.

CHASTON'S PATENT INDIA RUBBER ELASTIC CORN PLAISTERS are generally admitted to be the most unique and best to eradicate either Hard or Soft CORNS. From their gentle quality, they can be worn with perfect ease, however tight the boot or shoe fits the foot. Invented and sold by R. CHASTON, Chemist, Warton, Norfolk. N.B.—On receipt of thirteen postage stamps (free), a box will be forwarded (also free) to any part of the Kingdom.

EAU de COLOGNE, 10s. per case of 2s. singly, which, since its first preparation, 1793, has maintained an undisturbed supremacy over all other 4 distilled compounds, can be had genuine, as prepared from the original receipt by Ingredion to H. RESIDENSACH, 98, Park-street, Grosvenor-square, and manufacturer at Cologne. This Eau de Cologne is so spurious imitation of Farina's, but the genuine article itself, and is sold in bottles at 1s. 6d. each.

CORNS and BUNIONS.—PAUL'S EVERY MAN'S FRIEND is a speedy and sure cure for those painful annoyances, without cutting or pain. It is a luxury to the tenderest feet, acting on the Corn with the most gentle pressure, producing a delightful relief, and entirely eradicating both Corns and Bunions. Prepared by JOHN FOX, in boxes, at 1s. 1½d., or, three in one, for 2s. 9d., and to be had of C. KING, No. 7, Negus-street, Regent-street, and of all medicine vendors of real credence in town and country. The genuine has the name of John Fox on the Government Stamp. A 2s. 9d. box cures the most obdurate Corns.—Ask for Paul's Every Man's Friend.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, request the attention of purchasers to their stock of London-made PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which are manufactured by themselves on the premises herein. In silver cases, with the machine escapement and jewelled, the prices are four and a half guineas, six, and eight guineas each; or in gold cases, 10, 12, 14, and 18 guineas each. The very large stock kept by the firm enables them to execute orders with promptitude, enabling a customer to select that which is more particularly adapted to his own use.

NEW PATENTS.—BROCKEDON'S IMPROVED STOPPERS and PRESERVERS, the most important invention for Corks and Bungs, for new and Great Improvements, become a pure, unperishable, and perfect means of preserving, for any length of time, Wine, Beer, Spirits, &c. They are cheap and easily applied, and the apparatus which they now have of fine Corks, has removed the prejudice against their former dark colour. Also, DECANTER STOPPERS, to keep Wine which is in daily use in perfect condition.—C. MACINTOSH and Co., 19, Wallbrook, London, and 2, York-street, Manchester.

DINNER SERVICES, TABLE-GLASS, &c.—SANDER and CO., 319 and 320, Holborn (corner of Southampton Buildings, and opposite Gray's-inn-gate), have constantly on view the largest stock in London of Table glass, plainly or elegantly cut; Dinner, Dessert, Breakfast and Tea Services and Toilet Sets in China, Tennessee, and Earthenware. Ornamental China, Papier Maché and Iron Tea Trays, Chandeliers, Lustres; Argand, Solar and Vesta Lamps; Hall Lanterns, stained or plain; Alabaster Figures, Vases, &c. Parties favouring this establishment with a visit, will obtain every information relative to prices, and will not be importuned to make purchases. Goods delivered in town and at the docks carriage free.

KNIGHTSTONE BATHS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE, SOMERSET.—The proprietor of these extensive BATHS avail themselves of the approach of the Bathing Season, to inform the Public, that they continue to provide warm, cold, shower, vapour, and medicated Baths at the above Establishment, and that the upper floor of the building is still devoted to the purpose of Lodgings, where invalids, whose cases require bathing, will find convenient suites of Apartments. There are also two commodious Boat's-long-seats, new constantly on view in the Boat-house, and the Bath-house itself (whose use was partially destroyed by fire in the Spring, the proprietors think it right to certify, that the adjoining houses and the Bathing-house are in perfect order and condition.

FOR STOPPING DECAYED TEETH.—Price 4s. 6d. Patronised by her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. Mr. THOMAS'S SUCCEDANEUM, for Stopping Decayed Teeth, and rendering them useful for many years, is a soft state, where no pain or stress or pain, and will remain firm in the tooth for many years, rendering extraction unnecessary, arresting the further progress of decay. All persons can use this Succedaneum, as full directions are contained in each box.—Prepared only by Mr. THOMAS, Surgeon-Dentist, 64, Berners street, Oxford-street. Price 4s. 6d., and can be had, post free, by Mr. THOMAS'S permission to supply the place of Teeth on his new system of Self-admission, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any other painful operation. Apply at the Establishment, from Eleven till Seven.

THE HAIR.—Of the numerous compounds constantly announced, for promoting the growth or reproduction of the Hair, there is none, in such a very limited perusal, whilst ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, with a reputation unparalleled, is still on the increase in public estimation. The singular virtues of this unrivalled Preparation for Restoring, Preserving, and Beautifying the Human Hair, are too well known and appreciated to need comment. The very facts of the high and distinguished patronage it has received, and the numerous, imitations, together with the universally received in its favour, are authorities which stamp its superior excellence and title over all attempts of a similar nature. Being universally preferred, otherwise than by the ignorant and credulous, it is only necessary to observe, that the genuine article is wholly synonous trash as the "MACASSAR" Macassar Oil, whereas, the genuine article is wholly the vegetable production of the Author, and the combination of the most rare and costly vegetable materials (nearly imported by them) renders abortive any attempt to discover its component parts—thus proving the impossibility of all counterfeits being the "ONLY GENUINE." Sold by the proprietors, 20, Hatton-garden, and 93, Wardour-street, Soho, and by all the trade. Ask for the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL engraved in two lines on the Wrapper, and on the back of the wrapper nearly 1800 times, containing 22,000 letters.—Price 3s., 6s., 9s., 12s., 24s. Family bottles (equal to four small), 42s. and double that size, 21s. per bottle."—" All others are FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS.

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, No. 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank of England.—The best wrought SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, Fiddle pattern, 7s. 5d. per ounce, Queen's Pattern, 7s. 6d. per ounce. The following are the weights recommended, but the articles may be had lighter or heavier, at the same price per ounce:—

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Fiddle Pattern. oz.	s.	d.	Queen's Pattern. oz.	s.	d.
12 Table Spoons	30	7	12 Table Spoons	31	6
12 Dessert ditto	26	7	12 Dessert ditto	26	7
12 Table Forks	30	7	12 Table Forks	31	6
12 Dessert ditto	26	7	12 Dessert ditto	26	7
2 Gravy Spoons	5	7	2 Gravy Spoons	5	7
1 Soup Ladle	11	8	1 Soup Ladle	12	0
4 Sauce ditto	10	7	4 Sauce ditto	10	7
4 Salt Spoons (gilt strong)	3	0	4 Salt Spoons	3	0
1 Fish Slice	9	10	1 Fish Slice	9	10
12 Tea Spoons	10	7	12 Tea Spoons	9	9
1 Pair Sugar Tongs	4	0	1 Pair Sugar Tongs	4	0

N. B. A price current, stamped as a newspaper, illustrated by drawings, and containing every information relative to the purchase of silver or Electro-Plate, may be had on application, or will be sent into the country free of postage, in answer to a paid letter

CROMER, NORFOLK.—TUCKER'S HOTEL.—Mr. BOULTER begs to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, Tourist, and Traveller, that the whole of the premises have undergone a thorough reparation and embellishment, together with the addition of several new rooms, fronting the sea, and commanding splendid Views of the German Ocean, in the extensive range of the whole part of Norfolk Coast. The Hotel possesses the pleasant situation of being close to the sea-ring from the sea, and setting in the same. On the inland side the Rides and Drives cannot be surpassed in picturesque beauty, combining the finest variety of Arable and &c.," woodland and heath, shrubs and wild flowers, mansion and extensive domain, cottage and peasantry. Fishing, Game Preserves, Archery Ground, Hunting, Harriers, Waterand Blacking—seats of noble and wealthy proprietors, associated with historical reminiscences—are a within the compass of an easy drive, and cannot fail to endear to the tourist the most simple gratification. The Hotel presents the appearance of a Nobleman's mansion, and is the means of short or extended promenades, with all the advantages of an atmosphere of the finest quality, and which has been pronounced by the highest medical authorities conducive to the Restoration and Preservation of Health in a degree equal, if not superior, to that of any locality in Norway. The VIANDS are of the choicest kind—the WINES (a great variety) select—and both have elicited the warmest commendations of those who have been the Proprietor the honour to partake of them.
Post horses and carriages of every description, for airings and drives, with careful attendants.
STEAM Vessels to and from all parts of the United Kingdom are passing and repassing daily, and Boats are in constant attendance to land pass-gers and visitors.
The London, Cambridge, Birmingham, Leicester, and Norwich Coaches are running daily to and from CROMER.

SUPERIORITY AND ECONOMY IN YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S DRESS.
"That only is cheap which is exce.lent."—Atheneum.
AT the FASHIONABLE CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, 189, Fleet-street, Young Gentlemen's Clothes are made with greater care, taste, and judgment than are usually bestowed upon them. Superfine Cloth Suits, including Jacket, Waistcoat, and Trousers, 56s., and every description of Boys' and Youths' Fashionable Clothing upon equally moderate terms. Families waited upon with patterns and specimens. Country residents can be fitted by sending an old suit.—HODGKIN and Co., Fashionable Tailors, 189, Fleet-street, London (next the Portugal Hotel),

MORTAR LAMPS, (CLARKE'S PATENT) an entirely NEW INVENTION, more convenient, more elegant, and more economical than any light ever introduced. The Engraving shows one of them in brass, with a moveable glass in which the Wick is placed for Sand-mod. Price of the Lamp, 6d. each and upwards, and the Mortars 6d. per box of three sizes, to last 6, 8, and 10 hours. To be had retail of the Ironmongers; and wholesale of Palmer and Co., Manufacturers, Bunhill-row, Clerkenwell.

GILDING.—NO FLY SPOTS NOR TARNISH.—The Splendour of Gilding restored.—Fly spots removed, and covering from the finest dered unnecessary, by a single application of the ORIENTAL GOLD DEFIER Fine Arts. Sponging the surface will only tarnish One bottle is more than sufficient for the gilt frames in a moderate sized house. This unequalled and innoxious production is also applicable to the most delicate jewellery. Sold by the inventor, Mr. BUTLER, Bronze, and Bronze, 1s. 6d.—Sold by UPTON and Co., 33, George-street, Hanover square, and 56, Rosemhall street, City; and by most respectable shopkeepers throughout the United Kingdom.

A LUXURY FOR WARM WEATHER.
BERDOE'S SUPERIOR LIGHT SUMMER FROCKS, WATERPROOF.—An extensive variety of the above NEW and greatly improved materials (in lieu of the unsightly rubbish made by Shopkeepers), now ready, guaranteed to exclude any rain whatever, and confidently recommended to those who require a respectable appearance, with the most unbounded disappointment. Also, WATERPROOF TWEEDS, in every description, upon the lowest terms possible, consistent with true economy and ultimate satisfaction.
W. BERDOE, TAILOR, WATERPROOFER, &c., 69, CORNHILL (north side).

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE.—Under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen, H. R. H. Prince Albert, the Royal Family, and Nobility.—A fragrant White Powder for the Teeth and Gums. Oriental Herbs of inestimable virtue for strengthening, preserving, and cleansing the Teeth. It eradicates the factitious formation of tartar, and by the removal of that extraneous substance, lends a salutary growth and freshness to the gums. It removes from the surface of the teeth the spots of indigent decay, polishes and preserves the enamel, substituting for discolour and the aspect of impurity, the most pure and pearl like whiteness; while, from its astringent and disinfecting qualities, it gives sweetness and perfume to the breath. Price 2s. 9d. per box, duty included.
CAUTION.—To protect the public from fraud, the Hon. Commissioners of her Majesty's Stamps have [illegible] signature to be engraved on the Government Stamp, thus:—"A. ROWLAND & SON," which is affixed on each Box.
 All others are Fraudulent Counterfeits!!!

SMALL CARRIA

FIRE AT BOSTON—FROM A DRAWING BY MR. W. CAISTER.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT BOSTON.

(From the Boston Herald.)

Early on Sunday morning last, the town of Boston was visited by a most awful conflagration, which broke out in the oil and colour warehouse of Mr. T. Slator, ship chandler and general dealer, in South-street, which spread with great rapidity, and involved a mass of valuable property in ruin.

The six town engines were speedily on the spot; the tide was high, and no deficiency of water therefore existed, but all the engines were destitute of suction-pipes, excepting one, which was not of length sufficient to reach the water.

By the time the engines were got into efficient play, the conflagration had assumed a frightful aspect; the whole of Mr. Slator's house was a mass of flames, which appeared to be rapidly extending to his sacking warehouse to the left, and to Mr. Lewin's offices, the Custom-house, and other premises to the right. Suddenly an explosion of gunpowder took place. The whole of the front of Mr. Slator's house was blown out, some of the bricks being actually propelled across the river, and a mass of ruins and burning embers falling among the crowd.

Long before two o'clock, the enormous frontage extending from Custom-house-lane to Spain-lane, was a mass of vivid fire; the wooden building, used as a "lookout" at the top of the Custom-house, was burning fiercely, and the flames had obtained a strong hold of the upper story of those premises; when, at about the above hour, the wind fortunately veered one or two points, sending the sheet of flames to the back of the buildings; and, in fact, preserving the houses in South-street from what appeared to be certain destruction. The extensive raff-yard of Mr. Lewin was now on fire; as were also the Ship Tavern, in Custom-house-lane, and the connection between that, the bond-yard, the London Tavern, and numerous tenements in Shodfriars'-lane. Mr. Duggan's granary, occupied by Mr. Daulton, was now a mass of flame, and vast quantities of wheat and other grain burned to ashes. Considerable quantities were carried half-a-mile from the spot.

The flames being now extended over an enormous area (at least fifty yards square), the engines were very efficiently employed in preventing their further extension at all points; and they were, at length, subdued. The total loss or property consumed, cannot be less than £10,000.

FREISTON SHORE RACES.

These races took place on Tuesday and were numerously attended, notwithstanding the incessant rain, which fell in torrents during the day. Considerable delay occurred in consequence of a part of the course being inundated by the tide, but a satisfactory start was ultimately accomplished.

The Handicap Sweepstakes of £5 each, with £25 added. Six subscribers.

Mr. Lincoln's Manbrino 1
Mr. Richardson's Orleans 2

The pony race was won in beautiful style by Mr. Hayne's mare, Here-i-go-with-my-eye-out. But a dispute having arisen with respect to her height, a third heat was run between Mr. Smith's Camilla and Lady Mowbray, and won by the former. Mr. Smith then claimed the stakes, asserting Mr. Hayne's mare to be more than 14 hands high, and disqualified for a pony-race. The running of Camilla was much admired.

The hurdle race was won by Mr. Hayne's mare with as much ease as pony race; Pedlar ran a good second, but the mare took the lead from the first in both heats. The sands were in a very bad state, but the running throughout was much better than could have been expected, and although the greater part of the spectators were exposed to the rain the whole time, they seemed to be satisfied with the day's sport.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—The excessive heat of the weather on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday last, has been most fortunately followed by a plenteous and acceptable fall of rain. So great has been the drought in the neighbourhood of the metropolis as to occasion agricultural labour to be nearly at a stand; and on Sunday last prayers for rain were read in all the suburban churches by the officiating clergymen. On Monday evening there was no appearance of approaching rain, although the wind was SW, and up to four o'clock on Tuesday morning the sky was almost perfectly clear. About that hour, however, it became suddenly overcast, and the wind shifted from SW to NW, and about five o'clock a steady and penetrating rain commenced, which continued without intermission throughout the day. Shortly after twelve the wind shifted to the north, from which time the rain increased in heaviness, accompanied by a cool refreshing breeze. The rain still continued up to Wednesday morning with showers at intervals during the day. At Liverpool, we understand the rain commenced on Monday; and the adjoining neighbourhood was visited by a succession of thunder-storms. However incredible it may appear, we are assured by parties who were witnesses to the fact, that during the heavy rain which fell on Monday at Liverpool, an immense quantity of pebbles descended upon the Exchange flags, and some sels in Castle-street. The pebbles were all small in size, but of different colours and shapes. One was a beautiful white, and was picked up by a merchant, who valued it so highly that he refused to part with it, and took it home. The inspector on duty at the Exchange gathered a large number of the pebbles and deposited them in one of the neighbouring offices, where they have since been very generally admired. The eels were about two inches and a half in length. At Edinburgh on Monday, the sunshine, which was attended with most oppressive heat, was suddenly interrupted about mid-day by the return of rain, which continued throughout the afternoon in the shape either of gentle showers or "Scotch mist." Under the influence of this abundant supply of moisture and of a warm atmosphere, vegetation was again making rapid progress. A correspondent from Dover writes:—"I have lately seen the crops in many parts of England. The wheat upon the clays and other heavy land, vit, the wheat land, is of a good colour, and there are few thin crops. There are plenty of ends; the ears are long and likely to be well set. The crops of clover and other seeds upon such land are also good. We have now had twelve hours' rain, and it seems likely to continue.

FREISTON SHORE RACES.

POPULAR PORTRAITS.—No. L.

MR. SMITH O'BRIEN, M.P.

We doubt whether we ought not to cancel the letters attached to this gentleman's name, denoting that station which so many are anxious to gain, but which Mr. O'Brien has ceased to claim, though he has not entirely renounced it. He is still a member of the Legislature, though he does not take his seat in it. With talents that gained him a prominent place among the representatives of the nation, he has abandoned that sphere of action, and taken his place among the Repealers of the Conciliation Hall. It was a bold step, and one which has as yet found very few imitators in men of his own rank and position. Now that the great leader of the agitation is under restraint, Mr. O'Brien may be considered as his deputy, expressing his views, and communicating his directions to the people. While in Parliament he was an earnest and uncompromising advocate of the people on all those questions which are known as Irish grievances. It was his motion for an inquiry into the state of Ireland that originated one of the longest and most remarkable debates that have occurred in the house for many years. His speech on that occasion was a very able one, being a clear and forcible statement of the evils under which Ireland labours. As Mr. O'Brien is reported to be a man of considerable property, and as it is quite certain he is a man of talent, he is an accession to the Repeal cause that we can scarcely wonder should have been hailed with enthusiasm. There are four O'Briens in the House of Commons, so it is necessary to discriminate a little; we imagine that Mr. Stafford O'Brien, the champion of the landed interest, and the antagonist of the League, will not be pleased at being confounded with Mr. Smith O'Brien, who votes for the extinction of tithes and the ballot. He is the second son of the late Sir Edward O'Brien, Baronet, of Dromoland, Clare; he was born in 1803. He represents, or rather did represent, the County of Limerick, and was in the commission of the peace as a magistrate, till he identified himself with the Repeal agitation, when he was visited, with many other gentlemen, with a supersedeas. His name is found no more in the debates, and must now be sought in the Irish correspondence of the morning journals.

MR. SMITH O'BRIEN, M.P.

THE CHELTENHAM PROPRIETARY COLLEGE.

The award of the prizes at this excellent establishment was made on the morning of the 20th inst., in the school-room, a spacious building, forming the right wing of the main building, and was attended by about 1200 of the shareholders and friends of the collegiates. Shortly before eleven o'clock, the scholars had taken their seats; and at eleven precisely, the head master, accompanied by the second masters, and the undergraduates, entered, wearing their scholastic gowns, hoods, and caps, and were rapturously received by the boys and company present.

Those who had merited prizes were then individually called up, and had their rewards given them by the Principal, Dr. Phillips; after which, they were addressed by the Reverends F. Close, Boyd, Hidd e, and the two examiners from Cambridge, who highly commended them for the progress they had made in their studies, and bestowed great praises on their instructors.

The room had a most imposing effect and was densely crowded.

THE PROPRIETARY COLLEGE, CHELTENHAM.

The college has not been established but about two years and it has already three hundred shareholders; each shareholder is allowed to nominate a pupil, who receives a first-rate classical education, quite fitting him to enter the Universities.

THE WRITS OF ERROR.—The Lord Chancellor has directed the Judges to be summoned to attend in the House of Lords next Monday, the 1st of July, instead of the 4th, to hear the arguments in the pending writs of error, beginning with the case of Gray. We have reason to believe that Lord Lyndhurst has been among the most active members of the Government in expediting these proceedings.

SOUTHFLEET.—DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—A fire broke out at half-past eight o'clock on Monday evening, on the extensive premises belonging to Mr. Collier, farmer, of Southfleet, a small village, three miles and a half from Gravesend. So rapid was the progress of the flames, that the lives of Mr. Collier and his family were in considerable danger, and the barns and out-houses were entirely consumed before any means could be adopted for their preservation. Messengers were immediately despatched to Gravesend, from whence engines quickly arrived but not in time to prevent the church, which adjoins the premises, from being partially destroyed. How the fire originated has not yet been satisfactorily ascertained, but it is believed to have been the act of an incendiary. Several fires of minor importance have taken place in Gravesend and its vicinity during the last few weeks—a circumstance the more singular as that district has been almost free from such occurrences for a period of half a century.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 198, Strand, Forrandd,—SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1844.

ABERDEEN, The Earl of, 105, 106
Abinger Hall, the Seat of the late Lord Abinger, 226
Abinger, Lord, Death of, 235. Remarks on the death of, 231
Accidents and Offences, 7, 19, 36, 55, 68, 87, 119, 135, 151, 167, 199, 211, 231, 251, 267, 287, 291, 322 335, 355, 371 383, 411
Ackla Colony, View in, 181
Addison, The Birthplace of, 316
Adopted, The, or Impulse not Principle, 44, 61, 77, 78
Albert, His Royal Highness Prince, 9
Albert, Prince, Departure of his Royal Highness for Germany, 200
Albert, Prince, Visit to Cowes Isle of Wight, 183
Albert, Prince, and the 11th Hussars, Plate presented by his Royal Highness to, 403
Albert Gate, Hyde Park, Knightsbridge, 201, 202
Alcazar, Views of, 199, 130
Alcazar, the Rebellion in, Spain, 129
Alcazar—Case of Colone, Benet, 270
Alcazar, Military Execution of Benet and his Accomplices, at, 186
"Alice Hawthorn, the Winner of the Gold Vase, at Ascot Races, 365, 366
Allen, F.R.S., Death of the late William, 7
Alton Towers, Visit of the Duc de Bordeaux to, 13
American Dwarf, The, General Tom Thumb, 124
American Press, The, and the Rev. Sydney Smith, 346
American Steam Frigate, Princeton, 331, 332
Anniversaries, 254, 300
Anniversary Meeting of the Civic Authorities and the Metropolitan Clergy in St. Paul's Cathedral, 304
Anti-Corn-Law League Meetings, at Covent-Garden Theatre, &c., 136, 246
Anti-Slavery Society, Annual Meeting of the British and Foreign, 319
Anti-State Church Conference, 283
April A Scene, 236
Aquatics 338, 347
"Ariel," Steamer, Launch of the, at Rotherhithe, 248
Armorial Bearings, Caution Respecting, 167
Arms and Empire, Observations on Army Estimates, &c., &c., 145
Arson, Extraordinary Case of, 55
Arson in Mr. Dryver's House, in Parliament-street, 303
Artillery Company's (The Honble.) Ball, 124
Art Union of London, 323
Ascot Races, 368; Arrival of the Illustrious Visitors, 368; Pic Nic Party, 368; Ascot Prize Plate—Queen's Cup—The Gold Cup—Royal Hunt's Cup—The Emperor of Russia, the King of Saxony, and Prince Albert at, 369
Ashburnham House, (The Russian Ambassador's) Dover-street, 384
Astley's Theatre, Scene from the Pantomime of "Harlequin Tam O Shanter," 13
Athlone Election Committee, 151
Atmospheric Railway, at Kingstown, &c., 16
Auber, Mons., 308
Austria, State of the Drama in, 182
"Avon," West India Steamer, Arrival of, 115
Azores, The, Recent Survey of, and Views in, 133
Azores, The, Caldeira, or Crater, in Corvo Pico Wine Boat—Church of Santa Cruz, in Flores, 153.
Azores and Madeira, Watering with Paddle Box Boats at St. Mary's—Caldeira, at Flores—Landing Place at Angra, Terceira—Point of the Cross, Madeira, 253

BACKHOUSE, Esq., W., Sudden Death of, at Darlington, 383
Bail Court, 34
Ballance, Mr., Counsel for Fletcher, in the Wife Forgeries Case, 228
Balloons of Copper, at Paris, 183, 194
Bal Masque, Covent-Garden Theatre 155
Bank of England, Meetings at, &c. 183
Bank Charter, Renewal of the, 124, 303
Bank Charter, Resolutions, Observations on, 324
Bankruptcy Court, 229, 227
Battersea Bridge, The, Murder—Surrender and Examinations of Dalmas, &c., &c., 267, 301, 320, 369, 319
Battersea Murder, The; Trial of, and Sentence on Augustus Dalmas, 383
Battersea Murder—Dalmas's interviews with his Daughters, &c., 415
Battle Bridge—Scenes Unrehearsed—Police and the Drama, 138
Battle Extraordinary, between a Hawk and a Weazel, 211
Bauman, Mr. F., (the Fagotto Player) 240
Beating the Bounds, 319
Behind the Scenes, 138, 155, 170, 184, 202
Belasey, Case of Mrs., Supposed to be Poisoned by Prussic Acid, 249
Belasey, Mrs., Case of Suspected Poisoning of, by her Husband, 418
Belgians, Portrait of his Majesty the Queen of the, 197
Belgium, Portrait of his Majesty the King of the, 191
Belper, 68
Birmingham, Visit of Mr. O'Connell to, 151
Births, 11, 36, 35, 51, 78, 95, 111, 123, 143 159, 175, 191, 207, 223 239 255, 275, 295, 307, 327, 343, 359, 375, 391
Bister, New Method of rapidly Raising a, 39
"Bohemian Girl," The. Scene from Balfe's Opera of, 43
Bokhara Captives, The, Colonel Stoddart and Captain Conolly, 90, 100, 107, 228, 278
Bonet, Colonel, Questions respecting, in the House of Commons, 270
Bordeaux, The Duc de, at Alton Towers, 12
Dudley Caverns, 12
"Boscawen, Launch of the, at Woolwich, 279
Boston, Fire at, 424
Botanic Society of London, The Royal, and Fête—Principal Tent, Refreshment Room, 287, 288
Bowie Knife of America, 100
Brecknyers' Arms, Station of the London and Dover, &c., Railways, Accident at, 79, 241
"Brides of Venice," The, Scene from, at Drury-lane Theatre—Miss A. Shaw in, 227
Brighton, Military Outrage at, 86
Bristol, Alarming Affray at, 402
Bristol, Frightful and Fatal Accident at, 2
Bristol, Dreadful Murder at, 371
Bristol and Exeter Railway, Opening of the, 284
British American Land Company, 139
British and Foreign Institute, Opening of the, 63
British Factor and Merchant Seaman (sea-piece), 104
British Institution, Gilbert's Picture of Brunetta and Phillis (Spectator No. 89), 197
Goodall's Picture of "La Fête de Marage, 185
Lance's Picture of A Lady in Waiting of the time of Louis XV., painted by Lance, 158
British Museum, Additions to the, 120
British Museum, the, Façade of, from Sir R. Smirke's design, 58
Brougham's, Lord, Letter to Scoble on the subject of Slavery, 270
Brussels and Antwerp Railway, Dreadful Accident on the, 390
Buccleuch, His Grace the Duke of, 105, 106
Buckingham Palace Gardens, The Chinese Summer House, 305
Buckingham Palace, Music Room in 381
Buckingham Palace, Extensive Robbery at, 342
Budget of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, 289
Buenos Ayres, View of, and Portrait of De Rosas, Governor of, 196
Bund, Mr., of Drury lane Theatre, 220
Burdett, Death of the late Sir Francis, Bart., and Portrait, 64
Byron's Statue, Lord, Singular Case respecting 367

CABRIOLET, The New (The Tribus), 141
Cabinet Ministers, The Queen and her, 105
Caledonian Asylum, Laying the Foundation Stone of the Girls' School, 353
Caledonian Ball at the Hanover Square Rooms, 137, 138
Camberwell Church, 48
"Cambridge, the barque, Destruction of, at Plymouth, by fire, 28
Camden Town, Duel at. See "Duel, &c."
Campenaly, View of, &c., 148
Campbell, Lord, 180
Campbell, the Poet, Death of the late Thomas, 307
Canada West Destruction of St. Paul's Church 248
Canadian Hoax, A, 368
Canton, The late Fire at, 100
Canton—American Consulate at, British Consulate at, Danish Hong, East India Company's Consulate, Chinese Theatre, 100
Cantwell, Mr., 42
Cardigan, The Earl of, Portrait of, 216
Cardwell, M P., Mr., 65, 56
Carlton Club Hoax, A, 368
Carnarthen Assizes. The Welsh Riots, 19
Carpenter, John, Statue of the Founder of the City School, 303
Carthagena, View of, 148
Castro Urdiales, Court of, 10, 87, 99, 147, 151, 227, 236, 247, 249, 250, 271, 283, 283, 315, 326
Cattle Show, Meeting of the, 399
Cavendish Assizes. The Welsh Riots, 19
Carpenter, John, Statue of the Founder of the City School, 303
Carthagena, View of, 148
Castro Urdiales, Court of, 10, 87, 99, 147, 151, 227, 236, 247, 249, 250, 271, 283, 283, 315, 326
Cattle Show, Meeting of the, 399
Cavendish Assizes. The Welsh Riots, 19
Cerito, Mdlle., as "La Vivandiere," 356
Chancery, Court of, 359
Chancery, Court of, Abuses, 318
Charitable Institutions of the Metropolis, 102
"Charlotte," The Smack—Silver Cup presented to Capt. Richard Mayes, 149
Chelsea New Church, 300
Cheltenham Proprietary College, 424
Chess, 55, 262, 300
Chester Treaty, 10
Chester Races—"Red Deer winning the Cup, 268
Child Stealing, Singular Case of, 87
Chillingham Wild Cattle, 92
China, Newspapers to, 39
Chinese, Africans and Levantine Traders (Sculpture), 104
Chinese, Funerals and Tombs of the, 5
Chinese Lace, 89
Chinese Presents to her Majesty, 36
Chinese Trophies at Windsor Castle, 8
Christchurch House—The Duke of Devonshire's Fête to the Emperor of Russia at, Reception in the Saloon, and Banquet, &c. &c., 384, 385.
Chorcmuscon, The, 153
Christchurch, Wonderful Escape at, 343
Christ's Hospital Scholars at the Mansion House, 213
Christmas, Ex-Queen of Spain, 148
"Christmas Carol, Scene from Charles Dickens's, at the Adelphi Theatre, 108
Church, Universities, &c., 7, 54, 119, 118, 134, 150, 171, 183, 198, 235, 271, 318
City Antiquities, 226
City of London School, Statue of the Founder of the, 324
Civ. Engineers Institution of 383
Clanricarde, The Marquis of, 332
Clare, John, the Northamptonshire Poet, 336
Clarkson, Mr., Counsel for the Prosecution (Wills Forgery), 228
Clive, M P., Viscount, 85, 56
Clondalkin, near Dublin, The Round Tower of, 28
Coach Robbery of 1500 sovereigns, 172
Coa. Export Duty, Remarks on, 366
Coal Tax, Proposed additional, for the purpose of improving the City, Remarks thereon, 150
Coal Trade, The, and the Miners of Northumberland and Durham, 370
Cochrane, M.P., Mr. Baillie, Portrait of, 170
Coins and Medallions, The Devonshire Collection of, 187
Colliery Accident, Landshipping, 103
"Comus, The Great," as sent at Van Diemen's Land, 80
Commerce and Money, 11, 20, 35, 51, 78, 95, 111, 123, 143, 159, 175, 191, 207, 223, 239, 255, 275, 295, 307, 327, 343, 359, 374, 387, 406, 422
Common Pleas, Court of, 87, 386, 351
Commons Inclosure Bill (Lord Worsley's), Remarks thereon, 368
"Comus," Scene from Ely's Picture, 373
Conders at the Surrey Zoological Gardens, 22
Conolly, Captain (see Bokhara).
Conservative Club House, St. James's Street, The new, 85
Consumption, New Hospital for, Fulham-road, 172
Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, The Hospital for—Laying the First Stone of—Fancy Bazaar at Chelsea Hospital, &c., 388
Convicts, Escape of from Nottingham Gaol, 2
Convicts, Removal of, 34
Copper Balloon at Paris, 193 194
Cork, O Connell's Visit to, 237
Cork, Great Provincial Dinner at, &c., 244
Cornwall, Dreadful Murder in, 291
Correspondents, Notices to, 6, 22, 38, 54, 71, 86, 102, 118, 134, 150, 182, 198, 214, 230, 246, 270, 286, 302, 318, 334, 350 366, 382, 398, 414
Corvo, Caldeira or crater in, 133
Cosia, Signor Michael, 404
Coursing, Greyhounds, 260
Court and Haut Ton, 7, 22, 38, 54, 71, 86, 99, 118, 150, 166, 182, 198, 214, 231, 246 270, 286, 302, 318, 334, 350, 366, 382, 398 414
Coventry, Curious case of swindling at, 136
Cowes, Isle of Wight, Prince Albert's visit to, 185
Cranoe, Leicestershire, 37
Crime and its Causes, Remarks thereon, 297
Croly, The Rev. Dr., 248
Croucher, William, Execution of, for the murder of his wife, 360
"Crown Diamonds, The," Scene from, at the Princess's Theatre, 328
"Crowner's Quest Law," Case of, 214
Croxteth Park Races, 217, 218
Cuddington, The Battle of, 204
Currency and the Income Tax, Observations thereon, 340

DALMAS, AUGUSTUS, Trial and Conviction of, for the Battersea Murder, 383
Dalmas, Augustus, Interview with his Daughterain Horsemonger lane gaol, &c., 415
Damascus, The Maid of, 132
Dancers, Society of, Public Meeting of, 260
Daring Escape of the Convict Leach Bailey 220
Deaths, 11, 20 35, 51, 78, 95, 111, 123, 141, 159, 175, 191 207 223, 239, 255, 275, 295, 307, 327, 343, 359, 375, 387, 406, 422
De Grey, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, 22, 24
Deptford Murder, The late, 151
Derby, The—"Running Rein" the Winner of, 336
Derbyshire, Horrible Murder and Suicide at Belper, 274
Derby Stakes, Peel v. Weatherby and another, 361
De Rosas, Governor of Buenos Ayres, 196
Derwentwater, Melancholy Yacht Accident on, 360
Derwentwater, Lake Trout fishing in, 270
"Devil to Pay," Lord George Bentinck's Racehorse, 289 290
Devizes Election, 86
Devon and Cornwall Horticultural Society, Spring Exhibition of Assembly Room Plymouth, 372
Devonshire, The Collection of Coins and Medals, First Sale of the, with drawings of, 187
Dickens, Death of Vice Admiral Edward Stirling, 102
D'Israeli, M.P., Mr., 404
Dissenters Chapels Bill, 271
Dissenters Chapels Bill, Meetings respecting, &c., 351
Divorce, The Law of, Deputation to Dr. Nicholl, in reference to, 34
Don Carlos, 132
"Don Carlos,' Scene from Costa's Opera of, 421
Dover Railway Terminus near the Bricklayer's Arms, 284
Dover, Supposed Murder at, 399
"Drama, at Home," The Scene from the Extravaganza of, at the Haymarket Theatre, 257
Dramatic and Musical Chit Chat, 157, 170, 186, 220
Drawing Room, Her Majesty's, The Guard Room St James's Palace and Queen Anne's Room, 204
Dressmakers and Milliners, Association for the Benefit of, 287
Driving, Extraordinary Feat of Mr. Emily driving 23 horses to Green wich, 271, 313, 314
Drummers, Supply of little boys for, from Union Workhouses, 43
Dublin, (See Ireland)
Dudley Caverns, Visit of the Duc De Bordeaux to the, 12
Duel at Camden Town, The late fatal, 87, 99, 134
Dulcken, Madame, 45
Dupres, Portrait &c. of, 140, 208
Durham Regatta, 421

EASTER AMUSEMENTS, The Greenwich Pensioners, 233
Easter Monday Recreations, 234
East India Company, 380
East India Company, Court of Proprietors, 289
East India Company, Dinner given by the, to Sir Henry Hardinge on his appointment as Governor General of India, 394
East India House, 369
East India House, The Court of Directors, 381
Edgeworth's House, Miss, 261
Edinburgh Royal Institution, Colossal Statue of the Queen at, 57, 58
Egerton's, Lord, Fête at Worsley—Majority of George Egerton, Esq., 408
Elberfeld steam-ship, Loss of the, 137
Eldon, The Earl of, 65, 66
Electric Printing Telegraph, &c. South Eastern Railway, 284
Elliot, Lord, M.P., Secretary for Ireland, 23, 24
Ellenborough, Lord, The recall of, 302 See also India
Emigrants at dinner, 399
Emigrant Ship taking out, 230
Plan of, between decks, &c., 230
Emigration to Sydney, 229
"Enigma" Yacht, The, 320
Envelopes, Duty on the use of, 125
Epitome of News, Foreign and Domestic — 11, 19, 35, 51, 78, 95, 111, 119, 134, 158, 175, 183, 191, 215 224, 247, 272 286, 310, 326, 342, 358, 371 390 395, 422
Epsom Races, 322, 336—The Road, 336
Epsom Races—View of the Warren, the Betting Ring, 337
Ernst Herr, 324
Esther, Mutiny on board the whale ship, 30
Etna, Eruption of Mount, 48
Eton Montem, 1844—Ensign's Page; Pages: Philip D'Aulnay, temp. Francis I.; Hungerun Hussar; Crusader; Servitor, Gown an Noble; Duke Spanish Peasant, 348
Eton Montem, 1844 Pages: Greek, temp. Henry IV., France, Runner, temp. Charles I.; temp. Charles II; Sir Walter Raleigh; Captain's Breakfast in the College Hall, 349
Eton Montem, 1844—Arrival of the Royal Carriage at Weston's Gate; The Grand Procession in the Quadrangle, 352
Eton Montem, 1844—Ceremony at Salt Hill; Captain's Dinner on the Fellows' Eyot 353
Eton Montem, 1844—Montem Button, 354
Evening Spirit, Song of an, 12
Everybody's Column, 39, 152, 135, 174, 235 262
Exchequer, Court of, 115, 351, 367, 415
Exeter Hall, Interview of—May Meetings, 317
Exiles in England, Remarks on, 400
Eye Glass, The, written and illustrated by Alfred Crowquill, 13

FACTORY BILL, Parliamentary Debate relative to the, &c., 182, 198, 214
Factory labour, Interference with, &c., Remarks on, 318
"Fair Star," Scene from the extravaganza of, at the Princess's Theatre, 245
Fancy Fair under the Thames, 196
"Farinelli; ou le Bouffon du Roi," Scene from, at St. James's Theatre, 77
Farringdon Street North, 135
Fashions The, 60, 124, 205, 277, 290, 360, 370, 419
Fatal Carouse, 340
Favanti, Signora, 85, 180
Impromptu on hearing her sing, 202
"Favourite," The, Scene from, at Drury Lane Theatre, 205
February, A Sonnet, 60
Female Labour, Remarks on, 49
Fernand, M.P., Mr., Portrait, &c. of, 232
Ferrand, M.P., conduct of Mr., Observations on the, 130
Fever and Small Pox in Southwark, 54
Fine Arts, 25, 89, 108, 185, 197, 234, 273
Finnoe House, 13
Fitzhardinge, Sir, Threatening the life of the Earl of, 383
Flageolet Player, The Young, 89, 109, 150
Flores, Church of Santa Cruz in, 133
Flores, Valley of Waterfalls in, 133
Folkstone, Destructive Fire at, 343
Folkstone Viaduct, 76
Foreign Affairs, Observations on, 299
Foreign Intelligence and Politics, 2, 18, 34, 50, 64, 82, 103, 110, 114, 130, 146, 162, 178, 183, 194, 199, 210, 226, 231, 243, 247, 260, 271, 282, 298, 314, 330, 335, 340, 351, 362, 378, 383, 394, 418
Foreign Provinces, 38
Forgery, Remarkable case of, 147
See "Will Forgeries" also Fortescue, Signor, 308
Foxhunt, a novel one, 197
France, Chamber of French Deputies, Election of President, 308
France, The War Party in, remarks thereon, 329
Freeze shore Races, 424
French Aggression, 220
Fruit Schooner, 420
Fruit Trade, The, 419
Funds, Remarks on the high price of, 321
France and Morocco, 380

GAMBLING HOUSES, Attacks on by the Police, 199, 303
Gambling houses, Conviction of persons for keeping, Remarks thereon, 54
Gaming, Police Notification respecting, and Remarks relating to, at Epsom, 333
Gaming analysed, 347
Garlan, Mr., 42
"Gazelle" Yacht, The, 320
Gazette, The London, 11, 20, 35, 51, 78, 95, 111, 123, 143, 175, 191, 207, 223, 239 255, 275, 295, 307, 327, 343, 359, 375, 387, 406, 422
General Assembly, Opening of the, 339
George IV., Statue of in Trafalgar-square, by Chantrey, 128
Gilmour, Mrs., Remarkable Trial of, at Edinburgh, 34
Glastone, M.P., The Right Hon. William Ewart, 105, 106
Gloucester Gaols, Proceedings respecting, 9
"Gnome" Yacht, The, 320
Goldsmiths Hall—Nixon's Statues of the Seasons, 21
Goldsmiths Hall—Grand Staircase and Vestibule, 21
Goodwood Races, Important Notice at, 347
Gordon, Colossal Statue of the late Duke of, at Aberdeen, 312
Gorhambury Races, 241
Gospel in Foreign Parts, Society for the Propagation of the, 304
Gotha—The late Duke of Saxe-Coburg; View of Gotha, Chateau of Rhenard's Brun, near Gotha, 84. Palace of the Duke, 87
Gothics—The Fancy dress Ball at the Hanover square Rooms, 114, 114
Goulburn, M.P., The Right Hon. Henry, 105, 106
Grasmere, Lake, The Right Hon. Sir James, 105, 106
Gravesend, The Great Fire at, 376
Gravesend, Murder at, 403
Gravesend, New Church at Milton, next Gravesend, 332
Great Western Railway, Extension of to Oxford, 383
Greenland Whaling Ship leaving Hull, 156
Greenwich, The Magnetic and Meteorological Royal Observatory just completed at, 163, 164
Greenwich Park, Reported Invasion of the Sylvan Shades of, 398
Greenwich Park Vandalism in; Barrows in, 420
Greenwich Pensioners — Daniel Fearhall, Henry Sales, Joseph Burgen, James Connell, George French, Joseph Brown, John Manning, 233
Gresham Club House, 168
Grimsbrook Font, High Peak, Derbyshire, 281
Grim, Carlotta, in "La Esmeralda," 308
Grissell and Peto's, Attempted Incendiary Fire at, 151
Guano, First Arrival of from Africa, 131
"Guillaume Tell," Scene from the Opera of, at Drury-Lane Theatre, 173
Gwalior, The Capture of; Hill Forts and Fortified Posts, 153
Gwahor, The Usurper of Kaggeewhila, 214

HADDINGTON, The Earl of, 105, 106
Halford, Bart., M.D., The late Sir Henry, Portrait of, &c., 168
Halifax, Steam-boiler Accident at, 342
Hampstead Heath, the Enclosure of, 332
Hampstead Heath, Firing of, 383
"Happy, Happy Year." A Song by Balfe. Words by F. W. N Bayley, Esq., 320
Hardinge, The Right Hon. Sir Henry, 105, 106.
Hardinge, The Right Hon. Sir Henry K.C.B., Dinner given to by the East India Company, 334
Harriet Wreck-ship, Total Destruction of in the South Sea Islands, and Massacre of the Crew, 347
Harrison, Mr., as "Tuaddeus" in the Opera of the "Bohemian Girl," 45
Hawk and a Weazel, Battle between a, 211
Hayti—Revolt at; City of, 297
Hebrew Melodies, Sacred and Traditional, 138
Henley Regatta, 415, 416
Henry IV., Part 1, Scene from—The Death of Hotspur, 77
Herald's College—New Record Room, 248
"Hibernia," Brig, Detruction of the, 188
Highland Dancers and Pipers, 350
Hill, The Right Hon. Lord, 65, 66
Hill, Funeral of Lord Wilham, 199
Hillingdon House, Destruction of, by Fire, 80
Hints to Wives, 325
Hobler, Mr., Death of, 54
Hogg, Mr. James, Mr., 369
Holland, Funeral of the Ex-King of, 51, 52
Holmes, Mr. Robert (Irish Bar) 23, 24
Holy War—the Observations on the Occupation of Algiers by the French, &c., 377
Holy Week in Rome.—Palm Sunday, Procession in the Sala Regia. Holy Thursday, the Pope Washing the Feet of Poor Priests; Easter Sunday, the Pope Blessing the People from the Portico of St. Peter's, 212
Home Circuit, 147, 183
Hong Kong, Great Seal for, 8
Horse Dealers, Cheats of, 151
Horse-racing in the Reign of Charles II., 320
Horse Training, 260
Horse Watcher, The, 221
Horsemonger Prison, 260
Houses of Parliament, The New, Proceedings respecting, 331, 363
Huddersfield, Destruction of a Woollen Mill at, by Fire, 370
Hull, The First Greenland Whaling Ship leaving, 156
Hungerford Suspension Bridge, 119
Hussars, The 11th, and Prince Albert, 403
Hyde Park, "Rus in urbe;" and in "the Season," 261
Hydropathy in France, 121

ILLUMINATED MAGAZINE, Illustrations from, 27, 140, 220
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, The Stamps issued to, 188
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Tributary Lines to, on its completing its One Hundredth Number, 2
Impostion, Novel Case of, with Illustration, 170
Imprisonment for Debt, Lord Cottenham's Bill on the, 34, 235
Incendiarism and Incendiary Fires, 3, 18, 67, 99, 128, 139, 151, 171
Income Tax Bills, &c., Remarks on recent Proceedings in Parliament relative to, 366
India and China, 5, 82, 153, 210, 294, 298, 371
Indian Marriage at St. Martin's Church, 238
India, Recall of the Governor-General of, Remarks on, 394
Interment in Towns, Appalling facts connected with Burial Grounds, &c., &c.
Ireland, Bogmal Fires in, 39, 40
Ireland, State of—Movements of the Repeal Association, &c., &c., 6, 22, 38, 59, 67, 87, 97, 107, 116, 118, 123, 134, 151, 163, 182, 218, 227, 243, 278, 303, 322, 342, 351, 361, 367, 415, 417
Ireland—Dublin, High Sheriff of, (Mr. Latouche), 24
Ireland—Dublin Corporation—Alderman Bell, the late Lord Mayor, the Recorder, John Curtis, Esq., Council or Public Orders, &c.
Ireland—Dublin Music Hall, Aggregate Meeting of Roman Catholics in, 37, 38
Ireland—Dublin, Recorder's Court, 151
Ireland—Trinity College, Dublin, Historical Society, Inaugura. Address of the, 3

Ireland — Dublin, Hall of the Four Courts, 49
Ireland — Dublin, Murder near, 34
Ireland, Queen's Visit to, Remarks thereon, &c., 3, 17, 19, 22, 23, 24, 40, 41, 42, 43, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59, 69, 70, 71, 74, 86, 90, 96, 107, 246, 271, 291, 335, 342, 351, 353
Ireland, State Trials in — Counsel for the Crown — The Attorney General for Ireland, the Right Hon. T. B. C Smith; the Solicitor-General for Ireland, Mr. Greene; Mr. Bennett, Mr Brewster, Q.C.; Mr. Freeman, Mr. Holmes, Mr. Martley, Mr. J. Napier, and Mr Smyly, 23, 24.
Ireland, State Trials in — Crown Solicitor, Mr Kemmis, 24
Ireland, State Trials in — Counsel for the Traversers — Mr. Shell for Mr. John O'Connell, 69
Ireland, State Trials in — Legal Portraits — Mr. Clements, Mr. Hayes, 41
Ireland, State Trials in — Solicitors for the Defence — Messrs. Pierse Mahoney, Mr. Cantwell, Mr. Gartlan, 41, 42
Ireland, State Trials in — Judges Proceeding to the Four Courts, 69
Ireland, State Trials in — O'Connell, and his Sons on their Way to the Four Courts, 41
Ireland, State Trials in — Court of Queen's Bench, Dublin, the Traversers on Trial, 81
Ireland, State Trials in — Queen's Bench, Dublin, Mr. Bourne, Chief Clerk of the Court, 24
Ireland, State Trials in — Smith, The Right Hon. T. B. C., Listening to O'Connell's Defence; Portraits of O'Connell and John O'Connell; Discussing the Trials, 88
Ireland, State Trials in — Writs of Error, 415
Ireland State Trials — Richmond Penitentiary, Dublin, Visits to O'Connell, &c., in the, 380
Ireland State Trials — State Prisoners in Richmond Penitentiary, 383, 387
Ireland State Trials — In Writ of Error, 387, 415
Ireland — Dublin and Drogheda Railway, 287
Irish Armed Outpensioners, 20
Irish Sketches, 141
Iron Lighthouse for the West Indies, 269
Isabella, the Second Queen of Spain, Col
Isle of Man — Dreadful Coach Accident in the, 171
Isle of Man — Destruction of King William's College by Fire, &c., 64
Italian Opera House — The Queen and her Royal Guests at the, 369

JACK CADE, 218
Jack Cade's Cavern at Blackheath, 289
January, Sonnet to, 12
James, Steam Frigate, 121
Jews, Persecution and Expulsion of, in Lithuania 146
"John Bull," Steam Ship, Fire on board of the, 268
Jonville's, The Prince De, brochure, remarks upon, 305
Judges' Chambers, Case of Newton and Uxor v. Rowe and Norman, 142
Julien's Concerts, 39
June, The Month of, 350
June, A Sonnet, 408
Justiciary Court Edinburgh, Trial of Mrs Gilmour, 34

KALERGI, The Greek Patriot, 316
Kamehameha, King of the Sandwich Islands, 19, 20
Kaspereuhls, The Usurper of Gwalior, 244
Kemble, Mr. Charles, Shakspeare Readings by, 282
Kemble's, Mr. Charles, Readings and Recitations from Shakspeare, at Back nearn Palace, and Wilis's Rooms, 341
Kemp, Mr., The Architect, Melancholy Death of, 303
Kilmarnock Election, 346
King's College, London, 124
Kingston on Rai way, Law Suit respecting Property in, 394
Kingstown and Dalkey Atmospheric Railway, with Geo. IV., Obelisk, &c., &c., 16
Knatchbull, Bart, Sir Edward, M P., 105, 106
Knight, Mr. Charles, Dinner to, 367
Knole Park, Gateway to the Apartments, 336

LABOUR and Relaxation, Strictures on, 161
"La Esmeralda,' Scene from at Her Majesty's Theatre, 173
Lafitte, Portrait of the late M., 372
Lafitte, Funeral of the late M., 351, 372
Lamson, Death of Mr Alderman, 268
Lance s Picture of a Lady in Waiting, of the time of Louis XV., 168
Landshipping Colliery, Awful Accident in, 126
Lancecost Priory, near Naworth, 340
Launceston Election, 336
Law Appointments, The New, 246
Lea River, Loss of Life in, 412
Leeches, Facts concerning, 128
Legislative Delays, Remarks on, 193
Leopold, King of the Belgians, Portrait of his Majesty, 21
"Liberator," The, in Love, 339
Licensed Victuallers, Incorporated Society of, Jubilee of the, 95
Lighthouse of Cast Iron for the West Indies, 269
Limitation of Labour, Remarks on the, 177
Literature, Magazines, &c., 10, 26, 27, 50, 67, 90, 122, 139, 154, 186, 210, 234, 262, 290, 306, 325, 354
Lithuania, Persecution and Expulsion of the Jews in, 146
Liverpool, Supposed Chemical Cause of the Fire at, 9
Liverpool, More Awful Fires at, 100
Liverpool Grand Steeple Chase, 353
Liverpool Mechanics' Institution — Soirée at the, 135, 136; Sculpture Gallery and Drawing School of, 135
Liverpool, Fire at the, 307
London and Blackwall Railway Company, 112
London and Croydon Railway Company, Meeting of Proprietors of the, 151
London and South Western Railway, Meeting of Proprietors, 163
London-bridge, Fatal Occurrence at, 353
London Merchants, and Persian Trade Sculpture, 101
London out of Town, 234
Longevity, Case of in France, 155
Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Councilman (Sculpture), 104
"Lotterie, the celebrated Steeple Chase Winner," 341, 242
Louis Philippe, Presentation of the Corps Diplomatique to his Majesty on New Year's Day, 1, 2
Lover, Esq., Samuel, 208
"Loving Cup," The Presentation of the, at the Mansion House, 304
Lowe, Sir Hudson, Death of, 32
"Lucrezia Borgia," Scene from, at the Princess's Theatre, 29
Lumley, Mr., of her Majesty's Theatre, 237
Lynn Regis, Destructive Fire at, 317
Lyme Regis, Dorset, Vast Shoal of Fish off, 131
Lynch Law, Case of, at Windsor, 128
Lyndhurst, The Right Hon. Lord, Lord High Char cellor, 105, 106
Mabel Marchmont, 9, 25, 46
"Mad and Sudan," Scene from, 61
Malahide Castle, 309
Manchester and Leeds Railway, Opening of the Railway connecting the Manchester and Liverpool with, &c., 305

MANCHESTER, Extensive Fire at, and View of the Ruins, 148
Manchester Theatre Royal, Destruction of the, by Fire, 301
"Manchester Sinners, Less of the, 416
Manners, Lord John, 268
March, a Sonnet, 138
Markets, The, 11, 30, 35, 51, 78, 95, 111, 123, 143, 159, 175, 191, 203, 222, 238, 255, 270, 287, 303, 326, 342, 355, 374, 387, 406, 422
Marylebone, Murder at, 250
Mary Queen of Scots, Escape of from Lochleven Castle, 305
Masters and Servants, Fate of Mr Miles's Measure for the Regulation of the Law between, 28
Mathews, Charles, Bankruptcy of, 222
May, a Sonnet, 152
May Meetings in London, 171, 187
Maynooth College, 172
Melville, the Rev. H., 48
Mepham, the Innocent Convict, 55
Merchant's Daughter, The, 157, 173, 189, 190
"Merry Wives of Windsor," The, Scene from, 61
Mesmerism, Case of William Bowen, an itinerant Lecturer on, at Worship-street, 119
Metcalfe, Sir Charles, Statue of the late by Baily, R.A., 208
Metropolis, Churches of the, 48, 108, 157, 170, 206, 364
Metropolis Improvements, 155
Middlesex Sessions, 55, 142
Middlesex Sessions, harsh punishment of Paupers committing petty offences, 318
Middle Temple Banquet, 418
Midland Circuit, 171
Midnight Legislation, Observations on, 180
Military (Royal) Academy at Woolwich — Parade of Cadets in the Stone Court; Cadets in New Appointments; Examination in the Dining Room, 413
Mission Church, 316
Model Dwelling Mansion, Another, 22
Molière, Monument to, at Paris 41
"Monarch," The, Launch of, 321, 3 2
Money, The Metallic Base of the, 370
Moral Wrong Majority, The, Remarks on, 313
Mormonism, Case tried at Chester, 10
"Morning Herald," Conduct of the late Proprietors in reference to the late State Trials, 54
Morocco, View of Tetuan, 380
Morpeth, Lord Viscount, Splendid Casket presented to, by the Electors of the West Riding, 68
Mozart, Impromptu Lines on the Anniversary of, 60
Munro, Lieut., Sale of the effects of (the warrior in the late fatal duel), 5
Murder at Whitewall, Norfolk, 231
Murders by a young child, 130
Murder and Attempted Suicide in Marylebone, 217
Murphy, M.P., Mr., Sergeant, 117
Music and New Music, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 170, 186, 202, 208, 241, 258, 289, 323, 339, 354, 356, 370, 391, 403
Musical Lectures, 39
Mutiny on board the Whale Ship Esther, 99
Mystery Lurid, 329

NAMUR Mortar, The, 167, 196
Nap or, Mr. Joseph (Irish Bar), 34
Naphtha Distillery, Destruction of a, 231
National Faith and National Finance, Observations on, 225
National Gallery, Visit of the Children of the Parish School of Marylebone to; remarks thereon 22
National Sports, 30, 45, 59, 81, 127, 143, 158, 174, 190, 191, 222, 238, 254, 269, 284, 307, 321, 322, 335, 337, 370, 385, 385, 415
Naval and Military Intelligence, 11, 30, 46, 87, 119, 191, 155, 175, 190, 199, 218, 227, 274, 291, 319, 331, 355, 367, 386, 403
Naval Regulations, The New, 22
Naval Review, Reported, 59
Naworth Castle, Destruction of, by fire; Interior of, during the Conflagration, 340
Naworth Castle, Affecting Address to Lord Morpeth on the destruction of, 371
Needlewomen, Case of the poor, 54
Neglected Record, A leaf from a, 220
Nelson Statue, 208
Nemagh, Execution of two men in, 342
Newcastle Race Plate, 403
Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Ascension Day at; Barge Day on the Tyne, 341
Newmarket Betting Room 269
Newmarket Second Spring Meeting, 274
Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Free Grammar School at, 338
Newfoundland, Condition of, 299
Newfoundland, St. John's, 350
Newspapers in China, 39
Newton and Uxor v. Rowe and Norman Liability of a Married Woman to the Law of Arrest, 142
New Plays, Farces, &c., 307
New Zealand, 2, 65, 182
New Zealand, the Late Massacre at Wairau; Rauparaha Kaiia, Chief; Rangauaata, Fighting General, 412
New Zealanders; New Zealand Dancer; War Dance; Rose, a New Zealander, 188
Nixon's Statues of the Seasons for Goldsmiths Hall, 21
Nooks and Corners of Old England, 9, 37, 117, 157, 189, 230, 262, 316, 365, 381
Normanby, The most Honourable the Marquis of, 101
Northampton Races, 216, 217
Northamptonshire Grand Military Steeple Chase, 216, 217
Northamptonshire Stakes, The Great, 201

Hurdle Race, 201
Northern Circuit, 115, 147
Nottingham Mechanics' Institute, 149
Nottingham Gaol, Escape of Convicts from, 2
Nottingham, Justices' Justice, 342
Nuisances, Abatement of, in the Metropolis, 138

OAKS, The, Winner of, 356
Oastler, Mr. Richard, 126, 156
O'Brien, M.P., Mr. W. S., Portrait of the, 424
O'Connell, M.P., Mr. Daniel, Grand Banquet to at Covent-Garden Theatre, 161, 162
O'Connell, Daniel, visit of Mr. to the town of Birmingham, 181
O'Connell's, Mr., Visit to Cork, 227
O'Connell, Mr., at Coventry; Investiture of with the Holy Order of the Guild of St. Joseph and Mary, 181
O'Connell's Cap, 151
O'Connell, Daniel, late also Ireland
Offenbach, Herr Jacques, the celebrated Violoncellist, 370
Ogbourne Downs, Visit of the, to the Thames Tunnel, 167
Old London, Picture Model of, at the Queen's Bench, Court of, 66, 87, 142, 267, 415

RAILWAY Monopoly, Remarks on, 113
Ramforth, Miss, as Arline in the Opera of the "Bohemian Girl," 45
Raleigh's, Sir Walter, House at Youghal 122
"Ratan," Portrait &c. of, the property of Mr. Crockford, 331, 322
Reading, New Gaol at, 108
Registration (Ireland) Bill, Remarks on 245
Registration, (Ireland), Remarks on late Debate on, 244
Registration of Arms in Ireland, Mischief to the, 179
Religious Trust Society, New Depot of, Paternoster Row, 117
Reptonbury, by the Baroness de Calabrella, 205, 221, 237
Revenue, The, 314
Review, Court of, 115
"Richard the Third," Scene from, at Drury Lane Theatre, 169
Richardson, Mr. Joseph, the Flute Player, 29
Richmond Penitentiary, Dublin, see "Ireland."
"Rienzi in the Forum '—Scene from Elmore's Picture, 373
Rimini, Francesca da, 89
Ripon, The Earl of, 105, 106
Roden, The Earl of, 117
Roman Catholics, Exclusion of, from Juries, Great Meeting respecting, 85
Rose s, Captain, Discoveries in the New Zealand Antarctic Seas, 120
Rotherham Temperance Institute, 13
Rotunda, Dublin, Singular Accident to a Sparrow at the, 37
Royal Academy — Prize Sculpture (Mr. E. B. Stephens), 292
Royal Academy, Levee Visit to the Exhibition of the, 305
Royal Academy, Exhibition of the, 303
Royal Academy Exhibition — Scene from Comus, from Etty's Picture; Rienzi in the Forum, from Elmore's Picture, 373
Royal Exchange, The New, Tower of, 20
Royal Exchange, The New, 209, 210
Royal Exchange, Sculpture for the Pediment of the New, 104
Royal Godmother, A, 314
Royal Guests, The; Remarks on the Visits of, 30, 41
Royal Portraits, 120, 146
Russell, Lord John, 161
Russia, His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of, Expected Visit of, to Her Majesty, 381
Russia, His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of, Visit of, to the Queen at Windsor, 141, and Chiswick House, 384, 385
Russia, His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of, Departure of, from Woolwich, 377, 378
Russia, Plot among to Assassinate the Emperor of 307
Russia, The Emperor of, and Sir Robert Peel, 408

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, 138
St. Ann's Society's book 274
St. Asaph and Bangor, Remarks on a late Debate in the House of Lords on Union of Sees of, 382
St. Bartholomew the Less, Bethnal Green, New Church, 354
St. George's Church, Bloomsbury, 276
St. George's Chapel, Windsor; Banner and Stall of the King of Saxony, 69
Saint Giles' Church, Cripplegate, 165
St James's Bazaar, Exhibition of Decorations at, 381
St. James the Less, Bethnal Green, New Church, 364
St. Joseph and Mary, The Order of; Card of the Brotherhood; and Investiture of Mr. O'Connell with the Holy Order, 181
St. Pancras Church, 108
St. Patrick's Day in Dublin; Irish Harp, Badges of the Order of St. Patrick; Benevolent Society of St Patrick's School; Procession of Children to the Freemasons' Tavern, 166
St. Stephen's, Walbrook, Church, Disgraceful and Disorganized State of, and Meeting respecting 403
St. Thomas's, West Indies, &c., 316
St Salsafis," Loss of the, 420; the Barque, 420
Salmon Leap, near Coleraine, Ireland, 276
Salvi, M., the Tenor Singer, 289
Sandwich Islands, Eruption of Mouna Roa on the, 61
Sandwich Islands; Kamehameha, the King of the, 19, 20
Sarah's Head Inn, Friday-street, Cheapside, 78
Saxzet, President of the French Chamber of Deputies, 177
Saxony, His Majesty the King of, 394, 414
Saxony, Arrival of His Majesty the King of; Visit of His Majesty to the Lord Chamberlain at Buckhurst Park; Visit to the Isle of Wight, 350
Scott, Lieut., of the 5th Regiment, Fatal Accident to, 286
Sculpture, Royal Academy Prize, 292
Sea Lion (Otaria Jubata), 120
Seals; Arctocephalus Ursinus, and Monachus Leucoides (Female), 120 Seals, The Crab Eating, Phoca Cancrophaga), Skull of, 120
Secondaries Court, 87
Serenade on the Eve of La Rosa's Natal Day, 138
Session, Prospects of the; Remarks thereon, 1

Prints, New, 186
Privy Council, 115
Privy Gardens, An Unwelcome Visitor in, 290
Prohibited Comedy, The, of Richelieu in Love, or the Youth of Charles I, 176
Provisions, Foreign, 38
Prussia, His Majesty the King of, Portrait of, 145
Prussic Acid, Case of poisoning by, (Mrs Belaney,) 309
Public Improvements, Remarks on, 241
Puttesla, The Rajah of, on his State Elephant, 5
Pychley Hunt Ball, Northampton, 200
Pytchly Hunt Races, 201

QUEEN's, The, (Her Majesty Victoria the First) Birthday, 283
Queen, The, Her Majesty, and her Royal Guests at the Opera, 369
Queen, The, Her Majesty and Her Cabinet Ministers, 105
Queen, The, Her Majesty, Victoria, Chinese presents to, 39
Queen, The, Her Majesty's Drawing Room, Rooms at St James's, 204, 205
Queen, The, Threatening Her Majesty, (Case of John Cressby,) 247
Queen's Bench, Court of, 66, 87, 142, 267, 415

Severe Sentence, Remarkable Effects of a, upon an Irish Girl, 247
Severn's Scene Steamer, Wreck of the, 301
Shaftesbury, the Earl of, 197
Shakespeare Readings, by Mr. Charles Kemble, 323
Shaw, Mrs. A., in "The Brides of Venice," 307
Sheath Bill, The Blackbuilt (Chionis Minor), 126
"Shepherdess," Loss of the Brig, on the Goodwin Sands, 62
Sheriff's Court, 272
Shipping Intelligence, 14, 28, 30, 46, 87, 119, 131, 155, 171, 190, 227, 251, 274, 314, 331, 419
Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Benevolent Society, 315
Shipwrecks and Loss of Life, 190
Shrove Tide, an Ode in very Irregular Measure, 128
Sidmouth, Death of Viscount, 193
Sign Board, Extraordinary, in America, 90
Simple Cures, 28
Skerryvore Light-house, 59
Savery, Lord Brougham's Letter to Mr. Scoble on, 270
Sloth at the Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, 421
Smith, Mr., Albert, 389
Smith, the Rev. Sidney, and the American Press, 245
Smoke, Illustrated by Crowquill, 140, 141
Smuggling, and the Slave Trade, Remarks on, 329
Smythe, M.P., Mr., Portrait of, &c., 292
Snow balling, the First Snow-ball, 53
Society Islands — Deposition of Queen Pomare by the French, 115
Society Islands — Queen Pomare, Portrait of; Bay of Papaete, 116
Soult, Marshal, 213
Sound, Remarks on the Propagation of, (from the Quarterly Review), 339
South-Eastern Railway, Completion of the, &c., 97, 75, 76
South-Eastern Railway — Electric Printing Telegraph; Deflecting Apparatus, Dial; Copper Station, Needles; Telegraph; Zinc Station, Wimbledon; Printing Apparatus; Printing Alarum, 57
South Lancashire Election, Poor Law, &c., Comments on, 360
South Lancashire Election, Hustings at Newton-in-the-Willows, 360
South Sea Islands, Horrible Massacre in one of the; Total Destruction of the "Harriet" Whale Ship, 247
South Wales Circuit, 169
South-Western Railway — New Brick-layer's Arms Terminus; Timber Viaduct, from Cooper's Bridge; Framework of the Viaduct, 353
Spain, Affairs of, 132, 148, 150, 182
Spain, The Queen Christina's Progress up; Arrival at Barcelona; Crossing Hannibal's Bridge, 165
Spain, Insurrection in, 103, 270
Spain, Rebellion in, 128, 130
Spanish Question, The, Lord Ranelagh's Letter on, 132
Spanish Voltigeurs Retreating, 133
Sparrow, Singular Accident to a, at the Rotunda, Dublin, 37
Sporting Intelligence, 415
Stanley, Lord, M.P., 105, 106
Stamped Envelope Paper, 172
Steamer, Narrow Escape of a, 238
Steamer, Severn's, The Royal Palace at, 273
Stebbing, Samuel, and Captain Conolly (See "Bokhara")
Steeldata Regina, in Flower, at Kew Gardens, 229
Strutt, Esq., The late Joseph, 67, 68
Stuart De Rothesay, Lord, Resignation of, 251
Sudeley Castle, 180
Sugar Duties Bill, The late Rescinding of a Vote on, in the House of Commons, 298
Sugar Question, The State of the, 366
Surrey Benevolent Fund, 260
Surrey Zoological Gardens, Picture Model of Old London at, 345
Sussex, Duke of, Library of the late Royal Highness the Duke of, 167
Sussex, the Dukedom of, Proceedings in reference to Sir Augustus D'Este, 339, 383, 415
Sussex Peerage, Claim of Sir Augustus D'Este to the, Proceedings thereon in the House of Lords, &c., 380
Swan, The Order of the, Knights of, 152
Sweden, His Majesty the late King of, 177, 178
Sweden and Norway, their Majesties the King and Queen of, 272
Swinley, the late Dr., 67
Sydney, Trial and Execution of John Auntchbull for Murder, 378

TAHITI, French occupation of, &c., Remarks on, 270
Tahiti, Relinquishment of, by the French, 139
"Taming of the Shrew," Scene from, at the Haymarket Theatre, 180
Tea Kettle, The Art of a, 340
Texas, Church of Alamo, San Antonio de Bexar, 380
Texas, General Houston, the President of, 380
Texas and the Oregon Territory, 378
Thames, Proposed Embankment of the; New Coal Tax, 240
Thames Regatta, The, 294
Thames Grand Regatta; Putney Bridge, &c., 412
Thames (Royal) Yacht Club; Challenge Cup, &c., 297
Thames (Royal) Yacht Club, 319, 320
Thames (Royal) Yacht Club — Sailing Match, 339
Thames Tunnel, Annual Assembly of the Proprietors of the, 149
Thanet Church Spire, 328
Theatres, Theatrical Notices, &c., 27, 45, 61, 77, 78, 93, 108, 124, 140, 154, 175, 189, 202, 208, 237, 251, 277, 278, 289, 305, 321, 339, 354, 370, 386, 411
Theatrical, English, for Holland, 271
"Theresa," Fire on board of, 165
Thiers, M., 63
Thilo, Madame Anna 324
Thirlwell, Master, the Violinist, 29
Thorp Cloud, or the Monastery of Dove Dale, 61, 77
Thorwaldsen, the Great Sculptor, 236
Thorwaldsen, the Celebrated Sculptor, Death of, 215
Three-and-a Half per Cents., Reduction of the, 150
Thug s Responsibility, A, 155
Tom Thumb, General, the American Dwarf, 124
Torres Straits, Discovery of a Passage, Barrier Reef and, 305
Trafalgar Square, Chantrey's Statue of George IV. in, 128
Trance at Deptford, Supposed Case of, 142

Tribes of London, 325
Trinity, The (New Patent Cabriolet), 141
Trigonometrical Survey — Thaxted Church Spire, 325
Trinity Monday, Ceremonies observed on, by the Trinity House Corporation, 376
Trout Fishing, 276, 290
"Tudor," Launch of the, East Indiaman, at Newcastle upon-Tyne, 292
Tunis, Expedition against, by the King of Sardinia; City of, 180
Twelfth-night King (from Beranger), 10

"UGLY BUCK," Mr. Day's, running a race for 2,000 Guineas, at Newmarket, with Lord George Bentinck's "Devil to Pay," 289, 290
United Service Institution, The Armoury of the, 149
"Used Up," Scene from, at the Haymarket Theatre, 125

VERA CRUZ, 17, 18
Vestries in Churches Bill, the late Discussion on, 328
Victoria Land, Discoveries in the South Polar Regions, discovered by Captain J. C. Ross, 353
Visitor, An unwelcome, in Privy Gardens, 289
"Vivandière, La," Mdlle. Carlo as, 356
Vocalists, Previous Occupations of Celebrated, 128

WALES More of Rebecca's Freaks, 3
Wales, State of, Observations on the, 198
Walton's, Izaak, House at Stafford, 117
Wanderings in Spain, by Martin Haverty, Extracts from, 180
Washington, City and the Capital of, 316
Waterloo Banquet, 395
Waterman Steamer, The (No. 10), Wreck of, off Hastings, 288
"Waterwitch," Launch of the, at Cowes, 4
Wednesbury Murder, The, 195
Welch Church, Opening of the Metropolitan, 12
Welsh Riots, 10
Welsh Verdict, 3
"Wellesley, East Indiaman, The Launch of the, 242
Wellington, The Most Noble His Grace the Duke of, K.G., &c. &c., 165 166
Wellington Statue, The, in the City, &c., 144
Wellington, The Duke of, and Sir Robert Peel, Bart., Threatening to Shoot, (case of Fitzpatrick), 303
West Indiaman, Arrival of a, from Bermuda, of only 44 tons, 408
West London Railway, Intended opening of the, 355
Westminster Bridge, Expenditure on, 52
Westminster Sessions, 83
Westmoreland and Cumberland, Lord Lieutenantship of the Counties of, Remarks thereon, 241
Weston-super-Mare, Fire at; Knightstone Baths at, 204
"Westward Ho!" A Tale of the Fish Market, 67
Wharncliffe, The Right Hon. Lord, 105, 106
Wheat Yield in Connemara, 141
Whitehall, 312
White Slavery, 55
Whitsuntide Holidays, Particulars respecting, 422
Wicklow, The Earl of, 117
Wilkie, Statue of Sir David, in the National Gallery, 41
Wilkins, Mr., Counsel for Barber, 224
Will Forgeries by Barber, Fletcher, and Others, 27, 50, 103, 199, 228, 247, 249, 271, 289, 341
Will Forgery, The Arrival of at the Penitentiary, Milbank, 283
Will s Forgery Trials, with Portraits of the Beneh during the Trials; also of the Prisoners, 249
Wilton, The Lodge at the Earl of, the Earl's Seat, 257
Windsor, Grand Review at, 365 384
Windsor, Illustrious Visitors and Staff at, 360
Windsor Steeple Chase, 244, 245
Wine, Importation of, in 1843 39
Winter, the Rev. Henry, case of, Implicated in the sale of unwholesome food at Rochester, 3
Wolff's, Dr., Mission to Bokhara 107 (See also "Bokhara Captives, The")
Wood, M. P., Colonel, (Bresson), 197
Wood, Will of the late James, 163
Wood, Mr. and Mrs., in the Opera of "The Maid of Judah, 61
Wood Engraving — Its History and Practice, by W. A. Chatto, with numerous Illustrations — Ancient Spanish Monogram; Egyptian Brick Stamp; St. Christopher (1423); Old Playing Card, 1st Century; St. Bernardin (1454), 304, 322
Wood Engraving — Letter K., Alphabet of Initial Letters, 15th Century, 151
Wood Engraving — Execution Super Pater-Noster, from Plater s Bible Paperrun, 1462, 254
Wood Engraving — Triumph of Maximilian, (1518); Erasmus, after Holbein, 287, 288
Wood Engraving — Scene from Watteau, in 1844, 273
Wood Engraving — Captain Coram, Portrait of; Riches Walking out; Daughter of Riches and her Husband Quarrelling, 269
Wood Engraving — Infant Hercules, from the Picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds, 369
Wood Engraving Luke Clennell, Tablet to; David and Goliath, 337
Wood Engraving — Imogen, after Westall, 357
Wood Engraving — Death of the Children of Niobe, from a Painting by Wilson, 405
Wood Engraving — The Prophet Jeremiah, from Michael Angelo's Picture in the Sistine Chapel at Rome, 417
Woollen Mill, Destroyed by Fire, at Huddersfield, 376
Woolwich, Launch of Her Majesty's Ship, the "Bonaventure," 81, 251
Wreck Chasers, Condition of the, Meeting for Improving the, 314

XANTHIAN EXPEDITION, Water Tomb at Telmessus, 261
Xanthus Expedition, The, 128

"ZAMPA," Scene from, at Her Majesty's Theatre; Formosa's Benefit, 308
Zealand, The Right Hon. the Earl of, 333
Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, The Sloth at, 421.

London: Printed and published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SUPPLEMENT, SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1844.

HISTORY OF WOOD-ENGRAVING.

(Concluded from page 417.)

THE PRACTICE OF WOOD-ENGRAVING.

Box is the wood mostly used by modern wood-engravers; pear-tree, and other wood of a similar grain and fibre, being now only used in executing large cuts for posting-bills. In the time of Albert Durer, pear-tree appears to have been most generally employed. The original blocks of the "Triumphs of Maximilian," now preserved in the Imperial Library at Vienna, are all of pear-tree. In the time of Papillon, though box was preferred for small cuts requiring great delicacy in the execution, the wood of the apple, pear, and service tree, was still frequently employed. Papillon considered that the box brought from Turkey, though of larger size, was inferior in quality to that of Provence, Italy, and Spain. Next to box, Papillon preferred the wood of the service tree. In his time it appears to have been customary to engrave on the length-way, not on the cross section of the wood. The old wood-engravers, who chiefly used pear-tree and other wood of similar grain, appear to have used, for the purpose of cutting their outlines, a knife with a point slightly curved inwards, in the manner of what is termed a "Wharncliffe," the old "jack-a-legs," with a straight edge, is now nearly obsolute, both name and thing. This knife they held in the manner of a pen, and cut towards them, not from them, as is now the practice in using the graver. A figure of such a knife is frequently to be seen in old wood-cuts, together with that of a graver which was probably used in the execution of cross-hatchings.

Box, for the purposes of engraving, is sawn into slices, about three-quarters of an inch thick, which is the height of type, and the cross way of the wood. Sometimes, for the purpose of obtaining pieces of greater length, it is sawn obliquely. Such pieces, however, are not so good to engrave on as those of the same wood which are sawn directly aeross, in consequence of the obliquity of the grain impeding the equable action of the point of the tool; and rendering it extremely difficult to cut a clear line, in consequence of small portions tearing away at the sides. As the usual diameter of even the largest logs of box does not exceed five or six inches, it becomes necessary when a large block is wanted, to join several pieces together, and to do this properly, so that the joinings may not be perceptible in the impression, requires very great dexterity on the part of the person who prepares the block; indeed, the joining together of several pieces of box so as to form one large compact block of uniformly smooth and level surface, requires as much skill as the most delicate piece of cabinet-work. The largest block of this kind ever made or engraved, was the "View of London," presented in 1843, by the proprietors of the Illustrated London News to their subscribers.

The best box is that which is of a yellow colour, like gold, throughout the whole surface, displaying neither specks of white nor reddish-coloured rings. Such box being of a close grain, and uniformly dense and tenacious, allows of the lines being cut with the greatest clearness and precision, but is also the least liable to display unevenness at the surface, which is usually occasioned by inequality in the density of the several layers of the wood. Wood of a red colour usually wants tenacity, and cuts soft and short; and if it displays many distinct rings it is extremely liable to shrink irregularly, and to thus render it difficult to obtain a perfect impression. Wood containing whitish specks or streaks is apt to break away under the graver in such places. All kinds of box are subject to warp or turn up at the edges and become hollowed in the middle, but more especially such as have not been well seasoned. When a block has become slightly warped in the progress of engraving, it will generally return to a level on being kept for a day or two with its face downwards on a table or shelf. Sometimes, however, it can only be remedied by means of overlays in printing, to bring up the hollow parts of the surface.

Some artists, before they commence their drawing, are accustomed to whiten the smooth surface of the block with a slight wash of flake white and gum-water; others merely rub the surface with a little finely-powdered Bath brick, mixed with pure water, rubbing it off perfectly clean when dry. The latter seems to be the least objectionable mode of preparing the slippery surface of the block for drawing on with a black-lead pencil, the usual instrument with which drawings on wood are made. All the lines which appear in a wood-cut are generally drawn on the block by the designer or draftsman in pencil, with the exception of what are technically called "tints," indicative of the atmosphere and the sky, such tints being merely washed in with Indian ink. The most faithful wood-engraving of an artist's design is that in which the engraver has, without adding or diminishing, worked out a perfect fac simile; this, however, according to those who make drawings on wood, is but rarely effected, there being always some alterations or omissions made by the engravers, and invariably for the worse. Wood-engravers, however, deny the truth of the charge in its absolute extent; for, while they admit that a drawing is occasionally marred in their hands, they also insist that it is sometimes mended. They also further allege, in their own justification, that an artist who has but little knowledge of the practice of wood-engraving, and no idea whatever of adapting his drawing to the purposes of printing, will frequently produce a design, which, though it may appear very pretty on the block, may yet take more time and pains to engrave than it is worth; and prove, after all, but an indifferent wood-cut, which it may be very difficult to print well, even with the aid of overlays, by a hand-press, and utterly impossible to print decently at a steam-press. From the want of such knowledge in the designer, it frequently happens that wood-cuts, though carefully and elaborately engraved, yet appear very insipid when printed; and thus the engraver, who, closely adhering to the drawing, may have done for them all that his art could effect, is blamed for deficiencies which are entirely owing to the designer. For the production of a drawing that will print well and display the full power of wood-engraving, something more is required than the ability to make it on paper or on wood: to succeed—unless by chance—it is necessary that the designer should know how to manage his drawing, so that it may be capable of being properly printed; and he should always bear in mind that he is working for the press.

In the present day it is usual to have the subject completely drawn on the block, in all its details, and with the intended effect of light and shade; in the time of Papillon, however, it appears to have been customary with the French engravers to trace at first on the block merely the outlines of the subject from a finished drawing on paper, to which they referred for the details and the effect, as they proceeded with their work, just as a copperplate engraver refers to the drawing of his subject.

As the pencil-drawing on the block would be liable to become obliterated in the course of engraving, were it to remain quite exposed, it is customary for wood-engravers to cover all the block, except the part on which they may be actually employed, with a cap of paper, fitting close and tied tightly round the edges. As the drawing on the block is apt to be injured by the breath, a kind of screen or shade, formed of a piece of card-board or stiff paper, covering the nostrils and mouth, and secured by a string passing behind the ears, is frequently worn by wood-engravers, in damp or frosty weather, when employed on fine work. They also usually wear a shade, both to protect the eyes, and to more particularly confine the view to the work before them.

As all the lines in an engraved wood-block are in relief, their extremities, both at the edges and in the middle of the subject, are extremely liable to come off too heavy in printing, in consequence of the paper in such places being pressed not only on to, but, to a certain extent, down over them. In order to remedy this, when it is particularly desirable that certain parts should be lightly printed, and show the lines gradually declining till they become lost in the paper, the block is lowered in such places before the drawing is made on it; by which means the pressure of the platten or the cylinder on such places is reduced, and the desired lightness obtained. In vignette subjects, where the edges are required to be light, the lowering of the block in such places is extremely simple; lowering in the middle of the block, however, is not so easy an operation, and before it can be properly done, it is necessary to have the parts intended to be light sketched in as a guide to the operator. For lowering a block in this manner, a tool something like the burnisher of a copperplate engraver is used. Sometimes, also, the lines in such places are lowered by means of a fine file, after the cut has been engraved on a perfectly flat surface. Though "lowering" has been claimed as a recent invention, it was known to the old wood-engravers: Papillon has described his method of lowering by scraping down the lines after the block was engraved; and instances of lowering are frequent in Bewick's works.

When a block has been damaged, or badly engraved, in any part, the injury may be repaired, if not extending over a large surface. This is effected by drilling the part out, and inserting a plug, on the face of which the defective portion of the subject is re-drawn and engraved. Many instances of such repairs are perceptible in old wood-engravings, but in them the face of the plug is generally square. However well the repair may have been made, it is extremely difficult to prevent the trace of it appearing, to a scrutinising eye, like a white line round the plug, which is very liable to become loosened from the action of the press. Of a cut which has had a plug inserted it is generally advisable to take a cast, and to print from that, and not from the original block.

The tools which a wood-engraver employs to execute his work are extremely simple. They consist of gravers, to cut the lines defining the forms, and suggesting the idea of the varied tint and texture of his subject; and of cuiseis and gouges, to cut or scoop out the larger masses of wood where the subject has to appear white. The gravers are of two kinds—gravers simply so called, and "tint-tools." The gravers-proper are used to cut the various lines, straight, crooked, curved, or crossing, which define the forms of the different objects, and indicate their character and texture; tint-tools, which are thinner in the blade, and more acutely angular at the point than gravers-proper, are used to cut the parallel lines which constitute what is technically termed a tint. In the use of these tools, in clearly cutting the more delicate portions of his subject, is displayed the engraver's skill; if in the adaptation of lines of all kinds to significantly convey as complete an idea of his subject as his art will allow, he displays both a knowledge of pictorial effect, and a power of representing it by the means of wood-engraving, he is justly entitled to the name of an artist.

GRAVERS.

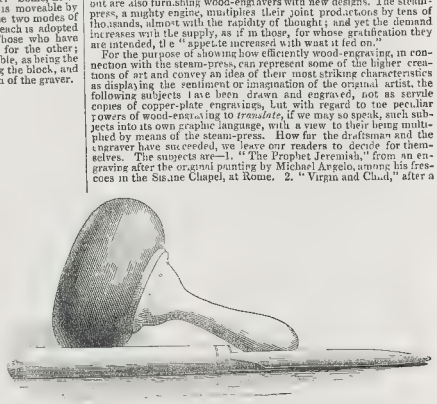
SAND-BAG.

Most wood-engravers, when at work, are accustomed to place the block on a leather sand-bag, which at once affords a firm rest, and allows of the block being turned with facility in any direction, by the left hand, while the right is employed in cutting a line. Some, however, place the block on a kind of frame, on which it is moveable by means of a pivot. Of the comparative merits of those two modes of resting the block it is not easy to decide, seeing that each is adopted by some of the best wood-engravers of the time. Those who have been accustomed to the one mode rarely abandon it for the other; to us, however, the sand-bag appears the most preferable, as being the simplest, and affording the greatest facility of turning the block, and suiting it, by the motion of the left hand, to the action of the graver.

LAMP.

As the wood-engraver requires a strong and clear light, he generally, when working at night, employs either a glass globe filled with water, or a large lens, to concentrate the light of his lamp, and to cast it upon the block which he is engaged in engraving. The advantage which the globe has over the lens, with regard to the greater clearness and coolness of the light which it transmits, is in some degree counterbalanced by its greater liability to become broken, and the water become spilled over the table and among the blocks.

In taking a proof of his cut—which can only be done when the whole of the subject is engraved, otherwise the drawing would be effaced—the wood-engraver employs a small dauber to ink it, and a blunt-edged burnisher, to rub off the impression, which is usually taken on India paper, a piece of card being placed above to equalise the friction, and to prevent the lines being broken. Wood-engravers are frequently charged with heightening their proofs, by distributing a little more or less ink on certain parts of the block, and by burnishing such parts more or less, accordingly as they wish them to appear dark or light in the impression; thus giving to the cut an effect which it is impossible it should have when fairly printed. In consequence of this practice printers are not unfrequently blamed for not bringing up a cut equal to the engraver's proof, when, in fact, it is utterly impossible to obtain such an impression by means of a press, however careful the pressman may be in overlaying. The wood-engraver who employs great labour in the execution of a cut which cannot be properly printed, not only misemploys his time, but also deceives the person who employs him.



BURNISHER AND DAUBER.

One of the great advantages which wood-engraving possesses over copper as a means of multiplying pictorial subjects, is the facility and cheapness with which its productions can be printed at the same time with letter-press. Wood-engravings are not to be estimated by a comparison with copper-plates; but are to be judged of by the power and significance with which they excite ideas in the mind, with reference to the means employed in their execution, and on a consideration of the thousands whose knowledge is thus extended, and whose pleasure is thus increased, compared with the hundreds who can afford to purchase copper-plate engravings. Though wood-engraving in connection with the press has already done much for the dissemination of both useful and entertaining knowledge, it has yet more to do. Artists of merit are not only every day becoming convinced of the advantages of wood-engraving as a means of communicating to the great body of the people a knowledge and a taste for works of art, but are also furnishing wood-engravers with new designs. The steam-press, a mighty engine, multiplies their joint productions by tens of thousands, almost with the rapidity of thought; and yet the demand increases with the supply, as if in those, for whose gratification they are intended, the appetite increased with what it fed on."

For the purpose of showing how efficiently wood-engraving, in connection with the steam-press, can represent some of the higher creations of art and convey an idea of their most striking characteristics as displaying the sentiment or imagination of the original artist, the following subjects have been drawn and engraved, not as servile copies of copper-plate engravings, but with regard to the peculiar powers of wood-engraving to translate, if we may so speak, such subjects into its own graphic language, with a view to their being multiplied by means of the steam-press. How far the draftsman and the engraver have succeeded, we leave our readers to decide for themselves. The subjects are—1. "The Prophet Jeremiah," from an engraving after the original painting by Michael Angelo, among his frescoes in the Sistine Chapel, at Rome. 2. "Virgin and Child," after a drawing by Raffaelle. 3. A Cartoon by Raffaelle. It is to be observed that this subject is entirely executed by means of horizontal, parallel lines, intended to indicate its uniformity of colour as a chiaro-scuro. 4. "Garden Scene" from Watteau. 5. "Head of Captain Coram," the liberal promoter of the Foundling Hospital, after Hogarth. 6. "The Infant Hercules," after Sir Joshua Reynolds. 7. A portion of "The Death of the Children of Niobe," after Wollett's engraving form the painting by Wilson. The foliage, which, in the copper-plate, would cost the engraver much time and pains, is, in the wood-cut, executed with great facility. 8. "Imogene," after Westall.

For the proper execution of those cuts, the proprietors of the Illustrated London News have spared no expense; for their wish has been to present them to their subscribers and readers as the best specimens of wood-engravings of their kind and character that have ever been previously printed by means of a steam-press.

(The End.)

CHRONOLOGY OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

JANUARY 1, TO JUNE 29.—1844.

JANUARY.

1. English subjects resident in France, 66,000; temporary residents, 50,000; annual expenditure, £5,000,000.—Lord Campbell.—During the past year have died 1 Prince of the Blood, 2 Dukes, 1 Marquis, 6 Earls, 2 Viscounts, 8 Barons, 19 Baronets, 9 Knights, 1 Bishop, 2 (Irish) Judges, 5 Generals, 5 Majors-General, 3 Lieutenants-General, 7 Colonels, 2 Lieutenant-Colonels, 2 Admirals, 3 Rear-Admirals, 1 Vice-Admiral, 1 Right Hon., 5 Honourables, 2 Members of Parliament, 7 late Members of Parliament, and 2 Private Secretaries.—T. O'Brien, Esq., sworn in Lord Mayor of Dublin.—Lancashire and Cheshire visited by a heavy thunder-storm.—The thermometer at two degrees below freezing point, at Glasgow.—Proclamations issued by the Duke of Brunswick against "the unlawful state of things" in the Duchy.

2 The Portuguese Cortes opened by the Queen in person —Intelligence received of the re-election of Santa Anna as President of Mexico, for five years.—Splendid funeral of the ex-King of Holland at Delft, at an expense of £25,000.—The French Ministry announced that negociations were pending with England for the modification of the Right of Search Treaties.—A Mormonite priest and another tried at Chester, for having caused the drowning of a woman whilst baptising her in a brook; but acquitted through the absence of the principal witnesses.—A musket-ball fired into the American brig, Frances Lord, by the British ship, Alert, when off the coast of Africa.

3. The United States navy consisted of 76 vessels of various descriptions. Incendiarism so frequent in Bedfordshire, that the farms were constantly watched.

4. The Governor of New York opened the proceedings of that State at Albany, stating the debt to be upwards of £5,000,000 dollars.—Great free-trade meeting in Boston.—Terrible steam-boat accident near the Nore, C.S., by the vessel striking on a sunken tree; from 90 to 100 lives lost.—A banker's clerk robbed between Prince's-street and Cornhill, of a case containing, amongst others, a sum of between £1,200 and £1,300.—An engineer held to bail at Lambeth-street police-office, on a charge of having wilfully permitted the explosion of a steam-boat, and thereby placed 70 lives in jeopardy.—Striking of the Jury for the trial of O'Connell and the other Traversers, at Dublin.

5 The Revenue for the Quarter and Financial Year, ending this day, showed an increase in Excise, of about £400,000; Customs, nearly half a million on the year.—The Solicitor for the Traversers protested against the omission of several qualified Roman Catholics from the jury-list.—Mr. O'Connell received with great éclat at Clonmel, Kilkenny, &c.

6. Lord Grantley's gamekeeper murdered near Guildford.

7. The newly-launched barque Cambridge, entirely burnt at Plymouth.

8 Debates in the French Chamber of Peers on the visit of the Duke of Bordeaux to England, and condemnatory of the Legitimist party.—Verdict for the Crown obtained in the prosecution of O'Connell and others, each contained from 340 to 350 pages.—Frightful Explosion at the Dyna's Coal works, Llandyssil, Glamorgan, when seventy lives were lost. —Queen Christina, of Spain, restored to the enjoyment of her pension.

9. Elections at Madrid; success of the Progressists, and defeat of the manœuvres of Christina and Narvaez. Great Frost-rain, of 100 yards, by Smith and Willox, for £50 a yard, at Wrotham, worth by the year.

11 Settlement of the Difficulties between Great Britain and Mexico.—Completion of a Light-house Tower on the Smooth Shewater.—Zeal of the Marquis of Salisbury withdrew from Freemasonry.—Death of Sir Hudson Lowe, former custodian of the Emperor Napoleon at St. Helena.—News received of the Insurrection of the Native Troops of Africa, by H.M.S. [illegible] at Algiers.

11. Turnvile Coal [illegible] Warwickshire, [illegible] lost.—11 and 12. The [illegible] Government.

12. [illegible] Lamont, at Edinburgh, for poisoning her husband with arsenic.

13. Great Aggregate Catholic Meeting, in Dublin, to petition the Queen on the conduct of Government; 3000 persons present.—The Duke of Bordeaux arrived in London for Ostend.—Death of the Marquis of Hastings, aged 36.—Queen Isabella of Spain recognised by the King of the Two Sicilies.—Volcano of Etna still in violent action; two new craters formed.—News received of the suspension of the Spanish Cortes, on he 27th ult.—A piece of land, on the Sescombe side of Wallasey Pool, sold for £75,000, as new ground to be bought two years previously for £8,000.—Arrival of the Hibernia steam-vessel, at Liverpool, in ten days from Halifax, and twelve days from Boston; one of the most successful trips on record.—A woman executed at Stafford for poisoning her husband, with arsenic in gruel.—Death of Joseph Strutt, Esq. of Derby, aged 79.

15. Barbarous murder of the priest's servant at Rathfarnham, near Dublin.

15 Commencement of the State Trials, in the Court of Queen's Bench, Dublin.—The Gazette de France acquitted, in Paris, of a libel on the Government, of which it had been convicted a few days before.—Confession of two young persons in South Wales, sentenced to transportation—one for murder, and the other twenty years.—Continued debates in the French Chambers, on the recent Legitimist visit to London; confidentiality paragraphs in the addresses from each Chamber to the Throne.—Inauguration of the monument to Moliere, at Paris.

17 Lamentable accounts of insurrection in Lebanon.

18 A memorandum found concealed in St. James's Palace.

20 The island of Lewis, one of the largest of the Hebrides, with a population of 15,000, sold for £100,000.—Success of the Progressists at the elections at Madrid; Olozaga having 639 votes more than the highest Moderado.—Roberts, a poacher, executed at Ruthdale Gaol, for the murder of a gamekeeper.—Joseph Dodson, at York, for shooting his father.—Wreck of the brig Shepherdess on the Goodwin Sands; crew miraculously preserved.

21 Dr. Swinny died at Camden Town, after a life of great seclusion. He was buried with ridiculous eccentricities, according to his will, by watch. however, he left £5000 to the British Museum, and £1000 to the Royal Academy of Arts.—King William's College, Isle of Man, destroyed by fire.

22 George Wanton, the oldest man in Yorkshire, died, aged 112.—The 69th battalion of French National Guards celebrated [illegible] Berlin by 800 students, with flam eaux, music, [illegible] Mr. Hooker, 54 years clerk at the Mansion-house [illegible] Mr. Hooker having [illegible] Mr. Hooker [illegible] Mr. Hooker [illegible] Mr. Hooker

GETTY CENTER LIBRARY
3 3125 00600 7633